

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

8<sup>00</sup> A 17.27.9<sup>ur</sup>

L.L.
OW.U.K.
100

B 215.5

REPORTS OF CASES
ARGUED AND DETERMINED IN THE HIGH COURT OF CHANCERY,

DURING THE TIME OF
LORD CHANCELLOR THURLOW,
AND OF
THE SEVERAL LORDS COMMISSIONERS OF THE GREAT SEAL,
AND
LORD CHANCELLOR LOUGHBOROUGH,
From 1778 to 1794.

By WILLIAM BROWN, ESQ.

OF THE INNER TEMPLE, BARRISTER AT LAW,

---

FOURTH EDITION,

WITH IMPORTANT CORRECTIONS AND ADDITIONS, FROM THE REGISTRAR'S BOOKS;

From the Author's MS. Notes in his own Copy, intended for a further Edition; from various MS. Notes of the highest authority, by eminent contemporary and dignified Members of the Profession.

TOGETHER WITH OBSERVATIONS FROM THE SUBSEQUENT REPORTS ON THE CASES
REPORTED BY MR. BROWN,
AND DECISIONS ON THE POINTS OF LAW TO THE PRESENT TIME.

By ROBERT BELT, ESQ.

OF THE INNER TEMPLE, BARRISTER AT LAW.

---

IN FOUR VOLUMES.

VOL. I.

---

LONDON:

PRINTED BY A STRAHAN, LAW-PRINTER TO HIS MAJESTY ;
FOR HENRY BUTTERWORTH, LAW-BOOKSELLER,
NO. 7. FLEET STREET, BETWEEN THE TEMPLE GATES ; AND R. MILLIKEN, DUBLIN.

1819.

TO
THE RIGHT HONOURABLE
JOHN LORD REDESDALE,
&c. &c. &c.

THIS EDITION,
WHICH OWES MUCH OF ITS VALUE TO HIS LORDSHIP'S NOTES, IS,
WITH HIS LORDSHIP'S PERMISSION, MOST RESPECTFULLY DEDICATED.

ADVERTISEMENT.

---

NOTWITHSTANDING the inaccuracies of Mr. Brown's Reports, they have always been in request; for they happen to form almost the only collection of Lord Thurlow's determinations; and many of the cases are well reported.

A corrected Edition of the Work has always been desirable; but it is well known to the Profession, that any New Edition of such Reports would be of little value, without a careful examination of each case with the records of the Court in the Report Office. Besides this main desideratum, and accurate References to later decisions on the several points, Corrections and Amplifications of the Judgments, as delivered in Court, seemed almost indispensably requisite.

It was upon such considerations the Editor formed his plan to attempt the task; and he resolved to spare no labour in the execution of it.

For the valuable materials with which he has been honoured by Lord Redesdale; for some which he owes to the assiduity of Lord Colchester, when a member of the Bar; and for others which that Noble Lord has most obligingly stated his intention to communicate; — for the Notes also of Master Cox, which are most useful and important to correct and supply what Lord Thurlow and the other Judges did or did not say on particular occasions, the Editor returns his most grateful acknowledgments. He must not omit to express his sense of the benefits he has also experienced from some other MS. Notes which have long been in his possession, as well as from the observations of
of

of Lord Eldon, upon the various cases in Brown which are interspersed in the Reports, during the long period in which His Lordship has so ably presided in the Court of Chancery.

The present number comprizes half of Mr. Brown's first volume; and the Editor intends to proceed as he has begun.

He trusts that the considerable time which he has spent in the examination of each case that could be found in the Report Office, will not have been spent in vain; and that the Extracts which he has furnished, and will continue to supply from the Registrar's books, may illustrate the cases with which they are connected, and serve as useful Precedents for Minutes of Decrees and Orders in similar instances.

No. 15, New Boswell-Court, Lincoln's-Inn,
24 April, 1819.

PREFACE
OF
THE EDITOR.

---

NOTWITHSTANDING the real and supposed inaccuracies of Mr. Brown's Reports, they form almost the only collection of Lord Thurlow's determinations; and many of the cases are well reported.

A correct edition of the work has therefore long been desirable; but as any attempt of the kind would be of little value, without a careful examination of each case with the Records of the Court in the Report Office, the Registrar's books have, in the preparing of this edition, been invariably consulted.

The extracts which the Editor has supplied from these sources may illustrate the cases in connection with them, and serve as useful precedents for minutes of decrees and orders in similar instances.

References to later decisions on the several points of law, and corrections and amplifications of the judgments as delivered in Court, are also subjoined.

The Editor has exerted himself to collect the most important decisions on the several points subsequent to the original publication of these Reports; and, after noticing occasional fluctuations on some of the subjects, he has endeavoured to express the actual result, and to state the existing rule, or principle.

THE EDITOR'S PREFACE.

The Editor has now to return his best acknowledgments to Lord Redesdale, to Lord Colchester, and to Mr. Cox, for the kind communications of their valuable Notes; which will be found peculiarly useful in supplying the defects of the Reporter on many important occasions.

He is also indebted to his friends, Mr. Roper and Mr. Beames, for some valuable communications; and he desires to return them his best thanks. His acknowledgments are likewise due to the Registrars of the Court, and to the Gentlemen in the Report Office, for the civilities he has experienced from them in his researches.

No. 15. New Boswell Court, Lincoln's Inn,
24th June, 1819.

Note.— Such parts of the text, &c. as are between brackets, thus [ ], are additions by the Editor from the Registrar's Books, and other authentic sources.

THE DEDICATION OF THE AUTHOR.

---

TO

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

EDWARD LORD THURLOW,

BARON THURLOW OF ASHFIELD,

IN THE COUNTY OF SUFFOLK,

LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR OF GREAT BRITAIN;

&c. &c.

THE FOLLOWING REPORTS

ARE,

WITH THE UTMOST RESPECT,

AND DEFERENCE,

INSCRIBED.

MR. BROWN'S PREFACE.

---

THE notes from which the following sheets have been compiled were originally taken in a course of private study. This circumstance the Reporter thinks proper to mention, as, in part, accounting for what might otherwise be thought a want of uniformity in the method adopted.—Reporters, in general, and especially the more recent, have chosen one of the two following manners of arranging their matter; namely, either by giving the arguments of the counsel in each cause, in the order in which they respectively spoke; or by reducing the substance of the reasoning on each side of the question into one continued discourse. In the following cases, the Reporter has not confined himself to either of these methods, but has occasionally introduced both. He is aware that each has its peculiar advantages; he thinks also that each has its peculiar defects. If the former possess more verisimilitude, and exhibit more fairly the topics used by each individual speaker, it is more apt to draw the report into prolixity and repetition. If the latter have more art in its construction, and method in conveying the argument, it must frequently occasion omission, where different speakers proceed by different trains of reasoning, though tending finally to like conclusions. In the courts of law, where, in special arguments, one counsel only on each side is heard on the same day, and the majority of cases receive judgment in that stage; or, if argued again, are treated nearly in the same order, the latter method of reporting will almost always be preferable: but in a court of equity, where all the counsel for each party are heard through, and, from being differently prepared, adopt different media of proof, the former mode of arrangement will frequently be necessary, in order to lay the whole argument before the reader. In the first settling of the Reporter's notes, each had been preferred as it seemed best to suit the purpose of the particular case, and in afterwards revising them, with a view to publication, it was found that it would have been difficult to re-cast them differently from their original form; and that, in many instances, it would have been a sacrifice of much time and labour, to advantages which, at best, appeared to be but problematical. It had, however, been originally attended to, and now became a principal object, that the arguments of such counsel as spoke later in the order of each cause, should be retained only in so much as they either introduced new reasons upon the subject, or set those before used in a clearer or more forcible light; and that where the method of a regular discourse was adopted, it should contain the whole matter, although it could not preserve the manner of each speaker, it being absolutely necessary to give the argument in a concentrated form.

The Reporter feels it incumbent upon him to say a few words respecting the notes. The number which will appear, upon turning over the volume, may perhaps mislead the reader with respect to their object; which is to introduce, with brevity and accuracy, the circumstances of the cases cited or alluded to by the Bench or Bar, but not fully stated by either; and which, from the long intervening period from the publication of the last Equity Reports to that of the following sheets, do not appear any where in print. Some cases already printed are corrected by more accurate states than those in the books: but, in general, they consist of new determinations by the Lords Northington, Cambden, and Bathurst. In a very few instances, where the novelty of the cases, or their having been considered as precedents in subsequent adjudications have been the inducement, the arguments upon which they have been determined have been given more at large: it is hoped these will appear sufficiently important to merit the distinction. The Reporter begs leave to desire the reader will form no expectation of any observation or comment upon either argument or adjudication: he thinks these far beside the office he has undertaken; the duty of which he conceives to be restrained to the relation of facts which really pass, without presuming to offer a judgment upon them.

x

MR. BROWN'S PREFACE.

In compiling the tables, the convenience of the reader has been the principal guide. The first, of names of cases, is formed in the, now, usual manner for finding the case by the name of either plaintiff or defendant. Into the second, of cited cases, none are admitted but such as either are stated or corrected in the text or notes. The third is so constructed as to form a digest of the whole; by briefly stating the point determined, and adding the name of the case; which may sometimes save the trouble of turning to the body of the work, and facilitate its use in practice.

The Reporter cannot conclude without expressing his acknowledgments for many favours received in the conduct of his undertaking. He is particularly under obligations to His * Honor the Master of the Rolls, for introducing his manuscript to the notice of the Lord Chancellor; to Lord Loughborough for his kindness in reading a considerable part of the work, and for the unexpected favour of applying to Mr. Justice Ashurst, for his notes of the cases argued before them and Mr. Baron Hotham, as Lords Commissioners of the Great Seal; and the learned Judge for his ready compliance with the request; to which the Reporter is indebted for much of the value of that part of his work. To the gentlemen at the Bar, who have favoured him with their assistance, he will only return general thanks: though he must ever feel his labours sanctioned by their communications, as well as himself honoured by their friendship.

* Sir Lloyd (now Lord) Kenyon.

No. 2. Pump-court, Temple,
28th Nov. 1785.

THE AUTHOR'S ADVERTISEMENT.

---

IN re-committing the following sheets to the press, it has been the Reporter's endeavour to render them as worthy as opportunity admitted of the obliging reception the former edition received from the Profession. With this view, the cases, the accuracy of which he has even heard impeached, have been carefully revised; and some corrections (he has the satisfaction to say, not of great importance) have been made: some of the cases cited in the notes have been more fully stated, a number of new cases added, and many references made to subsequent adjudications, which tend to confirm or illustrate the points to which they are adduced; as well those contained in his second volume, as others of which he has not complete statements. An appendix is also subjoined of contemporary cases, with those before reported; but of which he either had no notes, or such as were too imperfect for publication: they are the communications of gentlemen, who have obligingly contributed to render this work as complete a report as might be of the determinations during the time it professed to embrace; and entitle them to his warmest acknowledgment.

Pump-court, Temple, March 8. 1790.

A TABLE

TABLE OF NAMES OF CASES.

Campbell v. Earl of Radnor	Page 271
Capper and Mortimer	156		F.
Carmarthen (Marquis of) and Countess Dowager of Holderness	377	Falkener v. Case	Page 125
Case and Falkener	125	— and Jeacock	295
Casson v. Dade	99	Fenhoullett and Scott	69
Cator Ex parte	267	Ferrers (Earl) and Shirley	41
— v. Burke	434	Fidelle v. Evans	267
— v. Earl of Pembroke	301	Flemming and Earl of Harrington	74
Cavendish v. Cavendish	467	*Fletcher v. Ashburner	497
Chamberlyne v. Dummer	166	Flood and Fryer	160
Chapman and Somerville	61	Foley v. Burnell	274
Chaworth v. Hooper	82	Fonnereau v. Poyntz	472
Chester (Bishop of) and Attorney-General	444	*Fowle and Cadle	515
Child v. Lord Irnham	92	*Frasér v. Baillie	518
Clive v. Walsh	146	*Frewin and Oliver	590
Clockmakers' Company and Sonley	81	Fryer v. Flood	160
*Cobham Ex parte	576	Fytche and the Bishop of London	96
*Cokes and Wynne	515		G.
Combe and Hawkins	335	Garth v. Meyrick	30
*Congreve v. Congreve	530	*Gartside v. Isherwood	558
Contencin and Hoare	27	*Gilmore v. Severn	582
Coombes v. Gibson	273	Gibson and Coombes	273
Coote v. Coote	448	Godwin v. Munday	191
*Corbyn and Birch	571	Grave v. the Earl of Salisbury	425
Cordley and Becket	358	Green v. Howard	31
Coventry (Earl of) and Marchioness of Tweedale	240	Green v. Pigot	103
Cowper v. Attorney-General	489	Gregson and Blackburn	420
Crinsoz Ex parte	270	Guyon and Smith	186
Crispin and Attorney-General	386	Gwynne v. Heaton	1
Critchit and Billingsley	268		H.
Crop v. Read	492	Hall v. Smith	438
Cullen v. the Duke of Queensberry	101	Hanington v. Du Chatel	124
		Harland v. Trigg	142
D.		Harman v. Dickinson	91
Dade and Casson	99	Harrington (Earl of) v. Flemming	74
Dalzell and Duff	147	Harrison Ex parte	173
Darlington (Earl of) and Pulteney	223	Hartley and Roberts	56
*Davies v. Topp	524	Hassel v. Simpson	99
Davis and Shirley	440 n.	Hassenclever (in the Matter of)	434
Davison and Robinson	63	Hawkins v. Combe	335
Dawson and Killet	119	Hawkins and Wynne	179
Derby (Earl of) and Lingard	311	Hayden Ex parte	454
*Devisme v. Mello	537	Haynes v. Mico	129
Dickinson and Harman	91	Heath v. Heath	147
Dixon v. Saville	326	Heaton and Gwynne	1
Dove v. Dove	375	Hemmings v. Munkley	303
Du Chatel and Hanington	124	*Hendrie and Oliphant	571
Duff v. Dalzell	147	*Hepburn v. Durand	503
Dummer and Chamberlyne	166	Hewitt v. Wright	86
*Durand and Hepburn	503	*Highway v. Banner	584
Durnford v. Lane	106	Hilton and Woodbridge	398
		Hinchinbroke (Lord) v. Seymour	395
E.		Hird and Attorney General	170
East-India Company and Moodalay	469	Hoare v. Contencin	27
*Elton v. Shepherd	532	*— v. Parker	578
Evans and Fidelle	267	Hotham v. Waring	40

TABLE OF NAMES OF CASES.

Holderness (Countess Dowager) v. Marquis of Carmarthen	Page 377	M.
Holme and Monkhouse	298	Macnamara v. Jones	Page 481
*Holmes v. Holmes	555	_____ and E. Verney	419
Hone v. Medcraft	261	Mansel v. Bowles	408
Hooper and Chatworth	82	Marsh v. Marsh	293
Horton and Stafford	482	Martin v. Rebow	154
Howard and Green	31	Mathers and Pember	52
Hudson and Lawson	58	Mawer v. Mawer	388
Hughes v. Hughes	387	Maybank v. Brooks	84
Hulme v. Tenant	16	Mayer and Duke of Ancaster	454
Hunter and Bowker	328	Mayhew v. Middleditch	162
Husler and Turner	78	Medcraft and Hone	261
Huxtep v. Brooman	437	*Melhuish and Ause	519
		*Mello and Devisme	537
I and J.		Meyrick and Garth	30
Jameson v. Skipwith	34	Mico and Haynes	129
Jeacock v. Falkener	295	Middleditch and Mayhew	162
Inchiquin (Earl) and Countess of Shelburne	338	Middleton v. Spicer	201
Jones and Macnamara	481	Mitford, Ex parte	398
Jones v. Morgan	206	Moodalay v. Morton and East-India Company	469
*Jones v. Earl of Suffolk	528	Monkhouse v. Holme	298
Irnham (Lord) v. Child	92	Moore v. Moore	127
*Isherwood and Gartside	558	Morgan and Jones	206
		_____ and Lowe	368
K.		_____ and Rickman	63
Kaye v. Laxon	76	Morrison and Ridges	389
Kent and Wirdman	140	Mortimer v. Capper	156
Killet v. Dawson	119	*Mortlock and Bishop of Peterborough	565
Kinchant v. Kinchant	369	Morton and Moodalay	469
Kinsman and Saddington	44	Mosman and Boardman	68
Kinworthy v. Allen	400	Moulson v. Moulson	82
Kittear v. Raynes	384	Munday and Godwin	191
		Munkley and Hemmings	303
L.		N.
Lane and Durnford	106	*Neale and Wadeson	574
*Large and Barnard	534	Nelligan and Nowlan	489
Lawson v. Barker	303	*Neville v. Wilkinson	543
_____ v. Hudson	58	Newman v. Newman	186
_____ v. Nightingale	440	Newton v. Bennet	135. 359
Eaxon and Kaye	76	*Nicholls Ex parte	577
Lee, Ex parte	400	Nightingale v. Lawson	440
_____ v. Alston	194	Nowlan v. Nelligan	489
_____ v. Pascoe	78	O.
Leicester (Earl of) v. Perry	305	*Oliver and Frewen	590
Leonard's (St.) Parish v. St. Luke's Parish	40	*Oliphant v. Hendrie	571
Lingard v. Earl of Derby	311	P.
*Lisle v. Lisle	533	Paget and Wade	363
London (Bishop of) v. Fytche	96	Paice and Atkinson	91
Lowe v. Morgan	368	*Parker and Hoare	578
Lowther, Bart. v. Viscountess Dowager of Andover	396	*Parkhurst and Boynton	576
Lucas v. Calcraft	134	Pascoe and Lee	78
Luke's (St.) Parish, and St. Leonard's Parish	40	Payne

TABLE OF NAMES OF CASES.

Payne and Randall	-	Page 55	Shirley v. Stratton	-	Page 440
Pearson v. Pearson	-	292	Simpson and Hassel	-	99
Pember v. Mathers	-	52	Skipwith and Jameson	-	34
Pembroke (Earl of) and Cator	-	301	Sloman v. Walter	-	418
Perkins v. Baynton	-	118. 375. 574	*Smeaton and Weller	-	572
Perry and Earl of Leicester (Sidney)	-	305	Smith v. Guyon	-	186
Peterborough (Bishop of) v. Mortlock	-	565	— and Hall	-	438
Pickering v. Vowles	-	197	— and Shapland	-	75
Pigot v. Green	-	103	*Smithson and Ackroyd	-	503
Pincke v. Thornycroft	-	289	Somerville v. Chapman	-	61
*Pitt and Benyon	-	589	Sonley v. Clockmakers' Company	-	81
Plymouth (Countess Dowager) v. Lady Archer	-	159	*Sowden v. Sowden	-	582
Pocklington v. Bayne	-	450	Spicer and Middleton	-	201
Popham and Taylor	-	168	Stafford v. Horton	-	482
Poyntz and Fonnereau	-	472	Stephens v. Lord Viscount Bateman	-	22
Pratt v. Tessier	-	39	*Stewart and Worrall	-	581
Prentice and Bouverie	-	200	Stratton and Shirley	-	440
Prideaux v. Prideaux	-	287	*Suffolk (Earl of) and Jones	-	528
Pulteney v. Earl of Darlington	-	223
	Q.			T.
Queensberry (Duke of) and Cullen	-	101	Taylor v. Popham	-	168
	R.		Tenant and Hulme	-	16
Radnor (Earl of) and Campbell	-	271	Tessier and Pratt	-	39
Randall v. Payne	-	55	*Thomas and Vaughan	-	556
Raynes and Kitear	-	384	Thong v. Bedford	-	313
Read v. Crop	-	492	Thornycroft and Pincke	-	289
Rebow and Martin	-	154	*Topp and Davies	-	524
Reynolds and Brooks	-	183	Townsend and Treves	-	384
Rich and Bencraft	-	56	*Townshend v. Townsend	-	550
Rickman v. Morgan	-	63	Treves v. Townshend	-	384
Ridges v. Morrison	-	389	Trigg and Harland	-	142
Riley and Boddam	-	239	Turner v. Husler	-	78
Roberts v. Hartley	-	56	Turner v. Turner	-	316
*Robinson v. Lord Byron	-	588	Tweedale (Marchioness) v. Earl of Coventry	-	240
— v. Davison	-	63
Row and Wright	-	61		V.
Russel v. Russel	-	269	Vansommer and Barker	-	149
	S.		*Vaughan v. Thomas	-	556
Saddington v. Kinsman	-	44	Verney (Earl of) v. Macnamara	-	419
Salisbury (Earl of) and Grave	-	425	Vowles and Pickering	-	197
Samwell v. Wake	-	144
Sandom and Billings	-	393		W.
Saville and Dixon	-	326	Wade v. Paget	-	363
Sawyer v. Bowyer	-	388	*Wadeson and Neale	-	574
Scott v. Fenhoulet	-	69	Wake and Samwell	-	144
*Severn and Gilmore	-	582	Walker and Bell	-	451
Seymour and Lord Hinchinbroke	-	395	Wall v. Bushby and Wife	-	484
Shapland v. Smith	-	75	Walsh and Clive	-	146
Shelburne (Countess of) v. Inchiquin, Earl of	-	338	Walter and Sloman	-	418
*Shephard and Elton	-	532	Waring v. Hotham	-	40
Sherwood v. White	-	452	Warren v. Warren	-	305
Shirley v. Earl Ferrers	-	41	*Weare and Adams	-	567
			*Weller v. Smeaton	-	572
			*West Ex parte	-	575
			Whitbread v. Brockhurst	-	404
			White and Sherwood	-	452
			— v. White	-	12

White-

TABLE OF NAMES OF CASES.

Whitelegg v. Whitelegg	-	Page 57	Woodbridge v. Hilton	-	Page 308
*Wilkinson and Neville	-	549	Wright v. Row	-	61
Williams v. Williams	-	152	_____ and Hewit	-	86
Wirdman v. Kent	-	140	*Wynne and Cooke	-	515
Wood and Broadmead	-	77	Wynne v. Hawkins	-	179

A

TABLE OF CASES

CITED AND STATED, EXPLAINED, OR CORRECTED.

N. B. The Cases marked with an Asterisk are cited and stated in the Appendix ; those with a Dagger before them in the Additional Notes to the Second Edition ; and those with the Dagger added after are more fully stated than before.

A.

ABBET and Jebb	-	Page 186 n.
Ackworth v. Ackworth	-	307 n.
Albans, St. (Duke of) v. Beaucherk (2 Atk. 636.) corrected	-	392 n.
* Anderson and Pelham	-	444 n.
Anderton v. Cooke	-	456
Andrew and May	-	122
* Arbuthnot (Lord) and Morrison	-	548. n.
† Arnold v. Kempstead	-	292 n.
† Arundel v. Knight	-	260 n.
† Ashe and Maxwell	-	444 n.
Attorney General v. France	-	439
† _____ v. Hutchinson	-	444 n.
† _____ v. Tyndall	-	444 n.
† _____ v. Oxford (Bishop of)	-	444 n.
* Ayton v. Ayton	-	542 n.

B.

Bailey v. Mead and Powel ( Pr. Ch. 92., 2 Vern. 361.) corrected	-	333
Baldwin v. Boulter	-	156
Barker v. Boucher	-	140 n.
Barker and Browning	-	388

VOL. I.

* Bartlet v. Hollister	-	Page 530 n.
Barrington v. Hereford	-	61
Beaucherk and Duke of St. Albans (2 Atk. 636.) corrected	-	392 n.
Bell and Horsley	-	101 n.
Bennett v. Mayhew	-	292
† Beynon v. Gollins	-	186 n.
Biscoe v. Kennedy	-	17 n.
† Bland v. Wilkins	-	61 n.
Bowes v. Lord Darlington	-	40
Bowman and Holiday	-	145
† Bracken and Tunstal	-	124 n.
Bridgwater (Duke of) v. Egerton (2 Vesey. 121.) more correctly stated	-	280 n.
† Brodie v. Duke of Chandos	-	444 n.
* Bromley v. Smith	-	548 n.
Brotherson and Rawlins	-	312
Browning v. Barker	-	388
Burchell and King	-	211 n.
Byde v. Byde	-	309 n.

C.

Caddel and Watkins	-	176
Cantle v. Morris	-	133 n.
† Carpenter and Hurford	-	270 n.

a

TABLE OF CITED CASES.

*Cass v. Rudele (2 Vern. 280.) corrected Page 157 n.
Cecil v. Sutton	150
† Chandos (Duke of) and Brodie	444 n.
† Chapman v. Hart (1 Vesey , 241.) more fully stated	79 n.
Chichester and Raw	198 n.
Chomley v. Meyrick	77
† Church and Earl of Lonsdale	362 n.
Clarke v. Ross	120 n.
† Clayton and Kenrick	57 n.
Cole v. White	409
Cooke and Anderton	456
* ——— and Ogle	501
———— and Lord Polwarth	150
———— and Walker	105
Cooper v. Scott	141 n.
† Coppin v. Fernyhough	265 n.
D.
Darlington (Lord) and Bowes	40
Davis and Shirley	440 n.
Davy and Kemp	120 n.
De la Cruse and Johnson	105
Devese and Pontet	123 n.
* Digby v. Legard	501
Downing (College) case of	12. 14. 444
Dow and Thompson	193 n.
E.
Edgar and Pawsey	122. 191 n.
Edmonds and Willet	177
Egerton and Duke of Bridgwater (2 Vesey , 121.) more correctly stated	280 n.
Egerton v. Mostyn	470
Ellington Ex parte	375
Eyre v. Popham	95 n.
F.
Fawel v. Heelis	421 n.
† Fernyhough and Coppin	265 n.
Ferrand v. Prentice	105
* Flanagan v. Flanagan	500
Foy v. Foy	390 n.
France and Attorney General	439
* Frank v. Standish	588 n.
Fry v. Fry	192 n.
G.
† Galway (Lord) and Villa Real 4 n.	292 n.
Gardiner and Morgan	193 n.
† Gawler v. Standewicke	106 n.
Gayer v. Wilkinson	50 n.
Gordon and Duke of Newcastle	200
† Green v. Symonds	128 n.
Greenwood v. Greenwood	30 n. 32 n.
Grosvenor v. Hallam	61 n.
Gunter v. Horsley	407

H.
Hallam and Grosvenor	Page 61 n.
† Hamilton v. Sneyd	301 n.
Hardy v. Martin	419 n.
† Hargrave v. Tyndal	136 n.
† Hart and Chapman (1 Vesey , 241.) more fully stated	79 n.
Hartop v. Whitmore (1 Wms. 681.) corrected	306 n.
Hassen v. Hassen	273
Hatton and Hooley	390 n.
Heathcote and Stephenson	458
Heelis and Fawel	421 n.
Hereford v. Barrington	61
* Higman and Roberts	532 n.
Holliday v. Bowman	145
* Hollister and Bartlet	530 n.
Hook and May	112 n.
Hooley v. Hatton	390 n.
Horsley v. Bell	101 n.
Horsley and Gunter	407
† Hurford v. Carpenter	270 n.
† Hurlock and Jackson	61 n.
Huthwaite and Norris	182 n. 301 n.
† Hutchinson and Attorney General	444 n.
I and J.
† Jackson v. Hurlock	61 n.
† ——— v. Tenant	186 n.
Jeal v. Tichener	120 n.
Jebb v. Abbet	186 n.
Inchiquin (Earl of) v. Obrien	458
Johnson v. De la Cruse	105
* Isaac v. Isaac	532
K.
Kelly v. Paulet	476
Kemp v. Davy	120 n.
* Kempstead and Arnold	292 n.
Kennedy and Biscoe	17 n.
† Kenrick v. Clayton	57 n.
King v. Burchell	211 n.
Knight and Robinson	253
Kynaston v. Kynaston	457
L.
Lawrence v. Maggs	198
Leeds (Duke of) and Pughe	66 n.
* Legard and Digby	501
Leighton v. Leighton	167 n.
† Lloyd and Vaughan	388 n.
Lonsdale (Earl of) v. Church	362 n.
Lowlands v. Stephenson	300
M.
Machorro v. Stonehouse	18
Maggs and Lawrence	198

TABLE OF CITED CASES.

Marshal and Mason	-	Page 122	Ross and Clarke	-	Page 120 n.
Martin and Hardy	-	419 n.	Rudele and Cass (2 Vern. 280.)	corrected
Mason v. Marshal	-	122			157 n.
Masterman and Sayer	-	210 n.	Rybot and Skyrme	-	151
† Maxwell v. Ashe	-	444 n.
May v. Andrews	-	122		S.
— v. Hook	-	112 n.	Salmon and Smith	-	299, 300
Mayhew and Bennet	-	232	Salvin and Thornton	-	73 n. †
Mead v. Bailey (Prec. Chan. 92., 2 Vern. 361.)	corrected	333	Sayer v. Masterman	-	210 n.
Meyrick and Chomley	-	77	Scott and Cooper	-	141 n.
Middleton v. Price	-	320	Scrughan and Tardiffe	-	423
* Montefiore's case	-	548	Serle v. St. Eloy (2 Wms. 386.)	corrected	252
Moore and Rawlinson	-	48	Shelburne (Earl of) v. Tierney	-	435 n.
Morgan v. Gardiner	-	193 n.	Shepherd v. Shepherd	-	51 n.
Morris and Cattle	-	133 n.	Shirley v. Davis	-	440 n.
* Morrison v. L. Arbuthnot	-	548 n.	Silk v. Prime	-	138 n. †
Mostyn and Egerton	-	470	* Singleton v. Singleton	-	542
	N.		Skyrme v. Rybot	-	151
Newcastle (Duke of) v. Gordon	-	200	* Smith and Bromley	-	548
Norris v. Huthwaite	-	182 n. 301 n.	Smith v. Salmon	-	299, 300
	O.		† Sneyd and Hamilton	-	301 n.
Obrien and Inchiquin	-	458	† Snowden and Pitts	-	292 n.
Obrien v. Obrien	-	167 n.	† Sondes (Lord) and Watson	-	65 n.
* Ogle v. Cooke	-	501	Somerset (Duke of) v. Somerset (Dutchess of)	-	309 n.
† Oxford (Bishop of) and Attorney General	-	444 n.	St. Albans (Duke of) v. Beaucherk (2 Atk. 636.)	corrected	392 n.
Owen v. Williams	-	199 n.	St. Eloy and Serle (2 Wms. 386.)	corrected	252
	P.		† Standewicke and Gawler	-	106 n.
Parker v. Wells	-	178 n. †	* Standish and Frank	-	588 n.
Paulet and Kelly	-	476	Stephenson v. Heathcote	-	458
Pawsey v. Edgar	-	122. 191 n.	— and Lowlands	-	300
Pearson v. Pearson	-	113 n.	Stonehouse and Machorro	-	18
Pearson and Wright	-	211 n.	Sutton and Cecil	-	150
Pierce v. Taylor	-	105	† Symmonds and Green	-	128 n.
* Pelham v. Anderson	-	444 n.		T.
Pidgeon and Priest	-	177	Tardiffe v. Scrughan	-	423
Pilkington's case	-	40	Taylor and Pierce	-	105
† Pitts v. Snowden	-	292 n.	* Tenant v. Jackson	-	186 n.
Pontet v. Devese	-	133 n.	Thompson v. Dow	-	193 n.
Polwarth v. Cooke	-	150	Thornton v. Salvin	-	73 n. †
Popham and Eyre	-	95 n.	Tierney and Earl of Shelburne	-	435 n.
Prentice and Ferrand	-	105	† Tindal and Hargrave	-	136 n.
Price and Middleton	-	320	Tichener and Jeal	-	120 n.
Priest v. Pidgeon	-	177	† Tunstal v. Bracken	-	124 n.
Prime and Silk	-	138 n. †	† Tyndall and Attorney General	-	444 n.
Pughe v. Duke of Leeds	-	66 n.		V.
	R.		† Vaughan v. Lloyd	-	388 n.
Raw v. Chichester	-	198 n.	† Vaux v. L. Waltham	-	419 n.
Rawlins v. Brotherson	-	312	† Villa-real and Lord Galway	4 n. 292 n.
Rawlinson v. Moore	-	48		W.
* Roberts v. Higman	-	532 n.	† Waltham (Lord) and Vaux	-	419 n.
Roberts v. Roberts	-	487	Walker v. Cooke	-	105
Robinson v. Knight	-	253

TABLE OF CITED CASES.

Warner, on the demise of White v. White	Page 13 n. 33 n.	Widmore v. Woodroffe	Page 13 n. 33 n.
	219 n.	† Wilkins and Bland	- - 61 n.
Watkins v. Caddel	- - 176	Wilkinson and Gayer	- - 50 n.
† Watson v. Lord Sondes	- - 65 n.	Willet v. Edmonds	- - 177
Wells and Parker	- - 178 n. †	Williams and Owen	- - 199 n.
West Ex parte	- - 575	Woodroffe and Widmore	- 13 n. 33 n.
White and Cole	- - 409	Wright v. Pearson	- 211 n.
White and Warner	- - 219 n.
Whitmore and Hartop (1 Wms. 681.) corrected	- - 306 n.

---

ERRATA, &c.

Page 44. Editor's note, line 10. from the bottom; for Lord Eldon C., read Sir W. Grant, M. R.
Ibid. ————— line 9, from ditto, for Lord Eldon, read His Honour.
Page 82. Note to Chaworth v. Hooper, line 1. for post. 3 vol. 335. read post. 335.

CASES

ARGUED AND DETERMINED

IN

THE COURT OF CHANCERY.

---

TRINITY TERM

18 Geo. 3. 1778.

EDWARD Lord THURLOW, Lord High Chancellor. Sir THOMAS SEWELL, Knight, Master of the Rolls. ALEXANDER WEDDERBURN, Esq. Attorney General. JAMES WALLACE, Esq. Solicitor General.

1778.

---

GWYNNE against HEATON and others. [23. 26. 27 June.]

(Reg. Lib. 1777. A. fol. 608.)

THIS was a bill filed to be relieved against a bargain as unconscionable, under the following circumstances. By the will of the plaintiff's grandfather, the family estate was left to the plaintiff's father for life, the remainder to first and other sons in tail-male: the estate was 2000*l.* per annum. — The father being 81 years of age, and the son 23, seised of this estate tail in reversion, having offended his father by an imprudent match, in consequence of which he and his wife were turned out of doors, advertised in the publick papers a reversionary annuity of 300*l.* after the death of a man of great age. — The defendant's father (who knew the age of the plaintiff's father) applied, and the annuity was sold to him on the following terms: the reversionary annuity in fee, after the death of the father, was valued at 17 years purchase, amounting to 5100*l.* — Heaton was to grant to the plaintiff an annuity [*] of 400*l.* for the life of the father, which was valued at 7 years purchase, 2800*l.* and to pay to Gwynne the remaining sum of 2300*l.* — Accordingly, by deed bearing date the 12th of June, 1773, the rent-charge was granted in Grant of a reversionary rent-charge, after the death of plaintiff's father (who was old and infirm) upon unreasonable terms, set aside; but to remain as a security for the money really advanced, and costs to be paid as in redeeming a mortgage. (1)

[ *2 ]

(1) The very circumstance of a person dealing with another, merely upon his expectancies, induces a court of equity to entertain suspicion, to institute the strictest enquiries, and almost to imply fraud; and Lord Thurlow intimated, post. page 9, that a party being actually "a young" expectant heir makes no essential difference. Vide Wiseman v. Beake, 2 Vernon, 121.; which doctrine has been maintained in the later cases.

Lord Eldon C. has also observed, "He was not aware of any case which proceeded upon a distinction between such expectancies as were certain, and such as were merely contingent." See in Evans v. Chesshire, reported in the Supplement to Vesey, sen. 305, 6. Notwithstanding Wharton v. May, 5 Ves. 27. affirmed in Dom. Proc. so lately as 1808, it may be stated generally, that the courts in former times seem scarcely to have 1778.

Gwynne
against Heaton.

in consideration of 5100*l.* with a covenant to levy a fine at the expence of Gwynne, and a bond of equal date in 10,000*l.* penalty was given to suffer a recovery when he should come into possession. — By deeds of equal date, the annuity of 400*l.* per annum was granted to Gwynne, secured by a transfer of long annuities to Heaton the son (the present defendant) and the defendant Baker, a friend of Heaton's, with power to Heaton, in case of the death of either of them, to appoint new trustees. It does not appear whether this transfer ever took place. It was agreed between the parties, that the fine should be levied immediately, and the expence deducted out of the first payments of the annuity; the fine was accordingly levied at the great session, (the estate being in Carmarthenshire), and a charge made for the expences of 314*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* Deducting this sum for expences, 85*l.* 4*s.* the balance of one year's annuity only was paid, though the father survived eighteen months. There was no confirmation of the bargain by Gwynne, upon the death of the father, but he offered the present defendant Heaton (his father being then dead) 1000*l.* to cancel the deeds, which being refused, this bill was filed.

Mr. Attorney General and Mr. Price, for the plaintiff, (after stating the case.) On the part of Heaton, the defence is, that this was the offer of Gwynne, and that it was only a good bargain: It is true, a bargain is not to be destroyed where there is any measure of equality. In those cases, it is always upon the proposal of the person who is to give the good bargain. Take the comparison; an annuity in fee, at the death of a man eighty-one years old, is estimated at seventeen years purchase, and the life of eighty-one, at seven years purchase, for which two years purchase is the utmost value upon Dr. Halley's calculations. This is decisive against Heaton; it is an advantage that no man in a common situation would accede to: Gwynne is to give every possible security, and at his own expence; and, on the other side, to submit that Heaton should name the trustees, and, upon the death of either, should appoint new ones. This is contrary to the common mode of dealing between man and man, and it is taking an unconscientious advantage of his situation. In matters of a common kind, if a purchaser has a little advantage, [*] the Court has it in its discretion whether to take it away. From the time of Lord Guilford, to the present, there is no case like this, where relief has not been granted, except upon a confirmation. † He was doubtful in Nott v. Hill, 1 Vern. 167. whether this Court could meddle with a legal security, but that cause was reheard before Lord Jefferys and reversed, as being an unconscionable bargain (1). According to been so strict in such transactions, as they have (most beneficially) of more recent times; and, indeed, after some of the more modern decisions, it may be doubted whether a court of equity would now feel warranted in such observations, as even Lord Hardwicke makes in Hill v. Caillouel, 1 Ves. 123. (as to the advances being made out of humanity,) or, in a similar decision to Lord Thurlow's, in Henley v. Aze, post. 2 vol. 17. Vide Supp. to Ves. 297. and Evans v. Cheshire, ibid. 300. See also the cases referred to of Bowes v. Heaps, 3 Ves. and B. 117. &c.; Gowland v. De Faria, 17 Ves. 20.; and Peacock v. Evans, 16 Ves. 512. Et per Lord Eldon C. in Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. jun. 246. In Lashy v. O'Donnel, 2 Scho. and Lefroy, 472. Lord Redesdale C. intimates his opinion, that the transaction in Lord Chesterfield v. Jansson might not have been supported without the affirmation of it. In Evans v. Cheshire, ubi supra, there was a confirmation virtually as strong, and the bargain was rescinded after the death of the obligor, who never complained.

[ *3. ]

† See what Lord Hardwicke says on the subject of confirmations, Cole v. Gibson, 1 Ves. 505. and seq. [See also in Lord Chesterfield v. Jansson, 2 Ves. 146. 149. 152. 153.; per Lord Thurlow, in Crowe v. Ballard, 1 Ves. jun. 220.; et per Lord Eldon C. in Morae v. Royal, 12 Ves. 373.; and Wiseman v. Beake, 2 Vernon. 121.]

(1) It was on a second rehearing, 2 Vern. 27. Mr. Raithby's edition.

the

the decision in that case, have been Berney v. Pitt, 2 Ch. R. 396. 2 Vern. 14. Wiseman v. Beake, 2 Vern. 121. where the plaintiff was not a young heir. Twistleton v. Griffith, 1 Wms. 310. Curwyn v. Milner, 3 Wms. 292. (note), Cole v. Gibbons, 3 Wms. 290. Sir William Stanhope v. Cope, 2 Atk. 231. Lord Chesterfield v. Janssen, 2 Vesey, 125. and 1 Atk. 301. where Lord Hardwicke's principle was, that wherever there was an unconscionable bargain entered into by a young heir, this court should relieve.

Mr. Ambler (for the defendant). Mr. Heaton did not in general deal in annuities.—It is not necessary in this case to consider the case of young heirs dependent on their parents.—This is the case of a gentleman living on his own fortune, applied to by the plaintiff, invited into the bargain, and the terms deliberately settled by the plaintiff and his friends.—The question is singly, whether this agreement is upon such an inadequate consideration, that this Court will set it aside. The plaintiff was intitled to a remainder in an estate of 2000*l.* a year, with limitations over to his brother and several other persons, and had incurred the displeasure of his father, by marrying a servant in the house; on which account his father, at his death, gave all the property he could dispose of to the second son. The plaintiff put the advertisement into the papers, offering the rent-charge of 300*l.* upon the death of an aged person.—His agent wrote to the defendant, proposing the terms both for the perpetual rent-charge, and for the annuity; and it comes out in evidence, that the same terms had been proposed to other persons.—The plaintiff was advised that all that he could do was to levy a fine, which would bar his own issue; but could not suffer [*] a recovery till the death of his father.—The plaintiff told Heaton, that he had given his agent authority to propose the terms.—The fine was levied, and the 2300*l.* paid; the plaintiff was perfectly satisfied that Heaton should name the trustees.—If the father had lived seven years, there could not have been a pretence to come into this Court, to set the transaction aside.—There have been a multitude of cases in this Court, where persons have obtained an advantage, not by fraud, but by a fair bargain, that the Court would not deprive them of it.—The old gentleman had no infirmity, or circumstance of disorder, to shew him to be in danger of dying.—This is not such a consideration as this Court will think unreasonable, and set aside.—Was there no risque to be run by Mr. Heaton? I have stated, that he could not have the rent-charge till the death of the father; he has it not now, and if no recovery should be suffered, and the plaintiff not have a son, he never may have it: therefore it depends upon the contingency.—This is not a bill by Heaton, to compel the suffering of a recovery; if it was, perhaps the Court might refuse to assist him: I do not know that the Court would refuse.—Upon the whole, the circumstances are not such as to make void the transaction; they are not unreasonable or unconscientious terms.—The cases all stand upon their own circumstances; the only resemblance this bears to them is, that it is the case of an estate-tail, after the death of the father.

Mr. Mansfield (on the same side). Every proposal came from Gwynne: there was no haggling about the price: but his language now is, I think I have given too much, and therefore I come into equity to rescind the transaction.—This is the fair representation, but the most extraordinary case ever produced.—The draft was approved by counsel, on the part of Gwynne.—He is not a young heir in the sense of any of the cases, nor is this at all like them.—As to the trustees being named by Heaton; it was of more consequence to him than to Gwynne who were the trustees; as the long annuities continued his property, though they were a security for the annuity.—The trustees are not impeached; no objection whatever was made at the time, how can it be 1778.

Gwynne
against Heaton.

[ *4 ]

1778.

GWYNNE
against HEATON.

[*5]

objected as a mark of fraud now? As to the rent-charge being free from land-tax, the agreement was to grant a clear rent-charge: to be so, it must be free from land-tax. †—As to the expences being deducted, Heaton gets nothing by [*] that; the borrower always pays expences, which were encreased by the journies, and the expences in the court of Great Sessions, which are very large, compared with those in the Common Pleas.—How is Gwynne a young heir? He is not a young man following expensive pleasures.—What would a prudent man advise him to do, but to procure a permanent provision during the life of his father?—Is there any ground of policy here to overturn a bargain, the object of which was a provision for himself, his wife, and a probable family during the life of his father?—Are the means by which he got that provision improper? He could give no security: what could he do more proper than to grant a rent-charge out of the estate?—This is not a rent-charge to exhaust the estate, to render him indigent when he should come into possession of it; the means are not reprehensible in any respect.—This is not within the ground of the cases.—The only ground here is, that by the means of certain calculations they have found out that the sum is too large.—There is no case where the price of contingencies has been the ground for setting aside a bargain:—Calculations, though very useful as to large numbers, do not apply to individuals. (3)—As far as these observations have weight, they afford an answer to the cases.—The cases are very short.—In Nott v. Hill, no circumstances are stated; but, upon the face of it, it was very enormous; it was to make the man a beggar after the father's death.—Berny v. Pitt was on the ground of his being a young heir, whose extravagance was fed by usurers.—Wiseman's case is not of so young a man, but the court was struck with the enormity of ten for one. Twisleton v. Griffith shews a reason for the determination; it was fraudulent and deceitful; the purchaser had advised the son not to sell the reversion to his father; this bears no resemblance to the present case, where there is no artifice, or misrepresentation. In Chesterfield v. Janssen, it is laid down, that every case must depend upon its own circumstances; and it is enough, in the present case, that there are no circumstances of fraud or misrepresentation,

† This point has been much contested. In Brewster v. Kitchen, 1 Ld. Raym. 317. 1 Salk. 198. a clear annuity was held to be free from land-tax. But in the case of Green v. Maygold, 8 Vin. Abr. 411. tit. Devise, where 30*l.* a year was to be paid free from all deductions, the Master of the Rolls held land-tax not to be one of those deductions. In the Duke of Ancaster v. Lady Sherard, 2 Ves. 499. 503. 4. a jointure not exceeding 1000*l.* per annum was held not to be free from land-tax. (1) In Villareal v. L. Galway, Lord Camden was of opinion that such a rent was not clear of land-tax: the words of this devise may be seen post. 292. n. where it is cited for another purpose. His Lordship's reasoning on this part of the case is as follows:—"The question then is, Whether the rent-charge is to be free from land-tax by these words, "clear yearly payment." I am of opinion it is not, because all such rents are charged with the land-tax by the act of parliament, with this exception only, that the act shall not make void the agreement between landlords and tenants. This act is an annual charge, and every person possessed of such an estate must take it with its parliamentary burthen, unless the grantor has expressly discharged it; the land-tax is a collateral duty imposed by the legislature, and must therefore be paid by the owner of the rents, unless it be otherwise agreed between the parties, and so expressed." Notwithstanding these cases, however, the point seems at present to be settled, that such a rent-charge is free from land-tax. See Bradbury against Wright, Douglas, 609. [624. 2d ed.] citing the case of Champernoon v. Champernoon, Ch. 1780, where the words were "free from taxes," and the annuity was held to be clear of land-tax. (2)

(1) But see the observation in the next note.

(2) Lord Hardwicke indeed, in the above-cited case of the Duke of Ancaster, would seem to imply that a rent-charge is free from such tax equally with all other outgoings. Vide 2 Ves. 504.

(3) See 6 Ves. 274. 9.; 8 Ves. 133. &c.

sentation, and that the plaintiff is not a young heir, in the sense here meant.

Mr. Madocks (on the same side). — The event can make no alteration when the conveyance is perfect, though it does where the contract is not executed, as where the party dies before the execution of the deeds. — It must be taken as it stood at the time when it was proposed to Heaton: and the question is, [*] whether he ought or ought not to have taken it? — If he ought to have refused it, as being an unconscionable bargain, it must be on the ground that it was with an heir in distress, and apparently an unconscientious bargain. — The Court cannot set aside a bargain even on account of a monstrous advantage taken. 2 Atk. 251. — It must be either marriage brokage, or made with an heir, or person in distress. Batty v. Lloyd, 1 Vern. 141. Hobson v. Trevor, 2 Wms. 191. Dews v. Brandt, Sel. Ca. tem. L. King. 7, (13 Vi. 548.)

Lord Chancellor. — A remainder-man may sell, or give away his remainder, and the Court will not take it away from the purchaser, or donee. — An inadequate consideration is not alone sufficient to vitiate the contract; although in order to do so, the consideration must be inadequate; where it is sold for a sum grossly inadequate, the Court has never suffered it to stand. (1) — There is no case in the books very like this. — Here the evidence is not sufficient between the parties. — That read this morning, (the defendant's,) does not contradict the father's being more infirm at the time of the transaction than formerly. — The cause has been brought on rather too carelessly; they should have stated the real proportion of value (2), in order to show whether it was grossly inadequate.

Mr. Bicknell (on the same side) cited Gilb. Chan. 291, 292. that where the father withholds subsistence from the son, if he enters into such a contract, equity will not relieve against it.

Mr. Attorney General (in reply). — It is extraordinary to contend that the Court will not assist the plaintiff, though it would not assist Heaton in a bill filed to compel the suffering a recovery. — No case puzzles me so much as one where the Court will assist neither party. — It is certainly true, that courts have no censorial authority, but it does not follow from hence, that they can give no relief. — The rules of morals, honestè vivere, alterum non lædere, suum cuique tribuere, do not all apply to courts of justice. — Honestè vivere is not their object, suum cuique tribuere is their proper ground, but they will prevent one man from injuring another: on this foundation stands the action upon the case. — If the bargain is beyond the limitation the law has fixed, it will punish. But there are cases which are not illegal, but which still are unconscientious. — If a man finds [*] another in distress, and supplies him on unconscientious terms, the Court, in relieving him, enforces the rule of morality. — The naming of trustees, and the power of appointing in case of death, are not answered by their being honest men; had the parties been on equal terms it never could have been so. — There is no evidence that the four per cent. annuities, were ever transferred; no declaration of trust appears: this is very unequal to the security given for the rent-charge. — But take it from the answer, that the four per cent. annuities were transferred in December; the treaty was in June: the one party had the whole security immediately; the other had not the security he treated for, which was to be as good as that given for the rent-charge. — The construction of the words clear rent charge does not admit of a doubt;

1778.

GWYNNE
against HEATON.

[ *6 ]

[ *7 ]

(1) See Heathcote v. Paignon, post. 2 vol. 167.

(2) See in Heathcote v. Paignon, as corrected from Reg. Lib. in this ed. post. 2 vol. 179. note; and Lord Eldon C.'s observation on Sir L. Kenyon's first decree, 8 Ves. 137.

1778.

GWYNNE
against
HEATON.

even at market, a clear rent-charge means subject to land-tax. † — As to the enormous sum paid for the fine, it has been treated as wise in Gwynne to come to Heaton for an immediate subsistence; surely he did not mean in 1773 to purchase subsistence in 1775: the fine amounted to three-fourths of the first year's annuity. — Then it is said, that this is not the case of a young heir. — I do not presume the Court has gone on the idea of relieving the father. — Gwynne was a young man just of age — His estate was expectant — He was just in the situation of an apparent heir — He must have applied to his father, if he had not found a money-lender, and have settled the estate; which the father would have done for the sake of the second son. Nott and Hill was a fairer case than the present, Curwyn and Milner was a bold speculation. — Dews and Brandt is reported in a very idle book, I have understood the determination in that case was different. — In these cases the parties never can be upon equal terms. The circumstances put calculations out of the case, the amount must be three or four times the principal money. This is apparently exorbitant: to buy a remainder in fee at seventeen years purchase, the life must be of very considerable value, it cannot be worth only seven years purchase. — The circumstances put together shew the bargain to be enormous. As to not taking notice of the event — I do not desire a casualty to be considered; but what at the time was most probable to happen should be considered, and that Heaton paid only the 2300*l.*

[ *8 ]

[*] Lord Chancellor. — As you shape your case, 2300*l.* only was advanced, and there was an exorbitant bargain for the 2800*l.* Where a mortgage is to be redeemed, it must be upon payment of the principal, interest, and costs.

This bill is brought to be relieved against a conveyance of the 12th of June, 1773, stating the interest of Gwynne, in his father's estate, and conveying a rent-charge of 300*l.* per annum, and also against a bond, in the penalty of 10,000*l.* with a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, for carrying that agreement into execution, on the ground of gross inequality, and as being entered into by a man who had an estate-tail, expectant on the death of his father: and it takes in a great many fraudulent and oppressive circumstances, but these are not proved. Gwynne made the offer in its extent to Heaton (1), who received it in the very shape in which it was offered. This excludes every suggestion of express proof of deceit by Heaton, in whom no confidence was placed, nor any assumed by him. There is no express proof of Heaton's labouring Gwynne to obtain a better security than was offered to him; he is not charged with misleading his judgment, or tampering with his poverty. On the other hand, the terms are so very grossly unequal, as to deserve all that has been said to be necessary to the setting the bargain aside. He was a young man of twenty-three, married contrary to the inclination of the father to a young woman, by whom he has children, though not male issue, who therefore do not succeed to the estate-tail. The father was at least seventy-nine, according to the plaintiff's evidence, and had additional signs of immediate decay. On the part of the defendant only two witnesses have been read; one says, his health was better than his spirits; the second, a servant who had lived in the family some years before, remembered his master's state of health at that time, which was † V. ante p. 4. note.

(1) Lord Eldon C. however observed, in Evans v. Cheshire (Supp. to Ves. sen. 306.), that the proposition originating in the borrower was, in his judgment, of little or no weight. His Lordship might, perhaps, refer to the above observations, so as to guard against their application to other cases.

In general that of a man of his age; he returned into the service the beginning of the month in which this transaction began, and says, that he now found him remarkably changed for the worse, and that he was obliged to have a servant sleep in the room. The apprehension of dissolution began to prevail with himself and all about him: This situation appears to be perfectly known to Heaton. This is sufficient to support those witnesses, who say, that one or two years purchase was the full value of his life. I am the fuller in stating these circumstances, because the agents [*] should have been more careful in procuring evidence. To set aside a conveyance, there must be an inequality so strong, gross, and manifest, that it must be impossible to state it to a man of common sense, without producing an exclamation at the inequality of it. The principle then is loose enough (1) —looser than I wish to be established in a court of justice. — But to reverse the principles which have been laid down by successive great names would be to alter the rules of property. In the present case the considerable inequality is referable to cases already determined. There is an extraordinary anxiety in the preamble of the deed, to state the circumstances, so as to take it out of the objections in former cases; this is a strong circumstance to shew that the parties thought it would be liable to be set aside. The rule therefore must be attended to. It is said, a bargain cannot be set aside upon inadequacy only. — If parties are of full age, treating upon equal terms without imposition, and there is an inequality, even if it is a gross one, the Court in general has not set it aside. The nearest instance which I recollect of the Court's relieving in such circumstances, is Sir Thomas Meer's case (cited in Forrester, 40.) That case stands alone if considered as bearing analogy to the present. That was not the case of an expectant heir; but between persons standing indifferently; — and it has always been held that interest upon interest was unconscionable. It has also been said that the owners of reversionary interests are as competent to dispose of them as the owners of other interests. — In the modern cases this is allowed, with the qualification that there is a policy in justice, protecting the person who has the expectancy, and reducing him to the situation of an infant, against the effects of his own conduct. The Court avows the disability, but not the length to which it disables. Lord Ardglass and Pitt, 1 Vern. 239. — It is very difficult to state the analogy between our law and the Roman, with respect to the protection of children in the life-time of their parents. Lord Hardwicke, in the case before him, referred to the senatus consultum Macedonianum.† The principle is recognised, and the rule laid down in 3 Wms. (Cole v. Gibbons, 3 Wms. 290.) and the Court has proceeded upon it for near a century. The practice has overturned the rule upon which Nott v. Hill, 1 Vern. 167. was determined. The heir of a family dealing for an expectancy in [*] that family, shall be distinguished from ordinary cases, and an unconscionable bargain made with him shall not only be looked upon as oppressive in the particular instance, and therefore avoided, but as pernicious in principle, and therefore repressed. This must be taken to be the established principle. But it is objected that here the son had no allowance. — That circumstance occurred in many of the cases. Nott v. Hill had every thing in its favour; the father was corrupt; it was clear of fraud, except such as arises from inequality only. In Barnardiston v. Lingood, 2 Atk. 133. and Chesterfield v. Janssen, Lord Hardwicke treats inequality as a mark of fraud. Curwyn v. Milner [3 P. W.

1778.

Gwynne
against Heaton.

[ *9 ]

[ *10 ]

† E. Chesterfield v. Janssen, 2 Ves. 158. See Dig. 14. t. 6. As to the law of Rome, on the subject of the contracts of minors, see D. 4. t. 4. also Domat. b. 4. t. 6. § 2.; and see the same excellent writer, on the vices of covenants, b. 1. tit. 18.

(1) Vide 6 Ves. 275.

1778.

Gwynne
against
Heaton.

292. note,] was perfectly free from fraud; it was 500*l.* to pay 1000*l.* on the decease of either of the parents: he paid the money, and afterwards brought his bill, and was relieved on the same ground with the relief against marriage brokage bonds. In those cases, fraud is not the ground of relief; it is the example, and pernicious consequences. It is contended that this case is not within the view. I think no man's case can be more so than an heir expectant of an estate-tail, and the father in possession of another estate; so that he stood fully in the situation which has served as an example of unequal dealing in former times. — Its being mere subsistence, he having no allowance from his father, is no objection: that was the situation in Nott v. Hill, and in Twisleton v. Griffith, and is therefore no bar to the relief. — Its being hawked about, is not an objection, as it only shews the necessity he was under. — The main evidence relied upon by the defendant, is that of the agent who transacted the business, and who knew at the time that he was transacting a matter of some legal danger. The deed of the 12th of June, 1773, granting the rent-charge, recites a calculation (1) of the value of the annuity, at seventeen years purchase; that Gwynne was desirous to sell, and had caused it to be advertised; that Heaton applied in consequence to Gwynne, and his agents, who proposed to secure it on the estate-tail, and therefore in consideration of 5100*l.* he bargained. The circumstance of the long annuities not being transferred for some time after, is not of great weight, as the security was good. The trustees being named by the advancer of the money, rather shews the superiority of fortune, than renders it insecure. It then comes to this; that Heaton the purchaser, knowing the actual state of the lives for which he was bargaining, the inequality which that introduced, and the indigence of the man with [*] whom he was contracting, makes a bargain with him, which appears as enormous as that of Nott v. Hill, without one circumstance to cast a shade over the case. The deeds must be set aside. — Then on what terms must it be? The conveyance must remain as a security for all the money really advanced, and this must include the expence of the securities. The insurance, as far as it goes to the 2300*l.* must certainly be taken in; and I am inclined to think, that upon the contingency must also be allowed. Interest must be computed upon what he has so paid, from the time of payment. Then this reduces it to the case of a mortgage, which includes the costs of working out the redemption, unless the conduct of the mortgagee requires a difference. It was so done in the case before Lord Cowper, in Williams, (Twisleton v. Griffith;) Lord Chancellor directed full costs, and this is explained liberal costs. But there are circumstances in this case that particularly lead me to this determination: The plaintiff has not, in the bill, put this case upon the point on which he is to be relieved. It appears to me, that he, like any other mortgagor, should pay costs of the redemption (2); but I should be glad to hear if the plaintiff's counsel have any objection.

Mr. Attorney General cited Lawley v. Hooper, 3 Atk. 278. and Lord Chancellor said he would think about the costs.

Accordingly on the 28th of July, at Lincoln's-Inn-Hall, Lord Chancellor said, the money really advanced must be paid with interest, together with the expences of the deeds, and insurance, and the costs of taking the account must be added, for that must be in every case; although it seems very hard, where a contract is set aside upon an equitable ground, that still the contract should remain a security for all the costs generally, and which have been occasioned by the defendant's putting

(1) As to the fallacy of calculations from tables, as applied to particular cases, see 6 Ves. 274. 9.; 8 Ves. 133. &c.

(2) See also acc. in Nott v. Hill, 2 Vern. 27. Mr. Raithby's note (2).

the Costs.

[ *11 ]

the plaintiff to the necessity of filing a bill, and by his defending a contract which ought not to stand; but the defendant to have no other costs. †

† V. Henley v. Aze, post. vol. 2. p. 17. and Heathcote v. Paignon, ibid. 167.

1778.

GWYNNE
against
HEATON

[*] WHITE against WHITE and others. [28 July.]

[ *12 ]

(Reg. Lib. 1777. B. fol. 582.)

RICHARD Holt, possessed of a considerable personal estate, made his will the 6th of October, 1769, and, after giving various legacies, disposed of the residuum of his estate as follows:—He gave one half thereof to the Foundling Hospital, and the other moiety to the Lying-in Hospital (2), and if there should be more than one of the latter, then to such of them as his executor should appoint.—He then appointed (3) of Castlegate, his executor; but the testator afterwards struck out the executor's name, and appointed no other executor; and died in 1775. Benjamin White, the plaintiff, proved the will as a testamentary paper, and took administration with the paper annexed, as one of the next of kin. The defendants are the other next of kin, and the governors of the Foundling Hospital, and of the several Lying-in Hospitals. The plaintiff in his bill insists that the devise of the moiety to the Lying-in Hospital became void by striking out the name of the executor, who was to appoint, and that it should be referred to the Master, to report who are entitled as next of kin, and offers to account under the direction of the Court. The Defendants, the next of kin, also claim that moiety as being void. The governors of the Foundling Hospital claim the moiety bequeathed to them. The governors of the several Lying-in Hospitals submit their several claims.

Mr. Madocks (for the plaintiff).—So much of the will as is not obliterated, must be protected.—If the devise had been to the Lying-in Hospital, parol evidence must have been admitted, to have explained what hospital he meant; but the testator was aware of this, and took care there should not be a latent ambiguity, he therefore referred it to his executor which should take. Then, the appointment being revoked, the devise itself is revoked, for there is now no person existing who can appoint. How far they will argue that it devolves upon the Court to judge, I know not; but the cases will not support them in that doctrine. In Lady Downing's case, where the college was pointed out, together with the statutes by which it was to be governed, the Court held, that they had sufficient demonstration of the testator's intent to carry it into execution. So, where money is to go to charity generally, it devolves

Testator gives a moiety of the residue to such Lying-in-hospital, as his executor should appoint. He afterwards strikes out the executor's name, and dies without appointing any other executor. This is not a revocation of the legacy, but the court will appoint. (1)

(1) The principle is well laid down by Lord Eldon C. that the failure of any particular mode shall not defeat the object of any charity compatible with the law; and that where there is either an illegal or a general indefinite purpose, the disposition is in the King, by sign manual; but that where either general or particular objects are pointed out, a Court of Equity will take the administration of the fund, on failure of the mode directed, or of the Trustee. Moggridge v. Thackwell, on the rehearing, 7 Ves. 36. 69. 78. 85. That case is so elaborate, so comprehensive of the authorities, and so truly valuable in respect of the judgment there reported, that it would be useless for an editor, after the above, to do more than refer to it in this place. See, however, Lord Eldon's observations on the principal case, 7 Ves. 77, 78.

(2) It is rather singular, that the entry in R. L. omits this part of the will on which the question arose; but it is evidently a mere mistake of the transcriber, as the clause is noticed in the answers there stated, &c.

(3) A blank appears also in Reg. Lib.

upon

1778.

WHERE
against WHEAT.

[*13]

upon the crown to mark [*] out the charity. Where it is left to a superstitious use, the crown shall appoint the charitable use to which it shall be applied. That is not this case; here is no sufficient demonstration that it should go to a Lying-in hospital. In the case of a private charity, the intent of the testator has greater weight than the jurisdiction of this court, which can only be subsidiary. He having said the executor only shall appoint, and the testator having revoked his name, he meant to revoke the devise.

Mr. Mansfield (1) (for the hospitals). — The obliteration of the name shall not defeat the intent, so as to prevent the money from going to some one of, or all, the Lying-in hospitals. It is impossible it should go as it was left; but, under all the cases, the Court will stand in the executor's place. All the rules shew great latitude, and liberality of construction. — The only rule with which I have any thing to do is, that where the testator refers to any person who cannot act, the Court will carry the devise into execution as near as may be. The cases prove, that where money is indefinitely given, the Court will exercise its judgment: If he had given it to such charity as the executor should name, the Court must have applied it. † Then if it was to exercise so large a power, why should it not exercise the more limited one? So if it had been to the hospital the executor should name, in this case, perhaps, the executor would not have been limited to give it to one hospital only. — There are cases that come up to the present point — Attorney General against Syderfin, 1 Vern. 224. (2) where the presumption was, that the testator had destroyed the writing, which is full as strong as revoking the name of the executor. In Doyley and others against the Attorney General, 4 Viner, 485. 2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 194. (3) the discretion [*] devolved to the Court. In Bailis and Church against the Attorney General, 2 Atk. 239. (4) the alderman, and principal inhabitants of Bread-street ward were appointed to distribute the charity. There is no more difficulty in finding out which hospital is the most proper object of bounty, than which dissenting ministers could not be supported by the people. In this case, the discretion is brought within much narrower limits than in the former ones. It seems to me, the executor would not be confined to one hospital. (5)

[*14]

Mr. Madocks (in reply). — It is clear the testator only meant it should go to one Lying-in hospital. — Then the referring to the executor ex-

† In the case of Widmore v. Woodroffe, Ambler 636. [Highmo. on Mortm. part 2. p. 10.] 12th of December, 1776, Mr. Widmore, the testator, gave 200*l.* to the corporation of Queen Ann's bounty, to augment poor livings; and directed his executors to divide the residue of his personal estate into three parts, and to pay one-third either to the corporation of Queen Ann's bounty, or the Society for Propagating the Gospel; another third to his most necessitous relations, by his father's and mother's side; and the third to some public charity. The legacy to the corporation of Queen Ann's bounty being held to be void, as, by the rules of that institution, it must be laid out in land; the third of the residue which was given to the same charity, or to the Society for Propagating the Gospel, was ordered, on the same account, to be paid to the latter; and the legacy of the other third, to some public charity, was declared to be good, but that the executors ought to dispose of it under the eye of the Court, and therefore were to propose a charity to the Master.

(1) Lord Eldon C. approved much of this argument in Moggridge v. Thackwell, Editor's MSS. Et vide in that case, 7 Ves. 78.

(2) "It is accurately reported in Vernon;" but the whole of the previous circumstances, which are important, are detailed by Lord Eldon C. from the original papers, and observed upon 7 Ves. 70, 71, 72.

(3) And see it stated from Reg. Lib. and observed upon 7 Ves. 58.

(4) Et vide per Lord Eldon C. 7 Ves. 77, 78. who particularly connects it with the principal case.

(5) See 7 Ves. 78.

cludes

cludes every other power in the world from the nomination. The distinction between the cases is only this, that where the question is only how the charity shall take, it shall be regulated by the Court, but not where the question is who shall take? In the first set of cases, they are all for charity generally — The object is clear, and therefore, the mode not appearing, it devolves upon the crown. In the Attorney General v. Syderfin, the object was certain, and the same in the case of the ward of Bread-street.

Lord Chancellor. — It seems if this had been a private legacy, and a selection of objects out of which the legatee was to be chosen, it is allowed that it would be of the essence of the legacy, and it could not take place unless there was an expression of general favour, to let in all the objects. The cases must be considered in order to form a line of distinction. The case of Syderfin goes beyond all the rest, because the will of the testator is to be explained by the grant of the crown. (1) — My notion is, that in the case of charities this court derives a great latitude of authority from the extensive nature of most charities; because they cannot go upon the same strict rules which prevail in private cases. But that is well resolved into the purpose and the mode. Where the testator is willing it shall go in the largest extent, you only follow his intent in marking out objects. — I wished to follow this method in construing the intent of testators. I have stated a distinction between charities and private cases, so as to lay down a latitude more wide than is to be wished to be left to courts of justice. In the Downing College case, the difficulty was, that, when the anterior estates were spent, there was nobody to take the equitable dominion; and the question [*] was, whether the analogy held between it and a legal estate, with nobody to take, which descends to the heir at law, till an object arises. Even in private cases, the distinction between the object and the mode has been attended to. — I will look into the cases whether selecting one out of the objects is regulating the mode only.

Lincoln's-Inn-Hall, 28th July, Lord Chancellor gave judgment in this case. — The question is here, whether the legacy is void, the executor's name being struck out, and there being no person upon whom it could devolve; or whether the Court will sustain it. — It has been argued that the Court has great extent of jurisdiction, in making legacies certain which were before uncertain; and secondly, in applying them where it is not known to what use they were intended. (1) There has been at all times an exercise of this authority, where a legacy has been doubtfully given, as in Attorney General v. Syderfin, which was a legacy to such charitable uses as he had appointed, but the appointment was not found; the court decreed the charity to be directed by the crown, as there had been an appointment. (3) In Wheeler v. Sheer, in Lord King's time, (Mosely, 288. 301.) there was no appointment, but the testator had procrastinated the legacy; that evidence satisfied Lord King, that the testator had not so fixed his mind as to separate the legacy from the personal fund, and he would not carry the charity into execution. (4) The cases have proceeded upon notions adopted from the Roman and civil law, which are very favourable to charities, that legacies given to public uses not ascertained shall be applied to some proper 1778.

WARR
against WARR.

[ *15 ]

(1) See Lord Eldon C.'s observations on this judgment, and with reference to this part of it, 7 Ves. 78, 9; and see the ultimate judgment postea.

(2) "This observation is confined to the charitable legacies under consideration," per Lord Eldon C. 7 Ves. 79.

(3) Lord Eldon C. observes on this, that the non-existence of the appointment was prima facie evidence that it had been revoked, 7 Ves. 79.

(4) Lord Eldon C. doubted whether Lord King's decree was made on the principle here stated, 7 Ves. 79.

object.

1778.

WHITE against WHITE.

object. From Swinburn, down to Lord Hardwicke's time, that would be the effect where the object is disappointed: but the present case is different. Here the testator giving a legacy to the next of kin, and to the executor, names a particular charity a residuary legatee; the question is, only, how the trust shall be carried into execution. I remember to have read a case somewhere †, where a legacy is given to B. for the benefit of non-conforming ministers, with the advice of C. and D. — at the testator's death B. C. and D. were all dead, yet the Court sustained the legacy. It must be referred to the Master, to [see unto] which of the Lying-in hospitals [it is fit] it shall be paid.

† This is the case of Attorney General v. Hickman (1), 2 Eq. Ca. Abr. 193.

(1) It is also stated in Attorney General v. Doyley, 2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 194. and 4 Vin. 485. Each report agrees with Reg. Lib. There is also another account of it in C. J. Wilmot's MSS. notes. Vide 7 Ves. 80. and Wilmot's Cases in Attorney General v. Bowyer.

[*16] [*] HULME against TENANT and his Wife. [30 June, 28 July, and 14 December.]

S. C. 2 Dick.
560.

(Reg. Lib. 1778. A. fol. 90.)

Bond of a feme covert, jointly with her husband, shall bind her separate property. (1)

A BILL filed by the obligee of a bond, to secure 180*l.* entered into by the defendants, husband and wife; against the husband, wife, and her surviving trustee, to recover the sums secured out of the wife's separate estate. Upon the marriage the estates of the wife had been conveyed to trustees; one part, consisting of freehold and leasehold lands, in trust to receive and pay the rents and profits to the wife, for her separate use, and to convey the estate itself to such use as she by her last will in writing, or by deed or writing under her hand and seal, executed in the presence of two witnesses, should appoint; in default of appointment, to the use and behoof of her heirs and assigns: other parts to be sold, and out of the produce, 1000*l.* to be laid out according to the directions of the wife, the interest and profits to be paid to her, and the principal to her, or her order by note or writing under her hand;

(1) Lord Eldon C. has repeatedly expressed doubts upon the propriety of this determination, and of those upon which it was founded; calling the principal case a prodigiously strong one, and intimating, not only that the authority of those cases had been considerably shaken by his predecessor, Lord Rosslyn, in Whistler v. Newman, 4 Ves. 129. &c. 143. &c.; but that there might be a contrary decision if the point should come distinctly into full review, and be carried to the extent. See in Sperling v. Rochfort, 8 Ves. 175. &c.; in Nantes v. Corrock, 9 Ves. 188. &c.; Jones v. Harris, ibid. 497, 8. &c.; Parkes v. White, 11 Ves. 221, 2, &c. Notwithstanding these grave doubts, and the concurrence of other Judges as to the principle of them, the courts have never yet, since Lord Rosslyn's time, ventured to decide the point which arose in the principal case, contrary to the decision of Lord Thurlow. On the contrary, it has arisen and been determined in a similar manner by Sir Wm. Grant, Master of the Rolls, in Heatley v. Thomas, 15 Ves. 596. &c. and in Bullpin v. Clarke, 17 Ves. 365. His Honour also made a similar decision upon a less formal instrument even than a bond, namely, a promissory note. It is true, that in the last case there appeared some ground of intention dehors the note, and that might warrant it; but still, Lord Eldon's remarks as to the informality of an instrument, which ought to be consistent with the power, apply with double force. The present inclination of the Court is certainly to protect the separate property of femes coverts against alienation by their general personal engagements: (see several of the above cases, and in Stuart v. Lady Kirkwall, 3 Madd. Rep. 94. note.) and the struggle of Lord Thurlow to protect the property of Miss Watson, by inserting words restrictive of anticipation, though baffled by her improvident acts, has not been in vain for the public; for it seems now settled, that such a clause is valid. See per Lord Eldon, in Jackson v. Hobhouse, 2 Meriv. 483. 487, 8.

and for want of such appointment, to her executors, administrators, and assigns. This 1000*l.* had been raised, and the whole or the greatest part applied, so that the question in the cause was with respect to the remedy against the other estate. In 1769, the husband borrowed of the plaintiff Mrs. Hulme 50*l.* upon his, and his wife's bond. In 1770, having occasion for a further sum, the wife herself applied to the plaintiff and borrowed 130*l.* paid the interest due upon the former sum of 50*l.* and gave a new bond for the 100*l.* — The cause had been heard before Lord Bathurst, who dismissed the bill. It came on now to be reheard.

1778.

HULME
against TENANT.

Mr. Mansfield opened for the plaintiff, but the reporter was absent.

Mr. Attorney General (for the defendants). The plaintiff is not intitled to the relief of a court of equity, but is to be left to make the best she can of the security at law. Trustees for a woman, are appointed for the purpose of preventing her from doing acts prejudicial to herself, under the influence of her husband. The husband's credit not being good, the plaintiff has taken the wife's bond. The husband was indebted — He and his wife are co-obligors, and it is done with the approbation of the plaintiff's attorney, who must know it was void. — He ought to have insisted upon a mortgage of her separate property. [*] This Court will never look upon bonds as appointments, where the party could not enter into the bond. In many cases of bonds with penalties, the Court considers the bond as the form only, and as evidence of the substance, and will not suffer the party to be free upon payment of the penalty: but in the case of an infant, where it is voidable only, the taking of the bond will not aid the taker in equity. I do not contend that a married woman cannot contract in respect to her separate property, but the party contracting must take a security agreeable to the nature of the property — he cannot better his security. (1) Peacock v. Monk, 2 Vesey, 190. closes with a dictum, the authority of which is very doubtful; it had no affinity to the principal question.

[ *17 ]

Mr. Selwyn (on the same side). — There is no case where the point has been determined that a bond, in which the wife joins her husband, binds her separate property. Norton v. Turvill, 2 Wms. 144. was against the wife's representatives, which is very different from the present against the separate property settled upon her for life.

Lord Chancellor. — Grigby v. Cox, 1 Vesey, 517. appears to be a decree for a specific performance. The defect of that case is, that it does not state the trust. It is said, that a feme covert is to be considered as a feme sole, with respect to every authority she can exercise over her separate estate, — but it is different where the consent of the trustees is made essential to the conveyance, although the mere appointment of trustees is not sufficient to deprive her of that authority; for there must be trustees; otherwise she could have no separate property.

Mr. Selwyn. — † In Biscoe v. Kennedy, Sir Thomas Clarke thought † Biscoe v. Kennedy, at the Rolls, 21st July, 1762, the defendant Jane Kennedy, then the widow of Ormond Tomson, Esq. being indebted to the plaintiff Biscoe, in 114*l.* by bond 22d April, 1755, and being possessed of several leasehold houses, and of 1000*l.* East-India stock, by settlement on her marriage with the defendant James Kennedy, all her personal estate (excepting 500*l.* East-India stock, which the husband was to have) was conveyed to the defendant Mac Cullock, in trust for the separate use of the defendant Jane. The marriage having taken effect, the plaintiff filed his bill (without having sued the

(1) This certainly would have been the sound principle. See in the cases above referred to by the first note, and especially 4 Ves. 145. and 11 Ves. 221. The contrary practice, however, seems too deeply rooted for any permanent reversal, short of an act of parliament; for even the paramount tribunal of appeal must be governed by authorities. it 1778.

HULME
against TENANT.
[ *18 ]

it was to be considered as the property of a feme sole; [*] but, in that case, the bond was given before the marriage of the parties.

Lord Chancellor. — Do you consider that case as deciding that her property was liable to her acts only whilst she was a feme sole?

Mr. Selwyn. — A feme covert can execute no act except by virtue of a power, or with the consent of the trustees, or by some means referring to her separate property; but, in this case, there is no reference whatsoever to her separate property, or consent of trustees. It is not wholly immaterial that the plaintiff has sued at law. — In Machorro and Stonehouse, in July last, upon marriage, a sum was agreed to be laid out in the funds, upon trust that the dividends should be to the separate use of the wife; the plaintiff bought the interest during the lives of the husband and wife, for eight years purchase; there was no fraud: a bill was brought against the trustee for a transfer. — Mrs. Stonehouse, in her answer, insisted this was against her consent, but there was evidence in the cause that they both consented. — This bill, so circumstanced, was dismissed with costs, by his Honour, [Sir Thomas Sewell,] who seemed shocked at the proposition, that a married woman could be bound by an act done in conjunction with her husband. (1)

[ *19 ]

Mr. Mansfield (in reply). — It is now laid down that a woman having separate property, cannot dispose of it but by the means pointed out by the settlement and with the consent of her trustees. It seemed to me that a feme covert, having separate property, was to that intent a feme sole, and might borrow money and give securities. The consent of the trustees has been decided not to be necessary; the use of trustees being only to guard it against the husband. Here, it is to such uses as she by deed, or will, should appoint. — Mr. Attorney General and Mr. Selwyn argue upon the ground that the bond was void — That is begging the question. — If we are right, [*] though void at law, it is not void here. The latter of these two bonds, that to secure 130*l.* was given on the mere motion of the wife. No objection arises from the plaintiff's having sued at law: it was a legal security against the husband. — As to an infant's bond: — An infant is never considered here as an adult, but a feme covert is very often considered as a feme sole. In Norton v. Turvill, the assets were considered as being bound when she was dead; then her property must have been bound whilst she was living. That case is decisive of the present question. The dictum in Peacock v. Monk is mentioned as falling from Lord Hardwicke, and naturally, as being the general rule governing the property of women, and taking that particular case out of the rule. In Biscoe v. Kennedy, the separate property could not be the subject in dispute, the debts of a feme sole falling on her husband. In Machorro v. Stonehouse, the woman lived separate from the husband, and probably some fraud struck the learned judge.

Lord Chancellor. — My doubt arises principally upon the form of the relief, rather than the principles upon which the bill is brought; it is a the husband) to have the separate estate of the wife applied to the payment of the debt; which bill was dismissed. The plaintiff then sued out writs against James and Jane Kennedy; but James Kennedy absconding, could not be served, and the plaintiff proceeded to outlawry, and then filed this bill to be paid out of the wife's separate estate. — The defendant insisted, that during her husband's life her separate property was not liable to this debt, contracted by her while sole. — The plaintiff contended that the settlement was, as to him, fraudulent. Upon the hearing, his Honour declared that, upon the circumstances of the case, the effects of the defendant, vested in her trustee, were to be considered as the property of a feme sole, and ordered plaintiff's debt and costs to be paid out of the 500*l.* East-India stock, in the hands of the trustee.

(1) But see contra (inter alia) Standford v. Marshall, 2 Atk. 68. Et vide Pybus v. Smith, post. 3d vol. 340. and the cases referred to.

1778.

HULME
against TENANT.

bill brought by the obligee upon a joint bond by husband and wife, for 180*l*. to recover that sum out of the separate property of the wife. — It is brought against the wife, the husband, and the trustees, for attaining the most extensive and perfect relief which the situation of her separate property will enable her or her trustees to afford. — The question is, what sort of execution this Court will award against that separate property? It is created by deed, and is real estate conveyed to trustees, as to a considerable part of it, in trust to receive and pay the rents to the wife, and to convey the estates themselves according to the appointment of the wife, by her last will and testament in writing, or by deed or writing under her hand and seal, executed in the presence of two or more witnesses, and, for want of such declaration, or appointment, to the use and behoof of the wife, her heirs, and assigns; as to other parts, in trust, to be sold, and out of the produce of the sale, 1000*l*. to be retained by the trustees, to be laid out according to the directions of the wife, the profits to be paid to her, and the principal to her, or her order by note or writing under her hand, and, for want of such appointment, to her executors, administrators, and assigns. — The rule laid down in Peacock v. Monk, 2 Ves. 190. that a feme covert [*] acting with respect to her separate property, is competent to act in all respects as if she was a feme sole, is the proper rule, and necessary to support the decisions on this subject. The consequence was that, in Allen v. Papworth, 1 Vesey, 163. where a bill was brought by husband and wife, for an account, the wife, together with her husband, submitting that the profits of her separate estate should be applied to pay the husband's debts, she was bound by that submission, and the profits of her separate estate were by decree directed to be so applied. (1) — In Grigby v. Cox, where the wife had contracted to sell her separate estate, being authorized by settlement to dispose of it, the Court bound her, as a person equally competent as if sole, to a specific performance of that contract: — I take it therefore it is impossible to say, but that a feme covert is competent to act as a feme sole, with respect to her separate property, where settled to her separate use; but the question here goes a little beyond that; it is not only how far she may act upon her separate property, I have no doubt about that; but the question is, how far her general personal engagement (2) shall be executed out of her separate property. — If she had by instrument contracted that this or that portion of her separate estate, should be disposed of in this or that way, I think she and her trustees might have been decreed to make that disposition; but if she enters into an engagement, which would make a feme sole liable to the whole extent of the contract as to her person, &c. in every respect; it is clear such general engagement, entered into by a feme covert will not bind her as such. (3) — It is not like the case of an infant, who is incapable of acting; but, in respect to a feme covert, determined cases seem to go thus far, that the general engagement of the wife shall operate upon her personal property, shall apply to the rents and profits of her real estate, and that her trustees shall be obliged to apply personal estate, and rents and profits when they arise, to the

[ *20 ]

(1) It seems evident, that Lord Thurlow must have referred to the Reg. Book, before citing this case; and the cotemporary report in Dickins gives a reference thereto in part. It may be, however, that the whole case of Allen v. Papworth was not then investigated from its commencement. The Editor has unfolded it from its origin of another suit, in his Supplement to Vesey, sen. page 88. et seq. Lord Thurlow's exposition of the point is there confirmed. see p. 94, 5.; and it therefore seems to furnish the authority required in vain by Lord Eldon, in Sperling v. Rochfort, 8 Ves. 177.

(2) See the references in the first note to this case.

(3) It is now quite settled, that a feme covert is not personally liable for any debt. See the latter part of the note, Chassaing v. Partridge, 5 Ves. 17.

satisfaction

1778.

HULME
against TENANT,

[ *21 ]

satisfaction of such general engagement; but this Court has not used any direct process against the separate estate of the wife, and the manner of coming at the separate property of the wife has been by decree to bind the trustees, as to personal estate in their hands or rents and profits, according to the exigency of justice, or of the engagement of the wife to be carried into execution. I know of no case which has gone further than that. Suppose the wife to have power by settlement to dispose of her real estate, to any uses she shall think fit, yet the trustees must make the formal [*] instrument, without which the estate cannot pass. I know of no case, where the general engagement of the wife has been carried to the extent of decreeing that the trustees of her real estate shall make conveyance of that real estate, and, by sale, mortgage, or otherwise, raise the money to satisfy that general engagement on the part of the wife. It may be difficult to give relief here without doing something of that kind, because that part of the real estate which was to be sold has been sold, and the money has been applied, with the direction of the wife, by the hand of the trustee, who consequently is no longer liable as to that sum, so that so far as the 1000*l.* it seems out of the reach of this Court; the trustee alledging that the money is paid, or not remaining in his hands. — (Mr. Ambler.—Only part paid over.) Lord Chancellor.—I believe there is no instance of a personal decree against a feme covert, for payment of any sum whatever. — Though her separate personal property is liable, yet the decree is to fetch forth her separate estate, and make it liable to her engagement. No lease found in the hands of the trustee is now before the Court; we cannot come at it, — as a bond it is void, otherwise an extent might have gone.

Lincoln's-Inn-Hall, 28 July. Lord Chancellor.—I have no doubt about this principle, that, if a court of equity says a feme covert may have a separate estate, the Court will bind her to the whole extent, as to making that estate liable to her own engagements; as for instance, for payment of debts, &c. But, although the remedy here is more extensive than in a court of law; I do not find the Court has ever ordered a power to be executed (1); they have industriously stopped short of so doing, and have only given a remedy by stopping the fund, where the power was executed; therefore I cannot order the feme covert to execute her power; but I am exceedingly clear that the leasehold estate will be liable.

It stood referred to the Master to take an account of the rents and profits of the leasehold estates (2); but, before any report, the parties came to a compromise, upon the defendant Frances paying the principal sum borrowed, with interest, without any costs. † (3)

† V. Stamford v. Marshall, 2 Atk. 68.

The Reporter was not present in Lincoln's-Inn-Hall, on the 28th of July; for what passed upon that day in this and the two former causes, he is obliged to the information of friends, upon whose accuracy he can depend.

(1) See Thorpe v. Goodall, 17 Ves. 388. 460. 462. where Lord Eldon, C. decided, that the Court will not compel a bankrupt to execute a power, and that the Court never has determined.

(2) See 2 Dick. 562.

(3) 14 Dec. 1778. Reg. Lib. 1778. A. fol. 98. No entry of the original decree.

1778.

[*22]

* MICHAELMAS TERM,

19 Geo. 3. 1778.

STEPHENS against Lord Viscount BATEMAN. [23. 24. 25 Nov.](Reg. Lib. 1778. B. fol. 130, 1. Entered as Stephens v. Hanbury.)

THIS bill was filed to set aside a deed entered into by the parties in 1760, under the following circumstances. By settlements made in the Western family, in the years 1712 and 1722, terms were created for raising portions for daughters (12,000*l.*); which, had the real uses subsisted, and no act intervened, would have vested in the plaintiff Mrs. Stephens and the defendant Mrs. Hanbury. Before Mrs. Stephens became of the age of sixteen, she went off with and married one Dumesnil, a French servant of her father's. All the real uses under the settlement failed in 1730, and the fee-simple then descended on Mrs. Stephens, and her sister Mrs. Hanbury, subject to the life estate of the mother, then Mrs. Dolliffe. In 1741, Mrs. Stephens came of age: no act was done by her during the life of Dumesnil, and, he being dead, she in the year 1758 married Stephens, and levied fines, and settled the moiety of the estate to the use of herself and her husband, for their respective lives; remainder to the issue of the marriage, remainder to the husband in fee. After this, questions arising in the family as to what forfeiture Mrs. Stephens had incurred, under the 4th and 5th of Philip and Mary, c. 8. by assenting to the marriage with Dumesnil, an ejectment was brought to try the question, a trial was had, and a case reserved for the opinion of the Court; but in the mean time Mr. and Mrs. Stephens being poor and in debt, the parties came to the agreement, and entered into the deed in question. By this deed it was recited, that questions had arisen, that Mrs. Stephens insisted the forfeiture was at an end by the death of Dumesnil (3), and that Mrs. Hanbury insisted that it subsisted during the life of Mrs. Stephens; Mrs. Stephens's moiety of the estate was then conveyed to the husband for life, remainder to the wife for life, remainder to the issue of the marriage, [*] remainder in fee to Mrs. Hanbury. By this deed 2000*l.* were to be raised, to discharge the debts of Mrs. Stephens and her husband. It was executed by Mr. and Mrs. Hanbury, Mr. and Mrs. Stephens, and Mrs. Dolliffe the mother, and at the time there was no probability of issue of Mr. and Mrs. Stephens. The bill now filed was to set aside this deed, as obtained by surprise from persons in necessitous circumstances, and that the 6000*l.* portion should be raised.

The Reporter did not hear the opening for the plaintiffs.

(1) As to cases where equity relieves, where there has been a misconception of right, see Bingham v. Bingham, 1 Ves. 126. Supp. 79.; Cocking v. Pratt, ibid. 400. Supp. 176.; and Ramsden v. Hytton, 2 Ves. 304. Supp. 350.

(2) See Cory v. Cory, 1 Ves. 19.; Penn v. Lord Baltimore, ibid. 444. 450. Supp. 194.; per Lord Hardwicke, in Taylor v. Rochfort, 2 Ves. 284.; and in Pullen v. Ready, 2 Atk. 587. 592. And see Stockley v. Stockley, before Lord Eldon C. 1 Ves. and Beames, 23. 30.

(3) Held accordingly in Ridley v. Wilson, Ambl. 73.

A deed entered into by parties apprized of their rights (1), in order to put an end to a suit, although upon inadequate consideration, shall not be set aside. (2)

[*23]

1778.

STEPHENS against
BATEMAN.

Mr. Mansfield (for the defendants).—This deed has been impeached upon various grounds, as very hard upon Mrs. Stephens; but the hardship, if any, was upon Mr. Stephens.—Secondly, It is said to be founded upon a mistake, for that the forfeiture was at an end by the death of Dumesnil. But the deed was not founded on the forfeiture, but upon the doubt; and an ejectment had been brought to try the question. Had it been founded upon the forfeiture, there would not have been much doubt about it; the simple point under the stat. 4 and 5 Philip and Mary, c. 8. is whether the forfeiture is for the life of the husband only, or for that of the wife also. (1)

Lord Chancellor.—Was not the whole question, whether he had taken her away? For although the husband has confessed it, that confession cannot bind her.

Mr. Mansfield.—There can be no doubt upon the construction of the statute; the words are, “if any woman child, or maiden, being “above the age of twelve years, and under the age of sixteen years, “do at any time consent or agree to such person that so shall make any “such contract of matrimony, contrary to the form and effect of this “statute, that then the next of the kin of the same woman child, or maid, “to whom the inheritance should descend, return, or come after the “decease of the same woman child and maid, shall, from the time of “such assent and agreement, have, hold, and enjoy all such lands, tene“ments, and hereditaments as the same woman child and maiden had in “possession, reversion, or remainder, at the time of such assent and agree“ment, during the life of such person that shall so contract matrimony:
“And after the decease of such person so contracting matrimony, that “then the said lands, tenements, and hereditaments shall descend, re“vert, remain, and come to such person or persons as they should [*] “have done in case this act had never been made, other than to him “only that so shall contract matrimony:” here the forfeiture commences on the consent. It is impossible to give any sense to the words of the statute, if the forfeiture is to be for the life of the husband only; for it would then be, that, after the death of her husband, the estate should go to any person to whom it should have gone, except the husband. This is not a new point; it has been determined in Ratcliffe’s case, (3 Co. 39. 2d point) that the statute “imposes forfeiture as well “on him who takes, &c. as on the damsel, if she exceeds the age of “12 years, if she assents to such contract, by forfeiture of her land
“during her life,” (2) also 3 Inst. 62. So that, had the deed been grounded on the forfeiture, there would have been no mistake. — Then the forfeiture is said not to extend to reversions: but the very words of the statute are, “in possession, reversion, or remainder.” — As to there having been no conviction, the forfeiture was brought on by the assent of the wife who could not be convicted. Ratcliffe’s case excludes the necessity of a conviction. But the deed proceeded upon a doubtful construction. This is the first attempt to set aside a deed so founded long after it was made. The unsettled estate was forfeited as well as the settled. The fines were levied of all the estates, there is no doubt but they meant to settle them all. — The next question is as to the 6000*l*. — It is contended, this is to remain as a subsisting charge. The term was created in 1712; but in 1741 Mrs. Stephens and Mrs. Hanbury became seised in fee, and there is no act done which shews that this charge was considered as subsisting. Mrs. Stephens, during Dumesnil’s life, could never make use of the whole estate.

(1) The Court of Exchequer held it confined to the death of the husband, Ridley v. Wilson, Ambl. 73.

(2) V. Ambl. 73. contrary to this dictum.

Lord Chancellor. — The portion was not raiseable during the life of the mother.

Mr. Mansfield. — No. — Then as to her own moiety, she might have made use of that as a mere trust term, to attend the inheritance, although it was not assigned. There is no case where such a term has been made use of by a tenant in fee, when the person was of age; which puts Thomas v. Kemys, 2 Vern. 348. out of the case. In the Duke of Chandos v. Talbot, 2 Wms. 601. there was an estate-tail only; the Court thought it would have merged had it been an estate in fee. This 6000*l.* does not depend upon the doctrine of Graham v. Londonderry, in 3 Atk. 393. which turned upon a younger son [*] becoming an eldest. Mr. and Mrs. Stephens have put an end to the term by their own act in levying the fine in 1758, which is made still stronger by the deed of 1760. A fine will bar not only present but future interests: and in the Duke of Chandos v. Talbot, it was held, that fines and recoveries will bar claims in equity, the same as claims at law. As to the copyholds, it does seem that the parties have proceeded upon a supposition that they were not forfeited. — The general rule is, that acts of parliament extend to copyholds, where their so extending will be no detriment to the lord; therefore, if the copyholds were to pass without admission, that circumstance would make the act not include them, but if the act only goes to compel admission of the party next entitled, it may extend to copyholds. This distinction is laid down in Heydon's case, 3 Rep. 8. but there is no need here to make any decree with respect to the copyholds, the Hanburys having been in possession of them many years.

Mr. Madocks (on the same side) cited Best and Stampford, Prec. Ch. 252. to prove that where the estate and the term came into the same hand, the term merged; and Prec. Ch. 333. that a wife joining in a fine barred her lien upon the land.

Mr. Attorney General (in reply). Mrs. Stephens was owner in fee of the estate, and entitled to the 6000*l.*; then under the doctrine of Thomas v. Kemys, she might at any time have conveyed the 6000*l.* to any person who had supplied her with money. Suppose there was a forfeiture during her life, it could not forfeit the reversion, or the 6000*l.* Had the Stephenses known their rights, their interest would have produced them more money than they wanted; — but by the deed they have got only an interest for their lives, commencing upon the death of the mother. Their immediate income was not increased, they only got 2000*l.* to pay their debts, which is much less than any body would have advanced them: The deed therefore could only be entered into from the distress of their circumstances. The only question as to the 6000*l.* is, whether the deed can affect it. — It was not in contemplation at the time. Though a recovery will bar collateral rights, it must be intended so to do at the time.

Lord Chancellor. — The first question is, whether this is a fair deed, and whether it is possible to contend that the term [*] was independent of the estate, and Mrs. Stephens can call upon the trustees to raise her portion. Either considering this as a merger, or without taking the doctrine of merger into consideration, it appears to me that it is impossible to set up a term against such a conveyance. This money would not have gone to executors or administrators, which shews that it substantially unites with the land. Then the question is, whether there is sufficient ground to set aside the deed. It was manifest it was a hard bargain, but only as far as it affects Stephens, who, having, under the former deed, an estate for life with a fee expectant, and there being no expectation of issue, has parted with his fee-simple expectant for a very small consideration. But is that a ground to set aside the conveyance? — No. — The cases are express that the Court will not set aside the 1778.

STEPHENS against BATEMAN.

[ *25 ]

[ *26 ]

1778:

STEPHENS against BATEMAN.

conveyance on that ground only. Undoubtedly, till the year 1760, the Stephenses were kept out of possession. In 1760, there was a suit brought to try the question, whether the possession of the Hanburys was available. There was a trial and a case reserved, and thereupon they came to the agreement. It is impossible to state any gross surprise. There is no doubt the bargain is unequal; but the whole is reduced to this, that the parties being apprized what they were about, and having advised with counsel, have made a bargain which now appears unequal. (1)

Bill dismissed. (2)

(1) See the references in the second note to this case.

(2) The bill was not dismissed. The entry in R. L. is at great length. Various accounts were directed, relative to the estates and property of the family; and, on the contrary, the defendant Hanbury consented to pay the plaintiffs all the costs of the suit, including those the plaintiff was to pay to other defendants.—R. L.

[ *27 ]

1779.

[*] HILARY TERM,

19 Geo. 3. 1779.

HOARE against CONTENCIN (1) and others.

(Reg. Lib. 1778. A. fol. 211.)

Where an original right is merely of legal jurisdiction, the death or bankruptcy of parties will not support a bill in equity. (1)

THE defendants, being concerned in a speculation in tea, borrowed, by Layton their broker, a very large sum of money of the plaintiffs, the bankers, upon the credit of the East-India Company's warrants; afterwards the teas selling at loss, and their produce not amounting to the sum borrowed upon the warrants, the plaintiffs filed their bill against all the parties on whose account the loan was negotiated, for payment of the deficiency, contending that they were bound (though not named) by the act of their broker, and stating the whole as a partnership transaction. Only two of the persons originally concerned, viz. Dawes and Shuttleworth, were now alive and solvent; Roger Staples died pending the suit which was revived against his representatives; Contencin was become bankrupt, and his assignees were brought before the Court. It was objected by Mr. Attorney General, on the part of the defendants, that this was matter merely at law; and that the plaintiffs ought, upon their own stating of the matter as a partnership transaction, to have brought their action against Dawes and Shuttleworth, the two surviving and solvent partners, who were liable to the whole demand.

Mr. Madocks (for the plaintiffs) contended that the bill was well brought, and cited Holstcomb v. Rivers, 1 Eq. Abr. 5. tit. Account. (1 Ch. C. 127.) and that, in the case of obligor and surety in a bond, this Court would entertain a bill against the representatives of an obligor (2), though an action lay against the surety. He cited Burton v. Snee, 1 Vesey, 154. that principals, though not named, are bound by

(1) See Lord Eldon C. and Sir W. Grant M. R.'s observations and decisions on the principles of this case, and on the case itself, in Ex-parte Kendal, 17 Ves. 519. 522—5.; Devaynes v. Noble, 1 Meriv. 547. &c.; and Sumner v. Powell, 2 Meriv. 30, &c.

(2) See the references in the preceding note.

the

the contract of their broker. The Court will order an account [*] to be taken of the assets of the principal who is dead, and, if they are not sufficient to pay his quota, will give the plaintiffs a remedy against the surviving principals. The case made by the bill proves the amount to which the several parties are liable. At law they would be jointly liable. The remedy will be to direct the plaintiffs to prove under the commission of bankruptcy and that there be an account of the assets of the dead person, and of the shares of those alive and solvent; and if there be any deficiencies from the dividends of the bankrupt's estate, or the assets of the dead party, then the plaintiff shall have a remedy for so much against the surviving solvent parties. Then, will the Court say you shall only have a remedy at law against the solvent parties? The Court will prevent a circuitry of actions. The consequence of our recovering at law against Dawes and Shuttleworth, the solvent parties, would be, that they must come into this Court, to recover against the assignees of the bankrupt, and the representatives of the dead party. There is another reason why this bill should not be dismissed, that an account is prayed, and must be taken, of the interest of the money lent by the Hoares, and they must account for what has been produced by the tea-warrants. Then, the question is whether the bill should be retained, with leave to bring an action, or an issue should be directed. This depends upon the right to be ascertained. Where the fact is admitted, and the law only in question, the Court directs a case: If both fact and law are in doubt, then either an issue or an action. Then, which will be most expedient in this case? In an action, the representatives of the dead party, and the assignees of the bankrupt, will not be bound; the action can only be against the survivors, it will not be maintainable against the representatives. In an issue, they will all be bound. Where it is necessary to come to this Court, and the Court can determine the matter, it will. Parker v. Dee, 2 Ch. Ca. 200.

Mr. Walker (on the same side), to shew that this Court would entertain bills to prevent circuitry of actions, cited Dolphin v. Haynes, Show. Parl. Ca. 17. Eq. Abr. 79. pl. 3. S. C. and 3 Atk. 406. Madox v. Jackson.

Lord Chancellor.—It is of great consequence that it should be understood what are the bounds between the jurisdiction of courts of law and courts of equity, because otherwise much difficulty [*] will arise from parties being put to a great expence, to try here what should be tried at law; and, what is worse, a party would be permitted to go on here for legal consequences, although the Court must send it to law, to try the legal right. The question is, whether this case differs an iota from the common case of an action at law. What do you desire? distribution? do you not contend that you have a right against all and each of the parties? Here all the equity is, that if one party cannot pay, the other shall; the question is merely between the defendants. Can the plaintiff bring all the parties before the Court, to try the right between them, when he has nothing of his own to try? It is true that, where he has an equitable demand, the plaintiff must bring all the parties interested before the Court. This bill is filed against eight persons, merely for a remedy for money lent upon a joint contract.—If they stood as they originally did, it is not argued, that a bill would lie against all of them. As to an account, this is only of a repayment of money, and that the money for which the teas sold shall be deducted.—As it stood originally, therefore, the bill could not have been supported. I think the circumstance of one of the parties having died since the bill was brought has no effect upon the case: for although where the bill originally states a demand competent to the jurisdiction, and parties die pending the suit,

1779.

HOARE
against CONTENCIN.
[ *28 ]

[ *29 ]

1779.

HOARE
against CONTENCIN.

[ *30 ]

the Court will decree an account of assets against the representatives; yet, where the original demand is incompetent, the mere death of parties shall not support a revivor of that bill, although a subsequent equity which arises from that circumstance might be a ground of application here. — I have looked into all the cases, and they are totally different from that before the Court; and I find still greater difficulty to discover a principle, that the plaintiff can come here merely because a party is dead, by which the action is extinguished against him, and survives only against the rest. The cases are—Bishop v. Church, 2 Vesey, 100. 371. and Jacomb v. Harwood, 2 Vesey, 265. (1) The whole question in Bishop v. Church, was whether, the remedy being extinguished at law by the form of the contract, the party should have a remedy here. Lord Hardwicke expressed an idea, that, as it was a partnership transaction in trade, there must be a remedy against either. It stood over upon another point, that he lost it by his own laches; but upon the examination of Clive, it proved that the executors had acknowledged it to be their debt. Lord Hardwicke finally determined it, [*] on the ground that both having undertaken in equity, if the plaintiff could not recover against one, he should against the other. (2) That is very different from this case, because here is no danger of the debt being lost, there being a full remedy against the survivors. Jacomb v. Harwood is not an authority in this case. — In that mentioned from the Court of Exchequer, (Allport v. Thomas, Gilb. Eq. Rep. 227.) an action at law would certainly have lain, but the particular point was not argued: the ship had been sold, the money arising by the sale had, probably, been deposited, which might or might not have been the cause of the suit. The case in Atkyns (Madox v. Jackson) has nothing to do with it; it is the case of a joint and several bond. If the party was competent to stand in Court at all, he should have brought the other parties into Court. — In this case, there is no circuity of suits, for if the plaintiff had recovered against the surviving parties, see what would have been saved: the question of fact, whether there was a partnership transaction would have been settled before the other parties could have been called upon for contribution: it would have been tried at the expence of about 100*l*. Here is an immense quantity of pleadings and depositions, and an enormous expence, to bring in question a demand which is merely at law.

Bill dismissed with costs.

An action was afterwards brought against Dawes, and tried at Guildhall, 3 Mar. 1780. when a verdict was given for the defendant; and, a motion being made for a new trial, it was upon argument discharged. Dougl. 356.

(1) See the cases in the first note antea.

(2) See the references in the first note to this case, especially the observations of Lord Eldon C. and the decision of Sumner v. Powell, 2 Meriv. 50.

1779.

GARTH against MEYRICK. [1 and 3 Feb.]

(Reg. Lib. 1778. A. fol. 313.)

TWO legacies of 1000*l.* each were given in the same will to the same legatee; the first bequest was, "I give to [Mary Garth] 1000*l.* old South-sea annuities, to be transferred into her own name;— and then toward the close of the will, I give to [Mary Garth] 1000*l.* old South-sea annuities, as aforesaid." It was endeavoured to support these as separate legacies, and that the legatee should take both; but not allowed. † (2) [*] Secondly, the testator left the residue to his six grandchildren, by their christian names, but the name of Ann was repeated, and that of Elizabeth another grandchild omitted; but it was decreed in favour of all the grandchildren, and that Ann took but one share, and Elizabeth should be admitted to the share mistakenly given to Ann, by the repetition of her name. (4)

Two equal legacies in the same will, and to the same legatee, only one shall pass. (1)

[*31]

Residue to six grandchildren, the name of one repeated, that of another omitted, all of them shall take. (3)

† In the case of Greenwood v. Greenwood, before Lord Bathurst, 25 Jan. 1776, Hester Joyce, by will, dated 20 Feb. 1773, gave "to her niece Mary Cook, wife of John Cook, 500*l.*;" and afterwards, in the same will, among many other legacies, "to her cousin, Mary Cook, 500*l.* for her own use and disposing, notwithstanding her coverture." His Lordship declared, that Mary Cook was entitled to one legacy only, of 500*l.* and that the same was for her separate use. The cause was reheard upon this point, 16 Dec. in the same year, and the decree affirmed. As to the effect of such double legacy in a will and codicil, see the case of Ridges and Morrison, post. 389. and Hooley v. Hatton, there cited and relied upon.

(1) So Holford v. Wood, 4 Ves. 76. 79. 91. The profession will find the principles in such cases, and the distinctions well stated, and the material decisions collected in Mr. Roper's very useful work on Legacies, 1 vol. p. 491. et seq.

(2) "Declare that the plaintiff M. G. is entitled only to one legacy of, &c."—R. L.

(3) See Standen v. Edwards, 2 Ves. jun. 589. and Dowset v. Sweet, Ambl. 175.

(4) "Declare that the defendant E. M. though not actually named in the said testator's will, is nevertheless entitled to a share of the clear residue, &c."—R. L.

GREEN against HOWARD. [6 Feb.]

(Reg. Lib. 1778. A. fol. 233.)

A PETITION by two persons of the name of Hudson, to be admitted to shares of 4000*l.* under the following circumstances: the testator had left this legacy, "I give [the dividends on] 4000*l.* to my wife for her life, and after her decease (2) to my own relations who shall be then alive [share and share alike.]" There were several legacies in the will, to both first and second cousins. The petitioners were second cousins to the testator, and now petitioned to be admitted to shares with the next of kin.

Mr. Ambler (for the petitioners).—In Jones v. Beale, 2 Vern, 381. the Court would not restrain the devise, by the statute of distribution. The testator appears to have had an equal regard for the second cousins to

A legacy of personal estate to testator's wife, for life, and after her decease to the testator's relations who shall be then alive, confined to relations within the statute of distribution. (1)

(1) See Isaac v. Defries, Ambler, 595. S. P.; Whithorne v. Harris, 2 Ves. 527.; Goodinge v. Goodinge, 1 Ves. 230.; Maitland v. Adair, 3 Ves. 231.; and 1 Roper on Leg. 115. &c. See also Edge v. Salisbury, Ambl. 70.; Brunadon v. Woolridge, ibid. 507.; and Widmore v. Woodroffe, ibid. 636, cited in the note to page 33. post.

(2) And in default of appointment as to one moiety, he gave the principal as above.—R. L.

1779.

GREEN against HOWARD.

[ *32 ]

that he had for the first, and meant to extend his bounty beyond the next of kin. It is in evidence, that he used to receive the second cousins with equal kindness as the first. If the terms used carry any decisive meaning, they are more extensive than next of kin. Wherever there is a doubt about the construction of a will, the Court will admit evidence of circumstances. 1 Wms. 144. Lady Granville against the Duchess of Beaufort. As where persons are improperly described, not only where there are two persons of the name of J. S. but even where there is a total mistake of the name. 2 Wms. 141. Beaumont v. Fell.— So in Dowset v. Sweet, 1753, (1) where the testator had two sons, and gave to John by the name of [*] James, evidence admitted to prove he used to call him James, also in Bridall and Harper.

Lord Chancellor.— Is there one case where the word relations has been held to mean more than next of kin?

Mr. Madocks (on the same side).— If the testator has marked an intent to carry it further than the statute of distribution, the Court will do so: the statute of distribution is only adopted by the Court from necessity.† He uses the word cousin indiscriminately in the will, for first or second cousins; and cousin is a name of relationship. Where the legacy is to vest at the death of the testator the statute applies, but where it is deferred to a remote period, it does not. Suppose the testator left a first cousin, and the child of the first cousin; if the parent died in the life-time of the tenant for life, the representative would not take, because the condition precedent did not take place.

Lord Chancellor.— That, under all the determinations, would be a lapsed legacy.

Mr. Scott (on the same side).— Upon the construction of confining it to the statute, this would be making a will merely to die intestate. There is a difference where there is a wife, because the wife would not take under such a devise; but here it would be a pure intestacy. As to the evidence of his treatment of the cousins being admissible, I have no case; patent ambiguities are not to be helped by averments, but evidence may be given of facts, dehors the will, which, by words in the will, appear to have been in the contemplation of the testator.— This is founded in reason. The value of an estate is dehors the will: but if the testator refers to it, the evidence of it is admissible‡. This seems to introduce the number and age of the cousins, for he seems in another part of his will to refer to the probability of there being enough of them to exhaust a fund of 2500*l.* which he gives to his wife, to be distributed, by her, among his own [*] relations, in shares of no more than 250*l.* each; he must therefore expect there would be ten alive.— There were fifteen at the time of his making his will, of whom five only have survived his wife. He seems to have meant persons to take, more numerous than his next of kin. The case of Honeywood's will (3) shews that the Court will effectuate such an intention, though more remote; there the

[ *33 ]

(†) Upon this principle was the decision in the case of General Honeywood's will (2), mentioned afterwards by Mr. Scott, and that in Greenwood and Greenwood (cited ante, p. 30. n.) when it came on for further directions, 14 April, 1779, where Hester Joyce, by a codicil, gave the residue to be divided between her relations; that is, the Greenwoods, the Everits, and the Dows. The Everits were not within the degree of relationship limited by the statute, but were deemed to take jointly with the Greenwoods and Dows, who were.

‡ As to this point, see the case of Fonnercau v. Poyntz, post. 472.

(1) Ambl. 175.

(2) Bennet v. Honeywood, reported Ambl. 708.

(3) Bennet v. Honeywood, Ambl. 708.

words were, "to my relations, however distant, who shall claim within two years."

Lord Chancellor. — It would be very difficult to draw a line in favour of the second cousins against those who are more remote. If you once go beyond the statute, it must extend to every person who can make any claim. It must be confined to the statute, that is to one class under it, for the wife cannot claim, the statute providing for her by the name of wife; therefore, such a will is not totally inofficious, for it shuts out the wife. (1) When first these cases came before the Court, the Court said, that to avoid inconvenience, the best way was to adhere to the statute. Probably the first cases were, where the testators, having exhausted the persons whom they meant as objects, intended the rest for those to whom the law would give it. The Court has said in the same moment, that the claimants shall not always take in the proportions of the statute, but as the testator had directed; as, where there have been brothers and brothers' sons, these last took not by representation, but per capita. (2) So where the testator has said, to relations according to their greater need, the Court has shewn particular favour to one. (3) Here the testator certainly knew that the word relations signified more than next of kin. The evidence, if admitted, could go no further than to shew that he knew this. The sense of the words, as fixed by legal authority, is not to be altered by the language held on any occasion by the testator, or by his behaviour. There is no particularity in this will to alter the sense of the word relations. It must be among those entitled under the statute. Thomas v. Hole is a stronger case than this; as it is reported in Forrester, (251.) the bequest was to all the relations. †

Petition dismissed.

(†) In the case of Widmore v. Woodroffe, [Ambl. 656.] cited ante, p. 13. n. one of the questions was as to the third part of the residue, which was given to the testator's most necessitous relations, by his father's and mother's side. The plaintiff, Mary Woodroffe, was the nearest relation on the father's side (his brother's daughter); and related also on the mother's, but not so nearly as two of the defendants. Lord Camden held himself bound by the statute of distributions, and decreed that third part to the plaintiff, excluding the persons more distant.

(1) Vide Worsley v. Johnson, 3 Atk. 758.; Davies v. Baily, 1 Ves. 84.; and Garrick v. Lord Camden, 14 Ves. 372. S. P. So a husband cannot claim in any such right to his wife. Bailey v. Wright, 18 Ves. 49. &c.; affirmed by Lord Eldon C. 1 Swanst. 39.

(2) Thomas v. Hole, Forr. 251.

(3) See Gower v. Mainwaring, 2 Ves. 87. 110.

[*] JAMESON against SKIPWITH and others. (2)

(Reg. Lib. 1778. A. fol. 227.)

[*34]

[S. C. 1 Bro.
P. C. 355.
Toml. ed.]

A BILL filed by the plaintiff, as a creditor, against the defendants, the executors of the late Godfrey Bagnal Clark, Esq. for an annuity of 200*l.* for the plaintiff's life: Mr. Clark, having by his will charged his estate with all his "debts by bond, mortgage, or simple contract." The case upon evidence appeared thus: the plaintiff, in 1753, was retained by Godfrey Clark, the father of the testator, as a tutor to his son, then at Paris, at a salary of 100 guineas a year (though this salary was freenuity, (but without any specific length of time named) (1), dismissed without costs. (2)

(1) See Clinam v. Cooke, 1 Scho. and Lefroy, 22. &c.

(2) This decree was affirmed in Dom. Proc. See 1 Bro. P. C. 376. 8vo. edition.

quently

1779.

GREEN against HOWARD.

1779.

JAMESON
against SKIPWITH.

quently in arrear), and had his board and entertainment in Mr. Clark's house, when in England, or wherever Mr. Clark, jun. his pupil resided. This continued till 1763. In 1763, after Clark, jun. came of age, Mr. Jameson travelled with him into Italy, and continued to attend him till 1767; instead of 100 guineas a year, he had now 200*l.* in this manner; the father (who was tenant for life, remainder in fee to the son) made the son an allowance of 1000*l.* a year, but it was understood between them and by the plaintiff, that 200*l.* of that sum was for the plaintiff. During the time they were abroad, Clark, jun. ran 500*l.* in debt to Jameson, for arrears of the 200*l.* and 21 June, 1766, gave him a note for that money, and from 1767, the salary was again paid by the father. In 1768, and at various subsequent times, several letters were written, both by the father and son, in which it was said the security was preparing to be executed by the father and son, and several other references were made to the annuity. Afterwards the father took an account of the arrears due upon both annuities, and of money due upon a bond he had before given for arrears, and money lent to him by the plaintiff. — Several accounts were afterwards made out by the father from time to time, after Jameson had quitted the family, in which credit was given him for sums due upon this annuity. March 30, 1774, Godfrey Clark the father died. After his death, Clark the son paid two quarterly payments (which were due before the father's death) of the 200*l.* a year, and in November, 1774, an account was taken of the arrears of both annuities, and of his 500*l.* note; amounting to 2400*l.* for which he gave the plaintiff a bond, dated 9 December, in that year. December 26, 1774, Godfrey Bagnal Clark died, having made a short will containing the charge in question.

[ *35 ]

[*] Mr. Attorney General (for the plaintiffs).—The question is, whether the plaintiff can make out a claim in equity as a creditor upon good consideration against the estate. By the statute of Eliz. a good and valuable consideration must be such a consideration as has a value and measure in money; but, where there is no competition with creditors, and the demand is against the parties themselves, a meritorious consideration is sufficient. The plaintiff's time and attention would be a sufficient consideration, in a deed, not to make it nudum pactum. — In the letters they acknowledge that consideration; the mode of rewarding it they settled at 200*l.* a year, and, when he did not receive the money, they made up the account and gave him a bond carrying interest, and the son gave a note for the 500*l.* If it is said there is no proof that it was to be for the life of the preceptor. It must be so, for what the father and son could grant. — Why give a charge, unless it was for his life? they might pay without, during their own lives, and therefore must mean that it should bind successors. In this Court, I do not say it could stand if we were in competition with creditors; but when they are paid, the next class of demands are those upon good consideration, though not valuable in the sense of the statute: and this especially against volunteers. (1) In Dr. Young's case, upon the Duke of Wharton's estate — (Stiles against the Attorney General, 2 Atk. 152.)—Dr. Young had a bond from the Duke of Wharton, for his attendance upon him whilst abroad, and, the estate being forfeited, the Crown granted it to Lady Jane Cook, the Duke's sister, charged with the Duke's debts. Lord Hardwicke said, in determining upon Dr. Young's claim, that there was nothing in it to make it strictly a debt, and that the estate was liable only to valuable debts; that it was upon very good consideration, but he would not allow a creditor, upon mere good consideration, to come in competition with creditors for valuable consideration: but reserved the consideration of the doctor's claim till the account was taken; and then, there being a surplus, he was paid. — In the case of Lady Mary Herbert against Earl Powis, April, 1776, 6 Brown's Parlt. Cases, 102. (1) several of the considerations were not of any kind of value, and could not be estimated in money, and therefore would not have given her any rank as a creditor.

(1) See the arguments in the House of Lords, 1 Bro. P. C. 581, 2. 8vo. edition:

Lord Chancellor. — Did not the House of Lords take some of those considerations to be valuable?

[*] Mr. Ambler (for the defendants). — The letters amount to no more than that the father had an idea of giving the plaintiff an annuity, but indefinitely. The payment does not amount to a promise. All that passed, as to preparing the security, was in the life-time of the father. The whole does not amount to such a promise as either a court of law, or this court could compel them to perform; it is merely an intention, not an actual agreement. The performance of a promise cannot be compelled at law without some consideration. This Court has frequently refused to perform voluntary agreements, even where steps have been taken towards putting them in execution. 1 Cha. Ca. 302. In Dr. Young's case there was a bond. A voluntary bond, or note so given, should be postponed to all debts. The case of Lady Mary Herbert had very meritorious considerations. Here it is too uncertain for the Court to say what duration the annuity was to have; it is quite sufficient to say the Clarks meant it for their own lives. In 1774, Godfrey Bagnal Clark's will was made: that was a proper time to have given the annuity, which was not necessary to be done by deed, — he gave by his will an annuity of 400*l.* to his brother, and of 25*l.* to a servant, and then charged the estate with his debts. Here was no contract, no consideration: it is uncertain, and not sufficient to bind the real estate.

Mr. Price (on the same side). — There are two grounds laid in the bill, neither of which is proved: first, that the engagement was, at first, made by the plaintiff in hopes of a permanent provision; secondly, that he had refused other engagements. This is stripped of every circumstance that has been relied upon in other cases. A court of equity must have certain precise grounds for carrying any thing into execution. In all the receipts, it is treated as a yearly payment, a mere yearly bounty at the will of the giver. Lady Mary Herbert's case was solely this: she was entitled, as eldest daughter, to administration to her father the Marquis of Powis; Earl Powis obtained administration, and there was a promise that, if she would renounce, the terms should take place. There was also a dispute about the guardianship of her niece, whom Lord Powis wanted to marry, and Lady Mary procured Lady Herbert of Cherbury to be appointed guardian, by whose consent the match [*] took place. These were the considerations. † It is impossible to conceive the Clarks thought of a permanent provision for Jameson.

Mr. Mansfield (on the same side). — The first question is whether here is any debt, any engagement to pay to the plaintiff an annuity for his life? — No such engagement appears by the letters, nor by whom it was to be paid, only that the son was to speak to the steward about a charge, but to, or by whom, does not appear. It is enough that there is nothing certain, or fixed, in evidence. It was merely to be a reward for past services; then it is nudum pactum, and would not support an action,

† There were also other considerations in that case, such as Lady Mary declining the place of dame d'honneur to the Queen of France (which she had solicited), upon the Earl's promise to pay the annuity. See the case at large, 6 Brown's Parlt. Cases, p. 102. [and 1 Bro. P. C. 355. &c. 8vo. edition.]

1779.

JAMESON
against SKIPWITH.

[ *36 ]

[ *37 ]

1779.

JAMESON
against
SKIPWITH.

much less such a claim as this. It is not very accurate to state, that a consideration which would be sufficient in a deed would be so here. — Considerations are not necessary to deeds, if there is no bad consideration to vitiate them, as in Cray v. Rooke. (Forrester, 153.) This is the only view in which considerations are important in deeds. Past services are not a consideration at law, nor in this court. Your Lordship will not convert such a consideration as this into a debt, and charge the lands with it under this will.

Mr. Madocks (for the trustees). — Where the party lies by, and does not make his claim in the life-time of the person by whom the contract should be performed, equity will not afterwards assist him. This is not an agreement to charge the estate either by the father or the son, nor is it so stated in the bill. It is a claim of an assumpsit on a promise that the plaintiff should have an annuity for his life, and the fact of payment is all from which the Court is to infer the contract. It is a mere personal promise either from the father or the son.

Mr. Attorney General (in reply). — We are not praying a remedy against creditors for valuable consideration, but only the execution of a trust, created by the will of Godfrey Bagnal Clark, for the payment of all his just debts, whether by simple contract, or otherwise, and against volunteers who take under the same will. We are not contending that this could be enforced at law against Clark, but that it is what he understood as a debt. [*] Dr. Young's case fully founds me in this distinction. It was a bond purely voluntary, for a good, but not valuable consideration. Lord Hardwicke laid down the distinction between debts for valuable consideration and just debts; and that, after debts on valuable considerations, those ought to be considered which were upon honourable considerations, and which a man ought to pay, though he could not be compelled. It is material that this annuity came out of the son's allowance. The father was only tenant for life, and so meant to make it a family debt. Upon altering that method, a security was thought of — to be entered into by whom? by both — they both must join in order to do it.

Lord Chancellor. — The words of the charge are, “all my debts by mortgage, bond, or simple contract.” In 1753, it would have been a claim only against the estate of Godfrey Clark: and it would be impossible to say, that there was any engagement for valuable consideration with Godfrey Clark. Had the plaintiff, when he came into the service, stipulated for the two payments, it would have been a valuable consideration, but it would [only] have affected the father's estate; from whence it could not be received, for the estate is deficient. On the part of the son, there is no evidence to prove any agreement, or what the annuity was to be. — Every part of valuable consideration, and every form of stipulation, seems to be wanting. No bond is given by the son for the annuity; therefore it is not to be contended, that it could be recovered against the son, or his heir adversely. If a bond is given pro turpi causâ, or which is subject to be rescinded, the bond is no security, — but if it is given gratuitously, it may be recovered at law: in this Court it will be postponed to creditors, but, at law, there is no such defence. This Court postpones the gratuitous bond, it repels it from its rank, from its not having a valuable consideration, but the Court has never raised an act to an higher rank on account of its consideration. If the grant in the Duke of Wharton's case had been in the words of this will, voluntary bonds might have been recovered. The question is, whether this is a debt by mortgage, bond, or simple contract; it is totally impossible in a legal sense that it should be either: the outside that can be made of it is that there was an intent to carry on the payment to the death of Jameson.

[ *38 ]

Jameson. I suspect there was such an intention, but it is impossible to gather it, farther than as a suspicion, — [*] there is not enough in the correspondence to be called proof. The bill must be dismissed, as not having made-out the intention of the son, by the words, to charge the estate with any debts, but mortgage, bonds, or simple contracts; or that it was his intention *to charge the estate with 200*l.* per annum for Jameson's life.* (1) 1779.

JAMESON
against SKIPWITH.
[ *39 ]

Bill dismissed without costs.

Decree affirmed in the House of Lords, 14th March, 1780. (2)

(1) The decree declared, "that the annuity did not come under the description of any of the debts directed by the testator's will to be paid; nor was it a debt on mortgage, bond, or simple contract, or a debt or incumbrance existing and charged upon, or affecting his real estate. See 1 Bro. P. C. 381. 8vo. edition, and R. L.

(2) Vide 1 Bro. P. C. 376. &c. 8vo. edition.

PRATT against TESSIER. [18 April.]

(Reg. Lib. 1778. A. fol. 256.)

Lincoln's-Inn-Hall, 1st Seal before Easter Term.

THE plaintiff having filed his bill for a discovery, the defendant put in his answer, to which the plaintiff took a great number of exceptions. These being referred to Master Pechel, he, thinking them all frivolous, reported the answer sufficient. Upon this the plaintiff amended his bill, by striking out the whole charging part and the interrogatories grounded upon it; and, upon the answer coming in to this amended bill, the plaintiff took 70 exceptions to this answer. (4)

Mr. Mansfield (for the defendant) moved, that this second set of exceptions should be referred to the same Master to whom the former set had been referred; which was opposed by the plaintiff's counsel, who insisted that the alterations were such, that this was quite a new bill, and any other Master as competent to judge of the relevancy and sufficiency of the parts referred to in the answer against which exceptions had been taken, as the Master to whom the former exceptions were referred. But Lord Chancellor said, that as the allegations in the former part of the bill were the same, and the other matter must be connected with it, it was better the second exceptions should be referred to the same Master with the first, and therefore granted the motion.

Exceptions to answer; the answer reported sufficient; plaintiff amends, upon answer coming in; 70 exceptions taken; motion that these exceptions be referred to the same Master with the former set, granted. (3)

(3) See Partridge v. Haycraft, 11 Ves. 570. And Note Lord Eldon C.'s observations on the principal case, ibid. 575. as to the point of practice. See also Mazarredo v. Maitland, 3 Modd. Rep. 66.

(4) And obtained an order for referring them to another Master, without having noticed the proceedings before Master Pechel.—R. L.

1779.

[ *40 ]

* EASTER TERM,

19 Geo. 3. 1779.

[WARING v. HOTHAM.]

[S. C. 2 Dick.
550.
See 2 Anstr.
395.]

The Parish of St. LUKE, Old-Street, against The Parish of St. LEONARD, Shoreditch. [22 April.]

(Reg. Lib. 1778. B. fol. 332.)

Bill will not lie to have an issue to ascertain boundaries between two parishes. (1)

A BILL filed by the parish plaintiffs, in order to have an issue directed to describe and ascertain the boundaries between it and the adjoining parish, the defendants. The cause being heard at Lincoln's-Inn-Hall, Lord Chancellor doubted whether a bill would lie for this purpose, and ordered the counsel for the plaintiffs to look into the precedents and speak to it in term. And coming on now,

Mr. Madocks and Mr. Macdonald (in support of the bill) said there were several cases in which such bills were proper, and cited Lethulier v. Lord Castlemain, on the boundaries of the manors of Aldersbrooke and Wanstead, Sel. Ca. L. King, 60, (12 Vi. 267. pl. 29.) Also, a similar issue was directed in Bowes v. Lord Darlington, 1755. The bill lies, as tending to prevent a multiplicity of suits. In the Mayor of York against Pilking-ton, Lord Hardwicke allowed the demurrer because there was no privity, but afterwards changed his opinion, and over-ruled the demurrer. (1 Atk. 282.) (2) There Lord Hardwicke laid down in what cases bills of peace were proper; such as in the case of duties, where many persons are interested who are not before the Court. Such a bill is proper for tithes. Brown v. Vermuden, 1 Ch. Ca. 272. So for a suit to a mill, — Sir Lionel Pilkington's case in the dutchy. So for settling general fines to be paid by the tenants of a manor. Cowper v. Clark, 3 Wms. 155. though not for a single copyholder, to pay a reasonable fine. Duke of Somerset v. France, Fortesc. 42. — ibid. 44. — In 2 Atk. 483, Lord Teynham v. Herbert, it is laid down that where the right cannot be settled in one or two actions, the party may come to this [*] Court at first. — The case of Webb v. Conyers (3) was also mentioned, as an instance of such a bill between two lords, to try the boundaries of their manors, but it appeared the bill was dismissed.

Lord Chancellor said, if he should entertain a bill and direct an issue in such a case as this, he did not see what case would be peculiar to the courts of law. He did not know how to extract a rule from the Mayor

(1) As to boundaries of manors, which are on the same principle, see Wake v. Conyers, 2 Cox's Rep. 360. and S. C. 1 Eden's Rep. 331. It appears from thence, that where courts of equity have interfered to settle boundaries, the soil itself has been in question, or else to prevent a multiplicity of actions. See 1 Eden, 335. 337. note; and particularly Atkins v. Hatton, 2 Anstr. 386. 395.; and Winterton v. Lord Egremont, cit. ibid. 387. See also Speer v. Crawler, 2 Meriv. 410.

(2) In the principal case, Lord Thurlow concurred in the first opinion of Lord Hardwicke on the case cited, and doubted his ultimate decision. 2 Anst. 395.

(3) Wake v. Conyers, 2 Cox's Rep. 360, and 1 Eden's Rep. 331. cited antea, in the first note.

of York and Pilkington. (1) Where there was a common right to be tried, such a proceeding was to be understood; the boundary between the two jurisdictions was apparent. That is the case, where the tenants of a manor claim a right of common by custom, because the right of all the tenants of the manor is tried by trying the right of one; but, in this case, he saw no common right which the parishioners had in the boundaries of the parish. It would be to try the boundaries of all the parishes in the kingdom, on account of the poor laws. He apprehended these issues had usually been directed by consent of the parties. — He therefore dismissed the bill. (2)

1779.

ST. LUKE'S
against
ST. LEONARD'S.

(1) Vide 2 Anstr. 395. and note (2) antea.

(2) It was dismissed without costs, see Reg. Lib. In Atkins v. Hatton, 2 Anstr. 395. Lord Chief Baron Macdonald, speaking of this case, says, "The note in Brown is by no means full. It was upon a bill brought by the Parish of St. Luke, to avoid confusion in making their rates, and prayed a commission to fix their boundaries for that purpose. A number of houses had been built upon land formerly waste, and it was doubtful to which parish each part of the parish belonged. Lord Thurlow refused to interfere, and observed, that the greatest inconvenience might arise from doing so; for if that commission were granted, and the bounds set out by the commissioners, any other parties, on a different ground of dispute, might equally well claim another commission; these other commissioners might make a different return, and so, in place of settling differences, endless confusion would be created."

SHIRLEY against Earl FERRERS. [24 April.]

(Reg. Lib. 1778. B. fol. 322.)

LAWRENCE Earl Ferrers, whilst in the Tower, charged his estate with 6000*l.* which, being raised upon the land, was invested in the funds, in the name of the Rev. Walter Shirley, his brother, in trust to pay certain sums to the widow and children of ——— Johnson, (whom the Earl had killed,) the remainder to pay off certain debts, (some by specialty bearing various rates of interest, and others by simple contract); the residue to his own use. The late Earl contested the right of the trustee to raise the money, in consequence of which it lay in the funds till a decree was made in favour of the trust, and a reference to the Master to settle the several claims. A question arose before the Master, whether the simple contract creditors should have interest, the fund which was for their benefit having produced interest. The Master thought the matter not before him, and reported only their original simple contract debts due, without interest. Upon an exception to the Master's report, [*] Mr. Mansfield (for the creditors) insisted this provision was equivalent to making a schedule of the debts, and creating a trust-term for the payment, which would be in the nature of a specialty, and make the simple contract debts carry interest. Barwell v Parker, 2 Vesey, 363. which takes notice of Car v. Lady Burlington, 1 Wms. 228. (4) Lord Bath v. Lord Bradford, 2 Vesey, 587.

Mr. Bicknel (on the same side). — This is not the case of a charge on land; the money here was raised, and as much Lord Ferrers's as if in his pocket. The trustee should have paid the money immediately, but could not, the late Earl opposing it. The land here has borne its burthen; the only question is, whether the trustee shall pocket the interest.

(3) But see Creux v. Hunter, 2 Ves. jun. 157. &c.; and Mr. Vesey, jun.'s note, ibid. 169.

(4) In Car v. Lady Burlington, the decree in Reg. Lib. is contrary to the declaration stated in P. W.'s report of it. See Mr. Cox's note, 1 P. W. 229.

Mr.

Money raised by deed upon land, and invested in the name of a trustee, to pay debts, the residue to the use of the trustee: the simple contract debts are not changed in their nature, and therefore shall not bear interest. But if the creditors had filed bills, and obtained separate reports, from that time their debts would have carried interest. (3)

[ *42 ]

1779.

SHIRLEY
against FERRERS.

Mr. Attorney General (for the trustee). — Where a fund is provided, either from land or otherwise, for the payment of debts, the Court gives interest only to those debts which from their nature bear interest, not to the others. Where debts are to be paid under a decree, interest is allowed only to those which bear interest. But Lord Hardwicke says, that if a man creates a trust term, and makes a schedule of his debts, it is in the nature of a specialty, because it gives a specific interest in the fund: but that is not this case, for there the creditor having an aliquot part of the fund, he must have the consequence.

Lord Chancellor. — The Court seems in that case to put it in the nature of a specialty by deed.

Mr. Attorney General, — cited Lloyd v. Williams, 2 Atk. 108. The provision made by the party does not alter the nature of the debt. The meaning of the person creating such a fund always is that it should be paid as soon as may be.

Lord Chancellor. — If they are entitled to an aliquot part they must be so to the whole produce, I cannot distinguish.

Mr. Madocks (on the same side). — If they are entitled, it must be either by the form of the debt, or by some rule of the Court. The debt, upon the bond, is the principal and interest, therefore it is within the terms of the trust, interest must be paid as being part of the debt: but the simple contract debts not carrying interest at the time, the interest is no part of the debt. [*] In the case of scheduled debts, the debtor converts it into a debt of a different nature. — Lord Hardwicke says of the case of Car v. Burlington, that it would overturn the course of the Court (2 Ves. 363.) which is, that the Master should compute interest on such debts as carry interest. (1) The same is an answer to Maxwell v. Wettenhall, 2 Wms. 27. (2) The general rule is, that where a fund is provided, the Master is not to compute interest on the simple contract debts. Shirley is a trustee with an interest, he is to have the residue, and there is just as good reason that he should retain the interest against a person not entitled to it.

Mr. Mansfield, in reply. — There are an abundance of cases, where interest is given at law to debts not naturally bearing it. Many of these debts are for money paid, which would bear interest at law. The nature of the debts is not changed by being scheduled — the only difference is, that in that case, the man knows what debts are due. This is not like the case of a trust term, where the interest increases the charge upon the land.

Lord Chancellor. — I look upon it, the Master should not have computed interest at all in such a case; where there is long delay the Master should do it under the direction of the Court. If I were to allow the exception, it would be saying the Master was competent to judge of the effect of the deed. I think the Master ought not to take that upon himself. Upon the point itself, I cannot see how it could be allowed without breaking in upon the general rule. I thought it was conceived that, if it were a term, it should not be allowed, because it would press the land: but if the debts carried interest, why should not the land be pressed as well as any other fund? I do not see that it can depend upon the nature of the fund. If the residue had been to the grantor, it would only have paid the debts. The whole practice of the Court is uniform, that creditors shall be paid interest according to the nature of their debts. I know it goes to great hardships, but it is not necessary that such hardships should be suffered, because, if the creditors had filed their bill, the debts would have carried interest from the separate reports, so that it is their own delay. But this is not before me, I think it was not the Master's business.

(1) Car v. Lady Burlington is misreported, 1 Cox's P. W. 229. note.

(2) It was only a dictum in that case; but the Court went to a great length in Bothamly v. Lord Fairfax, 1 P. W. 534. See, however, Creuze v. Hunter, 2 Ves. sen. 157. &c.

EXCEPTION OVER-RULED without prejudice to a rehearing. (1)

(1) "Of the cause," Reg. Lib.

1779.

SHIRLEY
against FERRENS.

† ROBERT SADDINGTON and SAMUEL GOADBY, Assignees of EDWARD WEBBER, a Bank-rupt, } Plaintiffs.

[Vide 9 Ves. 98.
12 Ves. 178.]

ANDREW KINSMAN and JOANNA his WIFE, and MATTHEW DOVE } Defendants. [*] [ *44 ]

(No Entry.)

BY indenture quadrupartite, dated 5th February, 1731, and made between John Guyse, gentleman, and Elizabeth his wife, of the first part, William Guyse, son of the said John Guyse, of the second part, John Scutt and Thomazine his wife, relict of Thomas Ayres, deceased, and Joanna Ayres, the only surviving child of the said Thomazine, by the said Thomas Ayres, her former husband, of the third part, and Richard Percy and John Cook, of the fourth part, after reciting a marriage then intended between the said William Guyse and Joanna Ayres, and that the said John Scutt had transferred 1200*l.* part of 1500*l.* South-sea annuities, and 100*l.* South-sea stock, to the said Percy and Cook: It was witnessed that the said 1200*l.* South-sea annuities, and 1000*l.* South-sea stock, had been so transferred to Percy and Cook, in trust, after the marriage, for the said William Guyse for life, and to permit him to receive the dividends thereof for his own use, and, after his death, in trust for the said Joanna his intended wife, for life, and to permit her to receive the dividends for her own use, and after the death of the survivor, in trust, for the use of such child or children as the said William Guyse should have by the said Joanna, in such parts and proportions as the said William Guyse by his will, or any other writing under his hand and seal, executed in the presence of two witnesses, should direct or appoint, and, for want of such appointment, then in trust for all the children of the said William Guyse by the said Joanna, to be equally divided, if more than one, and if but one to the use of such only child; and in default of such issue, then in trust for the survivor of them the said William Guyse and Joanna, and the executors or administrators of such survivor.

What interests of the wife so vest in the husband, as to vest in his assignees upon a bankruptcy.

† The argument in this case goes so fully into the subject, that it was thought worth while to insert it here, although it never received a decision. (1)

(1) Although this case was not decided, yet Lord Thurlow's opinion was decisively in favour of the wife; holding Gayner v. Wilkinson to S. P. unimpeachable. Vide post 50, 51. and note. Et per Lord Eldon C. in Mitford v. Mitford, 9 Ves. 98. In that case Lord Eldon determined accordingly. See 9 Ves. 87. et seq. with Mr. Christian's observations in the 1st vol. of his Bankrupt Law, 270.

Hornby v. Lee, 2 Madd. Rep. 16. &c. was the same point as to an assignment under an Insolvent Act. The law therefore seems now settled, that the general assignment, either in bankruptcy, or under an Insolvent Act, does not operate as a reduction into possession of a surviving wife's reversionary interest. That the courts are now anxious to protect the reversionary interests of femes covertes, see the above cases; Woodlands v. Crother, 12 Ves. 174. 177, 8.; and Nash v. Nash, 2 Madd. Rep. 133. and the authorities.

1779.

SADDINGTON
against KINSMAN, &c.
[ *45 ]

The said sums of 1200*l.* South-sea annuities and 1000*l.* South-sea stock were actually transferred [*] to Percy and Cook, and, soon after the execution of the said indenture, the marriage between William Guyse and Joanna Ayres took effect. The said William Guyse had issue by the said Joanna his wife a daughter named Joanna, (now Joanna Kinsman, one of the defendants,) and in 1753, a marriage being in contemplation between the said Joanna the daughter, and Edward Webber the bankrupt, previous to such marriage William Guyse executed a deed of appointment dated the 14th of March, 1753, and made between Edward Webber of the first part, William Guyse and Joanna his wife and Joanna their daughter (the defendant) of the second part, and Obadiah Jones of the third part, whereby, after reciting the indenture of the 5th February, 1731, and that the trust estate had been changed by act of parliament, and then consisted of 1192*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* South-sea annuities, 698*l.* 7*s.* 10*d.* new South-sea annuities, and 234*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* South-sea stock, then standing in the joint names of the said Percy and Cook upon the trusts of the indentures of the 5th February, 1731, and reciting the marriage then intended between the said Edward Webber and Joanna the daughter, and that the said William Guyse, in consideration thereof, and of the provision therein mentioned to have been agreed to be made by the said Edward Webber for the said Joanna his then intended wife, and the issue of the marriage, had agreed to pay the said Webber, as the present portion of the said Joanna his daughter, 1050*l.* and also to appoint the said annuities and stock, after the decease of himself the said William Guyse and Joanna his wife, for the use of the said Joanna his daughter, so that the same might be taken and enjoyed by the said Edward Webber, his executors and administrators, in further part of the portion of the said Joanna; he, by virtue of the power given him by the said indenture of the 5th of February, 1731, did, with the consent of Joanna his wife, appoint the said 1192*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* South-sea annuities, 698*l.* 7*s.* 10*d.* new South-sea annuities, and 234*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* South-sea stock, then standing in the names of the trustees, unto the said Joanna his daughter, in case the marriage should take effect, and covenanted that the surviving trustee of the former settlements should, immediately after the decease of the survivor of them the said William Guyse and Joanna his wife, stand possessed of the said annuities and stock, in trust for the benefit of the said Edward Webber, his executors and administrators, to the intent that Edward Webber, his executors or administrators, might cause the same to be transferred as he or they should direct, and, in the mean time, [*] receive and enjoy the same for his and their own use and benefit; and in that indenture was contained a proviso respecting other children (if there should be any) of the said William Guyse and Joanna his wife, and that during the lives of the said William Guyse and Joanna his wife, and of the survivor, they and their surviving trustee might with the consent of Edward Webber, his executors or administrators, change the securities, or lay out the same in the purchase of lands, but nevertheless such new securities or lands to be upon the same trusts, and subject to the same provisos as were in the indentures of the 5th of February, 1731, and 14th March, 1753, declared concerning the said annuities and stock. Webber, on his part, entered into a covenant to leave her half of her fortune by will if there should be no children, and one third if there should. Soon after the execution of these deeds, the marriage between Edward Webber and Joanna the daughter took place. William Guyse had never any other child by Joanna his wife than their daughter Joanna the wife of said Edward Webber, and some time in the year 1756 the said William Guyse died, leaving the said Joanna his wife, and said Joanna Webber his only child surviving him, and having made his will whereby he gave to his daughter Joanna Webber all or the greatest 1779.

[ *46 ]

SADDINGTON
against KINSMAN, &c.

greatest part of his estate, real and personal, in case she survived her said husband and mother. On the 17th December, 1763, a commission of bankruptcy issued against Webber, who was found bankrupt, and Albert Inness, Benjamin Vowell, and William Johnson, were chosen assignees, and an assignment of his estate was made to them under the said commission; but the said assignees were afterwards removed by an order of the Lord Chancellor made for that purpose. And thereupon the plaintiffs were chosen assignees in their place, and an assignment of the bankrupt's estate was made to them, by virtue whereof they became entitled to possess themselves of the bankrupt's estate, in trust for the creditors. In 1772 Webber the bankrupt died, leaving Joanna his wife, and the said Joanna Guyse her mother, him surviving, and afterwards, in 1774, the said Joanna Guyse also died, leaving the said Joanna Webber her surviving. Joanna Webber, after the death of Edward Webber, intermarried with the defendant Andrew Kinsman; and Richard Percy, the surviving trustee (since dead), having made his will, and appointed the defendants Andrew Kinsman and Joanna his wife, and Matthew Dove, executors, who proved the same and are the said Richard Percy's personal representatives, the plaintiffs, the assignees of [*] Webber, the first husband of Joanna Kinsman, November 1, 1777, filed this bill, insisting that there having been no other issue of William Guyse and Joanna his wife, than Joanna the defendant, Webber became, upon the death of William Guyse, entitled by virtue of the indenture of 14th March, 1753, to the said annuity and stock (subject to the interest of Joanna Guyse); that the annuities and stock vested in them by the assignment, and that upon the death of Joanna Guyse, they became intitled thereto in trust for the creditors.

[ *47 ]

Mr. Ambler, and Mr. Bicknel, for the plaintiffs, insisted, that whatever property of the wife the husband could dispose of by any means was his, and vested in the commissioners, and was assigned by them to the assignees, and that this was such an interest as the husband might depart from, being releasable by him. That being vested in the husband, and passing by the assignment, there would be no necessity for a fresh assignment when it came into possession. They cited Miles v. Williams, 1 Wms. 249.; Jacobson v. Williams, 1 Wms. 382.; Bosvil v. Brander, ibid. 458. and offered on the part of the plaintiff, if the Court should think it necessary, to make a provision out of the money for Mrs. Kinsman.

Mr. Attorney General (for the defendants) contended, that this money not having become payable before the bankruptcy, or in the life-time of the husband, was not assignable by the commissioners, but survived to the wife like a debt, or any other property, over which he had not exercised any act of ownership; which though he might have reduced it into possession, yet not having done so it would survive.

Mr. Madocks (on the same side).—By the settlement, “If there should be but one child, that child was to have the whole sum; if more, in such form, manner, and proportions as the father should appoint.” The father therefore in this case had no power of appointment, it was to the use of the child. It is said, she is bound by the settlement; but I should submit that she might make her election. The covenant in the marriage settlement has produced her nothing: it would be hard she should be bound by it. As to the nature of the property, it is not in possession, though to become so after the death of the father and mother. The husband could not reduce it into [*] possession, no suit would lie living the mother who survived the husband. In Rawlinson v. Moore, 24th March, 1778, rents of the wife's estate had accrued after the bankruptcy, but living the husband, who died after the bill filed, but before the hearing; and it was held that not having been reduced into possession

[,*48 ]

1779.

SADDINGTON
against KINSMAN, &c.

sion by the husband, they survived; and the bill was dismissed. — So is Burnet v. Kinnaston, 2 Vern. 401. — The words of the act of parliament of 13 Eliz. are applied to a different purpose; the two acts of James have brought into the power of the commissioners other interests, as equities of redemption and estates-tail (that is the whole interest) all that the bankrupt is possessed of with the consent of the true owner, all interests with which he may lawfully depart. — A husband may, for a valuable consideration, assign his wife's chose in action; but it must be subject to equity, and where he has a present right of action, not a right of action to accrue in future. (1) In Co. Lit. 351. the rule is laid down; at law the husband acquires by the marriage a right to the choses in action of the wife, so as to reduce them into possession, or to release them: where the right is a present right, he may bring the action in his own name, and that of his wife, and recover. (2) This court has acted upon equitable assignments; the right of action is the subject transferred. — At law the judgment shall be to the husband alone: but where it is to the husband and wife, it survives to the wife. — This court, in analogy to the courts of law, has held that the husband may assign the wife's choses in action for a valuable consideration; but if he has not a right of action (1), he assigns nothing — the assignment is subject to every equity the wife had against the husband, if the assignees come into this court. Will this Court say that the assignment can pass any thing to which the husband has not a present right? Here neither the husband nor the wife had a present interest during the life of the mother. In the case of a personal annuity, where a new right of action accrues as to every payment, can the husband at law release the annuity, which would be releasing a right of action to accrue after his death? He may assign for their joint lives, but not so as to bar the wife after the decease of the husband. The case of Thompson v. Butler, Moore, 522. shews the husband cannot release a future right of action of the wife; from the nature of property he cannot pass what he has not, — where the property of the wife is reversionary, he has not a right of action, and cannot transfer it. These are rules of equity, where æquitas sequitur legem. A court of equity can [*] only follow the law which declares what the husband shall have by marriage. This is somewhat different from a chose in action. It is not a bond payable at a future time, but a trust suable only in this court — The thing remains to the wife, after the death of the husband, he only obtaining a right to sue as a means of making it his own. Where he had no right to sue, or possession of the thing, it continues the wife's. Nothing can pass to the assignees, but what the statute says shall pass: there is not a word in the statute to pass this property, unless the word debts will. An application from the assignees has not the same effect as the application of the husband would. There is no word applies to this but debts, which, in the most liberal sense, is only the right which the husband had in the debts. — There is a great distinction in good sense between what the wife has in possession, which gives the husband credit, and what she has in reversion (3), from which he has no credit. There is no reason why the law should bear hard upon wives, as to future interests. — It would extend to casual and contingent interests, as the bankrupt laws do where they belong to the husband himself.

Lord Chancellor. — If there was a settlement, would he not be a purchaser of her reversionary right?

(1) See in Hornsby v. Lee, 2 Madd. R. 20.; and in Woollands v. Crowther, 12 Ves. 178.

(2) And the reason for joining the wife is, that she would become entitled on survivorship. See Philliskirk v. Pluckwell, 2 Maule and Selw. 393. See Nash v. Nash, 2 Madd. R. 133. et seq.; and the cases in the preceding note.

(3) See per M. R. in Woollands v. Crowther, 12 Ves. 178.

Mr.

Mr. Madocks. — Here is no jointure, only the husband's covenant, which has come to nothing.

Mr. Hollist (on the same side). — It is contended first, that Webber was a purchaser of this reversionary right, but there never was a valuable consideration given for it. Webber had 1000 guineas with her, and only covenanted to leave her half if there should be no issue, and one third if there should. In Drury v. Drury (5 Brown's P. Cases, 570. (1) by the name of earl of Buckingham and Drury) there was a settlement in bar of dower, and she had confirmed it by acts done when of age. — There it is laid down that he might have sold or released this interest. — Choses in action are not intended to pass by the assignment. The statute of H. 8. is not now in force, and no subsequent act contains any such thing. Bates v. Dandy, 2 Atk. 207. the disposition of the wife's choses in action for a valuable consideration, only extends as far as the consideration. — Stress is laid upon the word possibility. It is answered by right of action, and is applied to the bankrupt's [*] property. — The whole right he has over his wife's property, is a right of disposing of it by certain acts, not without them. What he may lawfully depart with only signifies the bankrupt's property. If the bankrupt had broken his trust as a trustee, would not the assignees put the cestui que trust to come in as a creditor? This was not mere personal property, for, by the original settlement, the property was to be laid out in land, at the discretion of the mother. It is admitted the assignees must make a provision for the wife. Under similar circumstances † in Gayer v. Wilkinson, the Court dismissed the bill. Here the bankrupt has absolutely had more than half the property already, he has [*] had as much as he ought to have. Even in Jacobson v. Williams, the money was given to the wife.

1779.

SADDINGTON
against KINSMAN, &c.

[ *50 ]

[ *51 ]

† Gayer [Gayner] v. Wilkinson (2), 8th and 15th November, 1773, was as follows:— [S. C. 2 Dick. 491.]
Bill original and supplemental to transfer to plaintiffs 2000*l.* South-sea stock, with the dividends thereon, since the death of James Sadler, to the time of the transfer, and that the South-sea Company might permit such transfer to be made.

The question arose on the will of Robert Smith, who, on the 22d of February, 1737, bequeathed as follows, (viz.) I give and bequeath unto George Stringer, 2000*l.* South-sea stock, in trust, that he shall, from time to time, pay the interest, dividends, and proceeds of the same, as the same shall become due and payable, unto my nephew James Sadler, to and for his own use for his life; and, from and after his decease, I give and devise the said 2000*l.* South-sea stock, with the interest, dividends and proceeds thereof, in trust, to and for the benefit of Ursula, Mary, Elizabeth, and James Sadler, children of my said nephew, equally between them, share and share alike, and to be transferred to them after the death of my said nephew, when they shall attain their respective ages of 21 years, or days of marriage; and if any or either of them die before his or her share shall become payable as aforesaid, then the share of him or her so dying shall go and be transferred to and amongst the survivors and survivor of them, share and share alike, payable as aforesaid. Robert Smith died without revoking his will, which was proved: Ursula and James Sadler died infants, in the life-time of the testator. Mary and Elizabeth attained 21, Elizabeth married Richard Astley, and, having survived her husband, died intestate, in the life-time of her father James Sadler, leaving the defendant, John Astley, the infant, her only child. The defendant Mary (the other daughter) married Andrew Pierson, who, in the life-time of James Sadler, the father, became a bankrupt, and the plaintiffs were chosen assignees, and on the 13th of September, 1768, had an assignment made to them of the bankrupt's estate. — On the 28th of September, 1768, James Sadler, the father, died, and since that the bankrupt Pierson departed this life. George Stringer being dead intestate, the defendant Thomas Wilkinson was made his administrator, to substantiate the proceedings.

Two questions arose (the first totally out of the present case). The second, which was the principal question in the cause, whether the assignees of Andrew Pierson, the bankrupt, were entitled to any, and what part of the said stock? They insisted that the statutes of bankruptcy vested the husband's right in the assignees, as effectually as if it had been reduced into possession. But the Lord Chancellor dismissed the bill.

(1) 3 Bro. P. C. 492. Toml. edition.

(2) S. C. 2 Dick. 491, 492. ; as to which, and the principal case, see 9 Ven. 97, 98.

1779.

SADDINGTON
against
KINSMAN, &c.

Mr. Ambler in reply. — The appointment passes all the interest of the wife to the husband. Drury v. Drury was all in covenant. Harvey v. Ashley, 3 Atk. 607. shews that the husband is a purchaser by the settlement, and there is an end of the question. No provision need be made. — Then upon the other head — Had it not been for the case of Gayner v. Wilkinson, the present could not have taken so much time. — If that case be right, all the other cases in this court are wrong. All the husband's property, in possession, contingency, or reversion, passes by the assignment — those words have been considered as passing every possible interest. Higden v. Williamson, 3 Wms. 132. Why does this Court say the assignees shall make a provision for the wife out of the property, if it does not pass? Jacobson v. Williams is a case in point. — I cannot put the matter more strongly than it is in the cases, particularly in that of Miles v. Williams; the court there said that choses in action were not assignable but to the king; and that was held sufficient to pass it to the assignees. The bankrupt had another way of exercising his power, he might have assigned it, and, if for valuable consideration, it would not only have deprived the wife of the right, but of a provision. A release would do, and if he can reduce it into possession, or release it, it will pass to the assignees. All the cases, till that before Lord Bathurst, (Gayner v. Wilkinson), are upon that ground; Jewson v. Moulson, 2 Atk. 417. Taylor v. Wheeler, 2 Vern. 564.

Lord Chancellor asked whether it was considered as the law of the Court, that, if the husband should assign the chose in action without consideration, it will bind the wife; could a volunteer come against her into this court? — and whether the counsel knew of any case that, in point, contradicts Gayner v. Wilkinson, himself not recollecting any. (1) He observed that in the case of an assignment for valuable consideration no provision is made for the wife.

[ *52 ]

Mr. Ambler the next day cited, as instances of a voluntary assignment, Squibb v. Wyn, 1 Wms. 378. and † *Shepherd v. [*] Shepherd*, where a bill being brought to charge the estate, the Court made a decree.

Lord Chancellor. — A voluntary assignment of real estate undoubtedly binds.

The cause stood over, for Lord Chancellor to form his opinion: but the parties, finding the delay inconvenient, came to a compromise, and divided the property in question between them. ‡

† This case, the reporter understands, was as follows: — The husband had made a will some years before his death, having then children, to whom, as well as the wife, he had left large fortunes; afterwards he had other children, and died without altering his will, by which these younger children were left without a provision. This occasioned a question in the family, whether the birth of the children was not a revocation of the will, and a bill was either filed, or intended so to be, in order to decide the question; upon this the widow, and the elder children, came into a compromise with the younger children, in consequence of which 1000*l.* each was agreed to be paid to them out of the estate devised to the mother and elder children; and upon a bill, afterwards filed, to subject the estate to the charge, the court made a decree for that purpose.

‡ See, as to the subject of this case, Worral v. Marlar, and Bushnan v. Pell, in the note in Mr. Cox's edition of Peere Williams's Reports, vol. 1. p. 450. [and more especially the references in the first note to the principal case.]

(1) See per Lord Eldon C. in Mitford v. Mitford, 9 Vcs. 98.

1779.

PEMBER and his Wife against MATHERS. [28 &amp; 30 April.]

[S. C. 2 Dick. 550.]

(Reg. Lib. 1778. B. fol. 364.)

A BILL brought by the original lessees of a leasehold estate, against the assignee of the lease, for a specific performance of an undertaking stated in the bill, to indemnify the plaintiffs against all rents and covenants, to be paid or kept on the lessee's part toward the original lessor, and to execute a bond for securing such indemnity. The assignment had been by sale, by auction; the conditions of sale did not stipulate the indemnity stated in the bill, and it was supported only by the evidence of Hogard the auctioneer, who swore such agreement was entered into by the plaintiff and defendant before the sale: the answer denied the agreement. The defendant, the original assignee, had made another assignment of the lease to a third person (not a party) before the bill brought.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Selwyn, for the plaintiffs. — The only authority that the evidence of one witness shall not be admitted against the defendant's answer is that in Vernon (Alam v. Jourdan, 1 Vern. 161.); but, where such testimony is supported by circumstances, it is sufficient, even in an indictment for perjury. It would be so in a trial at law, if the party sued there [*] for damages. It is strange, then, that it should not be sufficient here, to ground a specific performance. — The conditions of sale imply the agreement, and, upon a bill for specific performance of those conditions, if the plaintiff insisted such a covenant should be inserted, there is no doubt the Master would have inserted it. There is a case in Strange † of an assignment to a beggar; the judges said it was the folly of the first assignor, in not taking such a covenant from his assignee. (3) The assignment is subject to the rents and covenants on the lessee's part, which would be unnecessary between the assignor and assignee. If there were a covenant to build, or any other covenant which does not run with the land, the assignee would be bound under these conditions. The plaintiff here can call upon no sub-assignee, and if he does not succeed against the defendant must be ruined.

Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Kenyon, and Mr. Hollist, for the defendant. — The conditions of sale must be presumed to contain all the terms of the contract. — The assignee, at law, is only liable for the rents and covenants, whilst he is in possession, although the original lessee is so for the whole term. In this case they should have brought the present assignee before the court. No decree can be made upon the evidence of one witness, contradicting the defendant's answer. — This is the established rule of the Court, Wakelin v. Walthall, 2 Ch. Cases, 8. Alam

The evidence of one witness, corroborated by circumstances, though to facts denied by the defendant's answer, sufficient to found a decree. (1)

Specific performance decreed (after a trial at law) of a parol undertaking by the assignee of a lease, to indemnify the original lessee (the vendor) against the rent and covenants: a presumption arising from the nature of the transaction; the assignment being "subject to the rents and covenants on the part of the lessee," although the conditions under which the lease was sold by auction expressed no such engagement. (2)

[ *53 ]

† Lectur v. Nash, 2 Str. 1201. See also Valliant v. Dedemede, 2 Atk. 546.

(1) See Walton v. Hobbs, 2 Atk. 19.; Janson v. Rany, ibid. 140.; Arnott v. Biscoe, 1 Ves. 97.; Cooth v. Jackson, 6 Ves. 40.; Evans v. Bicknell, ibid. 174. 184. E. I. Co. v. Donald, 9 Ves. 275. 283, 284.; Pilling v. Armitage, 12 Ves. 78.; and, where uncorroborated, in later cases, Cooke v. Clayworth, 18 Ves. 12.; and Savage v. Broeksopp, ibid. 335.

(2) See Staines v. Morris, 1 Ves. and B. 8.; and Wilkins v. Fry, 1 Meriv. 244. 263. &c. &c.

(3) The law seems quite settled accordingly. See Onslow v. Corrie, 2 Madd. Rep. 330. &c. 340. &c. with the several cases there referred to.

1779.

PENNER
against
MATHERS.

[ *54 ]

v. Jourdan, 1 Vern. 161. Walton v. Hobbs, 2 Atk. 19. Only v. Walker, 3 Atk. 407. (1)

Lord Chancellor. — I take the rule to be, that, where the defendant in express terms negatives the allegations of the bill, and the evidence is only one person, affirming what has been so negatived, there the Court will neither make a decree, nor send it to a trial at law. (2) Where the Court does send it to a trial at law, it orders the answer to be read in evidence (3), and sends it to the Court of law only to find the consequences: because the Court of equity has such a rule, therefore it refers to a court of law what a court of equity ought to do. This was done by the House of Lords in † Lord Milton's case. The original rule stands on great authorities, so does the manner of liquidating it: I do [*] not see great reason in either. The rule is subject to this modification, that if there are circumstances sufficient to turn the scale, it ought to be turned; the oath of a by-stander, with circumstances corroborating it, is better than that of an interested person. Here, the estate was to be sold out and out by auction: the vendor would expect to have no more connection with the original lessor. The terms imply, that the assignee should stand in the place of the original lessee. Suppose there had been no assignment, but the money ready to be paid, and the instrument tendered without such covenants, and referred to the Master, the Master, or the Court upon exceptions, would have thought the covenant to indemnify ought to be included. (4) Here is a witness to swear it was so agreed. The first objection made is that the evidence is inadmissible, upon the ground that, where the parties have entered into a written agreement, no parol evidence can be admitted to increase or diminish such agreement. The rule is right; but, where the objection was originally made, and promised by the other party to be rectified, it comes among the string of cases in 1 Eq. Abr. 230, 231. where it is considered as a fraud upon the rule of law. Then, the evidence is admissible, which brings it back to its being that of only one witness. The most that could be expected would be to send it to a trial. I do not incline to that, for I could only send it to know what a court of equity ought to do. I think the plaintiff ought to have his decree: the rather because I think I ought not to hear a cause for specific performance, and not decide it.

Mr. Hollist suggesting that Mr. Fell was present at the execution of the deed, Lord Chancellor ordered it to go to law, upon an issue whether there was such a promise on the day of the execution of the assignment. (5) Upon the trial the jury found there was such a promise, and the plaintiff had a decree for a specific performance.

† Lord Milton against Edgworth, 6 Bro. Parl. Cas. 580. [fol. and 5 vol. 313. 8vo. edition.]

(1) And see the cases in the first note antea.

(2) Vide Cooke v. Clayworth, and Savage v. Broeksopp, 18 Ves. 12. 335.

(3) And see per Lord Eldon C. 18 Ves. 336.

(4) See accordingly Staines v. Morris, 1 Ves. and B. 8.; and Wilkins v. Fry, 1 Meriv. 244. 263, 264.

(5) "Whether, in consideration of the assignment of the lease, the defendant did engage with the plaintiff to enter into a bond to indemnify the plaintiffs from the rent and covenants."—R. L.

1779.

[*] RANDAL against PAYNE.

[*55]

(No Entry.)

WALSH, by his last will, after several pecuniary legacies, gave to Francis Gosling and — Payne, the sum of 4000*l.* for the use of Jane Wood, if she should marry with consent of the trustees; if not, then only 1000*l.*; also to the same trustees 4000*l.* for the use of Martha Wood, if she should marry with their consent, if not, only 1000*l.* — then there was this clause, “if either of these girls should marry into the families of Gosling or Rivington, and have a son, I give all my estate to him for life (with remainders over); if they shall not marry, then I give the 8000*l.* and all my estate to — Randal (the plaintiff) for life, and, if he has a son, then to that son for ever, but not to come to him till 24; if he has no son, then to Francis Gosling.” A bill was filed, and there was a decree that the money should be invested in the funds till the event should happen, and for leave to the parties interested to apply as occasions should arise. The Woods married with consent, but to Greenough and Bret, not into the families of Rivington or Gosling, upon which the present plaintiff filed his bill for the residue, as being now forfeited to him.

Testator devised subject to this contingency: If either of the devisees should marry into the families of Rivington or Gosling, and have a son, I give all my estate to him for life with remainders over; if not, to Randal. The devisees married, but not into the favoured families.

Randal files his bill, but dismissed, for the devisees have their whole lives to perform the condition.

Mr. Mansfield, for the plaintiff. — The devise, if the devisees should not marry according to the prescription, affects the residuary estate; — if they married with consent, but not into the families of Rivington or Gosling, then the residue was to go to Randal. The defence of the Woods is extraordinary, that the reversion, in case they should not marry into the families, is not yet fallen in; for, though they are now married, their husbands may die, and they may hereafter marry into the favoured families; and therefore, Randal’s right may never exist. The contingency must have the contrary construction, that if they married, otherwise than into the families, the residue was to go over; it was expected the event would happen in the life of Randal, who was 30 years older than either of the Woods. Mr. Gosling contends that Randal’s son must attain 24 years of age: but the only event in which it can go over to Gosling, is that of Randal having no son, or that son dying before 24.

Lord Chancellor. — Till they married nothing could vest, for marriage was a condition precedent; then could any thing vest, [*] till the whole contingency became impossible? That suspends it during their lives. — You suppose, if they once married, they had lost all chance of marrying a Rivington or a Gosling; if he had said so, it would have been very well. Suppose the girls had married against consent, one of the husbands had died, and she had married into one of the favoured families, and had a son, and that son was here claiming the estate, the court would not incline to refuse him. The decree that the money should be invested, &c. must be carried into execution.

[*56]

1779.

BENCRAFT against RICH.

(Reg. Lib. 1778. A. fol. 665.)

Money in the funds belonging to wards of the Court, cannot be transferred into the name of the accountant general, to the credit of the cause, until the account is taken by a

Master, and his report made. (1)

THE bill was, that the trustees under the will of the late Mr. Rich, patentee of Covent Garden theatre, might transfer the respective shares of the sum for which the house, &c. sold, belonging to the children and infant grandchildren of Rich, (now in the funds,) into the name of the accountant general, subject to the further order of the Court. (2)

Lord Chancellor said, it could not be done without the account being taken before the Master, which could not take much time where the parties were satisfied the trustees had conducted themselves properly, and therefore ordered the account to be taken, and a report made, and that then the parties might be at liberty to apply.

(1) This does not mean that such a transfer cannot be made, but that it could not operate as an acquittance and discharge of the trustees until they had passed their accounts. Editor.

(2) The suit was not merely for this purpose, but for a general execution of very extensive and important trusts, in which the parties seemed to have kept most regular accounts. The cause now came on for a hearing, and the entry in R. L. is particularly long, stating the accounts minutely.

[S. C. 2 Dick. 554.]

ROBERTS against HARTLEY. [22 May and 17 June.]

(Reg. Lib. 1778. B. fol. 394, 5, 6.)

Application that a cause may be set down upon an early day, must be by petition.

THE application that a cause may be set down upon an early day must be by petition, not by motion. — On the motion of Mr. Kenyon.

In the same cause,

Putting in a plea a sufficient compliance with orders for time to answer. (1)

The defendant having applied for, and obtained, three orders for time to answer, (not to plead answer or demur,) upon the expiration of the last order, put in a plea. Mr. Attorney General (assisted by Mr. Kenyon and Mr. Piggott) moved that the plea should be suppressed, as irregularly put in. Mr. Kenyon cited Gilbert's Chancery, 92. 1 Harrison's Chancery, 359. citing Mosely, 207. pl. 116.

[ *57 ]

[*] Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Selwyn, on the other side, contended that the order was satisfied by a plea being put in; and cited Jones v. Lord Strafford, 3 Wms. 79.

Lord Chancellor refused to suppress the plea, holding it a sufficient compliance with the order; but as, from the complexion of the case, the defendant appeared to be using manifest delay, in order to keep possession of a large sum of money (the produce of the sale of Le Gaston,

(1) It was long so settled, and the practice now subsists accordingly. See Anon. 2 P. W. 264. which mentions it as a point in Lord Strafford's case. Et vide De Mincknitz v. Udney, 16 Ves. 355. The reason is that a plea, like an answer, is upon oath. — See the above cases, and the note of the principal case in 2 Dickins. 554. But a plea of out-lawry, which is not upon oath, cannot be filed under such an order. Philips v. Gibbons, 1 Ves. & B. 184. It seems the same rule must apply to other pleas of like nature. It is settled, that an answer and demurrer cannot be put in under such an order. Kenrick v. Clayton, post. 2 vol. 214. and 2 Dick. 685. and Taylor v. Milner, 10 Ves. 444.

a rich

a rich French East-Indiaman, taken by the plaintiff's private ship of war,) in question between the parties, ordered the plea to be argued the next day.

Accordingly it was so; and the plea being of a sentence of the court of admiralty, which was recited in the bill, (1) and consequently bringing no new matter upon the record, was on that ground over-ruled.

Court of Admiralty, mentioned in the bill, overruled, as bringing no new matter before the Court.

A motion was then made that the money be paid into court, and an affidavit being read (which had been before refused because there was then a plea in court), but not specifying any sum in particular, to be in the hands of the defendants, it was refused. (2)

(1) It was distinctly alleged by the bill, first, that the ship was condemned by the Court of Admiralty on the 4th November, 1778; and then (a little afterwards) "that upon an allegation previously exhibited, the ship was, by a definitive sentence, condemned as lawful prize, &c." The Plea is not stated in R. L.

(2) The defendant having put in his answer, it was moved, on the 17th June, upon that (without any mention of any affidavit), that he might pay into Court 50,000*l.* which the plaintiff alleged was the clear balance appearing on the schedules to his answer. That application, it seems, failed; but it was ordered, on consent, that he should pay to the plaintiff, without prejudice, a sum of 9,524*l.* 5*s.* 9*d.* which he admitted to be in his hands. R. L.

1779.

ROBERTS
against HARTLEY.
Plea of a sentence of the

WHITELEGG against WHITELEGG. [17 May and 17 June.]

(Reg. Lib. 1778. B. fol. 324. 395.)

MOTION for an injunction to stay waste, upon an affidavit, generally, that the plaintiff was entitled to the fee-simple of the estate, and that waste was committed. Refused by Lord Chancellor, for a particular title must be set out; upon this being done, and the only opposition by a similar affidavit to the first, on the part of the defendant. (1)

MOTION GRANTED.

In order to obtain an injunction to stay waste, the affidavit must set out a particular title.

(1) It appeared from the plaintiff's latter affidavit, that one of the defendants, who was a tenant of the plaintiff, had attorned as tenant to his younger brother, and that they together had committed the waste in question. R. L. 395.

[*] TRINITY TERM,

[ *58 ]

19 Geo. 3. 1779.

LAWSON against HUDSON. [14 May and 5 & 17 June.]

(Reg. Lib. 1778. B. fol. 549.)

HYLTON Lawson, Esq. the plaintiff's late husband, being seised in fee, by descent, of an estate at Cramlington in Northumberland, and other real estates both freehold and copyhold, by his will dated estate (which was subject to a mortgage, contracted by his ancestor) and also all his personal estate, with his debts and legacies. The mortgage shall be borne by the estate originally liable, not paid out of his estates (1); and the executrix, having paid it out of the personal estate, shall be repaid the money.

14th April,

(1) And the rule prevails equally, notwithstanding the original contractor, or those succeeding him, should have personally covenanted to repay the money. In such cases the covenant.

[S. C. affirmed on appeal per Dom. Proc. v. 3 Bro. P. C. 424. octavo edition, and 7 vol. 511. folio edition.]

Testator charges his real

1779.

LAWSON
against HUDSON.

A legacy of 100l. "to be paid out of the freehold and copyhold estate," also to be borne by that fund, not paid out of the personal estate.

14th April, 1748, devised the estate at Cramlington (which was subject to a mortgage for 1500l. contracted by his ancestor), and also another estate to be sold; and charged the same, and also all his personal estate (except 300l. due on bond, which was originally part of the wife's fortune, and specifically bequeathed to her by the will) with his debts and legacies, and devised the residue of his real estate in trust for his brother John in strict settlement, subject to a charge of 100l. a year to the plaintiff upon the copyhold estate. He also bequeathed to his god-daughter Winifred Collingwood, 100l. "out of the freehold and copyhold estate as aforesaid," and made the plaintiff, his wife, executrix. The opinion entertained by the widow and family being, that the personal property was taken by her liable to the debts and to distribution, she paid off the charge upon the Cramlington estate, and the mortgagee assigned the same to the defendant Hudson, to attend the inheritance; but it having been determined in the House of Lords, † that she was entitled to the whole residue of the personal estate as executrix, she applied to the person in possession (the brother) for repayment of the money so paid by her, in her own wrong, and filed this bill, in which the question was, whether, under the will of Hylton Lawson, the personal estate was to be applied in exoneration of the real.

[ *59 ]

[*] Mr. Attorney General for the plaintiff (last term). — Mr. Lawson (the brother) contends that the personal estate was to pay the debts and legacies. Here the very estate mortgaged is that made liable. The estate had descended with the mortgage, Hylton Lawson's personal property could not be liable, the devise extends only to his own debts. As to the legacy of 100l. charged upon the freehold and copyhold estates, if the Court should be of opinion that it is only in aid of the personal estate, the plaintiff's bill must be dismissed as to that part; if, on the contrary, the opinion should be that that was a charge upon the freehold and copyhold only, she must also be paid that.

Mr. Ainge, on the same side. — Mrs. Lawson having paid the mortgage, it is the same as if it was now in the mortgagee's hands. — Mr. Lawson's personal estate did not receive any benefit from the mortgage; he took the estate with the onus upon it. The legacy of 100l. was not a general legacy; the meaning was not that it should come out of the personal estate, but expressly out of the real.

Mr. Scott, on the same side. — The objection that Mrs. Lawson paid voluntarily, is of little weight in a court which corrects mistakes. As to the 1500l. it was not his debt, the Court will not presume he meant to load his personal estate with it, as the law does it not without declaration plain. As to the 100l. being laid on a certain fund: if the will had not been duly attested to pass real estate, this legacy could not have been recovered. There is no circumstance in the case to lead to an inference that he meant to pay a debt not his own; but, if there is any presumption, it will be that he meant it to lie where the law has placed it.

† April 28, 1777. — See Lawson v. Lawson, 7 Brown's Pt. Cases, p. 57. [folio edition; and 3 vol. 427. octavo.]

covenant has been well considered as an additional security for the benefit of the person to whom the money was due, and not as intended to alter the nature of the debt. See Mr. Cor's most elaborate and comprehensive note to Evelyn v. Evelyn, 2 P. W. 664. which embraces all the material authorities, and cites (inter alia) Leman v. Newnham, 1 Ves. 52, 53. (see Supplement to Ves. senior, 40.) Robinson v. Gee, ibid. 251.; Bagot v. Oughton, 1 P. W. 347.; Lewis v. Nangle.; Shafto v. Shafto, &c. See also per M. R. (on that note) in Woods v. Huntingford, 3 Ves. 128. The like points occur again in these Reports, postea, 454. D. Ancaster v. Mayer; E. Tankerville v. Fawcett, post. 2 vol. 57.; Astley v. E. Tankerville, 3 vol. 545.; Tweddell v. Tweddell, 2 vol. 101.; Billinghurst v. Walker, ibid. 604.; and Clinton v. Hooper, 3 vol. 201. and 1 Ves. jun. 173. S. C.

Mr.

Mr. Madocks for defendants (in this present term). — Mrs. Lawson paid the mortgage and acquiesced eight years. The father had incumbered the estate; then it is said to be a question, whether this could be called his (Hylton's) debt. — He was seised in fee by descent, then it was his debt. It was a debt to which his property was liable. The legacy is equally clear, his real estates are charged with debts and legacies, “and also all his personal estate.” The rule therefore that the personal estate shall not be exempted without express words applies; here are no express words to negative the application of the personal estate. [*] It does not follow because a person says a legacy shall go out of a particular fund, that he does not mean it should be paid out of the personalty, it may be to charge that fund, if the personalty shall not be sufficient to pay all.

Lord Chancellor. — If the copyhold had not been surrendered, and the will not so executed as to pass lands, could this legacy have been raised?

Mr. Macdonald, on the same side. — The question is, whether the testator adopted the mortgage as his own debt. There is enough in the case to show that he intended this should be paid out of the general fund of his personal estate. The grounds upon which they argue are these, that he devotes, to the payment of his debts, the very estate subject to the charge, and the residuum is not given away. Then it only remains as to the legacy: there was a good reason for mentioning the real estate first; because, when the will was made, his personal property was very small. But this is not sufficient to overturn the general rule.

Mr. Mitford, on the same side. — The direction is, that the real estate with all his personal estate should be applied; this is an extraordinary use of the word all. — Pockley v. Pockley, 1 Vern. 26. shows the party may adopt such a mortgage as this. Mrs. Lawson takes the personal estate not as a bounty, but by legal title; the real estates are taken as specific devises.

Mr. Scott mentioned Evelyn v. Evelyn, 2 Wms. 591.

Lord Chancellor. — The first question is whether the 1500*l.* should have been paid out of the personal estate, if the testator had left no direction about it. The second, whether the 100*l.* should not come out of the freehold and copyhold estate. It struck me, that if the will was not so executed as to pass real estate, this 100*l.* could not be raised. As to the 1500*l.* the only question is, whether the circumstance of his directing his debts to be paid out of the real and personal estate, would transfer it, from the estate originally liable, to the personal estate. It struck me, it made the real and personal estate only liable to debts beyond that. Another question is, whether its being actually paid off makes any difference. If paid in her own [*] wrong, it cannot affect the case. The 100*l.* must be repaid, as it is to be raised out of the freehold and copyhold, and the 1500*l.* from the estate originally liable to it. (1)

This decree was affirmed in the House of Lords, 27 Feb. 1781. (2)

(1) It was declared “that the defendant Hudson was to be considered as a trustee for the plaintiff as to this 1500*l.*” R. L. and 3 Bro. P. C. 430. octavo edition.

(2) See 3 Bro. P. C. 424. &c. octavo edition, and 7 vol. 511. folio.

1779.

LAWSON
against HUDSON.

[ *60 ]

[ *61 ]

1779.

WRIGHT against Row. [Wroe]. [June 7.]

(Reg. Lib. 1778. B. fol. 427.)

Money charged upon a real estate, for a charity, (void by the statute of mortmain,) shall sink in favour of the specific devisee, not go to the heir at law or residuary legatee. Secus when it is an exception out of the devise.

THIS was a devise, in trust, among other things, to pay 4*l.* a year arising out of real estate to a charity. The principal case was referred to the Master, to enquire whether it was prior to the stat. 9 Geo. 2. and the trusts were to be carried into execution. (1) The cases cited were Wright v. Horne, 8 Mod. 222. as to the general favour of an heir; Durour v. Motteux, 1 Vesey, 320.; Gravenor v. Hallum, before Lord Camden, 7th March, 1767 (2); Barrington v. Hereford, before Lord Apsley: this was 1000*l.* left to be laid out in lands, in trust, for Barrington, charged with an annual sum to a charity, the Master of the rolls gave it to the residuary legatee, but the Chancellor decreed in favour of the specific devisee, as arising out of his estate.† (3)

† In Jackson v. Hurlock, before Lord Northington, 24th of November, 1764, Sir John Hartop had, by his will, given an estate to Mrs. Marsh (whom he afterwards married and made a settlement upon her) subject to payment of 10,000*l.* as he should direct in writing; and he afterwards directed it to be paid to charities: Afterwards he made a codicil affirming his will. Lord Northington held the devise revoked by the will and settlement, but republished by the codicil, and that the charge sunk for the benefit of the devisee. [See that case reported, Ambler 487. and 1 Eden's Rep. 263.] In Bland v. Wilkins, February, 1782, lands were given to E. N. in fee, upon condition that her executors and administrators should pay 10*l.* to a charity; Sir Thomas Sewell held the 10*l.* should go to the heir, as part of the produce of the land undisposed of.

(1) The report here is not distinct. The will was dated 23d May, 1774. The decree, after declaring that the trusts of it should be carried into execution, "except so far as the same devises the sum of 4*l.* annually to the poor of L." &c. directs an enquiry "whether the charge of 4*l.* annually was a charge on the close called, in the testator's will, 'The Poor Close,' introduced antecedent to the time of making the testator's will." R. L. fol. 428.

(2) Gravenor v. Hallum, Ambler, 643.

(3) In all these cases of resulting trust, the principle is this; viz. That an heir takes by resulting trust, where the Court can fairly infer that bounty to a devisee was not a testator's main object; as in a devise to A. and his heirs upon trust to sell and pay debts, &c. and that an heir does not take in such manner, where the fair inference is that the devisee was to have a beneficial interest; as, if the devise were to A. and his heirs chargeable with debts. See Hill v. the Bishop of London, 1 Atk. 618, 19. and King v. Denison, 1 Ves. & B. 260. 272, 3, 4. 276, &c. That case was most ably argued, and as ably and elaborately reported by Mr. Beames. Such readers as may not be in possession of Mr. Sanders's edition of Atkins, will find all the cases as collected and distinguished by Mr. S. under the above heads (referably to that of Hill v. Bp. of London), inserted by Mr. Beames, ibid. p. 266.

SOMERVILLE against CHAPMAN.

(No Entry.)

Bill to compel an hospital to renew a lease dismissed. (1)

A BILL filed against the master of St. John's hospital, in the city of Bath, and against the corporation, for a renewal of a lease held of the hospital, upon payment of one year's rent, by way of fine.

(1) Though Courts of Equity will effectuate a clear, distinct contract for perpetual renewal, they are unfavourable to any constructive inference of such contracts, and will not assist parties who, having once had the benefit of such a covenant, have lost it by laches or mere accident. See Tritton v. Foote, post. 2 vol. 636.; Bayley v. Corporation of Leominster, 3 vol. 529.; Moore v. Foley, 6 Ves. 232.; Iggulden v. May, 9 Ves. 325.; City of London v. Mitford, 14 Ves. 41.; and Watson v. Hemsworth Hospital, ibid. 324.; and the several cases referred to in those authorities.

In

In 1711 an information had been filed, which came on to be heard at the Rolls: 18 Nov. 1713, the Master of the Rolls made an award, which was submitted to, and afterwards confirmed by a decree. From that time till 1738, no [*] larger sum than 60*l.* had ever been taken as a fine. In 1738, the estate being much improved, a doubt was entertained whether the hospital could take a larger fine without the consent of the lessee. Jones offered 600*l.* and it was decreed here that they might take it. In 1753, he offered 1000*l.* which was refused; but Lord Hardwicke, 26th March, 1753, decreed that the hospital should grant a renewal, upon the payment of that sum. A new lease was granted accordingly, and Jones granted many under leases, with provisos to renew upon the payment of one year's rent, whenever the hospital should renew to him. By his will, 1772, he devised the estate to trustees, to certain uses, taking notice that a renewal must shortly take place. The trustees applied to the hospital, and corporation, to renew, and, being refused, brought this bill. The whole case was admitted by the answer; but the Master and Brethren insist they are not bound by the decision, and that the Court had no jurisdiction.

Mr. Mansfield for the plaintiffs. — The single question is, whether the hospital is, or is not, bound to renew, upon the payment of such fine as this Court shall think reasonable. They insist that, by the act of parliament, they cannot alienate; but this would be no alienation, the 13 Eliz. authorises such foundations to grant leases for three lives. In considering the proportion of fines, the present situation of the estate is not to be looked at, as the improvements are in contemplation at the time of entering into the covenants. Had the Court had no jurisdiction, Lord Hardwicke would not have entertained the petition.

Mr. Kenyon for defendants. — In the case of Doctor's Commons against St. Paul's †, it was held, that, though there was a contract for a renewal, the Court could not decree one.

Lord Chancellor. — What interest have the plaintiffs against the hospital by way of contract, so as to compel a renewal at such a fine? The discretion is, only, that they should not increase their fines by taking two years' rent, not to prevent their taking a year's rent, though it shall amount to more than formerly. A perpetual renewal upon particular terms would be equivalent [*] to an alienation. The only line would be to refer it to the Master to report what the fine for admission should be. The contract with the under lessee is only that they shall be renewed when the original lease is. Bill dismissed.

† The decree of Lord King in that case was reversed in the House of Lords, and it was ordered that the dean and chapter should grant a new lease upon the same terms, and with the same covenants (except the covenant for renewal) with the former lease. Bettesworth against the Dean, &c. of St. Paul's. 3 Brown's Pt. Cases, 389. [1 Bro. P. C. 240. octavo edition. See that case and many of the others collected in 1 Hargrave's Jurid. Arg. 411. &c.]

ROBINSON against DAVISON and others. [July 2.]

(Reg. Lig. 1778. B. fol. 481. entered as Robinson v. Proud.)

IN this case the second mortgagee filed his bill against the mortgagor and the 1st and 3d mortgagees, to pay off the first mortgage, and that then the estate should be sold, his own mortgage paid, and the third be satisfied out of the remainder. Pending the suit the 3d mortgagee bought in the first mortgage, and the Lord Chancellor determined that by this he had obtained a priority, and should be paid his whole money

Third mortgagee buying in the first mortgage (pendente lite) shall exclude the 2d.

1779.

SOMERVILLE
against CHAPMAN.

[ *62 ]

[ *63 ]

1779.

ROBINSON
against
DAVISON.

money before the second mortgagee. The cases cited by Mr. Madocks for the second mortgagee were, Earl of Bristol v. Hungerford, 2 Vern. 524. cited in Wortley v. Birkhead, 2 Vesey, 571. (1) 3 Atk. 809. March v. Lee, 1 Ch. Ca. 162. Brace v. the Duchess of Marlborough, 2 Wms. 491. Hawkins v. Taylor, 2 Vern. 29. Turner v. Richmond, 2 Vern. 81.

(1) Lord Hardwicke's observations on Wortley v. Birkhead, 2 Ves. 574. are decisive and uncontroverted. The observation, therefore, at the beginning of the case of Willoughby v. Willoughby, in the later editions of Vesey senior, p. 684., "that a subsequent incumbrancer cannot avail himself of a prior outstanding term where he has notice of an intervening security," must be understood with reference to his having notice before he becomes possessed of his own security. See per Lord Hardwicke, sec. 2 Ves. 574. A decree prevents such a preference. See in Wortley v. Birkhead, passim; and see 15 Ves. 336. note, as to one who purchases an equity of redemption. See Toulmin v. Steere, 3 Meriv. 210.

[S. C. post. 2 v.
388. 394. quod
vide.]

RICKMAN against MORGAN.

(Reg. Lib. 1778. B. fol. 446.)

A provision by marriage settlement, with a proviso, that sums advanced should go in satisfaction unless otherwise declared,—4000*l.* left by will, subject to the life of the mother, and the residue of the personal estate being given by the will to a child entitled to the provision under the settlement, must go in satisfaction of that provision. (1)

[ *64 ]

IN the marriage-settlement of John Butler the father, there was a provision made of 8000*l.* each for the younger children of the marriage, with a proviso, that "if the father should in his life-time or at the time of his death give to any of his daughters or younger sons so intitled to portions or provisions under that trust, money or lands, for or in advancement in marriage, or otherwise, the value thereof should be deducted from the portion, unless he should by writing declare to the contrary." John Butler senior, by his will in 1766, gave a sum of 4000*l.* in the funds, to his wife for life, and after her decease to his second son John Butler junior, and also gave to John the residue of his personal estate, and made him executor of his will. John Butler junior, being entitled as a younger son to the said 8000*l.* provided by his father's [*] marriage settlement, had, during his father's life-time raised money by assigning the same to the plaintiff, who now brought his bill to have the same raised and paid to him as assignee of John Butler junior; the defendants insisted, that the provision was not to be raised, the value of the 4000*l.* subject to the life of the mother, and the residue amounting to more than the 8000*l.* and going in satisfaction thereof.

Mr. Mansfield for the plaintiff. — In order to determine whether this be, or be not, a satisfaction, we must consider the proviso, and whether the father intended it so to be. To be a satisfaction, it must be a present, not a distant, provision — this applies to the 4000*l.* given to the widow for life. Another thing necessary from the rules relative to satisfaction is, that it must be certain — here nothing is given to John by the will but the 4000*l.* — the residue was totally uncertain. (1) The proviso does not say any thing given, but only sum or sums of money. — then it must be either a sum or sums of money, but this was neither, — the 4000*l.* was only a reversionary interest; neither is the residue a gift of a clear liquidated sum, nor an advancement.

Mr. Selwyn (on the same side). — The question does not depend upon any clause excepting the proviso, that what should be given by the father should go in satisfaction, unless he should declare to the contrary. It is a fact agreed among us, that he hath not made any such declaration. It is not ascertained what the residue amounted to: it is stated on one side as 16,000*l.* on the other only as 6000*l.* The question is, whether Butler could not give any bounty to his son but what would go in satisfaction, and whether the reversionary interest and the residue shall be such. If the question was on the 4000*l.* only, that could not go in satisfaction for a certain provision. Then as to the residue, I know of no case where a residue has been held to be a satisfaction. The general case of satisfaction has been upon debts, and there it has been said that the doctrine of implied satisfaction has been carried too far: Barret v. Beckford, 1 Vesey, 519. was a stronger case than the present, until it appears that the residue was greater than the portion; the resolution there was, that the residue was no satisfaction. This is a very different case from giving a certain sum. If, by possibility, it might be less than the portion, it cannot be a satisfaction.

(1) See the determination on further directions, post. 2 vol. 394. Et vide per Lord Loughborough C. 5 Ves. 85. Upon the points, see Farnham v. Phillips, 2 Atk. 215.; Leake v. Leake, 10 Ves. 477. 489. &c. See also Freemantle v. Banks, 5 Ves. 79. &c.

[*] Mr. Reed (for the assignees of John Butler, jun.). — This is not a case within the proviso. John was 21, and the portion then vested. The proviso was only applicable to money, to be paid before the portions vested. As standing coupled with the executorship, and attended with other marks of bounty, it is equivalent to a declaration that it should not be a satisfaction.

Mr. Ambler (for the defendants.) — The question is, whether John Butler, having taken the residue, and the 4000*l.* is also entitled to take this 8000*l.* It is a general question brought on by the assignee of all the effects of John Butler. The intent of the deed was, that if the husband and wife should provide for the younger children, it should abate what they would have from the 8000*l.* In cases where the provision is, that if lands shall come to the younger children, then the portions shall not be raised; if lands come, any how, it is sufficient, and the portions sink. It was so determined in Mr. Pelham's case. † If John Butler the father had died intestate, the distributive share would have been accounted as a satisfaction, — So, of Borough English lands descending to the youngest son. As to the 4000*l.* it is certain, and if it was not, that would be no objection as to any thing but the amount; it must be still considered as a satisfaction, so far as it went: this was capable of valuation, and therefore to be considered as a sum of money. As in the case of estates-tail given to an infant, they are capable of valuation. — The 4000*l.* is a sum of money, only differing in point of value from being reversionary. In the case of Watson v. Lord Lincoln, [Ambl. 325.] † it was held, that an estate in remainder was given in advancement; this is a clear answer to the objection of its not being immediate. Then as to the residue — I should wish the distinction should be attended to between this case, and that of an implied satisfaction of a strict debt. The Court has gone so far in the case of a debt, that where a man has given any thing that has not amounted to so much as the debt, it has been held as no satisfaction. The idea was, that a man should be just before he was generous. If the man owes 200*l.* to A. and gives 300*l.* each to A. and to B. A. loses his debt. The doctrine is pared away almost to nothing, for, if the residue is left it is not a satisfaction. So † Watson v. Lord Lincoln, [Ambl. 325.] The question arose upon the will of Mr. Pelham, who, having four daughters, appointed a sum of 10,000*l.* over which he had a power under his marriage settlement, among his daughters, excepting Lady Lincoln (whom he had advanced); and also gave his personal estate among his other daughters, likewise excepting Lady Lincoln. On the 28th of August, 1752, his daughter Grace married Mr. Watson. Mr. Pelham gave her 20,000*l.* by applying part of the 10,000*l.* and other means, for her fortune: and the question was, whether the legacy, given by the will, was satisfied by the portion. Lord Hardwicke laid down the rule, and gave two reasons for it: 1st, That the Court leans against double portions: 2dly, That a portion is a payment of the debt of nature; therefore, being of opinion that the gifts were by way of portion, he decreed that they were a satisfaction of the legacy; but as to the third part of the residue of the personalty, and also the real estate devised, it was not a satisfaction of those.

1779.

RICKMAN
against
MORGAN.

[ *65 ]

1779.

RICKMAN
against
MORGAN.

[ *66 ]

far as to cases of debt and implied satisfaction. — But this is the case of a portion and a declared satisfaction, for you must take the clause in the settlement together with the will. Then whatever he gives or leaves is to [*] go in satisfaction; if there is no other declaration, the deed itself is such. Then consider how far the Court has gone upon covenants. Upon a covenant to leave a wife a certain sum, the husband dies intestate, her distributory share, amounting to more, is a satisfaction — Blandy v. Widmore, 1 Wms. 324. Lee v. D'Aranda, 1 Vesey, 1. This proviso is the declaration, and the thing left has its value. If he has the value of 8000*l.* it is as much as he ought to have, unless the father declared he meant him to have more. — Mr. Madocks said, it was not meant as a saving to the estate, but it certainly was such; to say it was not meant as a satisfaction, is no argument. It does not turn upon Butler's intention, it depends upon the deed unless he had declared otherwise.

Lord Chancellor. — The point they argue is, that it did not take place as a gift, not being given eo animo. Suppose, in the case cited, he had given a sum of money upon an event, would that have been a satisfaction?

Mr. Ambler. — It is not necessary it should be a preferment; whatever bears a value is a satisfaction for so much. In Lord Pelham's case, the estate-tail was thought capable of a computed value. The 4000*l.* may clearly be considered as a portion.

Lord Chancellor. — The words for preferment are to distinguish it from presents, &c. Then, being in possession of this argument, they say the testator could not mean it as an advancement to give him a residue or remainder.

Mr. Ambler. — Small sums given detached, to be sure, would no more be accountable for here, than in the case of hotchpot. † In Pughe against the Duke of Leeds, there were two questions, one quite out of this case, the other whether the sum advanced [*] by the father was a satisfaction; Lord Bathurst thought it was.

[ *67 ]

† Pughe and his wife against the Duke of Leeds and others, in the House of Lords, 15th March, 1780. [See 6 Bro. P.C. 125. octavo edition.]

By settlement on the marriage of Godolphin Edwards and Elizabeth More, dated 23d and 24th April, 1724, int. al. a term of 600 years was created to raise portions for daughters, by which it was provided, that, in case there should be but one daughter, the sum of 5000*l.* should be raised for such only daughter, to be paid at 18, or day of marriage, with maintenance in the mean while. And there was a proviso in the settlement, that, in case the daughters should be advanced, with portions in money or lands, equal in value to the portions thereby provided, in the life-time of Godolphin Edwards, or he should give or leave them money or lands not equal in value, the trustees should raise only so much as would make the money, or value of the lands so given, equal to the portions provided. — Elizabeth, the appellant, being the only daughter of the marriage, attained 18 the 4th December, 1746. Godolphin Edwards being possessed of 5300*l.* East-India annuities (which he had saved from the income of the estate), 21st October, 1772, transferred them to the appellant Elizabeth, then the widow of Mr. Manlove. A bill had been filed, and the cause came on to be heard before Lord Bathurst, 25th June, 1776, in which there was a decree in favour of the appellant for her portion of 5000*l.* the present question not being then before the Court. The respondents afterwards exhibited their bill of review, stating, that, since the pronouncing the decree in that cause, they had discovered that Godolphin Edwards had transferred to the appellant these India annuities, in part of her portion. The cause came on 10th December, 1777, to be heard upon the bill of review, when Lord Chancellor declared that the 5300*l.* East-India annuities, transferred by Godolphin Edwards to the appellant Elizabeth, were to be considered as having been so transferred in part satisfaction of her portion of 5000*l.* under the marriage settlement, and therefore varied the former decree so far; upon which the present appeal was brought in parliament, which being heard March 15th, 1780, it was ordered that the same should be dismissed, and the decrees therein complained of affirmed. [See 6 Bro. P. C. 125. octavo edition.]

Lord

Lord Chancellor.—It is only if he leaves, or gives directly, and without qualification.

Mr. Attorney General (same side).—It was not in the power of the father to give, he was prevented by the settlement.—This case is in specie new, for I remember no case where the father could declare whether he meant to give in addition. Here, it was in the discretion of the father to give in addition or not; he has omitted so to do, and nothing can supply it. The proviso was intended to prevent the questions which have arisen; the younger children were to have 8000*l.* a-piece, but it might be in the parent's power to give them land or money; then, in that case, no construction is to take place, but it is to be in compensation for their portions, unless it is declared otherwise. Whether the provision were immediate or more remote, being of value, that value was to be computed. This is not to extend to ornaments or matters of that kind, plate, jewels, pictures, though of value. The residue is only uncertain until it appears what it is. A value may be put upon the 4000*l.* This case stands on more peculiar circumstances than the Duke of Leeds and Pughe, or the common cases. The father might have declared to the [*] contrary; he not having done so, the law of the settlement takes place.—I admit he has not given 4000*l.* but something less, because there was a life upon it; but, not being upon a contingency, it is easily computed, and the value is a value in money. It is only a question before the Master what the value is.

Mr. Wooddeson, on the same side, cited Pelham and Lord Lincoln, and Saville v. Saville, 2 Atk. 458.

Lord Chancellor.—The proper way now, will be to send it to the Master, to see what he took under the will, and the value of it at the time of the testator's death (1), and to reserve all further considerations. The residue, I think, must be in satisfaction, there will be no arguing that; and I am afraid the 4000*l.* must be valued in the same manner, which would cover the whole. Where a man leaves a residue he means the money it will produce. (2) It is impossible to say the 4000*l.* after the death of the wife would not be an advancement. It strikes me very strong that this is a provision, and that under the words in marriage or otherwise, it must be so considered. †

† Vide post. vol. 2. p. 394. Lord Chancellor's judgment in this cause.

(1) "And specify the particulars thereof." Reg. Lib.

(2) See, however, the references in the first note to this case.

BOARDMAN and MOSMAN. [16 & 17 July.]

(Reg. Lib. 1778. A. fol. 629.)

Lincoln's-Inn-Hall.

BILL, to replace money raised by the sale of the plaintiff's property in the funds, by the trustee, and for the appointment of new trustees. The only question was, whether Kyme, one of the trustees in the deed, but who had never executed it, or formally accepted the trust, was liable. Mosman the other trustee (brother to the plaintiff, a widow) sold the stock, but Kyme knew of it and concealed it from the plaintiff, and advanced her 500*l.* which she said she borrowed rather than sell out

One trustee knowing, and concealing, his co-trustee's having sold out the trust fund, equally liable with the trustee who actually sold. (1)

(1) See Caffrey v. Darby, 6 Ves. 488.; Chambers v. Minchin, 7 Ves. 186. &c.; French v. Hobson, 9 Ves. 103.; Lord Slipbrook v. Lord Hinchinbrook, 11 Ves. 252. and 16 Ves. 477. &c.; Brice v. Stokes, 11 Ves. 319. Et vide Underwood v. Stevens, 1 Meriv. 712.

1779.

RICKMAN
against
MORGAN.

[ *68 ]

1779.

BOARDMAN and MOSMAN.

any of the funds (Kyme knowing that they were then sold), and the money came to the use of him and his partner who had since failed. And Lord Chancellor held him equally liable with Mosman.

[ *69 ]

[*] SCOTT against FENHOULLET.

Lincoln's-Inn
Hall.

[Original hearing, 29 and 30 April, 1771. — Rehearing, 24 July, 1779.]

(Reg. Lib. 1778. B. fol. 573.)

Purchase of the fee-simple in the name of the purchaser, and of terms in the name of a trustee, (with an intervening reversion [of 11 days, [and a reservation of rent, &c. to] the vendors) the terms are terms in gross, not attendant upon the inheritance. (1)

LORD Chancellor gave judgment. — The question is, whether the terms in this case are terms in gross, or to attend the inheritance, which was purchased at the same time. Sir Andrew Chadwick meant to purchase the whole interest, he did not mean to purchase with an intervention of eleven days. All the material facts are these: In 1699, Sir R. Madocks seised in fee of three acres of lands, part of which are the premises in question, leased to Glasthorpe for fifty years, which would expire in 1748. In 1714, he granted a further lease to the assignees of Glasthorpe, for 49 years, to commence in 1748. He devised the estate in fee (the terms being outstanding in the trustee) to M. Rudger. In 1722, Lady Madocks (surviving Sir R. and being entitled to the beneficial interest in the terms) bequeathed the terms to M. Rudger (who was entitled to the reversion in fee of the estate) for life, remainder to raise portions for children, with a proviso that the trustees should, between 1722, or the death of Lady Madocks, and 1748, when the trust would come into possession, raise 100*l.* per annum for — Rudger during her coverture, but if she should become non-covert, then 200*l.* per annum, till she should come into possession. The question arises on the execution of this trust. Sir Andrew Chadwick, 18th June, 1729, purchased of Mrs. Rudger the fee-simple estate, and so much of the terms as related to it, and the trustees executed their power by granting a derivative lease to trustees for Sir Andrew, with a nominal reversion (11 days) to themselves. (2) On the same day, they

(1) Sir William Grant M. R. thought this report of the judgment incorrect, and that, besides that the reasoning was by no means clear, some parts of it appeared at variance with the conclusion; his Honour thereby referring to the three or four clauses towards the end of the judgment and top of page 71. (and which in this edition are printed in italics.) See in Capel v. Girdler, 9 Ves. 510, 11, 12. Sir William Grant was (as usual) accurate in his observations; and it does seem quite impossible to reconcile those parts of the judgment without further information than is supplied by the report. Mr. Sugden has, however, ascertained an important fact of the case from an opinion of Mr. Fearne (upon which the rehearing was applied for), and which, he observes, reconciles every part of Lord Thurlow's judgment. The reversion of 11 days was not the whole of the reservation to the trustees, for there was an express stipulation as to payment of rent to them, with the usual covenants; to which mode of conveyance they were restrained by their trust. It appears, therefore, on the whole, that although the reversion might be considered as only nominal in the contemplation of the parties, and of most others, the circumstances, nevertheless, of the rent and covenants, formed such a beneficial interest in point of law, as was adequate, by itself, to a substantial intervention and separation of the term from the inheritance. See Collectanea Juridica, 2 vol. No. 6. p. 267. 275. and Sugden's Laws of Vendors and Purchasers, p. 382, 3, 4, 5. (5th edition.)

(2) It was not merely nominal in point of law, for the trustees reserved rent under the usual covenants, which rendered the intervening interest a beneficial one in contemplation of law, and thus made a chasm to prevent the union of the term with the inheritance, without an express declaration for the purpose. Such a declaration was wanting as to the terms in question; and the fact of there having been such a declaration as to other terms under the same title, was, doubtless, a great inducement to the decision. This contrast seems strongly marked by the original decree accordingly. See it inserted at the end of the case.

executed

1779.

SCOTT
against FENHOULLET.

[ *70 ]

executed their power on the second lease also, with a nominal reversion. In that lease, it was thought proper to declare the intent of conveying it to trustees, to be in order that it might not merge.—This was a mistake: but it strongly shews his intent that the terms should attend the inheritance. (3) He purchased three other estates in the same manner, except that there he purchased the leases in his own name, and the fee-simple in the name of trustees. The question stands on the plain ground of his having so purchased one in his own name, the other in the name of trustees, whether these terms are in gross, or to attend the inheritance. Every term standing out is, at law, [*] a term in gross. If it is different in equity, it must be by affecting the person holding the term with a trust to attend the inheritance. This may be by two ways. By express declaration—and then, whether the trust would or would not merge, and whether the reversion be real or only nominal, it must be attendant upon the inheritance. Here, it is not upon express declaration: then it must arise from implication of law, founded on the statute of frauds, which forbids any trust, except by writing, or by implication of law. As, if an estate be purchased with my money, it is in trust for me by implication of law, and is out of the statute. (4) Where one is seised in fee-simple, and there is a term outstanding to the use of the person seised in fee-simple, it is the property of the person so seised in fee-simple. Best and Stampford, Pre. Ch. 252. (also in Freeman and Salkeld,) lays down, that where if in the same hand it would merge, there it must attend the inheritance. An attempt has been made to make a difference from the cases of Whitchurch v. Whitchurch, and Baden v. Lord Pembroke. In Whitchurch v. Whitchurch, (2 Wms. 236.) (5) it was not a future term but an immediate one, and the term did not merge, there being an intermediate term. Another circumstance which makes that case immaterial is, that Whitchurch had purchased the inheritance, and then had the whole interest, both the terms were his, and there was no interest outstanding except in form. There was no argument on that part of the case, for it was taken for granted the terms were to attend the inheritance; the only question was, whether a will, capable of passing a chattel interest, divided the terms from the fee-simple. In Baden v. Lord Pembroke, 2 Vern. 52. Lord Pembroke demised for 99 years, upon an express trust, to re-demise to him under a pepper corn rent for his own life, a rent, by way of jointure, for the Countess during her life, and a pepper-corn rent during the remainder of the term.—Lord Pembroke was entitled to the whole interest, the uses being exhausted; and there was no question as to its being, in its own nature, a trust to attend the inheritance. The bill was filed on the idea that the term was assets, and, even in a case where it was held that such a term was assets, it was held to be the † heir's after payment of the debts. These cases do not carry the law of the Court † Perhaps Chapman and Bond, 1 Vern. 118.

(3) See the decree, postea.

(4) The Editor ventures to submit whether this was not the case before the Court; and whether (in so far as respected Sir A. Chadwick, whose property alone was in question) the whole interest which he had purchased in the term (be it what it might) was not a trust by operation of law for the benefit of his main object, the estate of inheritance? An answer to this would be furnished by the decree; viz. that when it suited him to make a declaration of such a trust, he made it; and when he did not make any such, it cannot be implied that he meant any. Quære, however? and especially since the subleases were taken at different times, and were granted “to different persons from the inheritance;” thereby (as Mr. Fearne observes) “manifesting an intent to keep them on foot for protecting the inheritance; which protection implies their attendancy on the inheritance, and going in the same channel.” 2 Coll. Jurid. 275.

(5) And Gilb. Eq. Rep. 168. quod vide.

1779.

SCOTT
against FENHOULLET.
[ *71 ]

an iota beyond what it went to before. A trust arises from the circumstance of the interest belonging to the owner of the inheritance. Sir Andrew Chadwick might have given these terms to a stranger, and if the inheritance descended, the [*] heir at law might demand the rents reserved by the leases. It is said to be extremely plain that Sir Andrew Chadwick meant to consolidate the interests: this is begging the question. It is true he meant to take the largest interest he could; but by no means apparent that he meant to consolidate the interests. I lay no stress on the days of the reversion, for it was meant only as a nominal reversion, — during that time, the rent would be to the original lessees — but they did not mean to reserve a substantial interest. (6) It would be necessary there should be an express trust, to make this attendant on the inheritance; the transaction does not supply a necessary construction of law. It is a very nice and a very new point, whether the intent to purchase the whole interest, is sufficient to make the term attendant upon the inheritance. The impossibility he was under of purchasing the whole, rendered an express declaration necessary, to make it attend the inheritance. (7)

Decree affirmed.

(6) As to this and the following clauses, see the references in note (1) antea.

(7) The original decree declared, “that as to the terms in the three houses in B. mentioned in the indentures of 18 and 19 June, 1729, the same were attendant on the freehold and inheritance, being so declared in the deeds. That as to the terms in the other leasehold premises in question, the same were terms in gross, and were part of the testator’s personal estate.” Reg. Lib.

[ *72 ]

[*] MICHAELMAS TERM,

20 Geo. 3. 1779.

BOTELER against ALLINGTON [ALINGTON.] [23 Nov.]

(Reg. Lib. 1779. A. fol. 73.)

Recovery will bar equitable estates-tail. (1)

A BILL filed by plaintiff, who had contracted for the sale of the estate in question, against Henry Allington, the representative of the surviving trustee in the original will, and also devisee of the reversioner in that will, for a conveyance of the legal estate. Subsequent to devises in the original will, which never took effect, stood the following remainder: “to testator’s cousin John Boteler for life, remainder to Marmaduke and William Allington and their heirs, during the life of John Boteler, to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to Philip Boteler the son of John Boteler for life, and from and after the determination of that estate by forfeiture or otherwise, in the life of Philip, to the defendants Marmaduke and William Allington and their heirs, to preserve contingent remainders” (in the usual form, except that in this devise,

(1) See Wykham v. Wykham, 18 Ves. 395. and 418. where Lord Eldon C. observes upon the principal case, saying that both the Bar and the Bench were much perplexed with it.

Upon the point of merger of the equitable estate, see Brydges v. Brydges, 3 Ves. 120. there referred to. Et vide Lord Redesdale’s MS. Note, postea, note (5).

the

the words "during the life of Philip Boteler" were omitted), "and from and after the decease of Philip to the use of the first and other sons of Philip in tail male, remainder to the right heirs of the testator in fee." — The testator died, leaving — Neville his sister and heir at law. Marmaduke Allington survived William, and devised all his trust estates to Thomas Buck (since deceased), and Henry Allington (the defendant) upon trust to perform the original trusts. Mrs. Neville the sister and heir at law of the testator, devised her reversion in fee (subject to some devises which took no effect) to defendant Henry Allington in tail. She died in 1744, so that Henry Allington the defendant had in him the trust estate, if subsisting under the original will, and the reversion from Mrs. Neville. Philip Boteler, first son of the first Philip Boteler, in 1774, suffered a recovery; and, upon a contract for the sale of the estate, a doubt arose whether a title could be made without Allington's joining, on the idea, that, from the omission of the words "during the life of Philip," the trustees took a fee, and that that legal estate united with the equitable estate derived from Mrs. Neville would not be barred by Philip's recovery.

1779.

BOTELER
against
ALLINGTON.

[*] Mr. Attorney General and Mr. Kenyon, for the plaintiff, argued, 1st, That the intention of the testator being to give the estate to the trustees, only for the purpose of preserving the contingent estates from being defeated, which could only happen during the life of Philip Boteler, made the devise equivalent to a gift to them only for his life — That the trustee, stating himself only to be such, ought to do what becomes that character. (2) 2dly, That supposing these all to be equitable estates in Philip Boteler, with an equitable reversion, they were barrable by the recovery; and for this they cited Robinson v. Comyns, Forrester, 164. Salvin v. Thornton †, at the Rolls, Trin. 6 Geo. 3. — that equitable estates with equitable remainders, are barred by recovery.

[ *73 ]

† Salvin against Thornton, [Ambl. 545. 699.] — John Thornton, seised of the premises for life, with remainder to his first son Thomas, in tail-male, remainder to his second son James in tail-male, remainder to himself in fee, forfeited in the rebellion in 1745. The estate for life being put up for sale by the commissioners, was bought by Kenneth Mackenzie in trust for Thomas (the tenant in tail). Thomas, thus having the equitable estate for the life of his father (the legal estate being in the trustee) and the legal estate-tail, in remainder, suffered a recovery, and soon after died, leaving issue a daughter, wife to plaintiff. James, the second son, took possession, suffered a recovery (after the death of his father and the trustee, in whom his estate vested), and died, leaving two daughters, the defendants, who were in possession. The bill was filed by Salvin in right of his wife, for an account of profits, and to have the estate delivered up. Upon hearing at the Rolls, the great question in the cause was, whether the recovery suffered by Thomas, who had an equitable estate for life, and a legal estate-tail, in remainder, was capable of barring the legal remainder: and upon very full argument these points were laid down by his Honour, and seemed to be the sense of the whole bar. 1st, That a recovery may be suffered of an equitable estate. 2dly, That such a recovery can only affect equitable remainders. 3dly, That a recovery of an equitable estate must, in all respects, imitate a legal recovery, and therefore that the person suffering an equitable recovery must have such an equitable estate as, had it been a legal estate, would have enabled him to suffer a legal recovery. 4thly, That an equitable estate cannot, in suffering a recovery, be blended with a legal estate. 5thly, That as the recoveries suffered of those different estates are perfectly distinct from each other, a recovery of either estate shall not affect the other, the recoveree of the legal estate being always the trustee of the possessor of the equitable estate, and the recoveree of the equitable estate becoming always the cestui que trust of him who has the legal estate. Upon this doctrine, therefore, the bill was retained for

(2) If an equitable tenant in tail is in a situation that he could suffer a valid recovery were he seised of a legal estate, trustees to preserve any contingent remainders may join with him in a recovery, &c. without the least breach of trust; but it seems (notwithstanding this argument, and what Lord Thurlow is reported to say in the next page) that they cannot be compelled to join, or to suffer a recovery themselves. Biscoe v. Perkins, 1 Ves. & B. 485. 491, 2.

1779.

BOTELER
against
ALLINGTON.

Lord Chancellor.—In that case the equitable estate for life and the legal remainder were in the son; but supposing all the estates to be equitable, with an equitable reversion, there is no doubt the recovery will bar.—The trustee is bound to do every act in assistance of the equitable tenant in tail. I see no reason why he should not be able to oblige the person having the legal estate to join. (3) Why should the tenant of the legal estate be exempted in conscience from joining in such conveyance?—You have a right to have a legal estate conveyed to you, upon which to suffer a recovery.

The defendants acquiescing, his Lordship decreed (4) a conveyance by Henry Allington, to the eldest son of Philip Boteler in tail-male, with the remainders over in the will. (5) for a year, with liberty for the plaintiff Salvin to try the validity of the recovery of Thomas, at law. But it was the opinion of the Court, that, as Thomas had not such an estate as would have enabled him to suffer a perfect legal, nor a perfect equitable, recovery, it was totally invalid. [Vide Ambl. 545. 699.; and see per Lord C. 3 Ves. 125, 6.]

(3) But see contra in Biscoe v. Perkins, 1 Ves. & B. 491, 2.

(4) “That the defendant should convey such estate as the plaintiff I. P. B. was entitled to, under the will of P. B. dated 18 August, 1708, in the estates in question to the said plaintiff P. B. or to his use, or in trust for him, in such manner as he should direct,” &c.—R. L.

(5) The Editor having been honoured with the assistance of some valuable notes by Lord Redesdale, takes the liberty of inserting the following one verbatim:—

“The question, whether the recovery suffered was or was not sufficient to bar all the estates created by the will, subsequent to the estate-tail limited to the plaintiff, and to entitle the plaintiff to a conveyance from the trustee in fee simple, notwithstanding some of the equitable estates created by the will had become vested in the trustee, was not considered by the Court as important to discuss; the plaintiff being capable of suffering a recovery upon a conveyance of the legal estate by the trustee, and the purchaser choosing rather to take the title in that form, the purchase being very large. Mr. Fearne had before given a very elaborate opinion, 18th Feb. 1778, that the recovery did bar the estates created by the will subsequent to the estate-tail vested in the plaintiff; conceiving that those estates all continued interests in equity only, which the law could not contemplate; and that the trustee had only a legal estate in fee in trust to serve the equitable estate-tail in the plaintiff at the time of the recovery, and all subsequent limitations in the will; and that in a court of law the equitable interests in the trustee could not be noticed as in any degree affecting, and particularly not as dividing, his estate in fee into several distinct estates in law, some of which he held in trust, and some not in trust. In truth, therefore, this decree was for the satisfaction of the purchaser, and is so stated by Lord Kenyon, in Doe dem. Compere v. Hicks, 7 T. R. 437. The point seems to have been determined in Robinson v. Comyns, and also in Marwood v. Turner, 3 P. W. 163. 171. (as to the Ascomb estate), where the recovery by Sir Henry Marwood, who had the legal estate, barred, as an equitable recovery, all the equitable estates; and the point was also determined by the Master of the Rolls in Brydges v. Brydges, and Philips v. Brydges, 3 Ves. jun. 120.” Lord Redesdale’s MS. Note.

1780.

[*] HILARY TERM,

[ *74 ]

20 Geo. 3. 1780.

Earl of HARRINGTON against FLEMMING.

(No Entry.)

UNDER a decree for money to be laid out in purchases, to be settled to uses under the marriage settlement of Lord Harrington and Miss Flemming, Mr. Mitford moved, last term, that the parties might be at liberty to propose purchases to the Master, from time to time, without applying upon each purchase to the Court, and cited Neale v. Neale, in 1728, and Ormston v. Lord Maynard before Lord Camden, in both which cases such an order had been made.

Lord Chancellor thought application ought to be made upon each purchase to the Court, but said he would look into the cases. On the first day of this term, Lord Chancellor said, — It is more for the advantage of the suitor, as a general rule, that the shape of each proposal should be laid before the Court. It is fit, before the proposition goes to the Master at all, that the Court should see there is a subject proper for his consideration (1), together with the state of the family. Without prejudice to any opinion upon particular circumstances in a decree, but as a general subject only, I think the proposal ought to be made to the Court.

Motion denied. The Master of the Rolls, who was present, expressed his assent to Lord Chancellor's opinion.

(1) In one of the purchases in this cause, the Court was so properly vigilant, that the Master, having stated that one of the proposed estates was free from any judgments, but not having stated that due search had been made, the order recited the fact in those terms, and directed "that he should cause search to be made, and state to the Court that he had made the same accordingly." Reg. Lib. 1779. A. fol. 110. entitled E. of Harrington v. Lascelles.

When money is to be laid out, under a marriage settlement, in purchases, application must be made to the Court, upon each separate purchase.

[*] SHAPLAND against SMITH. [Jan. 18.]

[ *75 ]

(No Entry.) :

Lincoln's-Inn Hall.

UPON exceptions to the Master's report, in favour of a title depending on the validity of the recovery suffered by Christopher Shapland, under the following case: — Shapland devised "to John Brett, Mr. Baron Eyre for Lord Chancellor. Masters Holford and Hett.

Devise to trustees to pay out of rents and profits (after deducting rates, taxes, and repairs) the residue to C. S. and his assigns for life, and, after his decease, to the use of the heirs male of the body of C. S. and in default of such issue, remainder over; not an estate-tail in C. S. the use not being executed in him. (1)

" John

(1) It seems this marginal abstract of Mr. Brown is agreeable to the decision, and his report of Lord Thurlow's expressions wrong. They certainly are at variance; and the report a most incorrect one. Mr. Fearne was of this opinion, and understood that the recovery was held void "for want of an estate-tail in C. S.," as above, and not because 1780.

SHAPLAND
against
SMITH.

" John Shapland, and George Shapland, the premises in question, upon " trust, that they the said J. B. J. S. and G. S. and their heirs and " assigns, shall, yearly and every year, by equal quarterly payments,
" by and out of the rents and profits of the said premises, after deduct-
" ing rates, taxes, repairs, and expences, pay such clear sum as shall " then remain to my brother. Christopher Shapland, and his assigns,
" during his natural life, and from and after his decease, to the use and " behoof of the heirs male of the body of the said Christopher Shapland,
" lawfully to be begotten, as they shall be in priority of birth; and in " default of such issue" remainder over. Cases cited, Tipping v. Co- zens, Carthew, 272. 1 L. Raym. 33. Brown v. Barkham, Pre. Ch. 461.
Broughton v. Langley, Eq. Abr. 383. Salvin v. Thornton, Trin. 1766, (ante, page 73. note) Pigot v. Garnish, Cro. Eliz. 678. Jones v. Lord Say & Seale, Eq. Ab. 383. 8 Vin. 262. 3 Brown's Pt. Ca. 458. South
v. Allen, 1 Salk. 228.

Baron Eyre. — A devise to trustees to permit A. to receive or to pay profits to A. amounts to a disposition of the land. What difference is there here? The rule of law is, A. having the use of the estate, the trust shall not be separated from the land, and the use shall be executed in him; this is an estate-tail in the first taker, and he hath a right to sell the estate.

Master Holford expressed himself of the same opinion.

Master Hett asked if his opinion was of any consequence; if so, his was against the doctrine laid down.

Baron Eyre seeming doubtful whether it was necessary the opinion of the Masters sitting with a judge must concur with his, in order to found a decree, the cause stood over to be reheard by Lord † Chancellor. Upon being reheard, Lord Chancellor was of opinion with Master Hett, that the trustees, being to pay the taxes and repairs, must have an interest in the premises; that, therefore, the legal estate for the life of Christopher was in them, and he had only an equitable estate for life; and, the subsequent estate [ * ] being executed, he had an equitable estate for life, (2) and a legal remainder in tail, which could not unite, and, of course, there could not be a good tenant to the præcipe, and the recovery suffered was void. It being necessary, in order to make a good tenant to the præcipe, that there should be a legal estate for life, with (3) a legal reversion in tail, or an equitable estate for life, with (3) an cause C. S. had "a legal estate in him," as mentioned in the report. — Vide Sugden's L. Vend. and Purch. 311, 12. &c. (5th edit.) There seems no doubt but the subsequent limitation was a use executed, by way of contingent remainder, to such person as should be C. S.'s heir, on the determination of his equitable life estates: so that C. S. had no more such an equitable interest for life. See Mr. Fearne's opinion, and Mr. Sugden's able commentary on the doctrine, and on this case, ubi supra, from page 309 to 314.

[ *76 ]

† See Merreit and Eastwick, 1 Vern. 265. and the advertisement prefixed to the 2d vol. of Vernon.

(2) According to Mr. Fearne's opinion, and the probable determination, he had no more than an equitable interest to have the residue of the rents paid to him for life; the limitation of the legal estate-tail being by way of contingent remainder to the person who, at his death, should answer the description of his heir: so that the recovery was void, for want of an estate-tail to pass, without referring to the want of a good tenant to the præcipe. See Mr. Sugden's observations, ubi supra, p. 312.

(3) Mr. Sugden thinks the substitution of the words "where there is," instead of "with," in the two above instances, will make the sentence correct. Ubi supra, p. 312, 313.

equitable equitable reversion in tail; but said that if it was only doubtful, he would not oblige the purchaser to take the title. (4)

Exception allowed.

1780.

SHAPLAND
against
SMITH.

(4) Lord Eldon C. has repeatedly disapproved of the Court's letting purchasers off, where the title was doubtful: observing, this was the first [modern] case which established such a practice; holding it preferable, according to the ancient course, that the purchaser should be decreed to take the title as it was, and have it ultimately decided in the House of Lords, if he thought proper. His Lordship, however, has always felt himself bound by such modern continued practice. See in Vancouver v. Bliss, 11 Ves. 464, 5.; Stapylton v. Scott, 16 Ves. 274.; and Biscoe v. Perkins, 1 Ves. and B. 492, 3. See also Cooper v. Denne, post. 4 vol. 80. and 1 Ves. jun. 565.; Sheffield v. Lord Mulgrave, 2 Ves. jun. 526.; Roake v. Kidd, 5 Ves. 647.; Lowes v. Lush, 14 Ves. 547.; and Franklin v. Lord Brownlow, ibid. 550. The principal case, however, was not exactly the first of the kind; see Marlow v. Smith, 2 P. W. 201.

KAYE against LAXON and others. [March 2.]

Sir Thomas
Sewel, Rolls,

(Reg. Lib. 1779. A. fol. 286.)

WILLIAM Mantle, possessed of a leasehold estate held for 99 years, of which under-leases had been let by him for 63 years, and, in some parts of the premises, reversionary leases of 19 years more, by his will, dated 27th November, 1770, made the following bequest: "I give and bequeath unto my grandson George Kaye (the plaintiff) my leasehold ground-rents in Swallow-street and Orange-street" (1) (the premises, the reversion of which was in question), and made the plaintiff, and some of the defendants residuary legatees. Plaintiff, thinking himself intitled under this will to the reversionary term, which was in the testator, after the expiration of the several leases, as well as to the rents reserved, entered into contracts with Richard Laxon, the husband and testator of one of the defendants, for the sale of the whole; but, he objecting to the title, on the presumption that the reserved rents only, and not the estate itself had passed, refused to complete the contracts unless the residuary legatees would join in the conveyance, which some of them refusing, the bill was filed. On behalf of the plaintiff, were cited Kerry v. Derrick, Moore, 771. Cro. Jac. 104. cited in 2 Vern. 400. as Cherry v. Dethick. Maundy v. Maundy, 2 Strange, 1020. Annaly, 142. S. C. And determined, by his Honour, that the whole interest passed to the plaintiff. (2) He, therefore, decreed a specific performance, without costs on either side.

Bequest of leasehold ground-rents, passes not the reserved rent only, but the reversionary leasehold interest.

(1) This agrees precisely with Reg. Lib.

(2) His Honour declared, "He was of opinion, that by virtue of and under the will of the testator, the plaintiff, G. K. became entitled to the whole of the leasehold premises in question, for the remainder of the said testator's term of 99 years therein." — R. L.

1780.

[ *77 ]

[*] EASTER TERM,

20 Geo. 3. 1780.

BROADMEAD against WOOD.

(Reg. Lib. 1779. A. fol. 640.)

Under a power to appoint a sum of money among younger children, but that the eldest son, or the son possessing the estate, shall have no part of the money, a younger son becoming an eldest is excluded, though mentioned by name in the execution of the power whilst he was a younger son.

[ *78 ]

BALL, by marriage articles, had a power to appoint the sum of 800*l.* (to raise which, a term was carved out) for younger children after the death of the wife; but it was "provided" by the power, "that the " eldest son, or the son possessing the estate, should have no share of the " 800*l.*" He had an eldest son John, a second Anthony, and five other younger children, and appointed the 800*l.* to Anthony, and the other younger children by name. After the appointment, and before the death of the mother, John died, whereby Anthony became an eldest son, and the estate charged with the sum descended upon him. And the question was between the other younger children, and the representatives of Anthony (he being since dead,) whether he was entitled to any share of this 800*l.*

Mr. Kenyon (for the other younger children) cited Hodges v. Fowler, Sch. 1766. — Randal v. Metcalf, 6 Brown's Parl. Cases, 559. [3d vol. 318. octavo edition] and Cholmondeley v. Meyrick, before Lord Northington, (1) where there being a term of 300 years, for raising a sum of 6000*l.* for younger children, in such shares as the father should appoint, but, in default of appointment, at 21, or marriage, if the father should be then dead, otherwise, immediately after his decease. Mrs. Merrick, one of the children, dying in the life-time of the father; upon the question whether the portion was transmissible, it was held, that it vested at 21, or marriage, though not payable till after the death of the father; the power of appointment suspending the payment only, not the vesting of the portion. If the younger son here took after the eldest per formam doni, he would not answer the description of a younger child. He cited also Chadwick v. Dolman, 2 Vern. 528. Teynham v. Webb, [*] 2 Vesey, 198. that a younger son so becoming eldest, could not take as a younger child.

Mr. Selwyn (for the representatives of Anthony.) — The father had a power over the shares, though confined as to the objects. By his will he has given to the younger children, and, among the rest, to Anthony by name. In Jermyn v. Fellows, (Ca. temp. Talbot, 93.) it was held that where the younger child is appointed by name, he shall take, though he becomes an eldest son.

Lord Chancellor. — It must be divided among all the children, except (2) John and Anthony.

(1) 1 Eden's Rep. 77. — S. P. Emperor v. Rolfe, 1 Ves. 208.; Willis v. Willis, 3 Ves. 51.; and Montague v. Lord Sandwich, Trin. Vac. 1797. See also the several other cases collected in Mr. Eden's note, ubi supra, 86, 87.

(2) See Loder v. Loder, 2 Ves. 531.

1780.

LEE [LEY] against PASCOE. [27 April.]

(Reg. Lib. 1779. B. fol. 319.)

Sir Thomas
Sewel, Master of Rolls, for Lord
Chancellor.

MR. Selwyn moved to discharge a demurrer, the defendant having, (after a motion for time to plead, answer, or demur,) by way of answer, only denied combination, and by this means not having complied with the orders for time, which were not to demur alone. He cited Steventon v. Gardiner, 2 Wms. 286. and a bill filed by Sir John Dinely Goodyer against the Dean and Chapter of Worcester in 1777, in the Exchequer. His Honour, on authority of these cases, and that the defendant had not complied with the terms of the order, ordered the demurrer to be discharged, and taken off the file, with costs. † (2)

Motion to discharge a demurrer (after motion for time to plead, answer, or demur, but not to demur alone,) granted, the answer only denying combination. (1)

† And it seems that the motion and order must be special to plead, answer, or demur, for if it be only to answer, although a plea will satisfy the order (V. Roberts v. Hartley, ante p. 56.) yet a demurrer (though only to part), and answer to the other part will not. See Kenrick v. Clayton, post. vol. 2. p. 214.; [and 2 Dick. 685.]

(1) The allegation in Reg. Lib. in support of the motion, and upon which the present order was made, was, "that the defendant had put in a demurrer only, without mention of any thing like an answer. The mere denial of combination, to be sure, was, in effect, no answer; as had been decided expressly on the same point in Steventon v. Gardiner, 2 P. W. 286, 7.; but it seems rather singular, the fact of the denial of combination forming the pretence of an answer, was not stated in R. L.

The practice still continues, agreeably to the principal case, as reported. See Lansdown v. Elderton, 8 Ves. 526. Et per Lord Eldon C. in Taylor v. Milner, 10 Ves. 447.

(2) "To be taxed by the Master." The Court, however, now gives, as a general rule, 5*l.* costs, which is the amount allowed where a demurrer is overruled upon argument: and it seems an improvement. See Lansdown v. Elderton, 8 Ves. 526, 7. The like sum is given if a demurrer is submitted to, after having been set down for argument, Anon. 9 Ves. 221.

TURNER against HUSLER.

(No Entry.)

Mr. Baron
Eyre for Lord
Chancellor.

THE testator being seised of tithes in fee, and also having leases of tithes perpetually renewable, without fine, devised all his lands, tenements, tithes, &c. to the defendant. — The defendant being in possession under the devise, the plaintiff, the personal representative, filed this bill for the leasehold tithes, insisting that by the will the freehold tithes only passed.

Mr. Baron Eyre. — The case of Rose v. Bartlet (Cro. Car. 293. 8 Vi. 202.) that if one having freehold lands and leases [*] for years, devise all his lands, the freehold lands will only pass, has been often referred to and acknowledged. † One cannot but respect a case so sup-

Testator having tithes in fee, and likewise tithes by leases perpetually renewable, devised all his lands, tenements, and tithes to defendant: the leasehold tithes pass as well as the freehold. (1)

† Particularly by Lord Hardwicke in Chapman v. Hart, 1 Ves. 271.; where the testator having freehold estates near Fowey, made a will, by which he devised all his lands and tenements near Fowey, but the will was not attested in the manner directed by the statute of frauds. Lord Hardwicke refused an enquiry, whether the testator had lease-

[ *79 ]

(1) See Watkins v. Lea, 6 Ves. 633. &c.; and Church v. Mundy, on the appeal, 15 Ves. 396. &c.

ported :

1780.

TURNER
against HUSKER.

ported: yet one cannot help asking why, by so general an expression, all the lands should not pass. No reason is given in the cases, (2) there is none arising from the favour shewn to an heir at law; for the ordinary or next of kin are not considered in that light. — There is none from general rules of construction. (3) If the words are the same, and the testator has only one interest, that will pass; if he has different interests, the intent seems to be the same, why should not the whole pass? There is but little reason in saying, that the freehold satisfies the words. By the case of Goodtitle, on demise of Paul v. Paul, 2 Bur. 1089. general words are not to be restrained, unless the Court sees abundant reason to think the testator meant to use them in a restrained sense. There is no good reason, where there is freehold and leasehold, why the freehold only should pass; I cannot see why both should not pass — the words are large enough. The determination of Rose v. Bartlet, was very early: I am led to think the old idea of the dignity of the freehold, and small value of the interesse termini, led to it. The leaseholder was held to be a mere pernor of the profits. From the change of circumstances, the rule is now become unsatisfactory. We are, here, considering the intent of the testator. It is a degree of strictness inconsistent with the present state of things, to say that a man by his lands does not mean all. I do not mean to deny the authority of Rose and Bartlet, but I cannot build upon it, and take the construction for tithes here, that is applied there to lands. I am not prepared to say, that the word tithes will not pass the leasehold, as well as freehold. Mr. Attorney General added the case of freehold and copyhold lands, that the Court will not supply a surrender of the copyhold, where a charge is upon all the (2) lands. That is because the will has, in law, no effect upon the copyhold, and the court of equity does not see a sufficient intent to charge it. It goes there on the intent, and I think it should do so here, and I can see no doubt of the intent. The form here is a lease, but, being renewable, it was as much the testator's as his inheritance. The case of Addis v. Clement, 2 Wms. 456. was argued from the intent. The limitations here are fit for an estate of inheritance. (4) I infer from this, that the power of renewal had made the testator forget that he had not the (5) inheritance. As to there being no mention of a renewal, this was not upon a fine, so [*] there was no need to raise a fund for that expence. In common understanding, chattels real are real estates. The case of Addis and Clement is very near this case. I admit the words possessed of and interested in make that case stronger, but the leading principles are the same. I am very glad to be supported by such a case in the opinion I shall give. I am of opinion that the leasehold tithes did pass, and that the bill must be dismissed, but, as it was matter of doubt, without costs.

[ *80 ]

leaseholds near Fowey, because, if it should come out that he had leaseholds there as well as freeholds, the plaintiff (the devisee) could take nothing, for the freeholds only would pass. Lord Hardwicke (according to a manuscript note the Reporter has seen of that case) expressly declared he held the case of Rose v. Bartlet (which he referred to for this position) to be good law.

(2) But see per Lord Eldon C. in Church v. Mundy, 15 Ves. 398.

(3) See note (1) in the preceding page.

(4) See per Lord Hardwicke C. in Chapman v. Hart, 1 Ves. 273. ; but see Church v. Mundy, on the appeal, 15 Ves. 396. ; and Lord Eldon C.'s observations on those dicta of Lord Hardwicke, &c. ibid. p. 406, 7. ; and in Watkins v. Lea, 6 Ves. 640.

(5) See per Lord Eldon C. in Watkins v. Lea, 6 Ves. 642. ; and that case, passim, from p. 633.

1780.

[*] TRINITY TERM,

[ *81 ]

20 Geo. 3. 1780.

SONLEY and others against the Master, &c. of the Clock-makers' Company. [30 May.]

Mr. Baron
Eyre for Lord
Chancellor.

(Reg. Lib. 1779. B. fol. 480.)

CONYERS Dunlop devised freehold estates to his wife for life, remainder to his brother Charles in tail male, remainder to the Clock-makers' Company, in trust, that they should, as soon as conveniently might be, after the decease of his wife and brother Charles without issue male, or after the death of such issue under the age of 21 years, sell the premises, and that the money to arise from such sale, and the receipts and profits from the decease, &c. till the sale, should be divided among all and every the testator's nephews and nieces already born, or to be born, and their child or children begotten, or to be begotten, to wit, &c. The testator's wife and brother both died in his life-time. The question therefore was, whether, the devise to the corporation being void, the heir at law took beneficially, or subject to the trust.

Estate devised to a body corporate (which cannot take by the statute of mortmain) in trust [to sell land and apply the proceeds for persons competent to take. Though the devise of the legal estate is void at law, yet the trusts shall not be defeated. The heir at law therefore considered as a trustee for the purpose. (1)]

Mr. Baron Eyre. — Although the devise to the corporation be void at law, yet the trust is sufficiently created to fasten itself upon any estate the law may raise. This is the ground upon which courts of equity have decreed, in cases where no trustee is named. (1)

Decreed that the heir at law is a trustee to the uses of the will. (2)

(1) Vide White v. White, antea, 12. So in the case of the death of trustees in a testator's lifetime, the benefit intended shall not lapse. Attorney General v. Hickman, 2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 193. pl. 14. which Lord Eldon C. said was correct, according to the Reg. Book. See in Moggridge v. Thackwell, 7 Ves. p. 80.; S. P. likewise, in Attorney General v. Downing, Ambl. 550.; and in Moggridge v. Thackwell, post. 3d vol. and 1 Ves. jun. 464. Affirmed on rehearing per Lord Eldon C. 7 Ves. 36.

(2) "Declared that the devise of the estate to the Clock-makers' Company was void in law; but that the same descended to the heirs at law of the testator, upon and subject to the trusts in his said will." R. L.

[*] CHAWORTH against HOOPER.

[ *82 ]

(Reg. Lib. 1779. A. fol. 492.)

Mr. Baron
Eyre [Master
Holford and Master Graves] for the Lord
Chancellor.

A DEVISE of the residue to an infant, payable at 21, with a remainder over in case of her dying under that age. The question was, whether, as the infant died under age, the interest, from the death of the testator to that of the infant, should go to the representative, or to the remainder-man.

Devise of residue to an infant payable at 21, remainder over; the infant died under age, the interest from the death of the testator to that of the infant shall go to her representative, not to the remainder-man. (1)

(1) Vide 2 Roper on Legacies, 209. 212. &c.; Hawkins v. Combe, post. 3 vol. 335.; and Gibson v. Lord Montfort, 1 Ves. 185.; Ambl. 96. &c. S. C. And see per Sir William Grant M. R. in Skey v. Barnes, 3 Meriv. 545, 6.

Mr.

1780.

CHAWORTH
against HOOPER.

Mr. Baron Eyre said he could not distinguish this case from that of Nicholls v. Osborn, 2 Wms. 419. The whole residue is here given to the infant; what is to become of the produce? Where would the use be, if it was a specific thing, or the rents if it was land? The interest is the natural produce. It is not a charge upon any body. The produce must go to the person who has the thing liable to be divested: when divested it must from that moment go to the person who comes in. Decreed accordingly.

MOULSON against MOULSON.

(Reg. Lib. 1779. B. fol. 521. entered M. v. Percival.)

Mr. Baron
Eyre [Master
Eames, Master
Montague, and Master Leeds]
for the Lord
Chancellor.

By marriage settlement, part of wife's fortune was advanced to husband for the purposes of his trade, for which he secured her an annuity, the rest being settled upon the children, after the decease of husband and wife, in such proportions as the wife should direct. By will he directed the wife should relinquish her claim under the settlement, and left a larger sum to trustees, the interest to be paid to her while sole, with a power to her to dispose of the whole among the children, this is a satisfaction for their portions under the settlement.

[ *83 ]

BY the marriage settlement 1100*l.* of the wife's fortune was to be advanced to the husband for the purposes of his trade, for which he secured to her an annuity of 100*l.* after his decease. The remainder of her portion was invested in trustees, to be divided after the decease of husband and wife, among the children according to the wife's appointment, and in default of appointment among them all, with a variety of provisions for events which did not happen. 4th July, 1778, the husband, having very much increased his fortune, made his will, taking notice of the settlement as to the annuity only, and directs that the wife should relinquish her right under the settlement. He then gives 10,000*l.* to the executors, which he directs to be laid out and the interest paid to the wife whilst sole, and gives her a power to dispose of the 10,000*l.* among the children, and in case of no disposal the children to take the whole. The wife [*] relinquished her right under the settlement. The question was, whether the children took such an interest as should be a satisfaction for what they would have taken under the settlement.

Mr. Baron Eyre.—If there be a provision on failure of the wife's appointment, they take a larger interest than under the settlement, and, if more beneficial, it must be a satisfaction. The intent was, that the wife should relinquish for the children, as well as for herself; and although she could not do so, it shews he intended it to be done, and then the Court must do it. Therefore it must operate as a satisfaction. (1)

(1) It was declared, "that upon the true construction of the will of the testator, the children of the second marriage, if more than one, on failure of the plaintiff Margaret's appointing the sum of 10,000*l.* to and amongst such children, according to the will, will be entitled, on the death of the plaintiff, Margaret M. upon attaining 21, or day of marriage (which should first happen), to the said sum of 10,000*l.* or so much thereof as should not have been so appointed;" and the Court "also declared, 'that the provision made for the children of the second marriage, by the testator's will, ought to be taken as a satisfaction of their interests, under the settlement made on the testator's marriage with the plaintiff, Margaret M. the widow in the pleadings mentioned.'" R. L.

[*] MICHAELMAS TERM,

21 Geo. 3. 1780.

1780

[ *84 ]

EDWARD Lord THURLOW, Lord High Chancellor. Sir THOMAS SEWELL, Knight, Master of the Rolls. JAMES WALLACE, Esq. Attorney-General. JAMES MANSFIELD, Esq. Solicitor-General.

MAYBANK against BROOKS.

(Reg. Lib. 1780. B. fol. 17.)

BROOKS the testator, whose father was indebted to Maybank, left a legacy of 850*l.* exactly equivalent to the debt, to Maybank, his executors, administrators, or assigns. Maybank, at the time of the legacy given, was dead, but of this no notice was taken in the will. The personal representative of Maybank filed this bill for the legacy, insisting the words of the will, "his executors, administrators, or assigns," made the same transmissible, that it was the same as if he had said, "and if he shall be dead, I give the same to such person, or persons as shall be his executor, administrator, or assign, &c." and that he meant the legacy to go to the family of Maybank, in payment of the debt. The original debt was not otherwise proved in the cause than by the recital in the will. But the plaintiff proposed to read parol evidence of the testator's knowledge that Maybank was dead, and his intent that it should go to such person as should be his representative. The evidence was that of an attorney (now dead), who did not draw the will, but gave the testator a draft of a will, and swore he believed the testator had copied the same, the will being all of the hand-writing of the testator. The production of this evidence occasioned some altercation: two objections were taken; 1st, the witness had been examined de bene esse before appearance. The defendant appeared and answered. The witness survived 18 months, the depositions had been published in pursuance of an order, defendants consenting; [*] a motion had been made before the Master of the Rolls, to suppress the deposition, but refused on account of the defendant's consent, upon which the plaintiff now insisted it should be read. Lord Chancellor seemed of opinion it ought not.

Legacy to a person dead in the life-time of the testator, lapsed, although the words are to M. his executors, administrators, and assigns; and parol evidence inadmissible, that the testator knew, at the time of making the will, that the legatee was dead. (1)

[ *85 ]

(1) These are now general undoubted rules. See 1 Roper on Legacies, 433. &c.: which cites Elliot v. Davenport, 1 P. W. 83. the principal case; and Corbyn v. French, 4 Ves. 418. 435.; and see Hutcheson v. Hammond, post. 3 vol. 128. 143. Wills, however, may be so framed, as to vest a benefit in a party's representatives, where, without such a manifest intention it would lapse. See 1 Roper, 439.; and in Corbyn v. French, 4 Ves. 419. 435.; Bridge v. Abbot, post. 3 vol. 224.; Evans v. Charles, 1 Anstr. 128.; Long v. Blackall, 3 Ves. 486.; and Sibley v. Cooke, 3 Atk. 572. A distinction has also prevailed, in cases where a testator has indicated a direct intention to forgive a debt, instead of the common case of giving a mere legacy. Sibthorp v. Moron, 3 Atk. 580. and 1 Ves. 49. But even in the case of debts intended to be released, a court of equity has held the benefit lapsed, where a testator had used the word "give," instead of "forgive;" and where he had, at the same time, directed his executor to give up to the debtor all bonds, &c. owing to him; see Typlis v. Baker, stated in the 5th edit. to 1 Cox. P. W. 86. and lately reported 2 Cox. Rep. 118. Whether a court would actually decide according to a dictum in that case, at p. 121 of 2 Cox's Rep., and a similar dictum attributed to Lord Hardwicke in Sibley v. Cooke, 3 Atk. 573. viz. that a lapse would take place without a substitution of some other person in room of the legatee dying, where the bequest might be merely thus, "I give to A.; and if A. shall die before me, yet I do not mean the legacy shall lapse," seems rather questionable; and it may be observed, that the paragraph in 3 Atk. 573. is drawn up very inartificially; besides the known distinction (on feudal principles) maintained as to real estate.

1780.

MAYBANK
·against· BROOKS.

The defendants took a second objection, that it was to contradict the words of the will; and they cited Brown v. Selwyn, Ca. temp. Taibot, 240.

Lord Chancellor. — The only fact to which evidence is offered, is, that the death of Maybank was within the knowledge of the testator. The end to which it is to be read is, that the legacy was meant to be transmissible; that could not be from a legatee who had been dead several years. But it is argued at the bar, that the legacy will amount to this; I give to Maybank whom I know to be dead, if he shall be alive, but if he shall be dead, to his executors, and administrators, or (still more absurdly) to his assigns. It is argued at the bar, that evidence may be read to raise as well as to dissolve an ambiguity in a will: this is good law, for it must be raised by evidence. It has gone so far as to give the legacy to a certain person, where there was no such person in existence as was described in the will; as to John a Style, where there was no such person, but testator used to call a certain person John a Style. All the cases of the admission of parol evidence are short of this. I must accordingly decree the legacy to Maybank to be lapsed.

Bill dismissed. (2)

(2) With costs. Reg. Lib.

[ *86 ]

[*] Between SELLWOOD HEWITT, Esq. and ANN his Wife, WILLIAM HEWITT (the only younger Child of the said Plaintiffs HEWITT and Wife), THOMAS HEWITT (the eldest son of the said HEWITT and Wife), both Infants, by the said SELWOOD HEWITT their Father and next Friend — JOSEPH FRAINE, Esq. and CATHERINE his Wife, and SUSANNA WRIGHT GILBERT COOPER, Spinster, which ANN HEWITT, CATHERINE FRAINE, and SUSANNA COOPER deceased, the Mother of the Plaintiff SUSANNA WRIGHT GILBERT COOPER, were three of the four Daughters of WILLIAM WRIGHT, Esq. and SUSANNA his Wife both deceased, - Plaintiffs.

NATHAN WRIGHT, surviving Trustee and Executor of said WILLIAM WRIGHT deceased, the Right Honourable GEORGE HARRY, Earl of Stamford, and the Honourable BOOTH GREY, Executors of DOROTHY WRIGHT deceased (the other Daughter of the said WILLIAM WRIGHT and SUSANNA his Wife), and JOHN GILBERT COOPER the eldest Son and Heir of JOHN GILBERT COOPER and SUSANNA his Wife, and also one of the Co-heirs both of the said WILLIAM WRIGHT and SUSANNA his Wife, and also of said DOROTHY WRIGHT deceased, - Defendants.

[20 and 27 November.]

(Reg. Lib. 1780. A. fol. 618.)

W. W. conveyed estates in fee to trustees to sell,

WILLIAM Wright, Esq. being seised in tail of lands in Great Sheepy, in the county of Leicester, and having by his wife Susanna three and pay debts, &c. and afterwards to apply the residue as follows: — To raise a sum of 1500*l.* and pay the interest to D. till marriage, and pay the principal to D. within 12 months after marriage, then to divide the residue in shares among the plaintiffs. By will he gave, out of other lands, a charge for another daughter, the residue to plaintiffs. D. died unmarried, the 1500*l.* resulted to the settlor as a resulting trust, but in his hands was personal estate, and passed as part of the residue thereof [under the will, and not under the deed. (1)] surviving

(1) See a most able exposition of the law relative to these resulting trusts, with the several distinctions, in Mr. Cox's note to the 5th edition of his P. Wms. annexed to Cruze v. Barclay, surviving daughters, and also a grandson and grand-daughter, the children of Susanna Cooper, the eldest and now deceased daughter of William and Susanna; and having given to the said Susanna, upon her marriage with John Gilbert Cooper, the sum of 2100*l.* and a like sum to his daughter [*] Ann, upon her marriage with Hewitt, the plaintiff; and meaning to bar the estate-tail, and make provision for his family, he and his wife Susanna, by deed 2d March, 1752, covenanted with George Wright and Thomas Wright, to levy a fine to the following trusts: — To William Wright for life, remainder to Susanna for life (in bar of dower), remainder to the trustees to sell, and to apply the money arising from the sale to pay debts; and then to pay to Catherine Fraine (then Wright, one of the plaintiffs), and Dorothy, now deceased (the then two unmarried daughters), the sum of 2100*l.* each; and, after making such payments, to pay and apply the residue as follows: — one-fourth to Susanna Wright Gilbert Cooper, the grand-daughter, at 21, with interest in the mean while, with remainders over; one-fourth to Ann Hewitt, with remainders over; one-fourth to Catherine Fraine, then Wright, at 21, or marriage; and in case she died before, her share to be paid among the other children of William and Susanna, or the children of such of them as should be dead; one-fourth to Dorothy, at 21, or marriage, and in case she died before, her share to be paid among the surviving children of William and Susanna Wright, and the children of such of them as should be dead, with power of revocation. By indenture 3d August, 1761, William Wright, and Susanna his wife, revoked these uses, and conveyed the same estates to Thomas and Nathan Wright, to the use of William for life, remainder to Susanna for life, remainder to the trustees, in trust, to sell, and pay debts, and then to pay to Catherine Fraine 2100*l.* and after payment of their expences to pay and apply the residue as follows: — To raise 1500*l.* and pay the interest, at 5 per cent. to Dorothy, till she married, and would live in such part of England as the trustees should approve, and to pay the principal sum of 1500*l.* to Dorothy, within twelve months after her marriage, with their consent; and to apply one-third of the residue to Susanna Wright Gilbert Cooper, 1780.

Hewitt
against Wright.

[ *87 ]

v. Barley, 3 vol. 22.; to which add Lord Loughborough C.'s observations on Ogle v. Cook (there noticed), in Collins v. Wakeman, 2 Ves. jun. 686, 7.

Mr. Cox, in the above note to the 5th edition, referring to various authorities (amongst which are Ackroyd v. Smithson, post. 503. &c.), says, "The several cases on this subject seem to depend upon this question, whether the testator meant to give to the produce of the real estate the quality of personalty, to all intents, or only so far as respected the particular purposes of the will; for unless the testator has sufficiently declared his intention, not only that the realty shall be converted into personalty, for the purposes of the will, but further, that the produce of the real estate shall be taken as personalty, whether such purposes take effect or not, so much of the real estate, or the produce thereof, as is not effectually disposed of by the will at the time of the testator's death (whether from the silence or inefficacy of the will itself, or from subsequent lapse), will result to the heir. In the case of Mallabar v. Mallabar, Ca. temp. Talb. 79. and Durour v. Motteux, 1 Ves. 320. the question was between the heir at law and the residuary legatee of the personal estate (and not the next of kin); and in those cases the Court was of opinion, that upon the construction of the will, the real estate was converted into personalty for all the purposes of the will, including the residuary bequests. These cases, consequently, do not decide the question which would have arisen, if there had been no residuary disposition, or if such residuary disposition had been confined to what was personalty at the testator's death; but notwithstanding that such interest results to the heir, as being a part of the produce of the real estate undistributed, it may yet be personal estate of the heir, and pass as such by a residuary bequest:" for which position Mr. Cox refers to the principal case; as to which, see per Lord C. post. p. 90. "Another branch of cases (Mr. Cox continues) are those in which the question has arisen between the real and personal representatives of devisees under wills, of the nature above mentioned. Vide Scudamore v. Scudamore, Prec. Cha. 543.; Flanagan v. Flanagan (cited), 1 Bro. 513.; Fletcher v. Ashburner, 1 Bro. 497." — See those cases postea accordingly.

1780.

HEWITT
against WRIGHT.

[ *88 ]

at 21, or marriage, and, if she should die before, remainder over; one-third to Ann Hewitt for life, remainder to her children; one-third to Catherine Fraine, at 21, and, if she died before, among the children of the grantors, with power of revocation. By will of the same date, William Wright gave lands in Newark, and elsewhere, in or near the borough of Leicester, together with all his personal estate, to said Thomas and Nathan Wright, in trust to sell and to pay debts, and out of the produce to pay 2100*l.* to Catherine Fraine, being the same sum directed to be paid her out of the [*] money arising from the sale of the lands in Great Sheepy, and then to put out the monies to arise by the sale, and apply the interest to his wife for life, and, after her decease, to pay the principal, one-third to Susanna Wright Gilbert Cooper, at 21, with remainder over; one-third to Ann Hewitt for life, then to her children; one-third to Catherine Fraine. William and Susanna Wright never revoked the deed of the 3d of August, 1761. William Wright, surviving Susanna, died before August, 1765, leaving John Gilbert Cooper his grandson, Ann Hewitt, Catherine Fraine, and Dorothy Wright, his co-heirs at law, and also the co-heirs of Susanna his wife. The 1500*l.* for Dorothy were laid out in the purchase of 1718*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* South-sea stock, and the trustees permitted her to receive the interest during her life. Dorothy died unmarried, about 21st March, 1777, leaving defendant John Gilbert Cooper (son of Susanna the eldest daughter of William and Susanna Wright,) and the plaintiffs Ann Hewitt and Catherine Fraine, her co-heirs at law, and having made a will, and appointed the Earl of Stamford, and Booth Grey, executors. The plaintiffs filed their bill, claiming the said 1718*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* South-sea stock; one-third part to the benefit of Sellwood and Ann Hewitt, and their children; one-third to Catherine Fraine, or her husband in her right; and one-third to Susanna Wright Gilbert Cooper, for her use and benefit. The defendants, the executors of Dorothy, by their answers, claimed under her will, insisting that the money having been raised, was become personal property (as, if not raised, it would have been a resulting trust to William Wright,) and they entitled, as executors, to one-fourth of the 1718*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* South-sea stock. The defendant John Gilbert Cooper (son of Susanna the deceased daughter) by his answer, submitted that the 1500*l.* was real estate undisposed of; and that he was entitled to one-fourth, as one of the heirs at law of William Wright, and to one-third of one-fourth, as one of the co-heirs of Dorothy, and, if the same was part of the personal estate of Dorothy then he claims certain benefits under her will.

[ *89 ]

Mr. Solicitor General, Mr. Madocks, and Mr. Hargrave, on the part of the plaintiffs, contended that the 1500*l.* was disposed of by the deed of 1761, that by the first deed he meant to dispose of the whole, and by the second he meant to give Dorothy only the interest of 1500*l.* the principal to go to the two daughters, and Susanna Cooper, as standing in the place of her [*] mother. The deed speaks this intention by the words *after payment of the 2100*l.* and reimbursement of expences.* — The 1500*l.* was included in that residue. — Every thing not disposed of by the deed, was by the will. — The estate comprised in the deed, and that in the will, were the whole of his real estates.

Mr. Kenyon, Mr. Arden, and Mr. Hollist, argued that the fourth part went to Dorothy, as real estate. The property was in such a situation as to give Dorothy an election. She by her will gives all her personal estate, and this was in fact personal. The 1500*l.* is not disposed of by the deed; the trustees were to raise the 1500*l.* and, after such payment, the residue is disposed of. It was ordered to be turned into money; it was so in Dorothy's life, so she had in fact one-fourth of 1500*l.* They cited Emblyn v. Freeman, Pre. Ch. 541. — Cruse v. Barley, 3 Wms. 20. — and Stonehouse v. Evelyn, 3 Wms. 252.

Lord

1780:

HEWITT
against
WRIGHT.

Lord Chancellor stated the case, and the claims of the respective parties, as made by the bill and answers, and divided his consideration of them into two points. First, Whether the 1500*l.* provided for Dorothy, passed as part of the residue, by the terms of the deed of 1761. And this he thought it did not. — That the grantor had not expressed any intention of what should become of the sum of 1500*l.* in case Dorothy should not marry, and that probably had that event been in his contemplation, he would have made some particular provision for it. He could not be supposed to mean that it should fall into the residue, without determining, that, upon all instruments, where sums were disposed of upon contingencies, which failed, they should fall into the residue, whereby persons would be made to dispose of large sums by the word residue, when they meant only to give such small sums as might remain after the several events for which they had specifically provided. Secondly, Whether it was personal estate [in the grantor] and passed by the will, which he thought it did; but this question depended upon what was the nature of the property which the testator had in this 1500*l.* — His Lordship said he found himself little assisted by the cases. There was a great difference of principle between those of more ancient and more modern date: that in the former, the intention of the testator was supposed to govern, and upon this principle in North v. Compton, 1 Chan. Ca. 196. upon the implied intention of the testatrix, and in analogy to the case of an [*] executor who has a legacy, and is barred by it from taking the surplus, the legacy of 200*l.* deprived the heir of the residue of the estate. That by the latter cases it was established, that where a real estate is directed, by a deed or will, to be sold, so much as the deed or will does not dispose of results as land. This is settled by Emblyn v. Freeman, [Prec. Ch. 541.] So, if the testator gives the estate to a stranger, with a charge upon it, which fails, that part will go to the heir. Cruse v. Barley, [3 P. W. 20.] So in the case of a [rent-charge secured by a] term of years devised for payment of debts, the residue undisposed of results [for the benefit of the heir.] Wych v. Packington, 2 Eq. Ca. Abr. 507. 1 Brown's Parl. Ca. 372. [and 3 Bro. P. C. 44. Tomlin's. ed.] If it goes in the case of a will to the heir; in the case of a deed, it must result to the grantor; and though, in the case of the will it cannot go to the executor as money, not having been converted, but must descend to the heir, yet he should think that it was personal estate of the heir; and, if he were dead, would go to his executor (2); and, if so, where it resulted to the grantor, it would be personalty in his hands, and would pass as such; and therefore, although he thought the case of Emblyn and Freeman right, that the conversion into money did not prevent its resulting to the grantor, he could not help thinking, notwithstanding that case, that the trust of the 1500*l.* resulted here, in the same manner that it vested in Wright the grantor, as personal estate, and so was disposed of by the general terms of the devise. He observed a difference between a charge and a residue; that a charge is personal from its first creation, but a residue continues real till converted. — His Lordship therefore decreed for the plaintiff. † (3)

[ *90 ]

† See the case of Levet v. Needham, 2 Vern. 158. That the residue of a term raised for a particular purpose, when the purpose is answered shall vest in the heir, but he must have it as a term, which must go in a course of administration, and not in a course of descent. The decree therefore, in that case, was for the administrator of the heir, and not for his heir. (4)

(2) See Fletcher v. Ashburner, post. 497. Appendix.

(3) “ Declared, that the sum of 1718*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* Old South-sea Annuities in question “ were to be considered as part of the personal estate of the testator distributed by his “ will, dated the 3d Aug. 1761, and not by the deed dated the same day.” Reg. Lib.

(4) Quære, however? and see Belt v. Mitchelson, on appeal from the Rolls, before Lord Eldon C. Supplement to Vesey senior, 227. 231; 2.

1781.

[*91]

[*] HILARY TERM,

21 Geo. 3. 1781.

(1) HARMAN against DICKENSON. [24 January.]

(Reg. Lib. 1780. A. fol. 611.)

Bequest to two daughters; if one should die without issue, to the survivor and her issue; the married daughter died, leaving issue; then the unmarried daughter.

A BEQUEST to two daughters of the testator, and if one should die without issue, then to the surviving daughter and her issue. One of the daughters married and died, leaving issue; then the unmarried daughter died.

Lord Chancellor held that the money went to the issue of the married daughter, although she did not survive her sister. (1)

It shall go to the issue of the married daughter.

(1) The statement of this case is so very short and inaccurate, that it seems to require to be entirely new modelled. An exposition of it, therefore, from the Registrar's book, may be desirable.

Where a testator manifests a clear intention to give a benefit to certain objects in an event which happens, the legatees shall not be deprived of it, although a circumstance inadvertently coupled with it in the language used, does not literally take place. (2)

Therefore, under a bequest of equal sums for the benefit of each of two grand-daughters, A. and B. for life, and their children respectively; but if either died without issue, her share to go to the children of the surviving grand-daughter; A. marries, and dies leaving children in the life-time of B.; then B. dies unmarried. Held, that A.'s children took each of the shares, though their mother did not actually survive B.

The testator vested a sum of 10,000*l.* New South-sea Annuities in trustees, with directions to suffer each of his two grand-daughters, A. and B. to receive the dividends and interest to arise on 5000*l.* part thereof, for her separate use; and, after the decease of each of such grand-daughters, and when and as each of them should happen to die, to transfer and assign 5000*l.* part of the said 10,000*l.* New South-sea Annuities, unto and among such one or more of the children of each grand-daughter so happening to die, who should be living at her decease, in such shares, &c. as his said grand-daughter so dying should direct, &c.; and in default thereof, then in trust to assign, transfer, pay, and dispose of the said 5000*l.* and the dividends thereof, unto or equally among all and every the children of his grand-daughters so dying, which should be living at her decease, in equal proportions, &c.; the shares to be transferred to them at 21, and the interest, in the mean time, for their maintenance; but in case either of his grand-daughters should die without leaving issue, or that such issue should all die before their shares should become transferrable respectively as aforesaid, then the 5000*l.* so intended for the children of such grand-daughters so dying without issue, or failing issue as aforesaid, and the dividends thereof should go and be paid, and transferred, &c. in manner following, viz.—the yearly dividends to such surviving grand-daughter for her own use for life, and the principal to go, survive and accrue, and be transferred to the child or children of any of such surviving grand-daughters, in the same manner, &c. and subject to such power of distribution as were thereinbefore mentioned, concerning his or their original share of the 10,000*l.* New South-sea Annuities intended for him, her, or them, after the decease of his, her, or their parents. And in case of the death of both his said grand-daughters, without leaving issue of their or her bodies, or the death of such issue before their share should become payable, that then the trustees should transfer the said 10,000*l.* unto, and equally between two of his testator's grandsons, therein named.

A. one of the grand-daughters, married, and died in her sister's life-time, leaving issue; then B. the other grand-daughter, died unmarried.

The bill was filed on behalf of the infant children of A.

The Lord Chancellor held, on the clear manifest intention, that the whole fund went to the issue of A. the married daughter, although she did not survive her sister; and declared "that the plaintiffs, the infants, were entitled to the two sums of 5000*l.* and "5000*l.* New South-sea Annuities, subject to the contingencies in the will of the testator concerning the same." R. L.

A. marries, and dies leaving children in the life-time of B.; then B. dies unmarried. Held, that A.'s children took each of the shares, though their mother did not actually survive B.

(2) See also Milsom v. Aubrey, 5 Ves. jun. 465.; Crowder v. Clowes, 2 Ves. jun. 449.; and Wainwright v. Wainwright, 3 Ves. 558. Ferguson v. Dunbar, in the note to the 3d vol. postea, 469. was under far different circumstances, since there was there a surviving child to answer the description, although the Court thought the decision it was bound to make was against the testator's intention. See also other cases, not affording so clear an inference as is required, in 2 Roper on Legacies, 346.

1781.

(1) ATKINSON against PAICE. [29 January.]

(Reg. Lib. 1780. A. fol. 218.)

THE words of the will were, "I devise to my executors, &c. 1000*l.* three per cents. to the use of my niece Elizabeth, and her unfortunate daughter Ann Vaughan, and the longer liver of them, to be paid to their order during their lives, and then to the lawful issue of Ann Vaughan, if she shall have such; if not, in trust for R. Little until he shall come of age." R. Little died in the life-time of Ann Vaughan; and the question now was, whether it should go to the representative of R. Little or of Ann Vaughan.

Mr. Bond (for the representative of Little). The remainder to Little would, if it was land, be a vested remainder. But it is immaterial whether it was vested or not. Pinbury v. Elkin, 1 Wms. 563. Dyer, 15. b. 2 Vern. 38. 2 Ch. Rep. 200. The testator gave only the use to the niece and Ann Vaughan; but the remainder to Little. 1 Wms. 432. 534. Wild's case, 6 Co. 16. Nichols v. Skinner, Pre. Ch. 528.

[*] Mr. Price (for the administrator of Ann Vaughan).—This was an estate-tail in Ann Vaughan, therefore, being personalty, the whole must pass to her. Lodington v. Kime, 3 Lev. 431.—Seale v. Seale, 1 Wms. 290.

Mr. Wilson (for the residuary legatee of testator).—If not given to either Ann Vaughan, or to Little, it must go to the residuary legatee. It is upon a double contingency; if there is issue, that issue is to take; if not, then Little. It is clear that Ann Vaughan does not take. If Ann Vaughan did not die without issue, it could not vest in Little. Then the residuary legatee must take.

Lord Chancellor.—By the words, "till of age," he meant to give the fund to the child, and the trust given till then is only to point out the mode † (2).

(1) This case seems also to require to be re-modelled from Reg. Lib.

According to the Registrar's book the words of the will were, "I devise to my executors, &c. 1000*l.* 3 per cents. to the use of my niece E. S. and her unfortunate daughter, Ann Vaughan, or the longer liver of them, the dividends to be paid to their order during the lives of either of them; and then to the lawful issue of A. V. if she shall have such; if not, the stock shall be transferred in trust to J. F. Little till he comes of age. I call it 1000*l.*"

J. F. Little came of age in the life-time of E. S. and A. V. but died before them in 1768, leaving the plaintiff his widow and executrix. E. S. then died, leaving A. V. and A. V. died in 1778, without issue.

The bill, filed by the executrix of J. F. Little insisted, "that by virtue of the will, E. S. and A. V. became entitled for their lives to the dividends; and that J. F. Little became entitled to the stock in reversion after the death of the survivor of E. S. and A. V. subject to the contingency of A. V. leaving no issue."

The question, therefore, was, whether the stock should go to the representatives of J. F. Little, or of A. V.

The Court declared, "that the plaintiff, as the representative of J. F. Little, was entitled to the fund in question, with the interest accrued since the death of Ann Vaughan." Reg. Lib.

"for J. F. L. till he comes of age." J. F. L. attained 21, and died; then E. S. and last A. V. without issue. The representative of J. F. L. held entitled to the fund; and that the trust during minority was only a mode of convenience.

(2) See the decree in the preceding note.

Devise to executors of 3 per cents. to the use of E. and her daughter A. V. and the longer liver; and then to the issue of A. V. if she shall have such; if not, in trust for R. L. till he shall come of age. R. L. died, leaving A. V. The fund is given to R. L. the trust is only the mode.

[ *92 ]

Bequest of stock to executors "for the use of E. S. and A. V., or the longer liver; the dividends to be paid to their order during the lives of either of them: and then to the issue of A. V. if any: if not, the stock to be transferred in trust 1781.

Lord IRNHAM against CHILD and others. (1)[S. C. 2 Dick.
554.]

(No Entry.)

Grant of annuity. (2) A bill filed to redeem, suggesting that it was part of the agreement that it should be redeemable, but the agreement left out of the deed, on the idea that if inserted the transaction would be usurious. Parol evidence offered to this, but not admitted to contradict the deed (1), not being charged to have been omitted by fraud. (3)

[*93]

LORD Irnham treated for an annuity (2) with Child, who (though unknown to Lord Irnham) was an agent for H. Lawes Luttrell, his Lordship's eldest son. Upon settling the terms it was agreed that the annuity should be redeemable; but, both parties supposing that this appearing upon the face of the transaction would make it usurious, it was agreed that the grant from Lord Irnham to Child should not have in it a clause of redemption. It was accordingly drawn and executed without such clause. — The annuity had been assigned by Mr. Luttrell to others of the defendants. Lord Irnham now filed his bill to redeem, alleging that such was the agreement, although it did not appear, for the reason above stated, upon the deed. At the bar they offered parol evidence of the agreement. In favour of the admissibility of the parol evidence were cited, 1 Eq. Abr. 20. Maxwell's case. — Harvey v. Harvey, 2 Ch. Ca. 180. — Walker v. Walker, 2 Atk. 98. — Joynes v. Statham, 3 Atk. 388. (4) — Fitz Gibbon, 213. — Lock v. Boulton, before Lord Camden. — Vane v. Lord Barnard, Gilb. Rep. 6. — Merkins v. Northey, 5th July, 1756. — Baker v. Paine, 1 Vesey, 457.

[*] Lord Chancellor. — If this was supposed to be a subsequent contract, the question would be whether there could be a right of redemption of an annuity out of lands, by parol, where the purchase could not be but by deed. Whether this question arises upon the statute or at common law, I do not see much difficulty. The rule is perfectly clear, that where there is a deed in writing, it will admit of no contract that is not part of the deed. Whether it adds to, or deducts from, the contract, it is impossible to introduce it on parol evidence. It is contended to be the general authority of a court of equity, to relieve in cases of fraud, trust, accident, or mistake, and that this applies to agreements, as well as to other subjects. This must always clash with the argument drawn from the statute. (1) It is admitted that the deed will bind if no fraud is committed, but objected that when a fraud interferes, there the evidence may be introduced. The objection is founded on a great deal of wisdom and good sense. But the question is, if it were always to be admitted, whether it would not be subversive of justice; the Court has held that it would. If the agreement had been varied by fraud, the evidence would be admissible. The argument then must be to impute fraud to the party. The rule of evidence is not subverted, if there is clear proof of fraud. The committing the agreement to writing, is an

(1) See per Lord Eldon C. on this case, &c. in M. Townshend v. Stangroom, 6 Ves. 332, 3. upon the points in this case. Vide similar decisions in Lord Portmore v. Morris, post. 2 vol. 219 (with 1 H. Black. p. 664. note); Hare v. Shearwood, 3 vol. 168. and 1 Ves. jun. 241; Rosamond v. Lord Melsington, in the note to 3 Ves. p. 40.; and Rich v. Jackson, 4 vol. 513. and 6 Ves. 334. note (c), where the judgment is given much more fully. See also Woollam v. Hearn, 7 Ves. 211.

(2) This, and all other cases in these reports, under the Annuity Act, must be considered as referable to the act of the 17 Geo. 3. c. 26. only. By the late act, 53 Geo. 3. c. 141, the provisions made by the first-mentioned act have been repealed, and other provisions substituted in lieu thereof. In all cases, therefore, subsequent to the above act of the 53 Geo. 3. reference must be to that act alone.

(3) See the cases referred to in the former note, and Sugden's Law of Vendors and Purchasers (5th edit.), p. 150. &c.; and see in Shelburne v. Inchiquin, post. 350. See also in 6 Ves. 332, 3. &c. As to mistake, &c. see M. Townshend v. Stangroom, 6 Ves. 328.; and Durant v. Durant, 1 Cox. Ch. Ca. 58.

(4) Vide post. 4 vol. 518.; and 6 Ves. 325. note.

argument against fraud. Then as to mistake, or accident; suppose it was a very clear thing that one agreement was intended, and that, by accident, it was extended further. — But there is no such case in the books. (5) If admitted to be a mistake, the Court would not overturn the rule of equity, by varying the deed; but it would be an equity dehors the deed. (6) Then it should be proved as much to the satisfaction of the Court as if it were admitted. The difficulty of this is so great, that there is no instance of its prevailing against a party insisting that there was no mistake. It is said a mistake of the law is equal to a mistake in point of fact. Here there was no intention that the agreement should make any part of the instrument. (6) The thing insisted upon could not hold a moment, except as matter dehors the deed, and on a separate head of equity. Here a large annuity is sold for rather a small price, — not for the natural sum, — the agreement they say was that it should be redeemable, but this does not meet my present idea. To sell an annuity, and make it redeemable, is not usury, because it is not a loan. It is a question whether the intent to suppress this, as leading to usury, will admit the party [*] to come into a court of equity. There is no case of a kind of mistake like this, where the doubt was, whether the clause would be evidence of usury. It was agreed by both parties not to introduce the clause, but it was to stand on parol evidence. Then it results as a question, whether I can admit the evidence. I was long inclined to admit the reading of it. It is necessary to see the statement of the bill: if it states that it was agreed that it should not be inserted, they cannot read it; but if it is stated that it was intended to be inserted, but it was suppressed by fraud, I cannot refuse to hear evidence read, to establish the rule of equity. They are at liberty to read evidence to prove such a fraud as will make a ground of equity.

The evidence being read for this purpose,

Lord Chancellor. — I admitted the evidence to be read, because I thought a case might come out which would afford a new head of equity; for if there was a fraud in admitting, or excluding a clause, the Court might reform the deed. As far as the object was to explain the agreement by any other matter, I thought it necessary to look into the bill, to see whether it alleged it to be fraudulent: had the bill been so, I should have thought myself bound to hear the evidence; and then my duty would be to consider whether it afforded a ground of equity. The plaintiff, supposing he had alleged in his bill what he now insists on in argument, should have stated that he agreed to grant an annuity redeemable, and then the fraud, or mistake, by which the grant was extended. Here, he could not have stated more than this, that the transaction was such as was capable of being usury, or that a little more might make it usury. If so, they thought fit that the agreement should not be inserted in the instrument. If the insertion would make it usurious, no plaintiff could come here and state that as the reason of its not being inserted: — but he says it was under the idea that it might be so, and that that idea was the reason of the surprise. — Suppose one to grant for life, for the purpose of making a qualification for parliament, to be redeemable upon payment of a certain sum, but it was thought such a grant would be elusory, and not admitted as a qualification; it would be extraordinary, if a court of equity should be called upon to call that a surprise. The consequence would be, that the allegation must be that they had avoided inserting a part of the agreement, not that the agreement was intended to be in the deed. If the bill [*] afforded a proper allegation, it would then be time enough to con-

1781.

IRNHAM against CHILD.

[ *94 ]

[ *95 ]

(5) See, however, Durant v. Durant, 1 Cox. Ca. Ch. 58.

(6) See per Lord Eldon C. in M. Townshend v. Stangroom, 6 Ves. 332, 3, 4. &c.

sider

1781.

IRNHAM against CHILD.

sider the evidence. But another head of fraud is set up, that he did not mean to treat with his son. I should be very sorry to lay it down that a man treating with a third person, in trust for a second, whom he had refused to deal with, could therefore set it aside. (7) No case has gone so far. † Philips v. the Duke of Bucks, 1 Vern. 227. was upon a difference of price. (8) Certainly here is no fraud stated on the face of the bill. The bill does not go to destroy, but to affirm, and reform the contract. I have no idea of this being notice to the assignees of the annuities, that the annuity was to be redeemable. It is argued several ways, that they had notice personally of the transaction — that they had notice by their agent — and that it was necessary for them to apply to Lord Irnham. This might have place, if the matter remained in fieri and they were bringing a bill against Lord Irnham, but here it has no place, for the deed was brought to them by which Lord Irnham had granted absolutely. I am not able to conceive that they were obliged to recur to Lord Irnham, any more than if it had been a dormant equity. Bill dismissed. ‡

† Sed vide the case of Eyre v. Popham (9), where Popham had, from Eyre having been guilty of a breach of a former contract, expressly refused to treat with him, a third person treated with Popham, in fact in trust for Eyre, and an agreement having been entered into, Eyre filed his bill for a specific performance. Bill dismissed by Lord Bathurst, Mich. 14 Geo. 3. (9)

‡ See also the case of Lord Portmore v. Morris, post. vol. 2. p. 210.

(7) See Harding v. Cox, note (1) to Philips v. D. Bucks, 1 Vern. 227.; O'Hertly v. Hedges, 1 Scho. and Lefr. 123.; and in Featherstonhaugh v. Fenwick, 17 Ves. 318.; also Mr. Sugden's observations L. Vend. and P. 191. note; and per M. R. in Bonnet v. Sadler, 14 Ves. 528.

(8) See Mr. Raithby's notes on that case.

(9) Mr. Brown has mis-stated this case. It was not decided on any such ground, although the circumstance stated was a feature in the case. See it reported in Lofft's Rep. from p. 786 to 814.; and Sugd. Vend. and P. 121. note.

[ *96 ]

[*] TRINITY TERM,

21 Geo. 3. 1781.

ROBERT Lord Bishop of LONDON against FYTCHE. (1) [13 June.]

(Reg. Lib. 1780. A. fol. 506.)

Upon quare impedit brought against the plaintiff, he filed the present

BILL filed by the bishop, as ordinary, against the defendant the patron, and the clerk presented by him, to be instituted to the living of Woodham Walter in Essex. The patron, 2d Jan. 1781, presented a bill to discover whether the clerk presented to him by defendant had not given a general bond of resignation, in order to set up that bond as a defence at law for having refused him institution. (1) To this bill defendant demurred: 1st, on account of the legality of such bond; 2d, that the discovery was immaterial. Demurrer over-ruled.

(1) See Cunningham's Law of Simony, and 1 East's Rep. 487. Et vide per Lord Eldon C. in Lord Kircudbright's case, 8 Ves. 61.

sented

sented John Eyre to the bishop, who understanding the clerk had given a bond to resign upon demand, refused, on that account, to admit him, conceiving the bond simoniacal. Upon a quare impedit being brought, the bishop filed this bill for a discovery, whether such bond, or some, and what other security had been given by the clerk to the patron for resignation, in order to make use of it for his defence at law. To this bill the defendants demurred, on the ground that a discovery might make the defendants liable to penalties.

Mr. Solicitor General. — The ground of demurrer is, that if the facts stated are true, they do not give the bishop a right to the discovery; or that such bond was no objection against the clerk being admitted. No such question has ever been agitated in a quare impedit, although there have been some actions on bonds, Hesketh v. Gray, 2 Burn's Eccl. Law, 341. The mischiefs arising from these bonds being taken are obvious, Durston v. Sands, 1 Vern. 411. and 2 Ch. Ca. 186. The Court will enjoin where they are made an ill use of. If the cases were out of the question, I should think the bonds were illegal. (2) This suit is brought to have that point considered. It is unnecessary to determine more at present than that the question is proper to be considered. The cases are Hesketh v. Gray, Peel v. the Earl of Carlisle, Stra. 227. Peele v. Capel, Stra. 534.

Mr. Madocks (same side). — This is a bill of discovery only, not praying any relief. It is contended there is no equity in [*] the bill. Hesketh v. Gray, and all the other cases, were between the patron and clerk, this is between the patron and ordinary. It is said Hesketh v. Gray came back from the court of law, and that Lord Hardwicke relieved against the bond. The question is perfectly new, whether the giving of such a bond will justify the ordinary in refusing the clerk. When an action is brought which depends on the title to land, the defendant has a right to come here for a discovery of the plaintiff's right, 1 Vesey, 248. — So here the bishop, having a quare impedit brought against him, has a right to such discovery as may enable him to make a defence to the action. Though a general bond, as between patron and clerk has been determined to be legal, it does not follow that it is not a good objection against admitting the clerk.

Mr. Kenyon (for the defendants). — In Peel v. Lord Carlisle the Court would not permit the legality of the bonds to be argued, they having been adjudged to be legal. The most recent case on the subject is above 30 years old. The bonds being legal between patron and clerk, must be so between the ordinary and patron. The discovery sought is of facts totally immaterial: if the bonds are legal, it is totally immaterial; if not, though the demurrer had not set forth that it will make them liable to penalties, it is sufficient to set that forth ore tenus. It will do under the act 31 Eliz. c. 6. § 6.

Mr. Solicitor General (in reply). — They are not subject to any penalties by the act. Swain v. Carter, Comberb. 394.

Lord Chancellor. — Two objections are made to the discovery sought. First, That it will subject the defendants to penalties as a simoniacal contract. It is very clear, that if any plaintiff, for any purpose, demands a discovery which leads to a legal accusation, he is not entitled to it. If the plea can be supported, from the evidence to be discovered, I must not enforce the demurrer. If there were no cases, I should think it clear that a mere bond of resignation could not be criminal — unless it were for profit or benefit to the patron. Many cases have been determined, that the bonds were good. (2) The effect of the deter-

(2) Lord Eldon C. said, that if it were not for the cases he should hold them illegal; for which his Lordship gives very strong reasons. See 8 Ves. 61.

1781.

Bishop of LONDON
against FITCHEL

[ *97 ]

1781.

Bishop of LONDON
against FYTCHE.

[ *98 ]

mination is, that they not only are not simoniacal, but that they are not against the policy of justice. (3) The second objection is that the discovery is immaterial. This is the first instance of a [*] demurrer for immateriality. If a demurrer was to a bill where the matter was obviously frivolous, the Court might interfere. Here one of the cases treats the matter as too well settled to be argued. It was argued and determined the same way. It is said there is a difference between this and when it is between patron and clerk. I cannot bring my mind to this argument. The bishop has never been compelled to accept the resignation. The question, as decided, carries this along with it, that where the bond has been applied to a bad purpose the Court would restrain; but this is a different question, whether a man, who ought to be independent of every control but the court Christian, shall subject himself by contract to any but his ordinary. In specie, it has never been decided that the bishop is compellable to admit the clerk, but it has been decided that the contract is not illegal. This is not stated as the ground of the present opinion. It is not too much to say, that where a man comes for a discovery of evidence material to his defence, the party shall not protect himself against the discovery, unless he can shew himself liable to penalties, which I think he has not sufficiently done here. There is no instance of the Court having refused a discovery because it was inconvenient to the party making it, for the plaintiff pays the costs of the application, and whether it is material or not, is chiefly for him to judge. I am of opinion they ought to make the discovery, and it will remain with another court to determine how far it is material.

Demurrer over-ruled.

The principal question in the cause coming on in the Court of C. B. Hil. 1782. it was determined there in favour of the plaintiff (at law) Fytche, that general bonds of resignation are legal, and are not a justification to the bishop in refusing to admit the clerk. A writ of error was immediately brought in B. R. where the judgment of the court of C. B. was affirmed. A writ of error was then brought in parliament, where, after long debate the judgment was reversed, 30th May, 1783. — See a very full report of what passed in the House of Lords, in Mr. Cunningham's Law of Simony. (4)

(3) See note (2) in the preceding page.

(4) And see 1 East's Rep. 487. Nevertheless, as to the principle, see the just observations of Lord Eldon C. 8 Ves. 61.

[ *99 ]

[*] CASSON against DADE, Clerk. [26 June.]

(Reg. Lib. 1780. A. fol. 604.)

Will attested by the witnesses where the testatrix could see them through the windows of her carriage and of the attorney's office, well attested. (1)

HONORA Jenkins having a power, though covert, to make a writing in the nature of a will, ordered the will to be prepared, and went to her attorney's office to execute it. Being asthmatical, and the office very hot, she retired to her carriage to execute the will, the witnesses attending her: after having seen the execution, they returned into the office to attest it, and the carriage was accidentally put back to the window of the office, through which, it was sworn by a person in the carriage, the testatrix might see what passed; immediately after the attestation, the witnesses took the will to her, and one of them delivered it to her, telling her they had attested it; upon which she folded it up

(1) See Shires v. Glasscock, 1 Ld. Ra. 507.; and Longford v. Eyre, 1 P. W. 749.

and

and put it into her pocket. — The Lord Chancellor inclined very strongly to think the will well executed, and the case of Shires v. Glasscock, 2 Salk. 688. [1 Lord Raym. 507.] 1 Eq. Abr. 403. was relied upon to that purpose. Mr. Arden pressed much for an issue; but, finding Lord Chancellor's opinion very decisive against him, declined it.

1781.

CASSON
against DADE.

HASSEL and another, Assignees of JACKSON, a Bankrupt, against SIMPSON.

[Vide S. C. Cooke B. L. p. 99. [88.] ]

JACKSON (a trader, afterwards a bankrupt,) made a conveyance to Simpson of a copyhold tenement, all his goods, chattels and personal estate, to indemnify the defendant, as surety for him. It had been sent to law, on an issue to try whether this was an act of bankruptcy. At the trial the judge directed the jury that it was. — It appeared upon the report, that Jackson continued in credit three years after the conveyance, and it was not stated that he was indebted to any other creditor at the time. The jury found that it was an act of bankruptcy.

Upon a petition for a new trial, Mr. Madocks cited Ryal v. Rowles, 1 Vesey, 348. It is not insisted upon here, on the ground of his continuing in possession, 1 Jac. 1. c. 15. — Worsley v. Demattos, 1 Bur. 467. — Twyne's case, 3 Co. Rep. 80. There the possession was fraudulent. This act was not upon the eve, or in contemplation of bankruptcy. — It was done as a contract of indemnity, not a security for a former debt; and the person continued in credit three years.

[*] Mr. Howorth, on the same side, cited Wilson v. Day, 2 Bur. 827. Linton v. Bartlet, 3 Wils. 47. Law v. Skinner, 2 Blackst. Rep. 996. If the conveyance of all is only to secure a small value, it is not an act of bankruptcy. It is not stated here, that he was indebted to others at the time. He was worth more than would pay this and all the other creditors. The distinction is, that the creditor could not retain more than would satisfy his own debt.

Mr. Bearcroft (for the assignees.) — “A fraudulent grant or conveyance, whereby the creditors are defeated or delayed,” constitutes an act of bankruptcy. Every conveyance which is fraudulent is an act of bankruptcy. This was a fraud upon the bankrupt laws. A conveyance of all the property is, prima facie, an act of bankruptcy.

Lord Chancellor. — There is not a syllable of any other debt in the report. It must be taken that he was in full credit, and fully solvent.

Mr. Bearcroft. — Still creditors would be delayed, as the mortgagee might take possession of the whole personal estate when he would. It must be held fraudulent on account of his right of entry, and was considered so in Worsley v. Demattos. Law v. Skinner is a case in point.

Lord Chancellor. — It comes to this, that a person worth six times the sum borrowed, and no creditor having a right attached, mortgages his whole estate. The bankruptcy was on a debt contracted afterwards. It is not an act of bankruptcy, but a fraudulent act, within the description of the statute. To make an act of bankruptcy, the creditor must be defeated or delayed by the act. This deed does not create an incapacity of paying his debts. In order to declare him a bankrupt, I must consider the simple case, without any fact to prove fraud, as in itself sufficient to constitute an act of bankruptcy.

(1) See Tappenden v. Burges, 4 East's Rep. 230. ; and Newton v. Chantler, 7 East. 138. ; and see the principal case in Cooke's B. L. 99. (6th edit.) and [88] former edit. Et vide ibid. 100. and [89.] &c. &c.

A conveyance of all (1) a trader's goods, (he being solvent at the time, and continuing so for 3 years after), held by L. C. not an act of bankruptcy, and a new trial ordered, the jury on the first having found him a bankrupt. On the new trial, and a case reserved and argued in B. R. determined to be an act of bankruptcy. (1) 1781.

[ *100 ]

HASSEL
against SIMPSON.

Petition granted, and a new trial ordered; which came on at the Lent Assizes, 1783, where a case was reserved for the opinion of the court of K. B. It was argued in Michaelmas Term following, and again in Hilary, 1784, when the Court held the assignment to be an act of bankruptcy. These arguments, with the judgment of the Court of K. B. are reported by Mr. Douglas, in the second edition of his Reports, p. 89.†

† See this case also, 1 Cooke's Bankrupt Laws, p. 110. (2d edit.) [and 99. in the 6th edit.] Also ibid. p. 111. the case of Kettle and others, assignees of Ewing v. Hamond, accordingly [p. 100. 6th edit.]

[ *101 ]

[S. C. on appeal
Dom. Proc.
1 Bro. P. C.
396. octavo ed.
quod vide.]

Committee of a voluntary society entering into agreements with tradesmen,
for the whole,
sufficient to make them parties to a bill, and not necessary to include all the subscribers. (1)

[*] CULLEN against the Duke of QUEENSBERRY and others.

(Reg. Lib. 1780. A. fol. 559.)

BILL filed by the plaintiff against the Duke of Queensberry, Earl of Egremont, Lords Melburne, Maccartney, and Lucan, being the annual committee (at the time of the transaction) of the ladies' club, for money expended in the purchase of a house, furnishing and attending it, and other incidental expences. (2) At a meeting at Lord Melburne's, 24th March, 1775, at which about 100 members were present, they contracted with the plaintiff for the business to be done, which was the subject of this suit. The defendants, except Lord Maccartney, 29 April, 1775, subscribed an agreement with the plaintiff. Afterwards some part of the plan being varied, Lord Melburne, Lord Lucan, and Lord Maccartney, on behalf of themselves and the other subscribers, gave a letter of attorney to the plaintiff, to act for them, dated 1st May, 1775. The defendants now insisted that they were not personally liable to the plaintiff's demand, that all that was done was on account of the club, and that 60 persons who had subscribed 4000*l.* to purchase the equity of redemption of the house should all be made parties. For the plaintiff were cited Quintine v. Yard, 1 Eq. Abr. 74. Horsley v. Bell †, Chanc. 9th Feb. 1778. For the defendants, Knight

† As this was a case new in specie, and is not in print, (3) the Reporter has thought the following note of it would be agreeable to the reader.

[Plaintiff employed under several contracts by the acting commissioners under an act of parliament, to do certain work. The fund proving deficient, all the acting commissioners held personally answerable under a decree for an account.]

ther

(1) See the whole statement of the principal case, the decree, and the arguments upon the appeal, 1 Bro. P. C. 395. 403, 4.; and see per Lord Eldon C. on this case, in Lloyd v. Learing, 6 Ves. 777. Et vide Horsley v. Bell, Ambl. 770. cited above. As to the point of dispensing with numerous parties, where the ends of justice can be substantially answered by a sufficient number being before the Court, to represent the rights of all, see Wych v. Meal, 3 P. W. 310.; Lloyd v. Learing, 6 Ves. 773. 778, 9.; Buckley v. Cater (before Lord Thurlow), stated from R. L. in Pearce v. Piper, 17 Ves. 11. 15, 16.; Adair v. New River Company, 11 Ves. 429. &c.; Good v. Blewit, 13 Ves. 397.; Cockburn v. Thompson, 16 Ves. 321. 328. &c. with the various references.

Moffat v. Farquarson, post. 2d vol. 338. was therefore clearly wrong, and has been repeatedly over-ruled by the above cases: especially by Good v. Blewit, ubi supra; Chancey v. May, there cited, p. 400. &c.; and Buckley v. Cater, ubi supra.

(2) The plaintiff charged by his bill, "that he could not discover the several members of the club, and procure a remedy against them, as they were very numerous, and many of them totally unknown to him." R. L. and 1 Bro. P. C. 400. Tomlin's edition.

(3) Since reported, Ambl. 770.

v. Knight,

v. Knight, 3 Wms. 331. [*] (see also the note on that case). It stood over, Lord Chancellor shewing however an opinion against defendants.

19th

1781.

CULLEN
against the Duke of QUEENSBERRY.

[ *102 ]

ther the defendants were personally liable, the defendants contending that they were exercising a public trust, and that the credit was given to the undertaking itself, not personally to them, that the remedy was therefore in rem. Secondly, Whether all who had been present at any of the meetings, and had signed some, but not all the orders, were liable as to all the orders, or only as to those which they had respectively signed. Thirdly, Whether the plaintiff was right in filing his bill in this court, or his remedy was merely at common law.

The Lord Chancellor, considering this as a new case, and of considerable importance to gentlemen who act as trustees in navigation, turnpike, and other bills, was assisted by Mr. Justice Gould, and Mr. Justice Ashhurst. At the end of the argument, Mr. Justice Gould cited the case of Melchart and others v. Halsey and others, executors, C. B. 3 Wils. 149.

Ashhurst, Justice.—The principal question is, whether the defendants are liable in their private capacities, or the plaintiff has given credit to the fund. I think the defendants are personally liable; it would be hard that the plaintiff, who has done the work at a reasonable price, without any extraordinary profit, should have no remedy. If he has not, the commissioners, by appointing a clerk to act for them, might deprive every particular labourer of any remedy, except against the fund, which would be absurd. As to the commissioners, their situation is very different; they may have an interest of some sort or other in the undertaking; they have it in their power to borrow money on a mortgage of the tolls, and know the extent of their credit, which the plaintiff cannot. Various arguments have been made use of, in favour of the commissioners, from the clauses in the act of parliament, but they do not apply. It is said they have a judicial power with respect to the property of others, but the power in the clause seems more to be ministerial than judicial, as the jury are to assess the value, and the commissioners are merely to give judgment according to that assessment. Another clause has been cited, that where any damage has been done by the default of the commissioners, the jury are to enquire into the damage, and the persons injured, if not paid in a given time, are empowered to appoint receivers to the tolls; but this clause relates to consequential damage merely, and is an accumulative remedy. Another argument has been drawn from the plaintiff's declaration, given in evidence, that he was so well satisfied of the success of the undertaking, that he only desired money to carry on the work, and a bare subsistence, and would lend the rest on the tolls; but the contrary inference is to be drawn from him: for if it was to be understood that, in a bad event, he was to have nothing, it would be a strange declaration. As to the hardships of the case, they are nothing like so great on one side as the other. The commissioners have their remedy upon the monies subscribed, and not paid in; for, though there is no summary method of enforcing the payment of them, yet they certainly have a remedy, and there has been sufficient subscribed, so that they have only the trouble of collecting it. As to the second question, this is one general work, though there are several contracts with the workmen for different parts, and by different sets of commissioners. What is done by the several sets of commissioners is a ratification of acts done before, in the prosecution of one general design. Even criminally, persons acting in one general design will be liable, though they are never proved to have been all together, and that, as being a criminal, is much a stronger case. Thirdly, As to its being in equity, it may certainly be done with much less difficulty here.

Gould, Justice.—I concur with my brother Ashhurst in the opinion he has given. The engineer is to be appointed by the commissioners, who must give effect and essence to every act: they are therefore to employ workmen, and to pay those workmen. They were to take care to have money to pay their workmen: then are the workmen to lose by their inattention? It is the same as if they had advanced money to their treasurer to pay the workmen. The law raises an assumpsit to those who have done the meritorious act. 2. Then there is not so much difficulty, as novelty, in this case. It is like a partnership: they who, at any time, have acted, have undertaken a partnership. I should have been of opinion, that an action at law would have lain against any one of them, and that he must have sought his remedy against the others. Those who come in at any subsequent time affirm the former acts. It is ratihabitio, and omnis ratihabitio retrahitur & mandato sive licentiæ æquiparatur (18 Vi. 156. cod. tit.) In an action brought by the paviours, for paving St. George's, Hanover-square, against the clerk of the commissioners, C. B. gave a rule to inspect the commissioners books, in order to discover their names, that they might be made parties. I am therefore of opinion, that all the commissioners who have acted are liable.

Lord Chancellor.—The first question is, whether the plaintiff's demand is singly in rem, or the commissioners have rendered themselves, personally, liable. An engineer is appointed and authorized to make contracts. On whose behalf? On the behalf of those 1781.

CULLEN
against the Duke of QUEENSBERRY.
[ *103 ]

[*] 19th July, 1781. The objection was over-ruled, and a decree for the plaintiff.†

those who appointed him, or the credit of the act of parliament? Who would make a contract on the credit of tolls, which it is in the power of the commissioners to raise or not at pleasure? Then, upon whose credit must the contract be? Certainly, that of the commissioners who act. It is their fault, if they enter into contracts, when they have not money to answer them. They have made themselves liable by their own acts. If the plaintiff's claim be in rem, how is he to come in? Not, surely, before the subscribers; and, if after them, he will stand a bad chance, if he is to wait to see whether there is any remainder. As to the declarations, they are only that in future he would lend: he is not bound by them. The commissioners are in no danger if they do not employ workmen when they have no money. If workmen were to trust for payment to the event, they would demand immense profits. Upon the second question, Whether the commissioners are answerable in totò, or only for their particular contracts, the Judges have given very strong reasons for their all being liable from the ratihabitis. Every man who comes in afterwards, approves the former acts; and if any one of the commissioners who had acted before disapproved the subsequent acts, he might have gone to a future meeting and protested against them. Thirdly, a question has been made at the bar, Whether the plaintiff was proper in this Court? The remedy is not so clearly at law, as for the Court to say he shall have none here, and dismiss the bill; and he must come here for the discovery. Decree for the plaintiff.

† The defendants appealed from this decree to the House of Lords, where the same was affirmed March 23, 1787, after a hearing of three days. [See the whole case, decree, and arguments, 1 Bro. P. C. 393. 403, 4. &c. 8vo. edit.]

Lincoln's-Inn
Hall.
[S. C. 2 Dick.
585.]

Between MARY GREEN, an Infant, by WILLIAM } Plaintiff.
GREEN, her Father and next Friend, - - }

Sir ROBERT PIGOT, Bart. and HUGH PIGOT, Esq. Defendants.

[July 24.]

(Original Decree, Reg. Lib. 1780. A. fol. 229.)

Legacy to a female infant, to be paid at 21, or marriage, with interest at 4 per cent. (but if she die before, to sink into the residue), ordered to be paid into the Bank, in order to secure the legacy; and, if greater interest made, that it should be for the benefit of the child. (1)

[ *104 ]

THE Right Honourable George late Lord Pigot, by his will dated the 16th day of April, 1775, devised to the defendants all his real estates, upon trust, to sell, and to stand possessed of the money to arise by such sale, and of the rents and profits in the mean time, and he also gave to them his personal estate upon trust, to pay his debts and funeral expences, and, subject thereto, to pay legacies, amounting together to 40,000*l.* and among them to the plaintiff a legacy of 5000*l.* and directed the said legacies to be paid to the respective persons to whom the same were given, being males, at their age of 21 [*] years, and being females at their ages of 21 years, or days of marriage, which should first happen, with interest in the mean time not exceeding 4*l.* per cent. per ann. and directed the interest to be paid by half yearly payments, or in such other manner as defendants should think proper. And he further directed, that in case all or any of the per-

(1) As to the appropriation, see Carey v. Askew, post. 2 vol. 58.; S. P. Cooper v. Douglas, 2 vol. 232.; where an executrix having made an appropriation without a decree, and the fund proving deficient, it was made good out of her estate. Hutcheson v. Hammond, 3 vol. 128. 144.; and Phipps v. Annesly, 2 Atk. 58. before Lord Hardwick C. An advantage accruing on an appropriation, under an order of the Court, the party interested held entitled to it. Burgess v. Robinson, 3 Meriv. 9, 10.

It seems the Court will not direct an appropriation, where the contingent benefit is to be raised out of real estate. See Gawler v. Standerwick, 2 Cox. Ch. Ca. 15. 18. So decided by Sir L. Kenyon, M. R. after great consideration.

As to the legatees having a lower rate of interest under an appropriation than that given under the will, as in the principal case, it seems to have been decided contra in later cases. See per Lord Eldon C. in Sitwell v. Bernard, 6 Ves. 543.

sons,

1781.

GREEN against Pigot.

sons, to whom the said legacies were therein directed to be paid, being females, should die under the age of 21 years, not having been married, or being males, should die under the age of 21 years, then the legacy to the persons so dying should not be paid, but should be considered as part of the residue of his personal estate, and gave the residue to the defendants, and his sister Margaret Fisher, share and share alike, and appointed the defendants executors. The testator died on the 11th May, 1777, leaving the defendant Sir Robert Pigot, his eldest brother and heir, and the defendants proved the will. On the 11th March, 1780, the plaintiff, by William Green, her father and next friend, filed her bill against the defendants, to have the legacy of 5000*l.* given to her by the said will, paid into the Bank of England, in the name of the Accountant General, with interest at the rate of 4*l.* per cent. per annum, from the time of the death of the testator till such payment should be made, to be placed out in proper funds, or to have the same secured for the benefit of the plaintiff, and that the interest of the legacy (subject to the plaintiff's maintenance and education) might accumulate for her benefit, till she should marry, or attain her age of 21 years, and in the mean time for a proper allowance out of the interest of her legacy, for her maintenance and education. The defendants by their answers admitted assets. The cause came on to be heard before the Master of the Rolls on the 31st of January last, when His Honour referred it to the Master to compute interest on the legacy of 5000*l.* at the rate of 4*l.* per cent. per ann. from the end of one year after the testator's death, and ordered that the produce should be laid out in the purchase of Bank 3 per cent. consolidated annuities, in the name of the Accountant General, upon the trusts, and subject to the contingencies in the testator's will. (2) From this decree at the Rolls, there was an appeal to the Lord Chancellor, who this day gave judgment thereupon.

Lord Chancellor. — The rule seems to have varied, different opinions having obtained at different times. Lord Hardwicke [*] seems sometimes to have thought that money to be raised should not be raised till the time of payment. Palmer v. Mason, 1 Atk. 505. Heath v. Perry, 3 Atk. 101. are both strong cases to shew his opinion to be so. (3) The later cases have been that the fund should be appropriated. — Ferrand v. Prentice, (4) 10th July 1750, before Sir Thomas Clark, E. Prentice gave to the plaintiff 200*l.* to be paid ten years after her death. Upon bill filed to admit assets and give security, or to pay the money into the Bank, it was decreed that the executor should do so, and that he should have the interest in the mean time, and, at the end of the ten years, the principal should be paid to the plaintiff. — Walker v. Cooke, 15th February, 1781, Legacy left to one to be paid at 24, the plaintiff being

[ *105 ]

(2) With a reference as to what was proper for the maintenance of the plaintiff for the time past, and to come. R. L.

(3) Lord Hardwicke however decided, and laid down a rule in favour of appropriation between the periods of the two determinations above referred to. See Phipps v. Annesley, 2 Atk. 57, 58. Note there Lord Hardwicke's marked expression, as to the charge being upon "personal estate;" and see a contrary decision, where a contingent benefit is to be raised out of real estate, in Gawler v. Standerwicke, 2 Cox's Ch. Ca. 15.

Sir Thomas Clarke M. R. directed that a party who had covenanted to pay a specific sum to B. if B. survived him, and who had aliened part of it, should pay it into court, if he did not give security forthwith. Flight v. Cook, 2 Ves. 619. And in Rattray v. Darley, 2 Ves. 424. and Suppl. to Ves. sen. 374. where the defendant had agreed "to leave by will" the value of the rents he had received from the plaintiff's estate, subject to specified deductions; Lord Hardwicke C. directed an immediate account, with a declaration, that the balance was to be considered as a debt from him to the plaintiff, "payable after his death."

(4) Ferrand v. Prentice, Ambl. 273. ; and 2 Dick. 568, 9. ; where another decision to the same effect is referred to.

1781.

GREEN against Piaor.

12, the father filed a bill that the legacy might be invested in the funds; and decreed so, though it was declared, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the money till 24. — Johnson v. De la Creuze, 17th July, 1749. — 2000*l.* left to the testator's daughter at 21, in default, to her child; if no child, to Mills, bill to secure the fund; the Court said a party so circumstanced might come here to have part of the personal estate secured for the legacy. In Pierce v. Taylor, 22d May 1778, the same was said to be the course of the Court. These cases go to prove, that where a legacy is to be so paid, it must be secured. I do not see a distinction as to its being contingent or merely future. If a legacy be payable at 21, and the child dies, his executor cannot claim till the time when the child would have arrived at 21, if the legacy does not bear interest, but, if it be with interest, he may claim immediately. (5) If it bears a less interest than the utmost use, the executor hath a right to the use of the money paying the modified interest. Chester v. Painter, 2 Wms. 335. Here, I do not incline to alter the decree at the Rolls. The legacy is to the child, payable at 21, with 4 per cent. interest, which is the ordinary interest given by the Court. If the interest were severed from the principal, I must order that to be secured. Giving interest even at 2*l.* per cent. vests the principal. Whether a legacy be payable at a fixed or a contingent future day, the effect is the same. I must secure the interest of the fund. If the interest was severed as an allowance, I must secure a fund equal to it. The Master of the Rolls has done right in ordering it to be laid out in the funds. But if it should produce more than 4*l.* per cent. who is to have the surplus? I may order it to be paid to the executor. — But should it [*] produce less, can I order the executor to make it up? No. — I think therefore the produce must be to the use of the infant. Decree affirmed. †

[ *106. ]

† [As to personal estate] see the case of Phipps v. Annesly, 2 Atk. 57, 58. [&c. ; but where to be raised out of land, it was held contra in] Gawler v. Standerwicke, Rolls, November 15, 1787, and 16 February, 1788. There legacies were given to infants out of land (charged generally with debts) payable at 21, with interest at 3 per cent. One of the infants dying before that age, Sir Lloyd Kenyon, after great consideration, decreed that the legacy lapsed [and that two other legacies, charged on the real estate only, given to two other infants (then living) at 21, were not raisable till that period. Lately reported in 2 Cox's Chan. Ca. 15.]

(5) See per Lord Loughborough C. in Crickett v. Dolby, 3 Ves. 16.

1781.

Between RICHARD DURNFORD, Esq.; and THOMAS LANE, RICHARD LANE, and ANN LANE, Infants, by the said RICHARD DURNFORD, their next Friend, - - - Plaintiffs.

In court,
Hilary Term,
1780.
Lincoln's-Inn-
Hall, 23d February, 1780, and 1st Aug.
1781.

THOMAS LANE and ANN his Wife, JOSEPH LANE, EDWARD TYSON, and JOHN HOLLIDAY, and JOHN PLAW, and WILLIAM ROBINSON, Assignees of the said Defendant THOMAS LANE a Bankrupt, - - - Defendants.

(Reg. Lib. 1780. A. fol. 574.)

UPON the marriage of Thomas Lane with Ann Bowyer, then an infant, articles were entered into for the settlement of her estates, by which it was covenanted that, upon her attaining her age of 21 years, the husband and wife and her mother should levy fines and settle the estate in trustees, (of whom the plaintiff Durnford was one,) to the use of the mother for life, remainder to the trustees to pay rents, &c. to the wife for her separate use during her coverture — remainder to the husband for life, remainder to the children of the marriage in such proportions as the wife should appoint, and, in default of appointment, share and share alike in tail general — remainder to such uses as the wife should appoint, and, in failure of appointment, part to her, and part to the mother in fee. The husband covenanted to permit the wife to enjoy the estates to her separate use, and that he would lay out 500*l.* and 1500*l.* to certain uses declared by the settlement. There were issue three children, who are plaintiffs. After the wife attained the age of 21 years, in 1773 the husband borrowed 4000*l.* of one Turle, and secured the same by a term carved out of this estate, and by a fine levied of the same; this money was afterwards paid, and the term assigned to Ann Langton (the mother), and Lane and his wife in order to merge it. In 1774 a recovery was suffered, the deed to lead the uses was to the [*] use of Ann Langton (the mother) for life — remainder to such uses as Thomas and Ann should appoint during Ann's life — remainder to Thomas Lane for life — remainder to such uses as Ann should by will appoint — remainder to Ann in fee, with a power of revocation. Lane and his wife, with the concurrence of Mrs. Langton the mother, mortgaged part of the premises for 3000*l.* to Borrel, and Thomas and William Holman, for a term; the remaining uses in the deed were the same as those in the Mortgages by husband and wife of the wife's estate to persons who had notice of a settlement made before the marriage, during the wife's infancy, ordered to be assigned to the trustee in the settlement, but the interest, during the life of husband and wife, to be applied to the payment of the mortgages, without prejudice to her remedy against the husband.

[As to what settlements made during the wife's infancy will bind her (1) Though a female infant is not bound by an agreement on marriage to settle her real estate, if she does not afterwards accede to it when of age, and after coverture, the husband shall never be permitted to aid her in defeating it; nor is her act during coverture effectual. (1)]

[ *107 ]

(1) See per Lord Eldon C. on the principal case, in Milner v. Lord Harewood, 18 Ves. 275. His Lordship agreed with Lord Thurlow's decision, and with that of Lord Northampton in Drury v. Drury, of which there is a valuable report from Lord N.'s MSS. 2 Eden's Ch. Ca. 39. &c.; against the decision of the House of Lords in that case, ibid. 60, postea, 4 vol. 505. note; et 3 Bro. P. C. 492. 8vo. edit. See and note the arguments and judgments accordingly. Vide also Clough v. Clough, stated post. 4 vol. 510. and reported 3 Wooddes. 453. n. See it also 5 Ves. 717. Vide also May v. Hook, postea, 112. note; and Hargr. Co. Litt. 246. a. note; Williams v. Williams, post. 152; Stecombe v. Glubb, post. 2 vol. 545.; Caruthers v. Same, 4 vol. 500.; Smith v. Smith, 5 Ves. 189.; Milner v. Lord Harewood, 18 Ves. 259. It seems therefore to be settled now (notwithstanding the reversal of Lord Northampton's decree in Dom. Proc.), that although a jointure made upon the marriage of a female infant, if competent and certain, will bind her; it operates by force of the statute; and that her estate, in any other case, will not be bound, although the articles or deed were made in consideration of the marriage, unless she assents to it after coverture. See 4 Cruise's Dig. 20. As to the personal estate of such an infant, vide 3 Atk. 613. et postea, 111.

1781.

DURNFORD
against
LANE.

deed to lead the uses of the recovery. These securities, by various assignments, came into the hands of the several defendants, Jos. Lane, Tyson and Holliday, against whom and the husband, his assignees (he having become bankrupt) and the wife, the plaintiff, the acting trustee, filed the present bill (making the other trustee a defendant) on the part of the children, praying that the articles previous to the marriage might be specifically carried into execution, or if they should not be held binding on the wife, that the husband might be decreed to be bound by the articles, and to make satisfaction, and charging notice of the articles upon the mortgagees.

Mr. Attorney General (Wedderburne) for the plaintiff (1st of February, 1780.) — The defendants insist that Mrs. Lane was not bound by the settlement made whilst she was an infant, but that, when she came of age, she might mortgage the estate. I do not know how far the Court will say she was at liberty to retract. The Court has determined that an infant is bound by a jointure, which must be upon the principle that all acts of infants are not void, but if the acts are for their benefit that they are bound. Though there is no case in the books, where the settlement has been said to bind against the will of the infant, yet there is none that the husband and wife can barr the settlement. In the case of Cannel v. Buckle, 2 Wms. 243. cited by Lord Hardwicke in Harvey v. Ashley, 3 Atk. 615. — Lord Chancellor Macclesfield said, “ That if a “ feme infant seised in fee, on a marriage, with the consent of her “ guardians, should covenant in consideration of a settlement to convey “ her inheritance to her husband; if this were done in consideration of “ a competent settlement, equity would execute the agreement, though “ no action would lie at law to recover damages.” Lord Hardwicke says of this case, “ This is going a great way, as it related to the in“ heritance of the wife; but yet there are cases where the Court will “ do it; as if the lands of the wife were no more than an adequate con“ sideration for the settlement that the husband makes, and after the “ marriage the [*] wife should die, and leave issue who would be inti“ tled to portions provided for them by the settlement, it would, in that “ case, be very reasonable to affirm that settlement.” There the supposition only is, that the settlement should be a proper one with respect to the husband. If the Court should be of opinion that a settlement, made with great consideration, should bind the infant, what inconvenience can that opinion be of to the infant, as, in order to bind, it must be a proper beneficial settlement? The only case in which the question can arise, is where the wife has been prevailed upon to join in supplying the husband’s extravagance. To deny it, is to say that her affection ought to expose her to ruin. The parties are bound, by their covenants, to prevent the destruction of the settlement; will the Court suffer the husband, against his covenant, to permit the wife to levy a fine or suffer a recovery? The Court certainly will not suffer the husband to defeat the settlement. In such a case, the trustees ought to file a bill to restrain the husband. If, in the present case, we fail in the main purpose, what remains of the estate must be settled agreeable to the articles. Where a husband articles for his wife, he must perform the covenant.

Mr. Kenyon on the same side. — It is of very little use to the parties to say, that whoever has taken any part of the management in this case has done wrong. The settlement took care enough of the wife. It was to her for life, to the husband for life, to the children as the wife should appoint, remainder to her in fee. The question is, whether this shall be suffered to be destroyed by those who knew of the settlement? The only ground is, that she was not of an age to bind herself. If this rule ought ever to be relaxed, this is the case where it should be so. Dower arises

[ *108 ]

arises out of the marriage contract, Bracton, 2 Book 39. If parties under age may contract matrimony, they ought to be permitted to enter into the other parts of the contract. This is the reason of Drury v. Drury (2), (Earl of Buckinghamshire v. Drury, 5 Brown's Parl. Cases, 570.) (3) that the incidental part of the contract shall bind her though an infant; the opinion of Lord Northington, that she was not bound, was over-ruled in the House of Lords.

Lord Chancellor. — There it was taken up thus; marriage may be between minors, — that dower attaches upon marriage, the [*] act having said nothing as to the majority of the wife; the act spoke of her when she could make the contract.

Mr. Kenyon. — It was in argument, that, if she could enter into the principal contract, she might into that which was auxiliary. The act of an infant is not void if under seal. Contracts, such as apprenticeship, which are for the benefit of the infant, are not void, but voidable. In the case of Zouch v. Parsons, B. R. 1765, 3 Bur. 1794. the acts of infants are gone into. If the acts of infants are such as are reasonable for them to do, and, a fortiori, if they are part of a contract which the infant may make, it gives room for the observation of Lord Macclesfield in Cannel v. Buckle, and Lord Hardwicke's, in his judgment in Harvey v. Ashley, which Mr. Yorke (in Drury v. Drury) said was upon great consideration, and from a written argument. If those opinions are supported by the reason of the case, they will have their effect upon this decree. — But if the agreement is not to be specifically performed against the wife, yet against the husband, father, and trustee, who were parties, we shall have satisfaction. In Mansel v. Mansel, 2 Wms. 678. and Garth v. Cotton, 3 Atk. 751. trustees are answerable for breach of trust. In Townshend v. Lawton, 2 Wms. 379. though the Court would not compel the trustee to join, it decreed a specific performance of the father's covenant.

Mr. Lloyd on the same side. — The fine and recovery of the wife, when of age, will operate to make good the former transaction, therefore will let in the first settlement, and enure to the uses of it. I cannot find a case where the first deed was that of an infant, but this would apply to all the adult parties. Then it is out of the power of the parties to appoint new uses, the children who are materially interested not being able to join.

Mr. Kenyon cited Stapilton v. Stapilton, 1 Atk. 2. to prove this was so at law.

Mr. Lloyd cited Pye v. George, 1 Wms. 128. that trustees are answerable for a breach of their trust, also Arnott v. Biscoe, 1 Vesey, 95.

Mr. Kenyon. — In Zouch v. Parsons, Lord Mansfield concluded what he said upon the acts of infants with these words, [*] “in one word, “the privilege of infants is to be used as a shield, not as a sword; it “never is to be the cover of fraud.”

Lord Chancellor. — The part cited from Lord Mansfield is a display of principles from which to form a rule, but is not itself a rule. The question is, Whether an infant's contract for marriage binds the lands to all intents; would the settlement prevent her from settling on a future marriage, though there should be a child? Whatever would become of it after the death of the husband, could she avoid it during the marriage? Here the husband bound himself to dispose in a particular manner of the estate which was in him; the question is, whether it would be possible that the assent of the wife could ever go to moving the estate out of him.

1781.

DURNFORD
against LANE.

[ *109 ]

[ *110 ]

(2) 2 Eden's Ch. Ca. 39 to 73.

(3) 3 Bro. P. C. 492. 8vo. edition.

1781.

DURNFORD
against
LANE.

Mr. Kenyon. — By the fine, there were vested interests in the children, which could not be conveyed without their consent. The fine will let in the former settlement. That point will be of great importance if it should go to a court of law.

Mr. Mansfield for the defendants (8th February, 1780.) — The first great point is to have the articles carried into execution, as binding upon the wife, as well as the husband. The general answer is, that the articles were made when she was an infant, and, therefore, are not binding upon her. This woman, being a party, when she came of age levied a fine to the mortgagees, with her husband, by which the estates were as effectually conveyed as if she had been sole. — There is no difference between the conveyance of a married woman by fine, and that of a feme sole. The conveyance was her's, and the land passed from her, she being examined. Then it remains to be seen, whether there is any thing at law, or here, by which this conveyance is to be avoided. There is no rule that such a covenant as this shall bind an infant. The distinction of void, or voidable, is immaterial here, as applied to the acts of infants. The distinction is between conveyances effectuated by delivery, and those which are effectual without; the former are voidable, but there must be an act done to avoid. The word voidable is absurdly used as to those which are to be avoided by plea. The distinction is as between the infant's bond and a lease; the first cannot be confirmed, the latter may. The settlement was not binding, unless there is something in this covenant to make it so in this court, as it is not so at law. I do not know that the circumstance [*] of marriage, or of consent of parents, will make the engagement binding upon infants. This is broken into in contracts for settlements in certain cases, and none is pretended to be cited as to real estates being bound by such contracts. The dictum in Cannel v. Buckle is no decision, and had nothing to do with the case then before the Court. There were very great doubts among the judges, in the case of Drury v. Drury, as to its barring dower.

[ *111 ]

Lord Chancellor. — Drury v. Drury was a question at law, which Cannel v. Buckle was not. If Lord Hardwicke's opinion, in Harvey v. Ashley, be right, he has determined the point in Cannel v. Buckle.

Mr. Mansfield. — In Harvey v. Ashley, Lord Hardwicke seems to think, in certain cases, such a covenant might be binding. I suppose he meant, if, after the death of the wife the issue should dispute the settlement made upon the part of the husband, that such issue, taking under the settlement, should be bound by it.

Lord Chancellor. — That would be a case of election.

Mr. Mansfield. — Harvey v. Ashley draws the distinction between the personal property and the real; and that, in the latter case, an act of parliament is necessary. It is binding as to personal property, because otherwise the whole would be the husband's, and all the wife gets is clear gain, and for her benefit.

Lord Chancellor. — In Harvey v. Ashley, Lord Chancellor laid it down that the children were purchasers both from the father and the mother, and that the property should, therefore, be bound.

Mr. Mansfield. — That case was of personal property only. It has never been supposed a † young man would be bound by such a covenant. All the reasons in Drury v. Drury will apply equally to a man as a woman. No difference, from the assent of parents and guardians, is taken notice of by the statute of uses.

Lord Chancellor. — I find it still a very difficult thing to distinguish between its binding personal property, which never can become that of the husband, and real property. On the [*] other hand I cannot conceive that the parent's or guardian's consent can make an essential difference in the contract.

† Sed vide post. Slocombe v. Glubb, vol. 2. p. 545.

Mr. Mansfield. — Something has been said about late cases, I shall only mention them to lay them out of the present case. Trustees being bound as to breaches of their trust, and purchasers, with notice of trusts, being bound by them, do not apply to this case, if I am right in the main point. He then cited Nightingale v. Earl Ferrers, 3 Wms. 206.

Lord Chancellor put the case, that the new declaration of uses had been to the husband in fee, and the issue had brought their bill that he should stand as a trustee to the uses of the settlement; would not the Court have held him bound so to do? Then the other parties, knowing the interests they have taken, call upon him to misapply those uses.

Mr. Mansfield. — In the fine, though the husband must join, the estate passes only from her.

Lord Chancellor. — They take the husband's estate as well as her's, the husband is an active party in making the conveyance. Where the wife levies the fine without the husband, it operates as a conveyance, but not as an estoppel to the husband.

Mr. Mansfield. — It was argued that Your Lordship would decree the husband to do what was impossible, and Townshend v. Lawton was cited: in this case it is absolutely impossible for Lane to procure his wife to undo her fine and take back the estate. In Hall v. Hardy, 3 Wms. 187. and several other cases, the husband has been decreed to procure his wife to levy a fine, because it is presumed he had her consent before he entered into the covenant; but if she refused, he must be excused.

Mr. Brown (on the same side) cited Lucy v. Moor, 1740, (3 Brown's Parl. Cas. 514.)

Upon this case coming on again, before the reply, Mr. Madocks cited Pearson v. Pearson in this Court, in 1770, before the Lord Commissioners, and May v. Hook †, 1773, before Lord Bathurst.

† May v. Hook. — Three infant sisters being joint tenants of the premises in question, and having a leasehold estate vested in them absolutely, by articles previous to the marriage of Ann, one of them, with the defendant, dated 28th Oct. 1761, it was covenanted that her interest in the leasehold should be assigned absolutely to the husband, and her third part of the freehold should be settled to the use of the husband for life, remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to the wife for life, remainder to the first and other sons, &c.; and the husband covenanted, if Ann should survive him, or have children who should survive him, to pay to the trustees 300*l.* (a sum very inadequate to her fortune), to pay the interest to his wife for life, and, after her decease, to divide the principal among the children. The marriage took place: Ann had a son, and died an infant. The question was, whether this covenant had severed the joint-tenancy, and held, by Lord Bathurst, that it had not. — In giving judgment on this case, Lord Bathurst cited Pearson v. Pearson, stating it particularly; there Mary Elliot, the intended wife, together with her guardians, covenanted, when she should come of age, (if the marriage should take effect,) to surrender her copyhold estates, for the purpose of raising younger children's portions; but if there should be no younger children, the whole to remain for the sole use and benefit of the plaintiff, the intended husband, Bradshaw Pearson. The plaintiff, who was tenant for life of his own family estate, with a power of jointuring, agreed to settle an annuity of 500*l.* a year upon the wife as a jointure, and 130*l.* per annum more if there should be no children, with a power in that case to dispose of 1500*l.* The marriage took effect, and the wife died at the age of 20, leaving issue only one son, the defendant, against whom the plaintiff filed the bill, to carry these articles into execution. The bill was dismissed; but there should seem to be some ground for the Attorney General's observation upon this case: for a very accurate note of Lord Bathurst's judgment, in May v. Hook, with which the Reporter has been favoured, states His Lordship, after having cited the case, and seeming to rely upon it, as saying (from the recollection of some circumstances) that authority was of little weight in the case before him.

1781.

DURNFORD
against LANE.

[*112]

[Vide the report of this case
Hargr. Co. Litt.
246. a. note.]

1781.

DURNFORD
against LANE.

[ *113 ]

[ *114 ]

[*] Mr. Attorney General in reply. — Pearson v. Pearson was a bill by the father against the son as heir at law to his mother, for fulfilment of the marriage contract with his wife, for a surrender of a copyhold estate, the mother dying an infant. The circumstances of the family were such, that it was better the estate should be with the son than the father, and therefore the case did not go further, though there was a strong intimation that it would, and the bill was filed upon a very direct opinion of Mr. Yorke's. The case of Lucy v. Moor does not go on the ground of the infant not being bound, but on the other circumstances of the case, as a case of election. In Drury v. Drury, there were no authorities to be found, and so the argument went upon the cases of obligations of infants. The acts of infants are not void, but voidable: this is a clear proposition. Therefore the question is, whether the Court will not restrain the infant, in certain circumstances, from avoiding the act done during infancy. I am not sure an infant might not make a feoffment with livery. The estate would then be vested in the feoffee; the question is, whether the Court would not on circumstances restrain her. There are circumstances, in which persons shall be restrained from avoiding acts done in their [*] infancy, as by acceptance, when adult, of rent under a lease granted during infancy. The general proposition is, that the acts are voidable, and then, in certain cases, the infant may be restrained from avoiding them. An infant may contract for necessaries — so for tuition — though this is not decided, yet there are very considerable opinions upon the subject. It is clear from Drury v. Drury, that an infant may release a right of dower. — Dower is as much a right, upon marriage, as any she is born to. The case of a jointure here stands upon the contract, not upon the statute; in copyhold estates, which are not within the statute, an infant is bound as to her free bench, Walker v. Walker, 1 Vesey, 54. If an infant heiress contracts to settle a fortune upon marriage, the Court will carry that contract into execution, if the settlement be for the infant's advantage; the Court therefore thinks it open to it to decide upon the property: and, if the contract is made without the intervention of the Court, the Court will interfere and prevent it from being rescinded by the parties when of age. It is not therefore restrictive upon the man only, and in respect that the woman's fortune would become the husband's. In that view it could not affect a possibility. In Harvey v. Ashley, part of Mrs. Harvey's fortune was 5000*l.* in case she survived her father and mother, and that there was no other child. The parents survived Mr. Pitfield (her first husband) (4) and no act of his could have affected that sum, yet the Court held that as much bound by the contract, as her money-fortune. It is there decided, that, in the case of personal property to any amount, there are circumstances in which an infant, contracting on account of marriage, will be barred from rescinding the act. Then the question is, whether it is so as to real estate. — Why should not the Court act in the same manner as to real estate, unless where it wants jurisdiction, as in cases where the ecclesiastical court has it? Here if it fails as to lands, it is because the Court has not jurisdiction over the subject-matter. Therefore if the estate be in trustees, who can convey, and, by their acts, bind all the world except the infant, this Court would say the infant should be restrained from avoiding the estate at law.

[ *115 ]

Lord Chancellor. — A great deal of the argument has gone to prove, that, at law, the estate passed: — Unless there be a difference of authority under which two deeds to lead the uses are executed, the first deed must bind the estate. To come here you [*] must shew that the first deed was not intended to pass the estate, but that the second was.

(4) This is not correct.

The difference between real and personal estate goes further than Mr. Attorney will allow. The power is in personam equally as to both; there is no actual jurisdiction as to personal estate; as to that, the Court can only bind the person. The difference the Court went upon in Harvey v. Ashley was, that the settlement may bind not only the property in possession, but that in contingency also. The authorities are, that in Cannel v. Buckle, and that of Lord Hardwicke. The difficulty with me is, that the husband contracted, on the marriage, that the wife should levy a fine to given uses. It is a proposition not to be controverted, that, if the estate had been afterwards conveyed to the husband under the fine, he would be a trustee to those uses, and that it would not have been competent to any to treat with him, but they would become trustees. Therefore the argument is, that although the wife could not give it to him, yet that she could sell it for his benefit, and that purchasers might buy it of him, because, though she could not give it to him, she could give it to the vendee. This brings it to a very short point indeed — It seems a very subtle line. The husband, in direct contradiction to all which bound him, sells the estate. I confess I have doubts upon this doctrine, in a case never decided. If the contracts are fair ones, I wonder at the party's rashness. I should be sorry to find myself unable to set right what is clearly wrong, though I should be sorry to lay down a principle, the effect of which I could not foresee, and which might draw on inconveniencies in future. If I can set it aside, it must be upon some general principle, which will support itself, and will apply to the case.

It stood over.

On the 23d of February it stood in the paper at Lincoln's-Inn-Hall, for judgment.

Lord Chancellor. — To decree a specific performance of the articles, the Court must carry the principle to this length, that a wife making a wise settlement in her infancy, on the marriage, without any estate settled on the other side, is bound by the agreement, and that, even if the husband had died, she must have continued to be bound. I cannot think an infant, only covenanting as to her estate, can be bound. If she is so at all, it must be in reference to her marriage. No body has yet said that, merely by [*] its being upon marriage, she is bound, but it is said, that upon a competent settlement she would be bound. I think the Court should not go into the competence of the settlement. I must lay down that every settlement shall be considered as good, till shewn to be fraudulent. The cases have not gone so far, nor does my opinion. If she had a settlement from her husband, and, after his death, she had taken possession of it, I think she would be bound, by the equity arising from her own act. I say this in deference to Cannel v. Buckle, and Harvey v. Ashley. I think she is not bound, unless she has availed herself of the settlement of the husband. In this opinion, I cannot say the whole property is bound, or decree the articles to be specifically performed. Then as to the second part of the prayer of the bill, that the husband may be decreed to be bound by the settlement, and to make satisfaction — It will require some special directions, as to the parts sold by the husband. It was not competent to the husband, he being party to the settlement, to sell and create new uses to the purchasers. The husband and wife have joined in selling the estate, for which the husband has been paid. Suppose an annuity had been granted by them of 100*l.* per annum, for 2000*l.* the feoffee would be declared to be a trustee to the uses of the settlement, but to get his money back again from the husband. When the husband takes it (if the wife was to convey it to him) it would be contrary to his conscience to take it otherwise than subject to the uses of the settlement. If the wife was to hold out, and survived the husband, she might dispose of 1781.

DURNFORD
against LANE.

[ *116 ]

1781.

DURNFORD
against
LANE.

[ *117 ]

of the estate, but the husband and wife, together, could not do any act to dispose of it differently from the first settlement. Whatever the disposition of the cause may be at present, I should be sorry if it did not go further. Mr. Mansfield says, that if you disable the disposition in favour of the husband, you oblige her to dispose of the estate against her will. I say the wife has manifested her intention by the fine and recovery, to give it to her husband: then, she having exercised her power, he stands in the circumstance of taking an estate for his own benefit, contrary to his covenant to take it for the uses expressed in the settlement, and therefore he shall be a trustee to those uses. The question is, whether he could, in conscience, take it to other uses. It is extremely difficult to say, that, although he could not take it to his own use, that he could do it by selling it, and putting the money into his own pocket. If the estate was sold for a valuable consideration, he would be [*] bound to apply the money to the uses in the settlement. The mortgagees say they purchased of the wife as well as the husband, and therefore, though they knew of the settlement, they have dealt fairly. The answer is, the money coming to him is bound by the uses, he not being able, in conscience, to take it otherwise. Those who claim under the husband must take the estate subject to the same uses, unless the wife's joining makes them not take under the husband. His Lordship pronounced no decree.

August 1st, 1781. This cause stood again on the paper for judgment.

Lord Chancellor. — The question is, whether the use declared by the infant is a valid use. The mortgagees have got an interest in the estate of the husband, and also of the wife, but no further. The general object of the settlement was the fortune of the wife. The first mortgagees had notice of the original settlement; Holliday had no notice, and is the only party in that situation. The question is, what ought to be done, under these circumstances, — great doubt has occurred upon it, whether in case of a settlement by an infant, the consideration is, or is not, sufficient to raise an use at law. — The cases are Cannel v. Buckle, before Lord Macclesfield, — Harvey v. Ashley, before Lord Hardwicke. It seems by the articles the estate was completely vested, not capable of being divested by any of the subsequent transactions. Those transactions are quoad the husband, contrary to all conscience, and ought not to be suffered. — The sole object was to raise money for him. The mortgagees are so much affected by notice, as to be incapable of deriving any benefit from the estate.

[ *118 ]

His Lordship decreed that Holliday should be paid his costs, which should be added to the plaintiff Durnford's, and paid in the same manner with his; that defendants [Holliday,] Tyson, and Joseph Lane, should assign the several terms to plaintiff Durnford, to the uses in the settlement, the Master to tax plaintiff's costs, as between attorney and client, the rents and profits of the estates comprised in the securities to be first employed in payment of those costs, and then during the life of Thomas and Ann Lane, the rents and profits of the 1000 years' term to be applied in the payment of the interest of the 1000*l.* paid by defendant Joseph Lane to Holliday, and of the 2000*l.* to Tyson, and then in sinking the principal of those two sums rateably between them, but the payment by Joseph [*] Lane [to Tyson] to be without prejudice to his remedy against Thomas Lane, and to both without prejudice (in case defendant Ann should survive her husband) to any claim she might make against the estate [of Thomas Lane], for any loss her estate may suffer by such application. [A receiver was appointed; and it was declared that] after the death of Thomas and Ann the plaintiff Durnford [was] to hold the estate subject to the trusts in the settlement, [and execute such conveyances as should be necessary to effectuate the same, &c. — R. L.] 1781.

PERKINS against BAYNTON.

(Reg. Lib. 1780. B. fol. 365.)

Lincoln's Inn-
Hall, Aug. 13.

IN this case, which stood this day for judgment, several points were made which all turned upon the special circumstances, except the following, — Frances Nott gave by her will “to Stukely Baynton and “William Baynton 1500*l.* jointly and between them.” William Baynton surviving Stukely, insisted that this joint legacy survived to him, and that he was intitled to the whole.

As to this Lord Chancellor said. — William Baynton, in the life of Stukely Baynton, brought his bill for the moiety of this money. — It is contended, that severed the joint-tenancy. I do not know that a demand will sever a joint-tenancy. (2) There is no case that comes up to this, that where a sum of money is left as a legacy it is a joint tenancy (3); Warner v. Hone, 1 Eq. Abr. 292. is directly to the contrary. (4) So is Saunders v. Ballard, 3 Chan. Rep. 214. (5) for where money is given to two it should be several to them. There is no case of a residue given to persons, not executors, where they have been considered as joint-tenants (6), Cox v. Quantock, 1 Ch. Ca. 238. — and in the case of executors, 2 Ch. Ca. 64. (Draper's case), Lord Chancellor says, “the survivor must carry all, since the judges will have it so,” which Nelson, the reporter, says was Lord Nottingham's very expression. (7) The one word here is “jointly,” the other “between them;” they must be so put together as to effectuate the intent. In Haws v. Haws, 9 Atk. 524. it is laid down that if words are so inconsistent that they cannot stand or be reconciled together, the Court must reject those words which are least consistent with the intention of the testator. The intent here was to give to each an usable interest, as it is a sum of money which resolves between them. William Baynton's petition of re-hearing was therefore as to this point dismissed.

A money legacy to two (not executors) jointly and between them,—is not a joint-tenancy; but is a tenancy in common, the words meaning the same as “to be equally divided between them.”

(1)

(1) Ettricke v. Ettricke, Amb. 656. S. P. And see Jolliffe v. East, post. 3d vol. 25. In considering the above report of the principal case, great care must be taken to distinguish the points determined from the dicta mistakenly attributed to Lord Thurlow as to the decision. The words “between them,” clearly over-ruled the inconsistent one “jointly.” This being so determined, rendered the only other point, as to actual severance by demand, nugatory. The Report is evidently wrong as to the dicta stated, that a legacy “to A. and B.” will not be a joint tenancy. And as to Warner v. Hone, cited to illustrate it, see per M. R. in Campbell v. Campbell, post. 4 vol. 18.; and in Morley v. Bird, 8 Ves. 630.; and per Lord Thurlow himself in Jolliffe v. East, post. 3 vol. 27. See also 15 Ves. 371. As to the general law, and the distinctions on the subject, see 2 Roper on Legacies, 259 to 287. and Jackson v. Jackson, on appeal, before Lord Eldon C. 9 Ves. 591, &c. And note His Lordship's observations on the principal case, ibid. p. 598. See also 10 Ves. 598.; Crooke v. De Vandes, 11 Ves. 330.; Swaine v. Burton, 15 Ves. 365.; Acherman v. Burrows, 3 Ves. & B. 54.; and Lashbrooke v. Cock, 2 Meriv. 70.

(2) As to a severance to be implied from circumstances, see Jackson v. Jackson, 9 Ves. 591. &c.; and in Crooke v. De Vandes, 11 Ves. 330.

(3) See the references to the contrary in note (1).

(4) Warner v. Hone does not support the position. The words there were, “equally amongst them.” See the Reports in 1 Eq. Ca. Ab. and in Prec. Ch. 332.

(5) This case was over-ruled by Sir Joseph Jekyll in Cray v. Willis. See post. 3 vol. 18. which is now good law. See the references in note (1).

(6) See vide contrā, 9 Ves. 197. 204. & 598.

(7) See per Lord Eldon C. 9 Ves. 597, 8.

1781.

[ *119 ]

[*] MICHAELMAS TERM,

22 Geo. 3. 1781.

DAWSON against KILLET.

(No Entry.)

R. M. by will gave an estate to his wife for life, and, if there should be no issue between them, to defendant, charged with two sums to be paid to M. B. and W. R. afterwards M. B. being dead, by codicil he ordered the legacy to her to be paid to W. R. and A. B. W. R. died, living the wife, the charge was vested and transmissible to his representatives. (1)

[ *120 ]

RICHARD Mitchell, M. D. by will of the 18th January, 1766, gave the premises to his wife for life, and, if there should be no issue between them, then to the defendant, charged with 100*l.* to William Ranscombe, and 100*l.* to Martha Ball, to be paid in six months after the decease of his wife. Afterwards, Martha Ball being dead, the testator by a codicil, reciting that she was so, gave 50*l.* of that 100*l.* to William Ranscombe, and 50*l.* thereof to Anselm Beaumont, Esq.; to be paid at the time when Martha Ball would have been entitled to receive it, if she had lived; William Ranscombe survived the testator, but died in the life-time of the wife, making the plaintiffs his executors, who, after the decease of testator's wife, filed this bill for the sums of 100*l.* and 50*l.*

Mr. Scott (for the plaintiffs). — The interests were vested at the death of the testator, and the payment postponed, only on account of the circumstances of the estate. The interest in the money was as present an interest as Killet's reversionary estate. This does not impeach the rule of Bond v. Brown, 2 Ch. Ca. 165, or of Paulet v. Paulet, 1 Vern. 204, 321. — In this case, the interest vested, and the payment was postponed, not on account of the person to take, but that the wife might enjoy the whole during her life. As the land is charged, the charge must be paid. The cases where the rule applies as to the money sinking are in respect to portions only. Buckley v. Stanley, cited in King v. Withers, Forrest. 119. — Cooper v. Scott, 3 Wms. 119. — Wilson v. Spencer, 3 Wms. 172. — King v. Withers, Forrest. 117. — 3 Wms. 414. — The case of Hall v. Terry, 1 Atk. [*] 502. is much mis-stated. (2) The distinction is recognized as a good one. Lowther v. Condon, 2 Atk. 127. 130. — Hodgson v. Rawson, 1 Vesey, 44. The circumstance of the express charge upon the land will vary it from Hall v. Terry. This legacy would have been payable out of personal estate. The case of Hutchins v. Foy, Comyns, 716. is in point; there it is said the same will which vests the remainder vests it with the charge — it must be taken cum onere — Foy might devise it, therefore he must have a present interest. In Hodgson v. Rawson, speaking of this case, it is said it vested with the remainder. So was the case of Sherman v. Collins, 3 Atkyns, 319. — The cases of † Jeal v. Titchener, before Lord Bathurst, 4th of July,

[S. C. Ambl. 703.]

† JEAL, and others, against TITCHENER. — Henry Shove, by will 20th of April 1750, devised two houses to his wife for life, and, immediately after her decease, to the defendant Edward Titchener, in fee, he paying thereout to the testator's cousins H. Thornton and Thomas Thornton, 20*l.* a-piece, within three months after the death of his wife. — The

(1) See Tunstall v. Bracken, Ambl. 167. (et postea in notis), and Bayley v. Bishop, 9 Ves. p. 6. 12. S. P. on the authority of it. See also the several cases cited and referred to by the principal one; and Walker v. Shore, 15 Ves. 122, 123, 4. See also Godwin v. Munday, post. 190. and 2 Cox P. W. 613 note.

(2) See Hall v. Terry, well reported 8 Vin. Abr. 383.

1771. — † Clarke v. Ross, 22d November, 1773. — † Kemp v. Davy [*], 1774, are to the same purpose. — As to the codicil — If the will shews the .1781.

DAWSON
against KILLET.

[ *121 ]

The testator died May 1752, and his wife entered. Thomas Thornton survived the testator, and by will gave the legacy of 20*l.* to the plaintiff Thomas Jeal, but appointed no executor. Thomas Jeal obtained administration. Henry Thornton survived the testator, and died in 1758, intestate; administration was granted to the plaintiff, Elizabeth Beaumont. The testator's widow died in October 1767, Edward Tichener entered. Insisted by defendant, that as the Thorntons died in the life of the wife, the legacies were not payable. Lord Chancellor declared the legacies of 20*l.* a-piece to Henry Thornton and Thomas Thornton, vested and transmissible to their representatives, and a charge on the premises devised to Tichener. (Now reported Ambl. 703.)

† CLARKE against ROSS. — J. D. Mason devised real estate to trustees, to the use of T. S. Mason for life, remainder to trustees, &c. remainder to his first and other sons, in tail general, remainder to daughters, in tail general, remainder to his wife for life, remainder to captain Alexander Wilson, his heirs and assigns for ever, with proviso that Alexander Wilson, or his heirs, if he or they should actually come into possession by virtue of the limitation in the will, should pay to his daughter Elizabeth Wilson, 2000*l.* and the testator did thereby charge all the premises with the payment of the said sum of 2000*l.* to the said Elizabeth Wilson, at the end of two years next after the said Alexander Wilson, or his heirs, should come into possession as aforesaid. Testator died, T. S. Mason surviving, who entered, and died 27th March 1760, without issue, but, by virtue of a power in the will, appointed the whole estate to his wife for her jointure. — She, on his death, entered, and enjoyed till 1769, when she died. In 1750, a commission of bankruptcy issued against Alexander Wilson; Ross was chosen assignee. On the death of Elizabeth Mason, the reversion in fee-simple vested in Ross, and he entered and enjoyed two years. Elizabeth Wilson in 1737, married William Draper, and died in 1743; William Draper died in 1759, and made a will, and appointed the plaintiff executor, who was also administrator of Elizabeth Draper. Lord Chancellor decreed the legacy to be raised with interest, from the end of two years after Ross came into possession. [S. C. 2 Dick. 529. quod vide.]

‡ KEMP against DAVY. — Sir John Kemp, baronet, by his will dated 26th of March, 1751, after directing that all his funeral expenses and debts should be paid, charged the same upon all his real and personal estate, and, subject to such payments, and to such legacies, annuities, and other out-goings, as should by his will, or by any other means, be created or made by him, or to which the same then were, or should at his death be any otherwise liable; he gave all his real and personal estates unto his wife Elizabeth, since deceased, and the defendant Eleazer Davy, their heirs, executors, and administrators, upon the trusts, and for the purposes after mentioned. And reciting that his brother, the defendant Benjamin Kemp, was intitled to two annuities of 60*l.* and 27*l.* payable during his life, out of his estates, he directed his trustees to pay them, and then gave to his wife an annuity, or clear yearly rent-charge of 350*l.* for life, to be paid out of the rents, issues, and profits of his said estates; and bequeathed to her the sum of 500*l.* which he directed should be raised, and paid to her within three months after his death; but in case she refused to accept these in full satisfaction of all her claims out of his real and personal estates, they were to sink into his estate: and after giving her some specific legacies, he gave unto Priscilla Merry, one of the plaintiffs, an annuity, or clear yearly rent-charge of 50*l.* for her life, payable to her, or her assigns, out of the rents and profits of his said estates; and to the defendant Martha Short, a like annuity or yearly rent-charge of 20*l.* — He then also directed that his said trustees should, out of the rents and profits of his said estates, pay, or allow to such person as should maintain his nephew John Kemp, such sums of money as they should think fit, not exceeding the yearly sum of 80*l.* until the age of 17, and from that time until he should attain the age of 21, not exceeding 200*l.* a year. And he also directed that his trustees should pay, or allow to such person as should maintain the plaintiff Mary Kemp, such sum or sums of money as they should think fit, not exceeding the yearly sum of 40*l.* until the age of 18. And gave her 1500*l.* to be paid to her on her attaining her said age of 18 years; and, in case she should happen to die before attaining that age, he directed, that the said legacy should sink into his estate, and should not be transmissible to the personal representative. And he directed that his trustees should, out of the said rents and profits, pay, or allow to such person as should maintain the defendant Simon Adams, such sum or sums as his trustees should think fit, not exceeding the yearly sum of 40*l.* until the age of 24. And after he should attain the age of 18, and between that time and his attaining the age of 24, the testator directed his trustees to pay him such further sums as they should think fit, not exceeding 200*l.* and the testator gave to the said Simon Adams, 1000*l.* to be paid to him at his said age of 24; but in case he should die before attaining that age, the testator directed that the said legacy should sink into his estate, and not become payable. He also gave Adams a choice of one of his livings, in case he should become a clergyman.

1781.

DAWSON
against KILLET.

[ *122 ]

the testator's intent, it will be difficult to find [*] evidence of the contrary in the codicil. Martha Ball's legacy lapsed in the time of the testator — his saying in the codicil, that it should be paid to the persons substituted, at the time it should have been paid to her, is the same as if he had said, to be paid at six months.

Mr. Mitford (on the same side) cited Mason v. Marshall, 26th February, 1774. G. T. gave an estate to one for life, remainder to Marshall in fee, and to his niece 500*l.* out of the estate, and went on, "And I charge and make chargeable the estate with the 500*l.*" The legatee died in the life-time of the tenant for life, and Lord Chancellor decreed the legacy to be raised.

Mr. Madocks (for the defendants). — The first legacy of 100*l.* will stand on the general rule of the Court — the other on a separate ground. This is a general charge of a legacy on a reversion. It is said the legacy will vest with the reversion. Hall v. Terry was determined on the ground that the time of the gift and of the payment were the same. Pawsey v. Edgar, 1776 †, on the principle, that the legacy vested with the reversion. In May v. Andrews (3) at the Rolls, Thomas man. The testator then gave to the several persons thereafter mentioned, the several sums of money thereafter mentioned, to be paid as soon as might be after his decease, for mourning: amongst these persons were his sister Elizabeth Kemp, Jane Blois, the defendant Martha Short, and his brother the defendant Sir Benjamin Kemp. — And he gave a legacy to the defendant Davy, for his trouble. The testator appointed his said wife and him executors; and in case his nephew John Kemp should attain his age of 21, he directed that his said wife and the defendant Davy, or the survivor of them, should convey all his real and personal estates, to hold unto his said nephew, his heirs and assigns, subject to such of the said annuities as might be then subsisting, and such debts, legacies, and charges, as might then affect his estate. And in case his said nephew should depart this life before he should attain the said age of 21, he gave the several further additional legacies after mentioned, (viz.) to his wife 2000*l.* to his sister Jane Blois, 1000*l.* to his sister Martha Short, 1000*l.* to his sister Elizabeth Kemp 1000*l.* to the defendant Sir Benjamin Kemp, 500*l.* and to defendant Davy, 500*l.*; and he directed those several legacies should be paid and payable within six months next after such the death of his said nephew under the age of 21 years, and directed and empowered his trustees, their heirs and assigns, to raise those additional legacies, by any mortgage, or mortgages, of the whole or a competent part of his estates thereby devised to them, and subject and chargeable in manner before mentioned. And in case of the death of his said nephew under the age of 21, and in case the plaintiff Mary Kemp should attain her age of 21; then he gave, devised, and bequeathed all the rest and residue of his real and personal estate, unto and to the use of the said plaintiff, Mary his niece, and her heirs, executors, and administrators, for ever; and directed his trustees to convey and assign the same accordingly; and he desired his trustees, when and as often as any savings out of his estate should amount to a competent sum, to apply the same in discharge of such debts, charges, and incumbrances affecting his estates, as they in their discretion should think fit. The testator died 27th of November, 1761. Elizabeth Kemp his widow died 27th of February, 1768, having made a will, of which the defendants Davy and William Mann Godschall are the executors. — Elizabeth Kemp, one of the sisters, died in the beginning of the year 1763, the defendant Davy is her personal representative. — Jane Blois, another sister, died in April, 1766, and the defendant Davy is the executor of her will. Sir John Kemp, the nephew, died on the 16th of January, 1771, unmarried, an infant of 16 years, leaving the plaintiff Mary Kemp his heir at law. The bill was brought by Mary Kemp, the infant, and her mother, and her second husband, for an account of the personal estate, and to have the incumbrances on the estates discharged by sale of sufficient part of the real estate. Two questions were made in the cause, one quite out of the present case, the other, whether as the testator's widow, his sisters, Elizabeth Kemp and Jane Blois, though they survived the testator, died in the lifetime of Sir John Kemp, the nephew, their personal representatives were entitled to the additional legacies given them on the contingency of Sir John Kemp the nephew dying under 21. — The court held that they were vested interests, and transmissible to the representatives.

† See this case stated post. 191 n. [It is also reported 2 Dick. 531.]

(3) See note (3) in the next page.

Gollop

Gollop devised real and personal estate to his wife and trustees to sell in order to pay debts, and to place out the residue at interest, to pay the dividends to the wife for life, remainder over to Thomas Gollop, subject to a [*] charge of 50*l.* each, to Mrs. Strudwicke and another daughter of the testator. One of the daughters died before the husband, and a bill being filed for her 50*l.* Sir Thomas Clarke decreed that the legacy was lost, being out of a mixed fund, which was to be considered as if it was out of land. — Lord Camden affirmed the decree in 1768. (3) — This is a legacy to take place six months after the death of the wife. If the legacy vests when the reversion vests, yet if there is any contingency to shew that the legacy is not to take place, it shall not be transmissible. Prowse v. Abington, 1 Atk. 482. The legatee cannot transmit the legacy unless he was of the description to take it. The testator meant the legatee should survive the wife in order to take. — This argument is not so strong as to the first legacy, as it is to the lapsed legacy.

Mr. Stainsby (on the same side). — In Kemp v. Davy, the Lord Chancellor declared it was an exception to the general rule. The general rule is with us; they must bring themselves within the exception. The rule is laid down as to land, in Bond v. Brown, just before Paulet v. Paulet. So in mixed funds, in Prowse v. Abington, the Court would not marshal assets. The reason is, that the Civil Law Court and this Court might be congruous in their determinations. In May v. Andrews, Lord Camden said, though it was a mixed fund, the legacy ought not to be raised. The reference in the codicil to the will is the same as if, in the will itself, the legacy had been given over, and must be if she survived the wife.

Lord Chancellor. — If the time when the legacy is to be paid is attached to the legacy itself, as for instance to A. B. at the age of 21, it makes such a description of the person who is to take, that if the person does not sustain the character at the time, the legacy will fail. But if the legacy be to A. B. and that it shall be payable at 21, the description is satisfied, and the rest refers to the payment only. This is the rule as to legacies out of personal estate. In the case of land another rule has taken place, and, at first, universally, and without any distinction, — that, being a condition, the money is not payable unless the whole condition is complied with. This rule has long been thought to be too much strained, and therefore not much relied upon in the later cases; but another distinction has been thought of, that the condition referred to the circumstances, either of the person, or of the estate. Where it applies to the circumstances of the person to take, as in the case of a portion, the Court has [*] construed a sum so given to be so connected with the purpose for which it was given, that it was not intended to be given for any other purpose; so that the purpose failing, the land ought not to be charged. There has been another point also taken into consideration, whether giving the money directly, payable at a certain time, shall make the time so essential as to annihilate the gift if it does not concur, or it shall be a gift in præsenti, to be paid at the future time. —

(3) In this case of May v. Andrews, the testator gave a real estate to his wife and other trustees in fee, in trust to sell, and out of the monies arising thereby to pay all his debts, to place out the residue at interest, and pay the dividends thereof to his wife for life; with remainder to his nephew in fee, subject to the condition that his nephew should thereout pay 50*l.* to each of his daughters: but if the surplus should not amount to a given sum, then he revoked the legacies of 50*l.* and gave his daughters other legacies upon their mother's death.

One of the daughters died before her mother; and for her 50*l.* the bill was brought. Sir Thomas Clarke, M. R. dismissed the bill, because the bequest was of a legacy out of land. The ground of the appeal (as insisted) was, that it was a legacy out of the personalty; but the decree was affirmed. Per Lord Commissioner Bathurst, Sir S. R. M88. On the point, see Attorney-General v. Milner, 3 Atk. 112.

There

1781.

DAWSON
against KILLER.

[ *123 ]

[ *124 ]

1781.

DAWSON
against KILLET.

There is a long string of cases to this purpose which establish the rule, that where a legacy is given out of a particular fund, with a reference to the time when it shall vest in possession, as for instance to B. with a charge to C. it is a distribution of the fund between the person to take in present and him who is to take in future, and the gift to C. vests immediately. This is a devise after the death of the wife to Killet, and the testator charges the estate of Killet (meaning the interest of Killet in the estate) with the sums in question, which distributes the estate between Killet and the legatees. Upon the death of the testator the remainder vested in Killet, and, the moment it vested in Killet, the charges vested in those to whom they were given. It is said the codicil varies the construction, I cannot see how it does. The testator takes notice that the legacy to Martha Ball was gone, and gives it to the others, at the same time that she would have taken it had she been alive. He was taking notice of a legacy which was to vest at his death, but not to be paid till a future time, and only directs that it shall be in statu quo it would have been in case of her living. He did not mean to change the form of the legacy, it was purely transferred to other names, to be demanded by them when it might have been by her if it had not lapsed. The legacies of 100*l.* and 50*l.* must therefore be raised for the plaintiffs, with interest from six months after the death of the wife.†

[S. C. Ambl.
167.]

† The case of Tunstal against Bracken, East. 1753, Canc. (in giving judgment upon which, Lord Hardwicke considered the former cases and the principles upon which they had been decided) being no where in print (4), the reporter thought a note of it would be acceptable to the profession.

The testator devised an estate of 111*l.* per annum to one of his sisters and co-heiresses, paying 100*l.* per annum, clear of all deductions and impositions whatsoever, to his wife during her life; and within 12 months after her decease, to pay several legacies to the value of near 2000*l.* Legatees to the value of 1600*l.*; survived testator, but died before the wife.

The question was, whether the legacies are lapsed or transmissible to executors, as vested legacies?

Lord Hardwicke, Chan. This cause arises upon the head of cases in this Court, that are extremely various and extensive, and which it may be pretty difficult to reconcile together. (5) I cannot but think, after all, that if the Court should determine this to be sunk into the estate, it would be a very hard case, and contrary to the intention of the testator. It appears manifestly to me, he intended to make provision for a child, in case there should be any, and if no child, then he intended a provision for his sister, who was one of his co-heirs at law, and there is a clause, which has not been taken notice of at the bar, which, though it does not afford a strong argument, yet it is a little material in this case. He says, provided my wife shall be privement enseint of one or more child or children, if such child shall attain 21 or marriage, then I do hereby revoke the legacies by me given.

It is truly said, at the bar, that it is the general rule of this Court, where legacies are to be raised out of land, and the legatee dies before the time of payment, it is a lapsed legacy upon the foundation of Pawlet's case.

But that rule is liable to several exceptions according to the circumstances of many cases cited upon those occasions, which make a distinction between portions given by a parent to children, or where given by a collateral person. The Court will consider the intention of the testator, for, in the case of portions to children, the Court considers the very purpose for which such portion is given; and if the child dies before such portion is wanted, it will sink into the estate for the benefit of the heir, (2 Vern. 439. Ch. Pre. 195.)

King and Withers (Forrest, 117.) was the case of an additional portion, and it was a strong case to make that payable.

There are other cases where the Court has laid hold of particular circumstances in a will, so as to take it out of the general rule, and decree it according to the intention of the testator.

Lowther and Condon, 2 Atk. 180. has been cited: I do not think it is applicable to either side.

In this case, there are two particularities. It is directed to be paid to the daughter, (4) It has been since reported Ambl. 167.

(5) See Mr. Cox's note to the Duke of Chandos v. Talbot, 2 P. W. 613. (5th edition.)
her her executors, administrators, or assigns: another circumstance was, the testator had in one particular event on which the moiety of the portion depended, expressly directed, if that daughter did not attain her age of 21, her portion should go to the sister, and not sink into the estate for the benefit of the heir at law.

Another case was mentioned (Hodgson and Rawson, 1 Ves. 44.); it is, in the state of the case, as near to this case as one case can be to another, and held to be transmissible.

The case much relied upon by the defendants, is Hall v. Terry. (1 Atk. 502.) I looked into my notes of it last night, and there the whole of the gift depended upon the time of payment. (5) If the gift is only with a direction to pay, the Court will not look upon it as a vested legacy.

The next is Bradley v. Powell, by Lord Talbot (Forrest. 193.) I have a great opinion of his judgment, but yet if I had then heard that case, I should not have been of that opinion, for I think it a very hard case.

Consider this upon the plan of this will. — The testator clearly intended, if he left no child, to provide for the other branch of his family. It is impossible to say, here is not sufficient to pay the legacy, for here is an estate of 11*l.* per annum, which would sell for a considerable sum of money, and he certainly intended that for the other branch of this family, the children of his other sister, therefore their representatives are entitled to it.

I think I may go further than 3 Co. Boraston's case, notwithstanding what has been objected, according to the doctrine laid down in Willock and Hammond, (Cro. Eliz. 204.) Although in the case of a will the word paying makes a condition, the law will construe this unapt word to a limitation: (6) for if it should be a condition, it would descend to the eldest son, and would be at his pleasure, whether his brothers or sisters should be paid or not; therefore it was adjudged the law would construe it a limitation, and to amount to as much as if he had made a devise to his eldest son till he should make default of payment, of which the younger son might take advantage.

According to the reasoning of these cases, it cannot be considered a condition, but a conditional limitation.

But here the co-heir might bring an ejectment for a moiety of the estate for non-payment, and a moiety of this estate will be sufficient to pay all the legacies; therefore this is distinct from the other cases, as here is a remedy at law.

(5) Quære this?

(6) See also Manning v. Herbert, Ambl. 575.

HANINGTON Executor against DU-CHATEL [DU-CHASTEL] Executor.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 260. b. On the Hearing.)

[S. C. 2 Dick.
581. called
Harrington v.
Chastel.]

THE late Lord Rochford, being groom of the stole to His Majesty, and, in consequence of that office, recommending pages of the presence, &c. treated with the plaintiff's [*] testator to recommend him upon a vacancy, on condition that he should grant [four] annuities, one of 100*l.* to St. Feriel the defendant's testator, who had been Lord Rochford's travelling tutor, and was then a bond creditor of his Lordship for 600*l.* [one of 50*l.* to J. L. one of 40*l.* to F. D. and one of 5*l.* to another person, making in all 195*l.*] An action being brought upon the annuity bonds by defendant's testator for the arrears of the annuity of 100*l.* the plaintiffs filed their bill for an injunction. The defendants had demurred and the demurrer had been over-ruled; and upon the motion to continue the injunction upon the merits, the answer being put in, it was argued on the part of the plaintiffs, that this bond was pro turpi causa; that Lord Rochford having a confidence placed in him by the King, had abused that confidence, by selling his recommendation; and, upon the public policy of the law, such an agreement ought not to stand. On the other hand it was argued, that it was allowed

Perpetual injunction granted against a bond for the purchase of an office, upon the public policy of the law, although the office was not within the stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. (1)

[*125]

(1) See Berrisford v. Done, 1 Vern. 100. and Symonds v. Gibson, 2 Vern. 308. with Mr. Raithby's Notes.

1781.

HANINGTON
against DU-CHATEL.

this was not an office within the statute of 5 & 6 Edw. 6. † that it was merely an office respecting the King's private, not his public character; and that if it was turpis contractus that might have been pleaded at law.

Lord Chancellor expressed his doubts, (2) whether it might not have been brought upon the record at law, by a plea, (3) and made a defence there to the action, but thought that not a sufficient reason to prevent his interposition; the court of law never having determined (4) that it could be so brought there as a defence. He then, admitting that it was not within the statute of Edw. 6. but treating it as a matter of public policy of the law, and similar to marriage brokerage bonds, where, though the parties are private persons, the practice is publicly detrimental, ordered the injunction to be continued till the hearing.

Upon the hearing, February 5. 1783, the injunction was ordered to be perpetual.

† Law v. Law, Ca. temp. Talbot, 140. [and 3 P. W. 391.] was an office within the stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6.

(2) This doubt was by no means referable to the Court of Chancery's refusing its immediate interposition, and its ultimately sustaining the injunction; but was merely speculative as to the party's having perhaps also an answer to the demand even at law. Lord Thurlow never thought that the courts of law, by extending their jurisdiction, could destroy the more ancient jurisdiction of courts of equity. Vide per Lord Eldon C. in Bromley v. Holland, 7 Ves. 19, 20.

(3) It appears from the statement of the bill in Reg. Lib. that the plaintiff, who was the defendant at law in the action, did actually "plead the stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6., and that the bond was executed as a consideration for the appointment to such office; and that such office was within the statute." No further notice was taken by the bill of any other legal proceedings; but it then prayed that the bond might be declared void, and be delivered up, &c. and for an injunction to restrain all further proceedings on it.

(4) This part of the report must be inaccurate; for Lord Thurlow never meant that if a court of law had so determined, it could have ousted the jurisdiction of a court of equity. Vide ubi supra, and 6 Ves. 812, 813.

FALKENER, Executor of CROWDER, against CASE and others. (1) [21 Nov. 1781.]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. A. fol. 680. b.)

C. having made an insurance for the benefit of the plaintiff's testator, left the policy in the hands of the broker (he being a creditor of C.) C. becoming a bankrupt, the assignees refused to deliver up the policy, insisting that this was a leaving the policy in the hands of bankrupt within the stat. of 21 Jac. 1.; but determined that it is not. (1)

ON the 10th of April, 1777, Case the bankrupt having assigned a vessel (in consideration of a debt then due) together with the policy of insurance upon it to Crowder the [*] plaintiff's testator, covenanted that he would keep up the insurance. The vessel being then at sea, 10th July, he made a policy of insurance in pursuance of his covenant, but the broker being a creditor of Case, would not part with the policy, and Case consented it should remain with him as a pledge for his debt. The assignees having satisfied the broker, insisted that the broker being the agent of Case, and having the policy in his custody, it was a leaving by Crowder in the possession of the bankrupt within the statute of 21 Jac. 1. c. 19. and therefore was liable to the commission, and refused to deliver it to the plaintiff, who thereupon filed this bill.

[ *126 ]

(1) The Profession will find a much more full report of this case stated by Mr. J. Astum, from a correct MS. note, in 2 Term Reports, 491.

Lord

Lord Chancellor. — If the question were concerning a bond, or any other chase in action, in the possession of the bankrupt, it would be within the statute 21 Jac. from the case of Ryall v. Rowles, 1 Vesey, 348. There is no difference as to pawns, whether the goods have been in the possession of the pawnor, or come into the possession of the pawnee. So, where there is a lien, there is no difference whether the special property be by the act of the pawnor or any other way. Then, suppose there was no such statute. In this case, there is no doubt the plaintiff[’s testator] obtained the property. (2) When Case made the assignment, Crowder acquired the property, and had a right to come here for the specific performance. Whatever binds the property in the hands of the bankrupt, binds it also in the hands of the assignee. (3) Therefore, if it stands clear of the statute, Crowder is in the case of the bankrupt whilst solvent. Then as to the effect of the statute, if any person shall leave property in the hands of the bankrupt, it shall be fraudulent. Then, was the interest of the bankrupt, within the words, “goods and chattels?” I say yes. Were they goods and chattels residing with the bankrupt? What was the bankrupt’s interest? An equitable right to redeem Berkley the broker. He parted with that right. The bankrupt, whilst solvent, assigned over the whole to Crowder. The objection is, that he did not deliver the goods; but he had no property to deliver, it was only an equitable right. Every shade of interest was vested in Crowder before Case’s bankruptcy, therefore nothing resided in the bankrupt. The statute ought to be construed a jus positivum, and it is in that view that it is impossible to qualify Crowder as having left the property in the hands of the bankrupt. The construction has been carried further, as where ships are at sea, and a symbolical [*] possession only can be given, that has been thought sufficient. (2) This is a much stronger case than that. But it is argued that it would have been proper for Crowder to have given previous notice; and there might have been cases in which the neglect of so doing would have injured his situation, as if Berkley had delivered the policy to Case, Crowder would have had no remedy. If it be right to strain the statute in any case to effect its intention, this is too slight a one, the notice would have been only between Crowder and Berkley. Where the person possessing an equity assigns it, there is no property remaining in the assignor. Decree for plaintiff. (4) 1781.

FALKENER
against CASE.

[ *127 ]

(2) See the late cases of Palmer v. Moron (in K. B.) 2 Maul. & Sel. 43. and Dixon v. Ewart (in Ch.) 3 Merivale, 322, &c. &c. with the references.

(3) See Dixon v. Ewart, 3 Meriv. 322, 333, 334.

(4) See 2 T. R. 491, &c. and Reg. Lib. 683. b.

MOORE against MOORE. [26 and 27 Nov.]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. B. fol. 163. b.)

THE testator left a testamentary paper, which was established by the ecclesiastical court — “I give all in Suffolk (1) to R. Moore, Esq. A will in these words: “I give “all (1) in Suff- “folk to R. M.” does not pass a bond which happened to be at testator’s house in Suffolk. (2)

(1) Bank notes will pass under such a bequest. Lady Aylesbury’s case, reported accurately, Amb. 68. but often cited inaccurately. See per Lord Eldon C. in Stuart v. M. Bute, 11 Ves. 662. Et vide per Lord Hardwicke, in Chapman v. Hart, 1 Ves. 273. For decisions on bequests on many such general words familiar in testaments, see 2 Roper on Legacies, from p. 239. to 259. and see 11 Ves. 666. and 1 Scho. & Lefr. 318, 319.

(2) See Chapman v. Hart, 1 Ves. 273. Suppl. to Vesey, sen. 13. and note (4) postea.

1781.

MOORE
against
MOORE.

“ (the plaintiff) and heirs — I give to R. Moore, Esq. all my goods and chattels in Suffolk.” The testator had goods and chattels in Suffolk, and also in other counties, and, in a drawer at his house in Suffolk, was found a bond, which the plaintiff claimed as goods and chattels in Suffolk, and, upon the defendant the residuary legatee refusing to deliver it, filed this bill. The question was, whether the bond passed?

Mr. Kenyon (for the plaintiff).—By a devise of all the testator's goods a bond will pass, 1 Wms. 267. A bond is bona notabilia in the diocese where it is. (3) 1 Rolle Abr. 909.

Mr. Hollist (on the same side). — Goods by the civil law mean every thing, as chattels do at common law. Here is nothing to restrain the generality of the term. It is admitted the testator had many other goods and chattels in Suffolk, but why should the Court restrain the generality of the construction?

[ *128 ]

Mr. Scott (on the same side). — This is unquestionably an argument upon the intention of the testator. The word goods will include bonds, leases for years, and all other personal property ex vi termini, unless there is something in the will to restrain the construction. It is not said in any one book, that [*] goods do not mean obligations, except in Calye's case, 8 Rep. 33. which was an action against an inn-keeper, and Dyer 5. b. which grounds that opinion in 2 Rolle Abr. 58. In Kelsett v. Nicholson, cited Dyer, 5. b. (in the margin) the Court held that by omnia bona & catalla obligations passed, against Fenner, who insisted the wax and parchment only passed, not the duty. The bond is bona notabilia in the diocese where it happens to be, (3) and passed to the wife by the devise of all goods and chattels in the case in 1 Wms. If bonds will not pass, why should leases for years? 1 Eq. Abr. 199.

Mr. Solicitor General (for defendant). — By goods and chattels in a house, could anybody mean a bond in a bureau? Bills of exchange would not pass † though they are not bona notabilia but merely personal, so of records; judgments, which are bona notabilia, would they pass by the words goods and chattels in Middlesex? 8 Rep. Calye's case, Dyer 5. b. — Channel v. Robotham, Yelv. 68. — By Chapman v. Hart, 1 Vesey, 271., bonds or choses in action will not pass by the words, goods, &c. in a house. (4)

Mr. Spranger (on the same side) cited Swinburne, 475.

Lord Chancellor.—If this case is to be decided without further enquiry, we must take it for granted the bond was in the house, that the testator had other goods and chattels in the house, and goods and credits elsewhere. Under the instrument, R. Moore claims the bond as a specific legacy, and the question is, whether, from the context, it can pass. As to the point of construction; the Court construes legacies according to the canon, not the common law. It is argued that bona include all credits, as well as chattels, at common law, and that the words all goods and chattels will pass bonds and all credits. The true point is, whether the context will qualify the meaning of goods and chattels. Whenever words are used in an instrument it is a good rule to say, they shall be construed agreeably to their legal sense. In order to construe them otherwise, there must be something to shew that they are used in a less † Sed vide 2 Bac. Abr. 401.

(3) But not for other purposes, see per Lord Hardwicke, 1 Ves. 273. Et per Lord Thurlow, postea.

(4) In Chapman v. Hart, the declaration of the Court was, “ that no securities for money, nor other choses in action, passed by the bequest of goods and chattels in his house or on board the ship W., and that the same could only extend to goods and chattels in possession.” — R. L. Vide Supp. to Vesey, sen. 139.

technical technical meaning. This is to be shewn by the person who claims under the particular sense. 1st, It has been argued, that the words do not mean credits; I think they do. 2dly, That the words, when local, do not imply them; and, with respect to specialties, that they have no locality. — The question is, whether this peculiar kind [*] of credits has that sort of locality which was within the idea of the testator. This is not a solemn codicil, and requires therefore a more favourable construction. The sentences are mangled and imperfect. It is contended; that this sort of credits has locality, because the law has made it bona notabilia. But it is doubtful (5) whether the court Christian having thought it sufficiently local for that purpose, is enough to make it local as to this. (5) If the question hung more in doubt than it does, I should be obliged to follow Lord Hardwicke's case (Chapman v. Hart): The judgment there goes clearly to this case. He has compared bank-notes to money. (6) Choses in action have no locality, bonds have no more locality than other choses in action, otherwise than by drawing the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical court: and the judgment, in that case, must prevail. In this case, also, it has weight, that the house was given to the same person. Removal of goods for a necessary purpose, is not an ademption of a specific legacy. — But would you follow bonds and judgments in the same manner? — it would be too much to argue it in that way. The authority of that case must go so far as to include bonds with other choses in action as to their want of locality. (9)

Bill dismissed.†

† In the case of Green v. Symonds, 27th of February, 1730, the testator by will gave to B. inter alia, all his goods [and moveables whatsoever, (7)] &c. in his study, except his books and writings; he gave to C. all his books, at his chambers in the Temple. At the time of the testator's death, there were, in his study, a considerable sum of ready money, and securities for money, and plate; but he had removed the books into the country. One of the questions agitated in the cause, and which applies to the principal case was, whether B. should take the money, securities, &c. which were in the study, or the furniture only. The Lord Chancellor held the money and plate to pass, but not the securities for money, they being choses in action. 2dly, That the removal of the books annulled the legacy, because a will of personalty shall only be construed from the death of the testator. With respect to this latter point, Lord Hardwicke, in the case of Chapman v. Hart, (8) distinguished between the cases of goods in a house, and in a ship; in the latter case, he held; that the removal was no ademption of the legacy; in the former it would, unless it was from necessity, as, removal of goods to save them from fire, which is no ademption, because, in every case of ademption there must be something to shew a change of intent.

(5) Lord Hardwicke was clearly of opinion that bonds had no kind of locality, except with reference to the amount, &c. of a testator's property under a probate. Vide 1 Ves. 273. It seems, therefore, Lord Thurlow could not have used the above expression "doubtful."

(6) See also Lady Aylesbury's case, above referred to.

(7) Lord Redesdale's MSS.

(8) 1 Ves. 271. 273. Vide antea, note (4).

(9) Lord Redesdale C. observed that the principal case was decided on a view of all the preceding cases on the subject. See in Fleming v. Brook, 1 Scho. & Lefr. 319. Quod vide.

1781.

MOORE
against MOORE.

[ *129 ]

1781.

HAYNES [HAYES] against MICO. (1) [21 Nov. and 7 Dec.]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. A. fol. 93.)

Bond upon marriage to secure 300*l.* (the wife's fortune) to the wife within one month after husband's decease. By will the husband gave her 500*l.* payable within six months after his decease, together with other legacies: the bequest of 500*l.* is not a satisfaction for the 300*l.* secured by the bond. (1)

[*130]

UPON the marriage of James and Susanna Mico, in 1743, the husband gave a bond to trustees in the sum of 600*l.* conditioned to leave to the wife 300*l.* (being the wife's fortune) payable in a month after his decease, in case she should survive him. By an indenture, after marriage, the husband settled a house in Cork Street, Worcester, to the use of himself for life, remainder to the wife for life, which together with the 300*l.* was to be in bar of dower. By his will, he gave to his wife 500*l.* payable within six months after his decease; he gave her also a house in fee, the house in which they lived for life, and several other specific legacies, and died in 1773. In 1776 Susanna died, and her will being litigated in the ecclesiastical court occasioned the delay in bringing this suit, which was brought by the representatives of Susanna, against the nephew and residuary legatee of James, for the two sums of 500*l.* and 300*l.* the sole question [*] being, whether the legacy of 500*l.* was, or was not, a satisfaction for the 300*l.* secured by the bond.

Mr. Madocks (for the plaintiff). — The legacy and the sum secured seem here to be under different circumstances, and the Court never applies the rule of satisfaction, but where the legacy and the debts are of the same description. This is Lord Cowper's rule in Eq. Abr. 205. — Here it is not to be presumed that the legacy was intended to be in satisfaction, for, by the bond, the money was to be paid in one month, and the legacy is to be paid in six months.

Mr. Kenyon (on the same side). — It is very difficult to find a reason why a man should not be generous as well as just. — Lee v. d'Aranda, 1 Vesey, 1. is hardly applicable here, as the subject in that case was what fell by act of law; here it is an intended bounty. (2)

Mr. Solicitor General (for defendant). — The bond recites the marriage, the portion of 300*l.* and that the husband had agreed to leave the wife 300*l.* — After giving her the 500*l.* and the specific legacies, he gives the residue in large words to the nephew, and orders the other legacies to be paid in twelve months. — No case has been cited like this: it is not a legacy to a creditor for a subsisting debt; the provision was to be necessarily 300*l.*; this is 300*l.* and 200*l.* more; the 200*l.* is a bounty. — There are two cases where the money was suffered to come by an intestacy, and the distributive share was held to be a satisfaction: I cannot see the difference between that and giving it by will. (3) Here he does it in the terms of the engagement, for he leaves it her by will, which is stronger, Blandy v. Widmore, 1 Wms. 324. — Lee v. d'Aranda, 3 Atk. 419. (4) — Clarke v. Sewell, 3 Atk. 96.

Lord Chancellor. — This has been argued upon a very different ground from the cases in the books, and in such a manner as to raise a new and more peculiar ground of decision. If this had been the case

(1) See Devese v. Pontet, cited postea in note to p. 153. from Finch's Prec. Ch. 240., and now lately reported by Mr. Cox, Ca. Ch. 188. See Lord Eldon C.'s observations on them, and on the principal case in Garthshore v. Chalie, 10 Ves. 9. 13, 14, 15., from whence it appears that Blandy v. Widmore (1 P. W. 324.) and Lee v. D'Aranda, (1 Ves. 1. and 3 Atk. 419.) were not intended to be impeached by Lord Thurlow in the principal case, or by Sir L. Kenyon in Devese v. Pontet; and that they remain unshaken.

(2) See the references in the preceding note.

(3) See per Lord Eldon C. in Garthshore v. Chalie, 10 Ves. from page 7. passim.

(4) And 1 Ves. 1. See the Supplement to Vesey, sen. p. 1.

of a creditor in the life-time of the husband, the circumstances of difference would have been sufficient against it as a satisfaction. The first cases on the subject are those where there were circumstances to shew it to be the intent of the testator that the money should be applied in payment, they [*] did not rest on the mere circumstance of equality. In equity cases (Pile v. Pile, 1 Eq. Abr. 204.) there is a case where evidence was admitted to prove the testator's intent to increase the portion. Afterwards the cases took a different turn, because the declaring it a rule of construction of wills, to presume the intention of testators by conjecture, was held to be an unsound manner of interpreting such instruments. The court adopted the rule of the common law, and took it for granted, that where the debtor gave the creditor an equal sum, it was intended as a satisfaction. — This was carried to a remarkable length in Cranmer's case, 2 Salk. 508. where the debt was contracted subsequent to the making of the will, and the legacy was held by the Master of the Rolls to discharge it. That case gave the first check to the doctrine. It was reversed upon an appeal, on two grounds; first, that there was no implication of law that the legacy was a satisfaction; 2dly, that it was impossible to give evidence of an intention to satisfy debts contracted subsequent to the will. From that time the stream turned, and has since gone in restriction of that idea, so much as, even, to overturn the cases which went before. If this had been a debt of such a nature, I should have thought the legacy could not have been a payment of the debt. — I am not so well satisfied with the manner of arguing the other point; many cases have been cited which do not bear upon it. (5) This is not a case where the party was indebted, he was only bound by a covenant to do a thing in future. It is fairly argued from the recital in the bond, that it must be taken as a covenant to leave her a sum of money. The question must therefore turn upon this legacy being, or not being, a performance of that covenant. The cases under the statute of distribution were determined in analogy to the rule of law, as to lands descending in performance of a real covenant. (6) The circumstance of its not being to be distributed in that case in less than a year, and still being held a satisfaction, shews that the Court has little regarded mere formality. Then, where is the difference between that case and one in which the person bound to perform the covenant leaves a legacy by his will? Having contracted to leave her a sum of money, and having actually left it, the question is, whether he has not performed his covenant, although he might possibly mean to do a different thing. There are many cases where the Court has dispensed, in the performance of covenants, with circumstances of this sort. If the sum had been the same, but payable [*] at six months, she would not have been bound to accept it in that form; but could she have insisted that he meant not to perform his covenant, but to do a different thing? I cannot say that by doing a thing so nearly the same, he did not mean it as a performance of the covenant. He has done it, but with a variation (7), on account of which I am called upon, by the plaintiff, to say he did not mean to perform his covenant. If the defendant had contended that the testator had performed his covenant, by giving the specific legacies, though it would rest with the plaintiff to shew he did not, by them, mean performance, he might sustain it from the great difference between the subjects; but they contend, on the other ground, that being bound by his covenant to leave her 300*l.* and giving her more by his will, he meant it in pay-

1781.

HAYNES
against Mico.

[*131]

[*132]

(5) See the references in note (1).

(6) See Blandy v. Widmore, 1 P. W. 324, 325. and Mr. Cox's note.

(7) As to such a variation referable to a residue, see the observations of Lord Eldon C. 10 Ves. 14, 15. and Couch v. Stratton, 4 Ves. 391, &c.

1781.

HAYNES
against Mico,
[7 Dec.]

ment of that, and it lies upon the plaintiff to prove that he did not mean so to do. However as there seems to be difficulty in the case, let it stand over till the first day of causes after term.

When the cause came on again in pursuance of the above order, his Lordship expressed a change of opinion, in consequence of which he decreed, finally, in favour of the plaintiff, that this legacy was not a satisfaction of the 300*l.* secured by the bond, [with costs out of the testator's assets]. The reporter was absent, but is informed, that he considered the subject first in the light of a debt, and held that, so considered, this legacy could not be deemed a satisfaction. He put the case of its being a bond to a stranger, it could not have been a payment. In the case of Clarke v. Sewel, 3 Atk. 96. Lord Hardwicke laid down the rule, that where there was a difference, in any circumstance, between a legacy and the debt, the legacy should not be deemed a satisfaction (8); therefore, in this case the debt being payable in one month, and the legacy in six months, made a clear distinction, and repelled any presumption of an intention in the testator to pay the debt: if he did intend so to do, it was extraordinary he did not refer to the obligation. His Lordship distinguished it also from the case of portions, where the father, being bound to make a provision, is considered as having, by the legacy, performed that obligation, and also from Blandy v. Widmore and Lee v. d'Aranda, where the wives having administration (9), the fund was vested in them before the time at which the covenant was to be performed, a circumstance much relied upon by Lord Cowper, in the former case: and concluded with repeating and relying on the [*] circumstance of the different times of payment of the bond and the legacy. † (10)

[ *133 ]

† A cause of Cantle and others against Morris and others, was heard by the Lord Chancellor at a time when the reporter was absent: as one of the questions comprised in it was in some similar measure to that in the present case, he has stated it here, from the cases in the House of Lords.

[Vide S. C.
6 Bro. P. C.
418. octavo ed.]

Henry Merryweather and Ann his wife seised in fee simple (in the right of Ann) of a moiety of lands in Hassage and Norton St. Philip, in the county of Somerset, by indenture 4th October, 1740, covenanted with trustees to levy a fine to enure to the use of Henry Merryweather for life, remainder to Ann for life, remainder to Rachael Coles (sister to Ann) for life, remainder to trustees for a term of 1000 years, remainder to the right heirs of the survivor of Henry Merryweather and Rachael Coles. The trusts of the term were to raise 1000*l.* to be paid to such of the relations, &c. of Ann, and at such times and in such proportions as the survivor of Henry Merryweather and Rachael Coles should by deed or will appoint, and in default of appointment to the next heir or co-heirs of Rachael Coles. The fine was levied: Henry Merryweather and Ann both died in the life-time of Rachael Coles, who, thereby, became entitled to the inheritance of the moiety comprised in the indenture, subject to the term for 1000 years; she was at the same time, and at the time of the execution of the indenture, seised in fee of the other moiety; she died 26th April, 1769, having made her will, bearing date 26th November, 1756, by which she gave annuities to the father of the plaintiff Mills, and to the mother of the defendant Veale, and, after their decease, sums of 100*l.* each to be divided among the children of the annuitants, charged on lands not comprised in the settlement, and an annuity to the mother of the plaintiff Litman, and, after her decease, a sum of 100*l.* to be divided among the children of the plaintiff Litman, charged upon Hassage estate (one moiety of which was comprised in the indenture), and, having given other legacies charged on Hassage, devised the premises to a trustee for a term of 1000 years, to raise the same: and gave all her messuages, &c. whatsoever in Hassage and Norton St. Philip (charged with the payment of the annuities and legacies) to defendant Morris for life, remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to his first and other sons in tail general, remainder to his daughters in tail general, remainder to defendant Veale, sen. with like remainders, remainder

(8) See also Barret v. Beckford, 1 Ves. 519, 520, 521. Graham v. Graham, ibid. 261, 262. Clark v. Gulse, 2 Ves. 617. and Mathews v. Mathews, ibid. 635, 636.

(9) Lord Eldon C. very much disapproved of the stress laid by Lord Cowper on the circumstance here noticed. See in Garthshore v. Chalie, 10 Ves. 11, 12, 13.

(10) See 1 Cox. Ch. Ca. 192.

1781.

remainder to J. Litman, son of plaintiff Litman, in fee. And, out of her personal estate, gave several legacies, and gave the residue to John Morris, sen. Rachael Coles made no other appointment of the 1000*l.* The plaintiffs, Cantle, Mills, and Elisabeth Litman, wife of William Litman, (father and mother of plaintiff Litman, both since deceased,) were her heirs at law, and in 1772, filed their bill, insisting that they were entitled to have the 1000*l.* raised. The defendants put in their answers, and after several revivals, upon the decease of parties, the cause came on at Lincoln's-Inn-Hall, 12th March, 1781, when the defendants set up three defences: 1st, That Rachael Coles, having become entitled to the inheritance in fee of the moiety comprised in the term, the terms sunk into the inheritance; 2dly, That the will operated as an appointment, and the devisees of the estate, being relations of Ann, were capable of taking as appointees: 3dly, That the legacies and other charges were satisfactions pro tanto, and therefore (if they were wrong upon the other points) only the residue of the 1000*l.* should be raised; but Lord Chancellor ordered the whole of the 1000*l.* to be raised for the plaintiffs, from which decree there being an appeal to the House of Lords, on the 12th of June, 1782, the same was dismissed, and the original decree affirmed.

In Devese v. Pontet (11), (reported by Mr. Finch in a note upon the case of Brown v. Dawson, in his edition of Preced. in Chanc. p. 240.) at the Rolls, Michaelmas, 1785, His Honour recognised the principles of this case of Haynes v. Mico, and determined accordingly.

(11) It is also reported 1 Cox's Ca. Ch. 188. where it seems free from some of the observations attributed to the report furnished by Mr. Finch. See per Lord Eldon C., 10 Ves. 14, 15.; and Mr. Cox's Report, p. 192.

[*] EASTER TERM,

[*134.]

22 Geo. 3. 1782.

EDWARD Lord THURLOW, Lord High Chancellor. Sir THOMAS SEWELL, Knight, Master of the Rolls. LLOYD KENYON, Esq. Attorney General. JOHN LEE, Esq. Solicitor General.

LUCAS against CALCRAFT. (1)

[S. C. 2 Dick. 594.]

(No Entry.)

THIS was a question as to costs, on a case of pure assignment of dower before commissioners, and particularly of the costs of a survey of the estates. Of costs in dower. [The general rule is that they are not given under a commission to set out dower, any more than under a writ of dower at common law. A vexatious resistance, however, forms an exception to it. (1)]

(1) See Worgan v. Ryder, 1 Ves. and Beames, 20. The judgment given by Lord Thurlow in the principal case is reported in a note there from the late Sir Samuel Romilly's MSS. It is as follows: "Lucas v. Calcraft, 20th April, 1782. Lord Chancellor. — "Where a widow comes into this Court for the single purpose of having dower assigned her, costs do not follow the suit. I have been furnished with several precedents; but not one in which costs have been given on the single point. In bills for dower, separate questions of title often arise, which may be conducted vexatiously, and so as to be the subject of costs; but costs are not to be given as of course with respect to setting out dower only. At law, a mere writ of right of dower, or a writ to assign dower, carries no costs."

Lord

1782.

LUCAS against CALCRAFT.

Lord Chancellor (2) said, that in cases where there is an apportionment of dower by commission, not by writ, costs are not to be given; unless previous questions are raised, in litigating of which the party is vexatious. There are many precedents, and they are reasonable and analogous to the proceedings at law; in a writ of right of dower, or on an assignment of dower, no costs are given, unless there be a deforcement, when the statute (of Gloucester) gives damages, or where there are collateral circumstances, as where the dower is demanded upon a feoffment or other title.

(2) See note (1) in the preceding page.

[*135] [*] WILLIAM NEWTON, JOHN NEWTON, and NICHOLAS NEWTON, - - - Plaintiffs.

JAMES BENNET, MARY TRYON Widow, and the Assignees of WILLIAM TRYON, a Bankrupt, - - Defendants.

[20 April.]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. B. fol. 286.)

Testator ordered his estate to be sold, and, after giving a legacy to his wife, directs the remainder to be vested in the executors for payment of debts, — the money arising from the sale is equitable assets. (1)

BILL filed by the plaintiffs, the residuary legatees of William Moore, a creditor of Thomas Tryon, deceased, by specialty, which did not bind the heir, against Bennet, who was executor of Moore, and administrator of the personal estate of Tryon unadministered by Moore, who was his executor, and against Mary Tryon and William Tryon, the widow and heir at law, praying, among other things, an account of the personal estates of Moore and Tryon, and that the estate of Moore might be indemnified against debts which he had been compelled to pay, in consequence of having permitted his name to continue in partnership with Tryon, after his own interest in the trade had ceased, and, if the personal estate of Tryon should be insufficient for that purpose, that a sufficient part of the real estate might be sold to discharge the same under the devise of the estate by Tryon's will dated 17th August, 1747, in which taking notice "that he was indebted to several persons, and was" "desirous that they should be paid and satisfied, for the more easy accomplishing the same, he desired that his wife would accept of the sum" "of 5000*l.* (together with her jewels, &c.) and that all his estates in Kent" "shall be sold forthwith, and (after payment of several sums of money)" "that the remainder might be vested in his executors for the payment of his debts." He then made several dispositions immaterial to the present question, and appointed William Moore and his wife executors. The wife refused the provision under the will, and entered upon the estate for life under her marriage-settlement.

The cause being heard before Lord Bathurst, 4th July, 1771, a decree was made, by which it was ordered, among other things, that the real estate should be sold for the payment of [so much of the debts of the testator as his personal estate should not extend to satisfy, R.L.]; and that in case any of the creditors should be satisfied any part of their debts

(1) The report of the judgment in this case is materially wrong; since "Lord Thurlow is represented as intimating that the descent must be broken—Lord Thurlow said no such thing; but considered a charge sufficient."

Per Lord Eldon C. in Bailey v. Ekins, 7 Ves. 322. Lord Eldon added "Batson v. Lindagreen (post. 2 vol. 94.) was a mere charge." See also 8 Ves. 30. His Lordship determined Bailey v. Ekins accordingly. See that case, 7 Ves. from p. 519. passim, with Lord Eldon's valuable observations on the cases. See also Shipard v. Lutwidge, 8 Ves. 26. to 30.

out

out of the personal estate, such creditors should not [*] receive any thing out of the money to arise by sale of the real estate till his other creditors were paid up equally with them.

Bennet being a creditor by specialty, which bound the heir, thought himself aggrieved by this part of the decree, and (the parties agreeing to wave the enrolment of the decree) presented a petition for a rehearing, and insisted that the real estate of Tryon (which continued unsold) ought to be considered as legal assets, and applied in a course of administration, in payment of debts by specialty, in preference to simple contracts.

Upon this point the cause was reheard before the present Lord Chancellor, and the question upon the difference between a devise of estates to executors to be sold, and a power given to the executors to sell, was very much agitated by Mr. Price, Mr. Madocks, and Mr. Emlyn, for the plaintiffs, Mr. Kenyon and Mr. Hollist for Bennet. At the time of this argument, the reporter was absent, but he has understood that the authorities principally relied upon were as follow:—On the part of Bennet—To prove that where an estate is suffered to descend to the heir, though charged with the payment of debts, the produce is legal assets, were cited Freemoult v. Dedire, 1 P. Wms. 429.—Blatch v. Wilder, 1 Atk. 420.—Allen v. Heber, 2 Strange, 1270. 1 Blackst. R. 22.—Pre. Ch. 127. 136.—They contended that it was necessary, in order to make the produce of the estate equitable assets, that the descent should be broken, Plunket v. Penson, 2 Atk. 290. and that it was not broken in this case, Co. Lit. 112.—that the statute of fraudulent devises did not affect this case, for the exception in the statute was only where there was a devise to a stranger for the payment of debts, in which case the produce was equitable assets; but where the devise was to a stranger, not for the payment of debts, the assets were legal, not equitable; and said that it was decided by Lord Hardwicke in Prowse v. Abingdon, 1 Atk. 482., that money arising from the sale of land, under a mere power to sell, was legal assets.—The counsel for the plaintiff insisted, that in this case the descent was broken, for that was the effect where there were any circumstances to qualify the descent; to prove this position, they cited Britain v. Charnock, 2 Mod. 286. Cro. Car. 161. Gilpin's case.† They further cited 3 Wms. 341. Sir Charles Cox's case, to prove that this money would be equitable assets, and introduced Dyer, 371. b.—Pit v. Pelham, Sir Thomas Jones, [*] 26. 1 Leon. 220. as to the effect of such powers; but principally relied upon the case of Silk v. Prime, before Lord Camden, on appeal from the Rolls, 8th March, 1768. (4)

† In Hargrave v. Tindal, (2) July 9. 1753, Lord Hardwicke held an estate charged by will with payment of debts, though it descended, subject to the charge, to an infant heir, was equitable assets, and should be sold immediately without the parol demurring (3), the same as if it were devised to be sold, though the descent was not broken; for it descended subject to a trust for the creditors. He therefore decreed the estate to the heir in trust for the creditors, and that it should be sold and the infants should convey when they came of age, unless they should shew cause to the contrary; in the mean time her purchasers to hold and enjoy.

(2) See per Lord Eldon C. 7 Ves. 322, 323.

(3) The point made in Pope v. Gwynn, as to whether the parol should demur, seems to have been determined by this case of Hargrave v. Tyndal. See 8 Ves. 30. and the note there.

The third edition of these Reports states a case of Kent v. Craig before Lord Hardwicke, and appears to state some observations as coming from that great judge, which certainly are quite contrary to the sentiments of the greatest judges since his time. See 7 Ves. 323. and 8 Ves. 30.

(4) Vide postea, p. 138. note; and 8 Ves. 28. note. Also, Pope v. Gwynn, before Lord Thurlow, stated ibid. from R. L.

1782.

NEWTON
against BENNET.

[*136]

[*137]

Lord

1782.

NEWTON
against
BENNET.

Lord Chancellor ordered the cause to stand over, and it came on now for judgment.

Lord Chancellor. — I am of opinion with the late Lord Chancellor, that these are equitable assets. There are some intermediate † cases between the old and modern adjudications, by which it has been decided, that assets to be sold, should be considered as if they were already personal estate, and must go in a course of administration. There must be a mistake in the case in 1 Atkyns, 420. for it was always held, that an estate devised to an executor to sell, was equitable assets.

His Lordship here stated the case. — The devise in the present case is tantamount to giving the executor a power to sell, and to apply the money to the payment of debts. It struck me, at first, it should be so construed. The cases, Dyer, 371. — 2 Leo. 220. — T. Jones, 25. are stronger than the present case, where there is rather an express intention that the estate shall be sold, and the debts paid, than a devise to sell; but I think the difference is not very material. In giving this opinion I have several dicta to encounter; 1st, That the descent is not broken, (5) and for this has been cited, Co. Lit. 112.; but this I think extraordinary, as, in the very next page, 113, the very idea is expressly stated, that where there is a power to sell, the vendee is in by the deviser, by which it appears the descent is broken. It is also argued, that the fee descends in the mean while to the heir till the power is executed, but in the same page of Co. Lit. it is said there is no difference between a power and a devise to sell in this respect, and the whole argument turns on another point, namely the inconvenience of a power compared with a devise, for that if it be a devise to several to sell, the survivors can sell the estate; but if it is a dry power, the death of one extinguishes it. — I think the descent is broken, and that these are equitable assets, on the authority of Sir Joseph Jekyl, 3 Wms. 341. where he held the equity of redemption of a mortgaged term, to be equitable assets. [*] The doctrine of Sir Joseph Jekyl, in that case, is the very spirit of the statute of fraudulent devises; which applies, not only to dispositions which break descents, but to any charge. The practice of the court of equity, that the division among creditors should be pari passu, was well known at the time of that decision. — There is no light in which it is possible to set this devise, that will not shew the property to be equitable assets. The only matter urged was, that where money to be raised by sale of lands was given to executors, it was made personal, and must be applied in a course of administration, 2 Vern. 106.; but that doctrine has not been adopted in later times, and must imply that a testator meant differently in giving to an executor than if he had given to any other trustee. In Lewin v. Oakley, 2 Atk. 50. Lord Hardwicke determined this point, in the way I now propose, that the gift either way did not make any difference. In ‡ Silk v. Prime, before † Such among many others are those of Hiron v. Witham, 1 Chan. Cases, 248.; Whitton v. Lloyd, 1 Chan. Cases, 275.; Girling v. Lee, 1 Vern. 63.; Greaves v. Powell, 2 Vern. 248.; the anonymous case, 2 Vern. 405.; Clutterbuck v. Smith, Pre. Ch. 127.; Bickham v. Freeman, Pre. Ch. 136.

[ *138 ]

‡ Silk and others, creditors of Christopher Thompson, plaintiffs; Francis Prime, Richard Moxon, and others, defendants.

Christopher Thompson, by his will, dated 27th December, 1759, gave specific parts of his personal estate to his wife and two daughters; and, after reciting that he had, previously to his intermarriage with his wife, settled the reversion of his farm-house, and lands, and premises in Outnewton, in the county of York, after the decease of his mother,

(5) Lord Thurlow never meant to intimate a necessity that the descent should be broken. See 7 Ves. 322, 233. and 8 Ves. 30.; et vide the first note to this case.

Lord

Lord Camden, he sifted all the cases and settled the point, that the circumstance [*] of giving the real estate by any means to the executor, shall mother, to the use of his wife for life, in case she should survive him, with remainders over, and that the mother was then living; therefore he gave to his said wife, in case of his death in the life-time of his mother, an annuity of 60*l.* during the mother's life, to be paid by his executors, and he charged his messuages and premises wherein he dwelt, and his messuage, staith, and premises in the High Street in Kingston upon Hull, and all his estate there, with the payment thereof; and declared that, on the death of his mother, the annuity should cease. And he devised all his lands and premises purchased by him in Outnewton to his mother, her heirs, and assigns; and he ordered and directed that all his just debts should be paid; and in case his personal estate should, on account of any losses, be rendered not sufficient to pay all his just debts, he charged all his messuages and premises and real estate whatever (except the lands in Outnewton, settled on his marriage and the lands devised to his mother) with the payment of all his just debts. And in case his personal estate (save what he had thereby given to his wife and daughters) should fall short in payment of all his just debts, he directed that the defendants Prime and Moxon, or the survivor of them or his heirs, should sell all his messuages and estate in Kingston upon Hull, charged as aforesaid, with his messuages in Wincomely, and his close in Beverley, and all other his real estate (except as aforesaid), or such other part or parts thereof as should, with his personal estate, be sufficient to pay all his just debts, and to apply the money arising therefrom, together with the money arising from his personal estate, for the payment of all his just debts. He gave all the surplus money, arising as well from the sale of all or any part of his real estate, as also from his personal estate, to his wife and two daughters, and devised to them all his estate which should not be sold for payment of his debts, and appointed Prime and Moxon executors.

This cause was first heard at the Rolls, 16 & 17 June, 1766, when the late Sir Thomas Sewall determined that the assets arising from the sale of the estate were to be considered as equitable assets, upon the ground that the devise was to the executors and their heirs, observing, at the same time, that it would be otherwise if the devise had been merely to the executors. He said, by this devise, the descent was broken at law, and the only special circumstance was, that of the trustees and their heirs taking the real together with the personal estate. From this decree there was an appeal to the Lord Chancellor, who on the 8th of March, 1768, affirmed the same, and delivered a very elaborate argument, to the following purport, of which the reporter has been so fortunate as to obtain a very accurate note.

Lord Chancellor. — When this appeal was argued, I thought the question depended so much upon the general doctrine of legal and equitable assets, that I desired time to look into the cases, to see what general rules had been established upon that subject; for all doubtful points are decided by an application of general principles to the particular case.

Where trustees for the payment of debts are made executors, the printed cases had ruled the assets to be legal. This caused me to doubt, because I had always understood the doctrine of this Court was the reverse, and, therefore, I thought it necessary to look back to the origin of this business, and to fix the principle.

Where an estate is devised to trustees for the payment of debts generally, it has long been the constant practice of the Court to pay all the debts pari passu. This is declared in the case of Woolstoncroft v. Long, 1 Cha. Ca. 32. And the same is again laid down in 2 Cha. Ca. 54. Anonymous.

As the money, in these cases, never reaches the hands of the executors, no action lay; and the creditor was obliged to come into this Court for satisfaction.

Whereupon, equity not being tied down to the rule of law, introduced a new method of administration. And seeing the testator had made no distinction between the difference of securities given for the payment of debts, the Court conceived that the testator meant to do equal justice to all his creditors.

Nor did the Court, in this respect, do any injury to specialty creditors. For, though real estates are assets, at law, to pay such debts, yet the creditor might be defeated by the debtor's will, or the heir's alienation. So that where the will had set aside the law, equity would have forgot its own principle of equality, by giving a priority, which the testator had not done; — all debts being equal in conscience.

Upon this ground, the statute of fraudulent devises allowed devises for the payment of debts to be good, though the act annulled every other devise to the prejudice of specialty creditors.

This I consider as a parliamentary approbation of equitable assets, which, standing as it does, upon such ground of justice, the testator's intention, the rule of equality, and the sanction of the legislature, ought always to preponderate, in a doubtful case; and Sir Joseph Jekyll's opinion in Coxe's case, 3 Wms. 344. should be always remembered, who said, he would always do his utmost to extend the rule.

Where

1782.

NEWTON
against BENNET.

[ *139 ]

1782.

NEWTON
against BENNET.

[ *140 ]

shall not occasion the produce of it when sold, to be applied as it would in [*] the ecclesiastical court, but it must nevertheless be considered

Where the trustee is not executor, the case is clear.

Where the land is charged with the debts, it is clear likewise. (6)

But, where the testator put the trust into the executor's hands, there was a considerable doubt, how to distinguish the capacities of the two characters: as executor, the assets were legal; as trustee, they were equitable.

The law had determined, that where land was devised to be sold by executors, or devised to executors to be sold, in both cases the assets were legal. — In this respect, the law made no difference between the interest and the power, and that is evident. Any person who will peruse Co. Litt. 112. b. 113. a. with any attention, will be of that opinion, and all the cases in Ro. Abr. under that head, speak the same language.

These kind of devises had been so frequent at law, and the determination so uniform, that they seemed, for a time to have overpowered the courts of equity; for I find that almost all the printed cases followed this rule, and made the assets legal.

So is Girling v. Lee, 1 Vern. 63. Anonymous, 2 Vern. 133. Greaves and Powell, 2 Vern. 249. Two strong cases in Prec. Chan. Clutterbuck v. Smith, 127. Bickham v. Freeman, 136. Bunbury, 339. Lord Masham v. Harding.

Lord King, in the case of Walker and Meager [2 P. W. 549.] Mos. 204. which I don't well understand, avoided the point.

These authorities did perplex me exceedingly; for I had all my time taken it for granted that the rule here was otherwise.

At last I find this note in Mr. Tracy's book, Lewin v. Oakley, 2 Atkyns, p. 50.

July 26th, 1740. "Devise to trustees for payment of debts, and the same persons are made executors. — The assets, said the Court, shall, notwithstanding, be equitable and not legal. There are cases in Vernon where it is held, that debts in such cases shall be paid in a course of administration, but the modern resolutions have been otherwise."

I sent to the Register's book, and find, that was the very point of the cause; and, upon the Master's report, Lord Hardwicke determined that the simple contract, and the specialty debts should be paid pari passu.

The words of the will were: Testator devised his estate to A. and B. and their heirs, in trust to sell the same, and, thereout, in the first place, to pay his debts, and appointed them executors.

And now, I think the old rule is overthrown, and that wherever the land itself is devised to the same persons who are executors, the assets will be equitable.

And I hold the case to be the same whenever the land is devised to them, or to them and their heirs, for in both cases they are equitable trustees. The descent is broke, (7) and the specialty creditors have lost their fund.

And I can hardly now suggest a case where the assets would be legal, but where the executor has a naked power to sell quâ executor.

What I have said shews that this Court has justly a partiality and predilection to equitable assets, which ought to turn the scale, in all cases where the matter hangs in equal balance.

This disquisition is, therefore, not proper, though it must be admitted, that, in the present case the trustees and executors have no more than a naked power; for nothing is devised to them, and, therefore, the doctrine I have laid down is not directly applicable to this case; but two rules are obtained.

1. It is a good rule of expounding wills, to make them speak in favour of equitable assets, if it may be done.

2. That if you can lodge the assets in the hands of the trustees, the Court will never put them in the hands of the executors; and when one person is invested with both characters, the trustee shall be preferred.

To come to the case.

1. The testator's will does most emphatically direct the payment of all his just debts.

I can never think, that a man who does, repeatedly, and so anxiously provide for the payment of all, could ever mean, by legal preference, to pay some, and leave the rest unpaid.

2. The power is lodged not in executors solely, but in them or their heirs; and it is clear

(6) See the references in the first note to the principal case, and Hargrave v. Tyndal, antea, in Mr. Brown's note.

(7) But it is the same as to a mere charge, where the descent is not broken; for the intention is the main thing. "It would be more accurate to say, that it must appear upon the will that the testator meant the descent to be broken." Per Lord Eldon C. 7 Ves. 323.

as equitable assets. — The decree is right, and must be affirmed: — As it happens other creditors have obtained † similar decrees as to this very estate, which stand unimpeached. Decree affirmed. ‡ 1782.

NEWTON
against BRUNET.

clear that the money could never be assets in the hands of the executor's heir, nor could the creditor ever maintain his action against such heir.

Nor is it any answer to this objection, to say, that the word heir is inserted by mistake, or to be resembled to those cases where personal estate is given to a man and his heirs, or real estate to a man and his executors.

In these cases, the subject matter of the devise points out the proper succession, and the literal will is nonsense.

But here, the word heirs has a useful and proper meaning, for it converts the executor into a trustee, and makes the assets equitable, which is a favourite point in this Court.

But it has been said, that the testator has, here, united both funds together in the hands of his trustees and executors, and therefore both must be one consolidated fund, to follow the same course of administration.

For the words are, that they shall apply money arising from the real estate, together with the monies arising from his personal estate, to pay, &c.

The answer is, that in all cases, where the trustees and executor are one person, the funds are consolidated in the same manner — for, out of both, he is to pay all his debts.

But the course of administration is different, and, by that very method, it is, that the Court is enabled to pay all the debts without distinction, as far as the assets will go, and, by marshalling both kinds of assets, makes them amicably combine to answer the full intention of the testator.

3. This is the case of a charge upon the lands.

They are devised to the testator's wife and daughters subject to this charge.

In this respect it is a trust, and no more to be sold than what is necessary for this purpose.

The power, then, to sell is merely consequential, the testator having named the executor for this purpose. The Court would have compelled the devisees. — Whoever sells to satisfy a charge must be a trustee, because a charge is a trust.

To make this still clearer,

The rents and profits in the hands of the devisees are assets before the sale. Legal assets they cannot be, for the executors have no right to receive them. They must therefore be equitable assets.

And, if it be once admitted that any one part of the land is equitable assets, the whole must be the same, for the trust is one and the same trust throughout.

Decree affirmed.

† Three other causes had been heard, viz. Spencer v. Moore, before Lord Hardwicke; Bathel v. Moore, before Sir John Strange; and Yard v. Moore, before Lord Northington, upon this very will, and the question determined in the same manner with the present.

‡ The case of Barker v. Boucher, which was on several times at the Rolls, but particularly, as to this point, on the 15th day of July, 1784, was thus: Robert Burton made his will containing, among other things, the following direction: "As touching all such real and temporal estate, as it hath pleased Almighty God to bestow upon me, I give and dispose thereof as followeth; first, my will is that my debts and funeral expences be paid and discharged by my executrix; my will is, that my executrix shall sell three closes out of my estate at Hessey called Knapton Moor Closes, to pay my debts," and made his wife executrix. The personal estate was deficient, and, upon a bill filed by the plaintiff, a simple contract creditor, on behalf of himself and the other simple contract creditors, his Honour was pleased to declare, that the money produced by the sale, and the intermediate rents of those closes ordered to be sold, were to be considered as equitable assets, and ordered the same to be paid pari passu among the creditors, whether by specialty, or simple contract. See to the same purpose, Batson v. Ludgven, vol. 2. p. 94.

WIRDMAN [WIRDNAM] against KENT. [20th April.]

Appeal from the Rolls.

(Reg. Lib. 1781. B. fol. 295.)

[S. C. 2 Dick.
594. S. P. Williams v. Begnon, ibid. 595.]

THIS was a bill by trustees of John Smith, to whom he had conveyed estates to be sold for payment of debts, against the defendants the purchasers of certain lots, and against John Smith himself, for

There shall not be an appeal or re-hearing for costs only.

1782.

WIRDMAN against KENT.

[ *141 ]

for specific performance of this agreement, for the sale of the premises. Defendants by their answers, objected that the plaintiffs could not make a good title, and, in particular, that the terriers, delivered by the plaintiffs, were so incorrect, that several parts of the lands could not be found; that other parcels were stated to be freehold, which turned out to be copyhold; and that lots were terrièred to them which were sold to another person; and others not the property of John Smith, but [*] of his father. Upon the hearing, it was referred to the Master to see whether the plaintiffs could make a good title. — Before the Master, the several objections were taken; but he, not thinking it competent to him to go into them, the parties agreed to state the facts in a paper to accompany his report, that plaintiffs could make a good title; and a decree was made for a specific performance; and, as to the lands terrièred to defendants, but which had been sold to one Povey, that the plaintiffs should procure Povey to release them to the defendants, or convey a like quantity of land, of equal value, to the defendants, but without costs on either side. From this decree, the defendants appealed to Lord Chancellor, on the ground that, although the agreements were entered into in 1774, they were in possession of no part till 1780, and the plaintiffs had not yet enabled themselves to complete their part of the agreement; that, therefore, from the difference of value of lands and money, between 1774 and the [time of presenting the petition of appeal,] the defendants ought not now to be compelled to perform them: that the decree was wrong in compelling the defendants to take other lands instead of those terrièred to them, but sold to Povey, in case Povey should refuse to release them (which as yet he had only done conditionally, and the condition not performed); and, particularly, that they ought to have their costs, the suit being by the plaintiffs, who could not perform their part of the contract, and the costs thereof part of the expence of making out the title. And, this seeming the serious ground (1) of appeal, Lord Chancellor dismissed it, and affirmed the decree (2); saying the case in Vesey, (Owen against Griffith, 1 Ves. 250.) where the appeal for costs was admitted, was, upon such an apparent mistake (3), that, upon motion before enrollment, the minutes of the decree would have been altered; and affirmed the doctrine of Lord Hardwicke in that case.†

† There was a case, Cooper [Cowper] and Scott, before Lord Henley (4), November 19. 1757, a rehearing after a decree by Lord Hardwicke, in which costs came to be the only matter in dispute. The question was, whether there could be a rehearing for costs only, and a difference taken at the bar, between the case of costs, charged on the person (where it was admitted there should be no rehearing) and costs out of the estate; and Owen and Griffith was cited. Lord Keeper said a rehearing for costs only ought not to be encouraged, because they are merely discretionary, and depend on circumstances, but thought there might, on particular circumstances, be such rehearing. — He affirmed the decree.

(1) The serious ground of appeal, was the different value of land and money between 1774 and 1780, increased by the injury the estate had received in the mean time. Lord Rodesdale's MS. note, and note to the third edition. It appears also, from Reg. Lib. that the petition of appeal insisted there should have been a reference for the Master to enquire whether the estate had received any and what injury by the adverse possession, &c.

(2) “ But in case the lands mentioned to be in the possession of T. Povey were not conveyed at the time when the Master should settle the conveyance, it was ordered that the Master should settle what compensation ought to be made out of the purchase monies in respect of such lands.” — The deposit which had been made by the defendant the petitioner, to be paid to the plaintiff. R. L.

(3) Lord Thurlow, surely, could have said no such thing; for the report in Vesey of the judgment seems most accurate; and Ld. H. expressly says the case (which it is evident he had well considered) formed a sound exception to the general rule. Besides this observation of the Editor, see the decree actually made by Lord Hardwicke on the appeal, stated in the Editor's late edition of Vesey, sen. 1 vol. 250. note. See 1 Eden, 17.

(4) 1 Eden's Ca. Ch. 17.

1782.

[ *142 ]

[*] HARLAND against TRIGG.

(Reg. Lib. 1781. A. fol. 340.)

RICHARD Harland, being seised in fee of the manor of Sutton in the county of York, and having four sons, Philip, John, Richard (the plaintiff), and Francis; by his will in 1747, devised the said manor (with other lands) to Philip, the eldest son, for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, remainder to John, the second son, for life, remainder to the plaintiff for life, remainder to Richard for life, with like remainders to their several first and other sons, and with further remainders over. Richard, the father, died in 1750, Philip entered, and, being himself also possessed of leasehold estates in Sutton, some for lives, and others for years, by his will, made in the year 1764, gave his leasehold estate for lives to the trustees of his father's will, to the same uses to which the lands devised by the father's will were limited, so far as by law he could; and then followed this clause, "And all other my leasehold estates in the parish or township of Sutton, I give to my brother John Harland for ever, hoping he will continue them in the family." Philip died in 1766. John entered on the estate, and died in 1772, having made his will and given these leasehold estates to his widow, whom he made executrix, and who since married the defendant Trigg. Richard, the third son, filed this bill, insisting the devise in Philip's will subjected these estates to the same uses as those declared by the father's will, that he was, therefore, entitled to the next estate in remainder, and praying that it might be so declared.

Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Madocks, Mr. Ainge, and Mr. Spranger contended, that John had an estate only for life; they argued, that a request in a will is sufficient to raise a trust, and is equivalent to a devise; for this they cited Harding v. Glynn, 1 Atk. 469.—The case upon the will of Wortley Montague, in the House of Lords†,—Richardson v. Chapman, also in the House of Lords (5 Brown's Parlt. Cases, 400.) and contended that, here, the intention must be that the estates should go to the uses in the father's will.

Lord Chancellor.—I have no doubt but a requisition made with a clear object will amount to a trust. In the case of the Duchess [*] of Buckingham's will, the words were very gentle, but had a distinct object. (4) But where the words are not clear, as to their object,

Words of [confidence,] desire, or request in order to raise a trust, must [not only attach on a precise subject of property. (1) but also describe with precision the objects of bounty. (2) In this case a bequest of leaseholds to a brother, "hoping he will continue them in the family," (3) was held insufficient.]

[ *143 ]

† Earl of Bute v. Stuart, 5 Brown's Parlt. Cases, 534. [1 vol. 476. Toml. edit.]

(1) See Wynne v. Hawkins, post. 179, &c. accordingly, and also the references there and in the next notes.

(2) See per Lord Thurlow afterwards on this decision of his in Nowlan v. Nelligan; post. 491.; the references in the above and following note; and especially per Lord Eldon C. in Wright v. Atkyns, Coop. Ca. Ch. 117, 118.

(3) The decision in the principal case has never been disapproved; see Cooper, Ca. Ch. 121, 122.; but Lord Eldon C. found himself much distressed in the case of Wright v. Atkyns, by the sense in which the word "family" has been applied in questions of this nature. See that case on the appeal, Cooper's Ca. Ch. 111. 117. et seq. with the references. All the material cases, with their distinctions, will be found by referring to Wright v. Atkyns in its several stages. 17 Ves. 255. et seq. 1 Ves. & B. 513. and Coop. Ca. Ch. 111. et seq. Also in Pushnan v. Filliter, 3 Ves. 7, &c.; Brown v. Higgs, 4 Ves. 708. 5 Ves. 495. 8 Ves. 561, &c.; Wynne v. Hawkins, post. 179.; Parsons v. Baker, 18 Ves. 476, &c.; Prevost v. Clarke, 2 Madd. R. 458.; and Forbes v. Ball, 3 Merivale, 437, &c.

(4) See in Malim v. Keighley, 2 Ves. jun. 531, 532, 533, &c.

1782.

HARLAND
against TRIGG.

they cannot raise a trust. Where this testator had a leasehold estate, which he meant should go to the family, he has used apt words; therefore, where he has not used such words, he had a different intent.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Lloyd, for the defendant, argued that by the word family, he had not pointed out any particular branch of the family; although relations is a well known technical word, family is not; the devise would have been satisfied by giving it to any branch of the family. (5) They further observed, that in the former devise he had given the lands he meant to go together, to trustees, in accurate language, and that, if he had intended these estates to be under the same trusts, he would have used the same words.

Mr. Attorney General, in reply, insisted there was a manifest attention to the object contended for by the plaintiffs, from the circumstance of the testator's passing by his daughters and giving it to John Harland. This shewed that by family he did not mean children, and said that, if the subject of the devise had been personal property, as the goods in his house, it would have been sufficient to have made those goods heir-looms.

Lord Chancellor. — I think every will ought to be construed according to the intent of the testator, where it can be collected. In order to make a title, the plaintiff states, that the father had settled his estates in strict settlement, and insists that I shall understand this devise as giving the leasehold estates to the same uses as nearly as their nature will admit. The testator gives other estates to trustees, subject to charges, to the uses in that settlement; he, therefore, understood how to make his estates liable to those uses, and intended something different here. The argument is, that there will be part of the will ineffectual, the words hoping that he will continue them in the family: the answer is that the words are precatory, not imperative. Another argument made use of is, that, if this was furniture, the devise would carry it: but if so, it would be on this ground, that he recollected that the house would pass, and meant the furniture should remain attached to it under all its limitations;—that case has peculiarities that do not occur here. It would be a great deal too much to tye this up as a strict settlement. I had a doubt whether the family [*] could not claim some interest in the subject, but, when I come to consider, I take the rule of law to be this — that two things must concur to constitute these devises, the terms and the object. Hoping is in contradistinction to a direct devise, — but, whenever there are annexed to such words, precise and direct objects, the law has connected the whole together, and held the words sufficient to raise a trust, (6) but then the objects must be distinct: — where there is a choice, it must be in the power of the devisee to dispose of it either way. (7) If he had sold these leaseholds, the family could not have taken them from the vendee, or if he had given them to any one part of the family, the others could have no remedy. (8) The will does not import a devise, as the

(5) See Lord Eldon C.'s observations on this case, Cooper's Ca. Ch. 121, 122.

(6) See the references in Mr. Brown's note supra. Massey v. Sherman, Ambler, 520. and the Editor's references in the former notes to this case, &c.; Malim v. Keighly, 2 Ves. jun. 333. 529. 533. and the cases there mentioned; Paul v. Compton, 8 Ves. 575. 380. Et vide per Lord Eldon C. in Morice v. Bp. Durham, 10 Ves. 527. 535, &c.; per Lord Hardwicke C. in Madlicot v. Bowes, 1 Ves. 207, 208.; et per Lord Eldon C. 18 Ves. 41. As to mixed cases of trust and power, see Cole v. Wade, 16 Ves. 27, &c. and the cases referred to.

(7) Chapman's case, 3 Dyer, 333. which case has been confirmed by Cousden v. Clarke, Hob. 33. See Coop. Ch. Ca. 117.

(8) See Forbes v. Ball, 3 Merivale, 43.

words do not clearly demonstrate an object. I am therefore of opinion, that the bill must be dismissed. † (9) 1782.

HARLAND
against TALOG.

† According to the doctrine of this case, several others have been decided. Mason v. Low, Tr. 8 Geo. 2. — Hands v. Hands, Rolls, 24 June 1782. — Wynne v. Hawkins, post. 179. — Nowlan v. Nolligan, post. 489. — and Pierson v. Garmet, post. vol. 2. p. 38. 226. with the cases there cited, in which the whole doctrine is investigated. [See also the Editor's notes.]

(9) Without costs. R. L.

SAMWELL against WAKE.

[S. C. 2 Dick.
597.]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. B. fol. 588.)

SIR Thomas Samwell, by his will, devised as follows: "I will and " desire that my debts and legacies shall be paid, and, for that pur" pose, I charge all my estate with the same, and that it may be more " easily done, that Sir William Wake, and John Peach Hungerford, (the " defendants) and their heirs, shall sell the estate, and apply the money " to the payment of debts and legacies, and that it may be lawful to them " to pay out of the rents and profits, or to raise the money by mortgage." and, subject to the debts and legacies, he devised to the plaintiff (his natural son) for life, with remainders over: he then gave several pecuniary legacies, and gave the residue to the plaintiff. The plaintiff filed this bill to compel the trustees to pay the debts and legacies out of the real estate, insisting that he took the personal estate exonerated of them.

In order to exonerate the personal estate
from the payment of debts and legacies, it is necessary, not merely to charge the real estate, but the will must exempt the personal estate.

Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Madocks, and Mr. Hollet, for the plaintiff, argued, from the frame of the devise, that the testator seemed sedulous to throw the burthen of the debts and legacies upon the real estate, and to exempt the personal. — They contended that no reason was given, in any of the cases, for charging the personal estate, except that it was the primary fund, and therefore to be applied, unless where the testator had shewn it to be his intention to exempt it and substitute another: but, where such [*] intention appeared, that rule did not apply. For this they cited Adams v. Meyrick, 1 Eq. Abr. 271. — Wainwright v. Bend-lowes, 2 Vern. 718. — Stapleton v. Colville, Forrester, 202. — *Kynaston
v. Kynaston*. † — Philips v. Nicholas, 1774, where it was so determined in the case of a widow with a very large jointure. — Anderton v. Cooke ‡, in 1775, where part of the lands were ordered to be sold, to pay debts, and the residue of the personalty given: the charge was held to exempt the personal estate; and Holliday v. Bowman, 6th December 1776, where William Chapman devised a manor to trustees, in trust to sell, and directed the monies to be raised thereby, to be paid in discharge of all his debts, and after payment thereof, in the first place to invest the residue, and pay the interest to his wife for life, and the principal, after her decease, to his nephew, and, after several specific and pecuniary legacies, gave to his wife all his goods and chattels, and appointed her executrix. Upon a bill brought to establish the will, and to have the manor sold for payment of the debts, the widow insisting the personalty was exempted; Lord Chancellor, at first thought it was not, but, upon considering the cases, and especially that of Kynaston v. Kynaston, decreed that the personalty was exempted from the debts, but was subject to the funeral expences and legacies, and decreed accordingly. They [ *145 ]

† Stated post. p. 457. n.

‡ Stated post. p. 456. n.

1782.

SAMWELL
against WAKE.

further observed, that, in the present case, the personalty was very small, only about 500*l.* and the debts so considerable, near 13,000*l.* that they must swallow it up, and render the bequest totally nugatory, a circumstance which had been relied upon in the decision of a similar case, Bamfield v. Wyndham, Pre. Ch. 101. where Lord Chancellor took notice, that the debts were more than the personal estate amounted to, and, therefore, that the testator must mean his wife to have it exempted from his debts, or he could mean nothing.

Mr. Newnham was beginning on the other side, but Lord Chancellor stopped him.

Lord Chancellor. — I believe it is very clear that here is not enough to exonerate the personal estate. The personal estate is the proper fund, — in order to exempt it the testator must express his intent. It is not sufficient to charge the real; but he must shew that his purpose is, that the personal should not be applied. The words to be attended to are those relative to the personal estate. — He gives pecuniary legacies, and then, by a [*] very loose clause, gives the residue to Samwell. I am called upon to construe the most large and loose residuary clause that ever was seen in such a way as to change the natural order of payment. Where the intent is strongly expressed, and it is for near relations, old cases have carried the matter further than good sense, without precedents, would have done; but none of the cases apply to the present. Therefore the personal estate must be first applied to the payment of the debts and legacies. †

[ *146 ]

† See Webb v. Jones, Easter 1786, vol. 2. p. 60.

CLIVE against WALSH. [23 & 24 April.]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. A. fol. 291. entered Clive v. Lord Clive.)

Lord Clive provided by his will a maintenance for his second son, out of the real estate; he afterwards gave large legacies to his younger children, with maintenances out of the interest; the second son entitled to both maintenances.

THE late Lord Clive, by his will, devised a specific landed estate to trustees, for a term of years, with remainder to his son Robert (his second son) for life, with remainders over. The trusts of the term were to raise a maintenance till 21, then to pay him an annuity of 1000*l.* till he should attain the age of 25 years, when the estate was to vest in possession, and to apply the savings to form a personal fund for other purposes. He then gave his personal estate also to trustees; he gave to Robert, and each of his younger sons, 30,000*l.* and to each of his daughters, 20,000*l.* at 25, in the mean while to raise maintenances till 21, and from thence to pay 1200*l.* per ann. to the boys till 25. Lady Clive filed this bill to have the two allowances for the second son during his minority.

Lord Chancellor. — There is not sufficient in this will to extract any thing from it, but what is expressed. The trust of the term is to raise maintenances, but there is a further intent to take the profits till 25, and convert them into a personal fund for other purposes, and to provide an annuity till that age. The personal estate is to be laid out in good securities, and out of it he provides 30,000*l.* for Robert, he having then no other younger son; no interest is to be allowed, but a maintenance, so that Robert was, as to that maintenance, in contemplation, as well as the other younger sons. The argument that he shall not have this, because he has another provision, would apply equally to the annuities, from 21 till 25, and no one could say he was not to have the two annuities. He has given more by way of maintenance to the son, to whom he he has given a larger estate. (1) It must be referred to the Master what allowance should be made, and the rest must accumulate for the use of Robert.

1782.

CLIVE against WALSH.

(1) The Court "declared that, according to the true construction of the will, the plaintiff was entitled as well to the provision thereby for his maintenance and education out of the rents and profits of the real estates comprised in the term mentioned for those purposes, as to the provisions made for his maintenance and education out of the testator's personal estate, or out of the annual dividends to arise therefrom." Reg. Lib.

[*] DUFF against DALZELL.

[ *147 ]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. A. fol. 391. Entered Duff v. Wilson.)

GIBSON Dalzell, by will had given several shares in the Sun Fire Office, to Frances Dalzell his daughter, and, after her decease, to such persons as she by her will should direct. He also devised real and personal estate in Jamaica, in moieties, the one moiety to Frances for life, and, after her decease, to such person as she by will should direct; the other moiety to Robert in like manner. Frances, by her will, reciting that of her father, disposed of the Sun Fire shares [and the personal estate in Jamaica], and also, by that will, devised the real estate, but the will was not duly executed to pass the latter, being in the presence of two witnesses only.

Will made under a power, but not duly attested to pass real estate, a good execution of the power quoad the personalty. (1)

Mr. Mansfield insisted the power was ill executed, because she had given the real estate to one child only.

Mr. Scott (on the same side) said that it was taken for granted, in several cases, that, where the power is to be executed by will, it must be a will executed according to the statute of frauds, for the testator meant the instrument to be such as would dispose of the real estate.

Lord Chancellor over-ruled the distinction, and said the will being sufficient to pass the personal estate, seemed a good execution of the power so far. (2)

(1) And so in general, where there has been an excess in the execution of a power, it will yet be held good pro tanto; i. e. for so much as is warranted by the power. Hervey v. Hervey. 1 Atk. 561. 569.; E. Tyrconnel v. D. Ancaster, 2 Ves. 503.; Bristow v. Warde, 2 Ves. jun. 336, &c.

(2) The decree, after a declaration as to the Sun Fire Office shares, "declared also, that the personal estate in question lying in the island of Jamaica belonged to the defendant the infant." An inquiry directed as to what it amounted unto; and the Master was ordered to appoint two proper persons to be trustees of the [personal] estate in question, and to make a separate report thereof. R. L.

HEATH against HEATH.

(Reg. Lib. 1781. A. fol. 253. b.)

This stood for judgment on an exception to the Master's report.

LORD Chancellor.—This is a bill for specific performance of an agreement for the purchase of an estate, the question arises upon Devise to E. H. for ever, that is, if he have a son or sons who shall attain 21, but if E. H. should chance to die without son or sons to inherit, my will is that the son of my son W. H. shall inherit. This is a fee-simple (1) to E. H. with an executory devise to the son of W. H.

(1) But see the following notes.

1782.

HEATH
against HEATH.

[ *148 ]

the title, whether the plaintiff, by the will of Edward Heath, can make good a title to the purchaser. Edward Heath, gave to William Heath his son, all his estate, until Edward Heath the plaintiff should attain his age of 22 years, and no longer;— he afterwards says, item, I give and bequeath unto Edward Heath all my messuages in Hemblington and Clofield, for ever, that is, if he have a son or sons, who shall attain 21, but, if my kinsman Edward Heath should chance to die without son or sons to inherit, my will is that the son of my son William Heath shall [*] inherit. The question is, what estate Edward Heath the plaintiff took by virtue of this devise. — Of all the constructions which have been put, there are only two attended with any probability of being true. 1. That he had an estate-tail, and this is the construction put by the Master's report. In order to do this, the words must have been understood as stopping at Edward Heath, and then "for ever, if he have a son, &c." would be a contingent fee-simple on his having a son to attain 21. If so, the fee-simple would never vest in Edward Heath, unless the son should attain 21, during his life, so that at present it would be only an estate for life. (2) — 2. But the words are capable of a greater extension by implication; as, where an estate is given to one for life, but if he shall die without issue male, remainder over, it will make an estate-tail, and I suppose, by the devise over, it was held to be a fee-tail, with a contingent fee upon the clause, or a substituted fee, in the room of the fee-tail. This latter is so new that I could not adopt it, but would support the Master's report. It appears the intention was, generally, to give the estate to Edward Heath, but that if he had no son, capable of inheriting, then that the estate which he had given absolutely, should go to another designation of heirs, and this is the true idea of an executory devise, which is where the testator gives absolutely, but upon an event to happen, gives to another designation of heirs. This construction will carry into effect as many of the words made use of to express the testator's intent as may be. It would be quite new to sever the words "for ever," &c. from the gift. Then it is a gift of a fee. But what is to be said of the words, if he shall have a son who shall attain 21? It would be harsh to say they shall suspend the fee. It appears therefore that at 22 it did vest in Edward, and the clause must not be taken by itself but as part of the former. — If he shall have such son — but if he shall not — which I interpret — have such son, then to the son of William Heath. Then the effect will be — that it is given for ever, but if Edward should die without issue, or the issue should not attain 21, then over. If this is the true construction, it is a fee to Edward Heath (3), subject to an executory devise, which he at present cannot by any conveyance defeat. For a court of equity to compel a party to take an estate which it cannot warrant to him, would be an extraordinary proceeding. (4) Edward, therefore, cannot make a title, and the exception must be allowed.

(2) The Master having certified that the plaintiff had an estate in tail, this was the point made by the exception which insisted that the plaintiff was only tenant for life; and it is observable that the exception thus taken was allowed, without any declaration that the party had a fee-simple subject to the executory devise. See R. L.

(3) The exception, which was allowed, insisted that the plaintiff was only tenant for life. R. L.

(4) The Court, however, does not warrant a title purchased under its directions. 3 Meriv. 225.

1782.

[*149]

[*] FRANCIS BARKER, Student of Wadham College, Oxford, Plaintiff.

JOHN VANSOMMER, a Silk-throwster, JAMES VANSOMMER and PETER PAUL, Mercers, PETER PRITCHARD, FRANCIS RYBOT and GILKS, personal Representative of — ALCAN a Jew, Defendants.

(Reg. Lib. 1781. A. fol. 581.)

PLAINTIFF wanting to raise a sum of money, immediately after his coming of age, applied to Alcan, a Jew, for that purpose; Alcan recommended Pritchard. — The plaintiff told Pritchard he was of age, and wanted 1500*l*. Pritchard told him that Vansommer and Paul would let him have goods to that amount, which he might afterwards dispose of. — Upon Pritchard applying to Paul, Paul took some days to enquire into plaintiff's circumstances and age, and was then satisfied; the plaintiff was entitled to an estate of 1200*l*. in reversion, and likewise about 6000*l*. in money. Vansommer and Paul agreed to let the plaintiff have silks to the amount. The plaintiff went to choose the silks, and Alcan attended, recommended some silks and objected to others — Vansommer and Paul packed up silks to the amount of 2224*l*. and desired the plaintiff to take them all — the plaintiff gave a note as follows: "I promise to pay to Messrs. Vansommer and Co. or order, the sum of 2224*l*. on the 13th day of December, 1778, for value received, this 14th day of December, 1777, by me F. Barker, of Wadham College, Oxford." The silks, amounting to 1777 pieces, were sent and delivered to Alcan, by the plaintiff's directions, Alcan introduced Rybot as a person to buy the silks. Rybot offered 1000*l*. for all the silks, or 700*l*. for the plain ones alone — both these were rejected, but the plaintiff afterwards sold him part of them for 600*l*.; the remainder were taken away, and put up to auction, without plaintiff's knowledge, and bought in by Rybot for 199*l*. — The promissory note was afterwards indorsed to the defendant John Vansommer, by the defendants James Vansommer and Paul, in payment of a balance of 824*l*. due from Vansommer and Paul to John Vansommer, and John gave his note of hand (not negociable) for the remainder of the 2224*l*. — The bill was brought to compel the defendants to deliver up the plaintiff's promissory [*] note, upon payment of what the silks really produced upon sale, &c. John Vansommer by his answer says, that the promissory note was indorsed to him, upon a balance of an account then subsisting between him (as a silk-throwster) and the other defendants James Vansommer and Paul, and denies any notice of fraud, or any dealings with Pritchard, Rybot, or Alcan. James Vansommer and Peter Paul, by their answer, deny any knowledge of the circumstances previous to the 24th December 1777 — say that Pritchard then applied to the defendant Paul for some silks, that the defendant Alcan chose the silks; admit the note, say that the silks were in good condition, and sold at a fair price, deny all knowledge of the subsequent transactions with Rybot; say they do not know what became of the silks afterwards; that they never promised the plaintiff not to negotiate the note, that they indorsed it in payment of 824*l*. to John Vansommer, and that the remainder was made up by a note from John Vansommer. By their further answer they say, that all the old fashioned silks were, on that account, sold considerably under prime cost. — Francis Rybot, by his answer, admits that he was sent to by Alcan to see the silks, that the next day he saw Alcan and Pritchard, and offered 1000*l*.

Bond, given for silks taken up in order to sell to raise money, to be delivered up, upon payment of the sum really raised.

[*150]

1782.

BARKER
against
VANSOMMER.

for the whole, which was refused, that he afterwards bought part for 700*l.* and paid it; that 700*l.* was the full value of what he bought; that he understood them to be the property of the plaintiff, that he afterwards purchased more of them for 199*l.* — Alcan, by his answer, admits that he was present at the sale of the silks, that he looked over them for the plaintiff; that he brought Rybot to purchase them; says that the remainder of the silks were taken away by Rybot, in consequence of his having advanced a further sum of 150*l.* to the plaintiff.

Mr. Scott, for the plaintiff, argued, that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief prayed, and cited the case of Cecil against Sutton and Rown-tree, in the Exchequer. There the defendants supplied the plaintiff with goods, in order to enable him to negotiate a note. The Court of Exchequer granted an injunction, till the amount which the goods sold for should appear. — In Lord Polwarth v. Cooke, Lord Polwarth had applied to Cooke to obtain 150*l.* Cooke gave him 60*l.* a gold watch, and a Cremona fiddle; the Court ordered an enquiry into what money Lord Polwarth really obtained by the sale, and upon payment of that sum, ordered the securities, entered into, to be given up.

[ *151 ]

[*] Mr. Erskine and Mr. Lloyd, for the defendants, contended, that, in the case of Lord Polwarth v. Cooke the transaction was merely borrowing money, whereas, here, the contract was emptio & venditio, and endeavoured, by that means, to distinguish it from the other case mentioned by Mr. Scott, and also from the case of Skyrme v. Rybot, where Skyrme was introduced by Lee, a broker, to Rybot, to borrow money; Rybot agreed to lend him 600*l.* on a bond, and warrant of attorney to confess judgment. He advanced 200*l.* in cash, and the remainder in goods. The decree was to take an account of the money really and bonâ fide advanced or paid, for the use and benefit, or which had come to the hands of the plaintiffs, and, upon payment thereof, the bond and warrant of attorney to be delivered up. — They cited the Duke of Ancaster v. Picket, where jewels were sold by Picket to the Duke, who sold them again for less money, and the Court of Exchequer would give no relief.

Lord Chancellor stated the case. Upon these circumstances, it comes to me to determine upon the complexion of the transaction. It is argued, by one gentleman, that this was a mere sale, that, therefore, the Court cannot look into it. I allow that, if this was in the common course of trade, it would be so. That was the reason, upon which the Court of Exchequer refused relief in the Duke of Ancaster's case. But I am to enquire whether, under the mask of trading, this is not a method of lending money, at an extraordinary rate of interest. There is no doubt that if they had talked of this as a loan of money, there would have been an end of the case. The question, then, is only whether there is any method of shewing the Court that they meant so, short of their treating of it as such, in plain language. — There is not a doubt, that, in this case, the transaction was merely for the purpose of raising money, to supply the necessities of this young man. Do they deny knowing the goods were to be sold? I take it, therefore, as an advancement of goods, instead of money, to supply his necessities. It is a question of more difficulty, what is the sum, of which the account is to be taken, whether the value of the goods, or the sum really made. In the case in Eq. Abr. 91. the Court thought proper to charge the person only with what he really made of the goods, and this is the proper rule; for the person advancing the goods, knows they are not to be sold in the shop, but in the lump, at a different kind of market, and that what can be got for them, in that way, is all that will redound to the benefit of the party to whom they are advanced; this lays [*] out of the case the value they were of, to be sold in the shop. His Lordship directed an account of what silks came to the hands of Rybot, and under der what contract, and with what privity, (1) and also of the value of the other goods, and an enquiry as to the endorsement of the note to John Vansommer, from Vansommer and Paul, and reserved further directions.

[ *152 ]

1782.

BARKER
against VANSOMMER.

(1) “ And whether the goods and silks sold under such contract were sold for a fair and reasonable price; and for whose benefit, and on whose account, and for whose behoof the same were sold: taking into consideration the circumstances and time and place of such sale. An arrangement was made as to the balance existing between the defendants; and the injunction was continued.” R. L.

WILLIAMS against WILLIAMS. [30 April and 1 May.]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. B. fol. 584. b.)

BY indentures previous to the marriage of Jeffery Williams and Frances Jackson an infant, bearing date 10th of June, 1745, it was agreed, that 700*l.* advanced by Jeffery Williams, and 700*l.* advanced for Frances Jackson by her uncle, who was her guardian, and had not accounted for her fortune, should be laid out in lands, which should be settled upon Jeffery for life, with remainder to trustees, to pay 40*l.* per ann. to Frances for life, remainder for a term of years, to raise 600*l.* for younger children, remainder to first and other sons in tail, remainder to daughters, &c. In the deed, there was a proviso, by which Williams covenanted that all sums of money, &c. which should come to Frances, or to him, in her right, (3) from the mother, or otherwise, should be applied or vested in trustees, to the same uses with the 1400*l.* The mother, by a deed 29th December, 1746, in consideration of love and affection, conveyed an estate to the use of herself for life, remainder to Thomas Jackson (her son) in tail, remainder, as to a moiety, to Frances for life, remainder to her first and other sons, with power of revocation. Thomas, the son, having become lunatic, the mother, by her will, revoked the deed, and declared that the trustees should stand seised for the use of Frances, until Thomas should recover or die, and, after his decease, she gave the estate to Frances for life, remainder to her first and other sons. — She died 1754. — By deed, between Jeffery and his wife, 31st March, 1748, (4) reciting that he had laid out the 1400*l.* and 350*l.* more, he and Frances conveyed the lands so purchased (5) to trustees, to the uses in the settlement, Jeffery made his will, 3d December, 1761, and directed 350*l.* to be laid out in the purchase of a house, which should be to his wife for life, with remainder among the children. — He gave the wife 700*l.* which he desired, she, at her death, would divide among the children. He died in 1764, and, on his death, the [*] plaintiff the eldest son of Jeffery and Frances, became entitled to an estate-tail in the premises, subject to the charges. Some other estates came, from other quarters, to Frances during the coverture, and especially a chose in action, reduced by the husband into possession. And this bill was filed by the plaintiff, to render all these Covenant, in an infant's marriage settlement, that whatever should come to the wife from the mother or otherwise, shall be bound by the settlement, restrained to what shall come from the mother, not to property coming unexpectedly from other quarters. (1) To bind an infant, the marriage settlement must be fair and reasonable, and not tend to deprive her of every thing. (2)

[ *153 ]

(1) And even between adults, a release in ever so general terms, with a particular consideration recited, will be restrained to that particular subject which was in the parties' immediate contemplation. See Ramsden v. Hylton, 2 Ves. 304. 310. Vide also 1 Ves. 507.

(2) See the notes to Durnford v. Lane, ante 106.

(3) “ By or under any deed, will, or other act of the said Mary Jackson her mother, or otherwise howsoever.” R. L.

(4) 1758. R. L.

(5) Which were in Buglawton, in the county of Chester. R. L. Vide the decree, post. estates 1782.

WILLIAMS
against WILLIAMS.

estates subject to the marriage settlement, contending, that they were bound by the articles, and that the wife had, when adult, done acts in affirmance of the settlement, which however did not appear in evidence.

Mr. Scott, for the plaintiff, cited Cannel v. Buckle, 2 Wms. 243. — Harvey v. Ashley, 3 Atk. 607. — Lucy v. Moore, 3 Brown's Parl. Ca. 514. and Durnford v. Lane, (Hill, 1780, ante, 106.)

Lord Chancellor. — This is a bill filed by Jeffery Williams, the eldest son of the marriage, to have three different estates applied to the uses in the marriage articles. A residue of 1600*l.* or upwards, coming to the mother, an estate for life given to Frances, by her mother, and another estate which descended upon her in tail. It is impossible to read such a clause as this in a settlement by an infant without observation. It was never heard of, that a husband was permitted to covenant with an accounting party for an indemnity. — It goes to defeat any claim upon her to abide by this settlement, unless some ulterior act has been done by her to confirm it. It is contended to be the effect of the settlement, to preclude her from any thing, whether real or personal, which should come from any quarter. To bind an infant the settlement must be fair and reasonable. The estate of the mother is not bound by the covenant. Has there ever been a case where a contract has been construed to bar an infant from every thing? On what precedent could the Court pronounce it to be right? But I do not think the covenant extends to it; I think otherwise relates to the mother only: if it was to extend further, I should think it unreasonable. Suppose the estate of the mother to be bound, the other estate comes aliunde, and is not bound. The estate given to the wife for life, by the mother, is given to the son in tail, — nothing could be bound but the estate for life, the son takes his estate unfettered, and contests the will as to the life-estate. The case of Noys and Mordaunt (2 Vern. 581.) applies to it. These observations go to dispose of his claims as to the real estates. But the husband having covenanted for himself, that what should come to him [*] should be bound by the articles, (which he might do) therefore the chase in action must be so applied, and also the moiety of the residuary estate of the mother. The Master must therefore enquire what that was, that it may be laid out in land to the trusts in the settlement. Those trusts cannot be doubted. It has been endeavoured to be argued, that the annuity and portions ought to be increased in proportion to the fund, but the original settlement was made with an expectation of increase, for otherwise the estate must ruin itself. 1400*l.* to purchase an estate, charged with 40*l.* per ann. and 600*l.* to be raised if there was a younger child, without prejudice to the annuity, and which the father might raise by an anticipation, — the estate to be purchased, must have been ruined. (6)

[ *154 ]

(6) His Lordship dismissed the bill so far as it sought relief as to the estates at H. N. Beleton and Bollington. An account was directed of Mary Jackson: the mother's personal estate came to the hands of Jeffery Williams, deceased, and of the defendant Frances his widow, as she was executrix of the said Mary Jackson, &c. with the usual directions.

The Master was directed to state the amount of what the defendant Frances took under the will of her mother in her personal estate. A reference was directed as to what was a proper allowance for the maintenance and education of the plaintiff the infant from the death of Jeffery Williams during his minority, and to make a liberal allowance in respect thereof, and for placing him out apprentice, and for the maintenance of the other children; and to state the same with his opinion to the Court. The Court declared that the amount of what the Master should find the defendant Frances Williams took under her mother's will in her personal estate was liable to the trusts of the settlement; and that no other uses could be declared than the raising the annuity or rent-charge of 40*l.* per annum for the defendant Frances Williams, and the sum of 100*l.* for the portions.

1782.

tions of her younger children. An inquiry was directed whether any thing, and what, remained due in respect of such portions; and in case it should appear that any part of the said portions had been paid, then the Master was to inquire by whom the same had been paid. An account was directed as to the rents, &c. of the Buglawton estate [which had been duly conveyed to the uses of the settlement, as is stated in the report,] received since the death of Jeffery by the defendant Frances, &c. &c. &c. R. L.

MARTIN against REBOW. [7 May.]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. B. fol. 326.)

ISAAC Martin Rebow Martin, Esq. by his will dated 22d September, 1781, devised to the plaintiff his wife, (1) a real estate; he also bequeathed to her his house in town, his plate, &c. (but no pecuniary legacy), and made her executrix. The only question was, whether she was entitled to the residue of the personal estate in her own right, or only as a trustee, subject to the statute of distribution.

Executrix barred by a specific legacy, from taking the residue. (2)

Mr. Attorney General (for the plaintiff). The general turn of the cases is that the executrix is to take beneficially, and it has been lamented that the rule was ever infringed upon. The case of Foster and Munt, 1 Vern. 473. which was the first (3) where it was altered, turned upon fraud. (4) But the cases have made distinctions: the Court has

(1) The testator gave to his wife "the lease of his house in Duke-street, Westminster, together with all the furniture in the house, over and above all thirds and dower which she might at law be entitled to; also his house and furniture, together with the park and all the lands adjoining in his own occupation, near Colchester; and also the lands adjoining to Mr. Heath, in the occupation of Mr. J. C. to her for her life, over and above all thirds and dower which she might at law be entitled to; and also all his plate, jewels, and linen. And, in case his wife should survive his mother, he likewise gave her another estate (then in jointure to his mother) for her life, over and above all thirds and dower which she might at law be entitled to." And the will concluded thus:—"I leave my dearly beloved wife sole executrix."

The Editor thinks the above words, so often repeated, "over and above all thirds and dower," &c. would have been very important against the claim of the plaintiff, if the case had otherwise been doubtful. And see Lord Thurlow's observations, p. 155.

(2) See also in Holford v. Wood, 4 Ves. 80. and Southcot v. Watson, 3 Atk. 226. there cited. It is not an absolute rule, however, that legacies given to executors shall exclude them from the undisposed residue: though it raises "a strong and violent presumption to that effect—that is to say, that the testator intended they should not take it. As a presumption, therefore, and no more, it is capable of being rebutted; and parol evidence is admissible in their favour and against them on the subject of such intention. See in Langham v. Sanford, on the appeal before Lord Eldon C. 2 Merivale, 6—16, 17, &c. That case, as it came on first before Sir W. Grant M. R. 17 Ves. 435. and on the appeal, ubi supra, seems to contain or refer to every material authority and point of doctrine on the above head; so that it would be useless to recapitulate the cases. It may be right, however, to observe here that executors were held entitled, although they all had legacies given them; such legacies being specific, distinct, and unequal, and the executors themselves infants. Blinkhorn v. Feust, 2 Ves. 27. and Supp. to Vesey, sen. 262. So Bowker v. Hunter, post. 328. So, a legacy to one of two executors was held not to exclude either. Bp. of Cloyne v. Young, 2 Ves. 91, &c. So Oliver v. Frewen, post. 490. See also Wilson v. Ivat, 2 Ves. 166, &c. and Supp. 317. Particular reference also should not be omitted to Mr. Raithby's elaborate and valuable note to Foster v. Munt, 1 Vern. 473.

(3) Foster v. Munt was not the first case on the subject, although it was long supposed so to be. See Mr. Raithby's note on it, 1 Vern. 473. ad finem; and 2 Merivale, 16.

(4) It was denied that Foster v. Munt turned on fraud in 1 P. W. 548. and by Lord Harcourt in Bull v. Smith, 2 Vern 676. and Prec Ch. 567. The Lord Keeper grounded his assertion on a perusal of the will, pleadings, and decree. It is evident on the decree, that it did not turn on any fraud; for it states the reason thus: "it being plain the testator never designed the surplus of his estate should go to his executors; for he gave them 10*l.* a-piece for their care: and doth therefore order," &c. See Mr. Raithby's note, where the decree is thus stated from R. L.

decreed

1782.

MARTIN against REBOW.

[ *155 ]

decreed that children and heirs at law, made executors, should take beneficially. So too in the case of a wife, 2 Wms. 215. In Lawson and Lawson, in the House of Lords, 7 Brown's Parlt. Cases, 511. the property specially given to the wife, being her property before the marriage, was held not to exclude her from the residue.

Mr. Selwyn (on the same side). — In Foster and Munt, it was a pecuniary legacy, and given for care and pains. There has been no case argued since, in which the Court has not expressed some displeasure at the rule. In Ball and Smith, 2 Vern. 675. it [*] was determined that the wife should take both the legacy and the residue.

Lord Chancellor. — That shews the case of Foster v. Munt was considered as establishing a rule out of which they were making an exception. Here it is over and above her dower and thirds, and the house was leasehold.

Mr. Mansfield (for defendants). — It is impossible to decree her the residue without altering the established rule from Foster v. Munt to the present time. The rule was established also by Lord Harcourt, [C. Parker] in another case, Farrington v. Knightly, 1 Wms. 544. as to its being the case of a wife, and that she has no pecuniary, but a specific legacy. —

Lord Chancellor. — The case of a wife may make a circumstance in evidence, though it cannot make a rule of law.

Mr. Mansfield. — There is no sensible distinction between a specific, and a pecuniary legacy, — the one is just as inconsistent with the rule as the other. The case in 2 Vern. 675. was plate only, no other legacy, and it was plate which she herself had brought, and some other in lieu of what the husband had sold. In Southcoi v. Watson, 3 Atk. 226. no such distinction was laid down.

Lord Chancellor. — The rule is too fully established to be shaken from time to time. It is better to let it continue unmoved. If it were a new question, it might be argued, but the time is over; the rule is laid down, and has been acted upon for years past, that where a testator gives the executor a legacy, (5) he pays him for his trouble, and turns him, as to the residue, into a trustee. There would be no end to the variety of cases that would arise. An account must be taken, and one third of the residue go to the wife, the other two to the children. (6)

(5) See, however, the second note antea.

(6) The Court “declared that the said testator was to be considered as having died intestate as to the clear residue of his personal estate; and that the same was divisible according to the statute for distribution of intestates’ estates,” &c. &c. R. L.

1782.

[*] TRINITY TERM,

22 Geo. 3. 1782.

[ *156 ]

MORTIMER against CAPPER. [7 June.](Reg. Lib. 1781. B. fol. 567. Entered Mortimer v. Jackson.)

THOMAS Capper contracted to sell to the plaintiff Mortimer a piece of ground which had descended upon him ex parte maternâ, for 200*l.* (to pay off a mortgage upon it) and 50*l.* a year annuity to the vendor for his life. Thomas Capper died (being found drowned) two days after the contract was reduced into writing, and the plaintiff now filing his bill for a specific performance against the heirs at law, they, by their answers, insist that, no payment of the annuity having been ever made, the contract was void, and the two sets of heirs contend respectively among themselves, that the estate descends, the one to the heir ex parte paternâ, the other to the heir ex parte maternâ. Jones, who was the agent of Capper, had offered the purchase to several persons before Mortimer, who took it upon Jones's statement of the value, and it was proved to be done with the approbation of Capper's brother and other friends.

Sale of an estate for a certain sum of money, and an annuity for life. The agreement being fair, a court of equity will decree a specific performance, although the party die before any payment of the annuity. (1)

Mr. Arden (for the plaintiff) stated the agreement, and insisted that, being a fair transaction at the time, it could not be affected by the subsequent event of Capper's death.

Mr. Hollist (on the same side) cited Baldwin, administratrix of Elizabeth Stevens against Boulter, before Lord Bathurst, 25th November, 1776. to the following effect; viz. Elizabeth Stevens, the plaintiff's testatrix, having received a sum of 150*l.* was desirous of purchasing an annuity for her own life: upon application to Mr. Baldwin, (the attorney) he calculated the value at about seven years' purchase, (supposing her sixty-five years of age,) but finding she was seventy, he calculated it at five years' purchase: these calculations were shewn to the defendant Boulter, a clergyman, and relation of the family, who granted Mrs. Baldwin an annuity [*] at ten years' purchase, secured by his and his son's bonds. Mrs. Baldwin died before any payment of the annuity, and Lord Bathurst refused, upon all the circumstances, to set aside the transaction.

[ *157 ]

Mr. Attorney General (for the heirs at law). — The Court refused to carry the agreements into specific execution, in the South-sea year, 1 Wms. 570. — Cud v. Rutter. So in the case of a † house which was burnt down before the payment of the money. The ground upon which this is argued, that the moment the agreement is executed, it has its full

† This is not a determined case, but only put by Sir Joseph Jekyl, Master of the Rolls, in giving judgment in Stent v. Bailis, 2 Williams, p. 220. The only determined case at all similar, is that of Cass v. Rudele, 2 Vern. 280. where a specific performance was decreed; but that case was said by Lord C. Apsley, in Pope v. Roots, to be misreported, for that it appeared by the printed cases in the House of Lords, that Cass made a title in January, 1691, by conveyance executed, and the earthquake did not happen till July, 1692; that Rudele by his answer admitted he had the 700*l.* in his hands, and the decree was founded on a good title to the premises having been conveyed to him.

(1) S. P. Jackson v. Lever, postea, 3 vol. 605.; and it is observable that Lord Eldon C. has approved of these decisions as founded on true principles. See in Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 246. A determination was made on the same principle so far back as 1753. See Carter v. Carter, Forr. 271.

1782.

MORTIMER
against CAPPER.

effect, would have applied in the case before Sir Joseph Jekyl, (that in Wms.) Pope v. Roots in the House of Lords, 7 Brown's Parlt. Cases, 184. was a case in point. Roots contracted, 16th July, to sell to Pope, for an annuity : Roots lived to November, but never received any payment, though, by the terms of the contract, the first became due in October: the contract was not impeached, but set aside on that ground only. Here the contract cannot be carried into execution, on account of the death of the party. The only distinction between the cases is, that here Capper's mortgage was to be paid by Mortimer.

Lord Chancellor. — To decree for you, I must lay it down as a rule, that, where a bargain depends upon a contingent event, which chance both the parties know, if the event turns out against one of the parties he must be discharged from his contract. There never was a case where an agreement was made more fairly, or more with the approbation of the family. How then is it to be impeached? — that the annuitant died before a payment. — That the bargain has turned out all advantageous to one party, which was supposed to be fortuitous.

Mr. Mansfield (for the heirs ex parte materna). — It is not of course to decree a specific performance of agreements. There is no reason that where an agreement becomes extremely hard, and a man is to convey an estate for almost nothing, it should be [*] carried into execution. Pope v. Roots is a weaker case for the defendant than the present. This would not have been carried into execution against Capper. It is no doubt a very advantageous agreement for Mortimer. — The only evidence to support the agreement is, that the witness (Capper the cousin of the deceased) believed the vendor to be competent at the time. — He had been twice confined, and his health was extremely impaired. The ground was worth 1300*l.* and was sold for only 200*l.* and 50*l.* a year for the life of Capper.

Lord Chancellor. — I remember a case of a contract (2) [by A. to sell such allotment as the commissioners under an inclosure act should make to him, for 20*l.* and, upon a bill by B. for specific performance, the defence was, that it was worth 200*l.*: but inasmuch as neither party knew what the allotment would be, and were equally in the dark as to its value, the Master of the Rolls decreed a performance: observing, however, it would be very different if the circumstances had been known to the plaintiff.]

Mr. Ainge, to shew that equity will not decree a performance of unreasonable agreements, cited Johnson v. Nott, 1 Vern. 271. — Bromley v. Jefferyes, Pre. Ch. 138. — and that subsequent accidents will sometimes affect agreements, he cited Savage v. Taylor, Forrest, 234. — and Pope v. Roots.

Lord Chancellor. — The enquiry should be as to the value of an annuity, for the life of Capper, in order to introduce the question, whether an estate being disposed of for an annuity (which is a contingency), the contract shall fall to the ground, if no payment of the annuity shall be made. I think, if the price be fair, the contract ought not to be cut down, merely because the annuity, which is a contingent payment, never became payable. Let it be referred to the Master to enquire into the real value of the estate [at the time of the contract], and what [number of years' purchase] Thomas Capper ought to have paid for an annuity [for his own life. (3)]

(2) It having been observed by the late Sir S. Romilly in argument, that Mr. Brown's report of this case, cited by Lord Thurlow, was not very intelligible, and Sir S. R. having rectified it from one of his own manuscript notes, the Editor has made the above paragraph conformable thereto. See in Coot v. Jackson, 6 Ves. 24, 25.

(3) The words here between brackets are from Mr. Brown's corrections in his own copy, from which this edition is printed; and they agree with Reg. Lib.

1782.

[*] Countess Dowager of PLYMOUTH and another against Lady Dowager ARCHER. [8 June.]

[ *159 ]

Appeal from the Rolls. [Original decree 19 July, 1781.]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. A. fol. 369.)

THOMAS Lord Archer devised lands in Essex to trustees, to be sold, and the money to be laid out in the purchase of lands in Warwickshire, which, when purchased, were to be to the use of Andrew Lord Archer for life, without impeachment of waste, remainder to Lady Plymouth and Lady Winterton, testator's daughters, and the heirs of their respective bodies, as tenants in common. The personal estate was limited to the same uses with the real; and the rents and profits of the lands in Essex, till sold, were to be to the use of the same persons, who would be entitled to the lands in Warwickshire, when purchased. The estates in Essex not being sold, Lord Archer cut down timber on that estate, and the question was, whether he was entitled so to do, he being intended by the will to be tenant for life, in the lands to be purchased, without impeachment of waste, and the rents and profits of the Essex estate, being to go to the persons entitled to the estate to be purchased. His Honour, Sir Thomas Sewel, (2) decreed, that Andrew Lord Archer was not entitled to cut timber on the Essex estates, and ordered the defendant, his executrix, to account for the timber so cut.

Devise of lands to be sold, and other lands to be purchased in another county, A. to be tenant for life, (sans waste) of the lands to be purchased, and the rents and profits of the lands to be sold, to be to the same uses, A. cannot cut down timber on the lands to be sold; [since he thereby would have the benefit of double waste.] (1)

Mr. Attorney General (for the appellant) stated the case, and argued, that Lord Archer was entitled to every profit in the Essex estate that he would in the Warwickshire estate, when purchased, where he would, as tenant for life, without impeachment of waste, be entitled to cut timber.

Lord Chancellor. — If he can cut the timber on the estate to be sold, and likewise on that to be bought, he will have double waste.

Mr. Attorney General. — He would have a right to open coal-mines on the estate to be sold, and likewise on that to be bought.

Lord Chancellor. — The quantity of the subject might have some weight on the construction of the words rents and profits, if [*] it was equivocal. I agree the question to be, what the trustees should do, acting correctly and properly. (3) They were to purchase lands to settle on Andrew Lord Archer, in such way as to give him the property in the timber. The question is, whether the interest was to be the same in that to be sold, as in that to be purchased. The estate was given to the trustees absolutely to sell, and to lay out the money in lands to be settled on Andrew for life, without impeachment of waste. The testator seeing that profits would arise before the sale, says, they shall belong to the persons entitled to the estates to be bought. Rents and profits in general mean annual profits. (4) It is true, they may so stand as to mean more: if there be enough in the will they must do so here; but, unless there are some extraordinary words, they must mean annual profits. The only argument for the power is, that he would have it in the estates to be purchased. I cannot get over the objection that it will give

[ *160 ]

(1) See per Lord Eldon C. on this case, in Burges v. Lamb, 16 Ves. 180, 181, 187. and see that case, from p. 174. to 188.

(2) "Declared, that the said Andrew Lord Archer, deceased, had not in his life-time any right to cut down any timber for his own benefit, on any of the trust estates devised by the will to be sold," &c. R. L.

(3) See per Lord Eldon C. 16 Ves. 181, 187.

(4) See accordingly, Mr. Coe's note to Trafford v. Ashton, 1 P. W. 418. and the authorities cited to what R. W. states in the text. Et vide Suppl. to Vesey, sen. 221, &c.

him

1782.

PLYMOUTH
against ARCHER.

him double waste: that would be too much. Timber is part of the inheritance, and cannot go to the tenant for life, but by express words. I think the tenant for life could not open a mine. If it is already open, the working it is part of the annual profits, the minerals are not then held part of the inheritance. Decree affirmed. (5)

(5) And the deposit to be paid to the plaintiffs (the respondents). R. L.

FRYER against FLOOD [FLOOD.] [13 June.]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. A. fol. 346. b.)

A trader advanced half the money for the renewal of a lease, the lessee giving a note to repay the money, unless she should by will give the estate to one of his children. She bequeathed the estate to his daughter, and the father becoming a bankrupt, a moiety of the estate held vested in the assignee, under 1 Ja. 1. c. 15. [s. 5.] (1)

[*161]

ELIZABETH Pearce, being about to renew a lease of an estate in Devonshire, at the expence of a fine of 160*l.* borrowed of Flood 80*l.* (of which Flood himself borrowed 50*l.*) and gave a promissory note to repay the money, unless she should bequeath the estate to some one of his children. She afterwards devised the estate to the defendant Flood's daughter; but, before the decease of Mrs. Pearce, Flood had become a bankrupt. His assignees filed this bill against the defendant, the daughter, and the representative of Mrs. Pearce, claiming the 80*l.* or half of the estate as being purchased by the bankrupt, in the name of a child, under 1 Ja. 1. c. 15.; and, upon a hearing before his Honour, obtained a decree, (2) from which this was an appeal.

[*] Mr. Attorney General (in support of the decree). — Under 1 Ja. 1. c. 15. this estate ought not to be enjoyed by a volunteer, the interest in the lease being for the bankrupt's child. If Mrs. Pearce had paid back the money, it would have gone to the assignees; ought the will of a third person to affect the assets of the bankrupt? The case of Lilly v. Osborn, 3 Wms. 298. was determined on the ground, that the party was not a trader at the time of the purchase, and was in solvent circumstances; but here he was a trader, and therefore it was within the statute, Walker and others against Burrows, 1 Atk. 93.

Mr. Hollist (on the same side) cited Crisp v. Pratt, (3) [Cro. Car. 548. and 1 Rol. 528.] (7 Vi. 97. pl. 2.); Tucker v. Cosh, Sty. 288. (4)

Mr. Mansfield (for the appellant). — Flood was at the time supposed to be in very good circumstances. The statute was intended to prevent bankrupts from conveying their estates to their children. The bankrupt could not have obtained the estate to himself. Can the bankrupt's child, becoming entitled by the bounty of another, be within

(1) Lord Eldon C. observed this case came within the words of the statute, " cause to be procured;" and (in another instance) " that the statute aimed not only at estates the bankrupt had, but those in which he acquired interests for others; that a party who was a trader at the time should not procure or purchase for money those interests for his children or others; and that a wife must be included under the words of the statute, " other person;" and that nothing could be stronger in favour of that construction than the principal case." See in Ex parte Shorland, 7 Ves. 89. and in Glaister v. Hewer, 8 Ves. 205. As to the case of a wife, see further Tucker v. Cosh, Style, 288, 289. mentioned 9 Ves. agreeably to Lord Eldon's decision in Glaister v. Hewer, 8 Ves. 195.

(2) " That the defendant should pay to the plaintiff the sum of 80*l.* with interest at 4 per cent. from the 4th of Jan. 1772, (being the date of the promissory note from E. Pearce, widow, deceased, in the pleadings named,) and also the costs of the suit to be taxed," &c. R. L.

(3) Crisp v. Pratt was S. P. with Lilly v. Osborn, that a settlement on a child, previously to the party being a trader, was not within the statute. It seems cited here merely to shew the contrast, which, however, the report has left inaccurate. It is also reported Jon. 437. March 34. and 1 Rol. 528.

(4) Tucker v. Cosh was a settlement on a wife, which was held within the statute. Glaister v. Hewer, 8 Ves. 195. was determined accordingly by Lord Eldon C. on the appeal; though Tucker v. Cosh was not then adverted to. See 9 Ves. 13. . . . .

the

the statute, any more than if she had purchased the child a trade, or a pair of colours?

Mr. Ainge (same side). — The bankruptcy was eight years after the purchase; five years will purge an act of bankruptcy; and it is not stated that he was at the time a trader. Now that Mrs. Pearce has performed her part of the contract, they call on her representative to refund the money, when they cannot take back the estate, which is gone to the bankrupt's family.

Lord Chancellor. — This is a hard case, and I should be glad, but I do not see how, to take it out of the principle of the statute. It is very clear, that one of the cases to be remedied by the statute, is that of a father buying an estate, from a stranger, to be conveyed to his child. Then, if the case was so varied as to make him a trustee (suppose for a moiety) for the child, that would go to the assignees. In the present case the aunt would not, perhaps, have given it to the child, but for the agreement with the trading father. If it was money advanced without a lien, it might be dangerous to give it to the assignees; but, as far as the money advanced is a lien, the father procured an interest, which must go to the assignees. The decree must be affirmed. (3)

1782.

Fryer
against Flood.

(3) And the deposit paid to the plaintiff. R. L.

[*] HENRY BARNEY MAYHEW, and MARY his Wife, Administratrix of JAMES, CATHERINE, and EDWARD NANFAN, and also Representative of MARIA and THOMAS NANFAN, Plaintiffs.

[ *162 ]

JOSEPH MIDDLEDITCH, LEWIS WILLIAM BUCKERIDGE, and HESTER his Wife (who, with MIDDLEDITCH, were surviving Executors of JOHN NANFAN), JOHN HOOPER, personal Representative of ELIZABETH NANFAN, and JAMES NANFAN, Representative of DOROTHY NANFAN, Defendants.

[14 and 17 June.]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. B. fol. 316.)

UPON the marriage, in 1703, of George Nanfan, and Maria, only child of Dorothy Prior, lands (being the property of Dorothy, the mother) were settled on the mother Dorothy for life, remainder to Maria for life, remainder to trustees for a term of 600 years, remainder to first and other sons, with remainders over. The trusts of the term were, to raise 1500*l.* for such younger children of the marriage, at such times, and in such shares as the father and mother should by joint deed appoint; and, in default of appointment, for all the children who should be living at the death of Maria, share and share alike. In 1724, there being then several children of the marriage (viz.) George, Thomas, John, James, Maria, Dorothy, and Catherine, of whom one, Dorothy, had By marriage settlement, 1500*l.* was provided for younger children in such shares as the parents should appoint, in default of appointment to all the children, after the death of the wife. The parents afterwards made an appointment excluding one child. (1) This deed vests the portions in the children born or to be born [except the one excluded].

(1) Dorothy was not literally excluded; for 6*d.* was given her. It seems, however, that no point was made as to such nominal appointment being illusory. See post. Pocklington v. Bayne, 450. It appears, however, for the reason given, such nominal appointment would not have been held illusory; and it is quite settled that each case of the subject must be determined on its own circumstances, according to a sound discretion. See Bar v. Whitbread, 16 Ves. 16.; and Butcher v. Butcher on the appeal, 1 Ves.; and Beames 79. in which all the material authorities are collected.

1782.

MAYHEW
against MIDDLEDITCH.

[ *163 ]

married against the parents' consent, the father and mother by deed directed the sum to be raised for the use of all the children then born, or to be born, share and share alike, except Dorothy, to whom, on account of her disobedience, they gave 6*d.* only: with a power of revocation. After the deed of appointment, two other children, Edmund and Elizabeth, were born. All the children, except John, died in the life-time of the mother (who survived the marriage 70 years, and her husband 40), some having attained their ages of 21 years. On the death of the mother, in 1773, this question arose between the plaintiffs (the representatives of some of the children who died in the life-time of the mother), claiming their respective shares of the 1500*l.* and the defendants claiming [*] under John, the surviving son, and other of the deceased children: the question being, whether the portions vested by the deed of 1724, or at the death of the mother, when the term came into possession.

Mr. Attorney General, and Mr. Stainsby, for the plaintiffs.—The Court leans to vest portions when they become necessary. If the children should all die before the appointment, the term was then to sink; therefore, if the appointment was made, the term was then to be an absolute and indefeasible term. The appointment to all the children, made a tenancy in common. It was only intended that the mother should take the rents for her life. There being no time stipulated for the payment, it vested immediately. Lord Rivers against Lord Derby, 2 Vern. 72. takes up the case of Paulet v. Paulet. As to excluding a child who might become an eldest son: if the child had become so, it would have operated only as appointing him tenant in tail, in expectancy on the death of the mother. The power of revocation does not suspend the effect: but it may be a question whether the father and mother had any right to interpose the power of revocation. Whether there was or not, it was never executed. They cited Menzey v. Walker, cases temp. Talbot, 72. (against the exclusion of Dorothy) Walpole v. Colville, by Lord Hardwicke, Barnardiston, 153.—Lloyd v. Biscoe, at the Rolls, 1758.; Cholmley v. Meyrick (cited and stated ante, p. 77.) where the doctrine of vesting is very fully taken up. Teynham v. Webb, 2 Vesey, 198.; King v. Withers, 3 Wms. 414.; and Forrest, temp. Talb. 117.—Tournay v. Tournay, Pre. Ch. 290.

Mr. Madocks, (for the representative of one who attained 21 and married.)—If the portion did not vest at the execution of the deed, it did at 21, or marriage, when the child would want it.

Mr. Ambler, for the defendants.—Wherever there is an appointment, it must operate according to the deed appointing. If the children here had lived till they wanted the portions, they would have been vested interests. This appointment might have been by will; nothing therefore could vest till the death of the wife.—Duke of Marlborough v. Lord Godolphin, 2 Ves. 61.; Bruen v. Bruen, 2 Vern. 439.; Stevens v. Dethick, 3 Atk. 39.

[ *164 ]

[*] Mr. Selwyn, on the same side.—If the 1500*l.* did not vest till the death of the mother, John was then the only survivor. Under the original settlement it was to go to such children, as the father and mother should appoint. If no appointment, or an imperfect one, to the children who should be living at the death of the mother. It only remains to see the effect of the appointment,—that was merely to exclude Dorothy. It only meant to provide what the shares should be, and, therefore, appointed to all the children, except Dorothy. It does not affect the time when the shares should be paid.

Mr. Attorney General, in reply.—The appointment expressly declares the money shall be raised. The argument ab inconvenienti applies strongly, strongly, for it must be exceedingly inconvenient if these shares were not to be vested interests.

Lord Chancellor. — It seems exceedingly clear, that if the whole had been at first part of the power, and the husband and wife had ordered it to be paid at a day certain, the money must have borne interest from that day by anticipation of the term. It would then also be clear that it would have been vested in those children, from the time when the instrument was made. The difficulty is not so much upon the first branch of the question, as upon the intent of the whole. The object, in the contemplation of the settlement, was to raise it after the wife's death, and, if it stood on the last branch of the question only, it must be raised for the only survivor. The intention was to give the parents a power to anticipate the charge; then the question is, whether they intended to anticipate it? I think they did not; for they have named no time of payment, and have said nothing about executors, &c.; they have only expressed an intention to exclude Dorothy. The original deed was, that it should be raised and paid at such time as they should think fit. They have only said to which children it should be paid, without anticipating the payment. ‡ Upon the whole, I think it was not vested. (2) ‡ However, upon the whole, I rather think the plaintiffs are entitled.

His Lordship therefore decreed, an account of the several shares, and that they should be paid to the representatives of the respective children, and the costs to be paid out of the fund.

A day or two after, His Lordship expressed himself to be, upon the whole, dissatisfied, and ordered the cause to be reheard. At the time of the rehearing the Reporter was absent, but he has been [*] favoured with the following note of the Lord Chancellor's judgment.

Lord Chancellor. — Arguments of convenience have gone a great way as to general rules of law. — When a construction is doubtful, an argument of inconvenience may be used to explain the doubt. A great part of the argument, in this case, has gone upon the times when portions to be raised out of lands should vest: but the cases, upon this subject, are quite out of the question. They go upon the intention of parties which is out of the case before us, for two reasons; first, because the case is not stated to be the case of children not living to the time when a portion is necessary; secondly, because the circumstances of the case go a great way to exclude it. The money was to be raised if there was any child. The case must be taken as of children who died before the mother, but lived to want portions, and of one child who survived the mother. The question is, whether the children are to take under this appointment, or as if no appointment had been made. The instrument by which the portions are given supposes an appointment may have arrested the effect of the clause, directing the ceasing of the term. The general intent was to give the parents an opportunity of providing for children, according to their discretion, to the amount of 1500*l.*; if the parents have not exercised that discretion, then the 1500*l.* is only to go to children surviving the mother. But this is not the case that has happened. It has been disputed whether the parents have expressed the period when the portions were to vest: — I think they have not. (3) The payment was not to be sooner than in the original instrument. But they have made a designation of the persons in whom the money was to vest, which is perfectly repugnant to the former instrument. The appointment has given the money to all the

(2) ‡ It seems this sentence should be, "I think the parents have not expressed the period when the portions were to vest" — See postea, next page.

(3) See the preceding note.

1782.

MAYHEW
against MIDDLEDITCH.

[ *165 ]

1782.

MAYHEW
against MIDDLEDITCH.

[ *166 ]

children of the marriage. (4) The point is not brought before the Court, whether any died before 21, or marriage, so as not to want the portion. It is clear all the children were designed, according to the appointment. As to the time of vesting; according to the instrument, without any time named, they must vest immediately. This differs from all the cases, for this is a case where, after marriage, and upon a view of an existing family, the parents have given portions to persons described. First, as to those born at the time of the appointment; suppose one had died under 21, could it be contended that the representative of that child would not be entitled? The effect of this is to put the children after born, in the [*] same predicament. The money is to be equally divided between them. They are, therefore, tenants in common, and, whenever a share vests, it is transmissible, without survivorship. The designation of the persons to take is altered by the appointment. Not those alive at the death of the mother only, but all the children must take. (5) Decree affirmed.

(4) "Except Dorothy."

Inquiry as to interest made upon trust money, &c.

(5) "Except Dorothy." Editor. A reference was directed as to what interest had been made of the sums of 1500*l.* and 450*l.* in the pleadings mentioned to have been raised and paid to John Nanfan, deceased, as administrator of J. Jones, the surviving trustee, in the term of 600 years; and it was ordered that the defendants, Middleditch and Buckeridge and his wife, be charged with such interest accordingly; and also that the sums of 1500*l.* and 450*l.* and the interest made thereof, be answered by the said defendants, J. Middleditch and W. Buckeridge, and Hester his wife (which said J. Middleditch and Hester Buckeridge were the executors of the said J. Nanfan) out of his assets in a course of administration; and in case they should not admit assets, then an account, &c. And it was further ordered that the said sums of 1500*l.* and 450*l.* and such interest as the Master should find was made thereof as aforesaid, should be (after a deduction of the parties' costs of the suit thereafter directed to be paid thereout) divided into seven equal parts; and that five seventh parts thereof should be paid to the plaintiff, as the plaintiff, Mary, was then become the personal representative of James, Catherine, Edmund, Maria, and Thomas Nanfan, deceased, in the following rights: one seventh part thereof as administratrix of James Nanfan; one other seventh part thereof as administratrix of Catherine Nanfan; one other seventh part thereof as administratrix of Edmund Nanfan; one other seventh part thereof as surviving executrix of Thomas Nanfan, who was executor of Maria Nanfan, and one other seventh part thereof as representative of Thomas Nanfan as aforesaid, in his own right. And it was further ordered, that one other seventh part should be paid to or retained by the defendants, J. Middleditch and L. W. Buckeridge, and Hester his wife, as representing the said John Nanfan in manner aforesaid; and that the remaining seventh part thereof should be paid to the defendant, John Hopper, as executor of J. Smith, who was executor of Elizabeth Nanfan. R. L.

[S. C. 2 Dick.
600. S. C. Post.
3 vol. 549. quod
vide.]

CHAMBERL[A]YNE gainst DUMMER. [19 June.]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. A. fol. 452, &amp;c.)

T. D. provided, by a codicil to his will, that his wife (whom he had made tenant for life) might cut timber "for her own use and benefit, at seasonable times." What timber the tenant for life shall be restrained from cutting. (1)

THOMAS Dummer, Esq. made his will, by which he devised his freehold and copyhold estates at Cranbury, in the county of Hants, and elsewhere, to the defendant Harriot Dummer, his wife, for and during

(1) The order made in this instance was chiefly framed upon the words of the injunction in O'Brien v. O'Brien, Ambler 107. 108. See the order postea, note (1) to page 167, and compare them; and it has served as a general precedent for injunctions in similar cases. Vide 6 Ves. 421. note.

In such instances, the Court disclaims (as much as possible) to speculate upon what is, or is not ornamental timber; and (as in the principal case) applies its protection on that part of the subject to what has been planted for ornament, even if it is the most incongruous 1782.

CHAMBERLYNE, against DUMMER.

during her natural life, remainder to Charlotte Holland (an elderly lady) for life, remainder to the plaintiff in fee. This will was made a considerable time before his death; but, about a fortnight before his decease, he made two codicils to his will, one of which only was now in question. A clause of this codicil was to this effect. "Whereas, by my will, my wife cannot cut any timber, now my will and mind is, that she may, during so long time as she shall continue my widow, cut timber for her own use and benefit, at seasonable times in the year." Mrs. Dummer, under the power given by this codicil, made contracts for, and began to fell timber. The plaintiff filed his bill, and applied to His Honour the Master of the Rolls, for an injunction to stay the cutting of ornamental timber, or such as served for shelter to any of the mansion-houses, and also of young wood not come to maturity. His Honour, ex parte, and unattended by counsel, made an order in Hilary Vacation, 1782, to stay the cutting of any timber whatsoever, until answer and further order. And 18th April, 1782, Mr. Arden and Mr. Serjeant Rooke, moved to discharge His Honour's order, as going farther than the plaintiff's application, and preventing her cutting what she was undoubtedly entitled, under the will, to cut.—The order was supported by Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Mansfield, and Mr. Hollist.—Mr. Attorney General contended, that Mrs. Dummer, being by this codicil made tenant for life without impeachment of waste, could not cut down ornamental timber, such as protected buildings, or such as by standing longer would pay good interest for so doing. Mr. Mansfield objected, that several of [*] the trees marked, if cut down, would expose the young saplings to the cold winds. Mr. Hollist, that she should cut only what was fully mature, and would suffer by standing, and that nothing was timber under five solid feet; he also contended, that under the devise she could not cut for sale, but for her own use upon the estate. Lord Chancellor utterly rejected the idea, that she was to cut for her own use on the estate, or for estovers only, and thought that she was entitled not merely to cut timber which would suffer by standing, but every thing which could fairly be called timber, although she should not cut such sticks as would only make paling, &c. His Lordship recommended to the parties to accommodate what should be cut under this idea; being willing to save to the defendant the season for cutting timber; but, if they could not settle the matter, said he must be attended with affidavits to settle the terms of the injunction. Mrs. Dummer afterwards put in her answer, and admitted cutting trees in the lawns and pleasure grounds at Cranbury, but alleged that it was gruous to the existing taste of the times. Although the Court protects trees obviously existing as ornamental timber, as in avenues, vistas, ridings, &c. it refuses to extend its jurisdiction by introducing other words of refinement, such as "contributing to ornament," &c. See Lord Eldon's decisions and observations accordingly in the M. of Downshire v. Lady Sandys, 6 Ves. 107. 110. 112, &c.; Williams v. M'Namara, 8 Ves. 70, 71.; Lord Tenterden v. Lord Ferrers, 6 Ves. 419. 421. note, &c. &c. The points in the principal case came into much discussion in its subsequent stage, post. 3 vol. 549. Besides, the cases there and above referred to, see Day v. Merry, 16 Ves. 375. where an injunction was, on the above indisputable principles, extended to trees which had been planted to exclude objects from view. It seems that the report of part of the judgment of the M. R. in Lord Strathmore v. Bowes, post. 2 vol. 88; 89. must be considered with caution, after the observations of Lord Eldon above referred to. Lord Kenyon was, doubtless, quite right in his determination, that the injunction must be granted, "as to the ornamental trees, though they should not be planted trees, but trees growing naturally," because it was evident, they were there ornamental, as adorning the rides which had been cut through the woods; if the trees had not been planted to skirt those ridings. Although, therefore, the M. R. did not in that case lay the particular stress which Lord Eldon has done on the trees having been planted for ornament, the case before him did not require it; and of course it does not at all militate against the above sound doctrine.

[ *167 ]

1782.

CHAMBERLYNE
against DUMMER.

[ *168 ]

for the purpose of widening the way to the house, to prevent damp, and improve the place. She admitted also, the cutting trees placed in rows at Woolston and Badsley, but, that they were such as she did not consider as ornamental; she alleged, that oak trees of six inches girth, and sixteen feet in length, or containing four feet of solid measure, were deemed timber trees, and that she had cut down none so small; that ash of five inches girth, and elm of seven, were also esteemed timber, and that she had cut none under those sizes. Upon motion to discharge the order for the injunction, 19th June, 1782, Lord Chancellor was of opinion, upon consideration of the case, and of the authorities cited, viz. Packington v. Packington, 3 Atk. 215.; Aston v. Aston, 1 Ves. 264.; † Leighton v. Leighton, 22d March, 1747-8; ‡ Obrien v. Obrien, 20th May, 1751; and Lord Castlemain v. [*] Lord Craven, 7th December, 1733, 2 Eq. Abr. 758.; 22 Vi. 523. that the injunction should issue nearly in the terms of that of Obrien and Obrien, viz. defendant to be restrained from cutting trees which were saplings, and not proper to be cut as timber. § (3)

[See this case, postea, 4 vol. 549.]

† Leighton v. Leighton was a bill by the eldest son, tenant in tail, expectant on the death of the father tenant for life, to restrain him from committing waste, by cutting down timber, especially such as was ornamental to the house. The Court, upon affidavit, and certificate of the bill filed, granted an injunction to restrain the defendant from committing waste upon such part of the estate, whereof he was subject to impeachment of waste, and as to the mansion-house, out-houses, gardens, and orchards, timber growing for ornament and shelter to the house, to restrain him from committing waste therein till answer or further order.

‡ Obrien v. Obrien. (2) Injunction to restrain defendants from cutting down any timber trees or other trees growing on the estates, which were planted or growing there for ornament or shelter of the mansion-house, or that grew in vistas, planted walks, or lines, for the ornament of the park part of the estate, and also from cutting down any saplings growing on any part of the estates not proper to be felled, till answer or further order. [May 21. 1751.]

§ See in addition to the cases cited, Perrot v. Perrot, 3 Atk. 95. — 1 Ves. 521. Earl Bathurst v. Burden, post. vol. 2. p. 64. [See also the Editor's 1st note to this case.]

(2) Ambl. 107.

(3) His Lordship directed: "That the order, dated 28 March (then) last, be discharged; and that an injunction be awarded to restrain the defendant Harriet Dummer, her servants, workmen, and agents, from cutting down any timber and other trees growing on the estate in question, which are [were] planted or growing there, for the protection or shelter of the several mansion-houses belonging to the said estates; or for the ornament of the said houses, or which grow in lines, walks, vistas, or otherwise for the ornament of the said houses, or of the gardens, or parks, or pleasure-grounds thereunto belonging; and it is further ordered, that the injunction do also extend to restrain the said defendant, her servants, workmen, or agents, from cutting down any timber or other trees, except at seasonable times, and in a husbandlike manner; and also from cutting down saplings and young trees not fit to be cut as and for the purposes of timber, until the hearing of this cause, or the further order of the Court." Reg. Lib.

Lincoln's Inn
Hall.

TAYLOR against POPHAM et c contra. [July 16.]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. B. fol. 422.)

P. T. in his life-time granted two annuities to P. T. his son, and, there being subsisting accounts between them, by will gave him an annuity of 600*l.* on condition he should, within three months, execute a release of all demands on his estate; the release tendered including the two annuities granted during the life, P. T. the son did not forfeit his annuity of 600*l.* by refusing to execute it, but a release settled by the Master (omitting those annuities,) being tendered and refused, the Court held that he forfeited the annuity under the will.

being

being accounts subsisting between them respecting different commissaryships in Germany, where Paris was deputy paymaster to Peter, Peter Taylor, by his will 1 Sept. 1775, [and a codicil thereto] int. al. gave to Paris 600*l.* per ann. on condition that he should within three months execute a release of all demands on his estates, being assured there was nothing due to him on the accounts. He died October 1777. Charles William Taylor, and Frances Jane Taylor, other children of Peter who were beneficially entitled under his will, Hil. 1778, filed a bill against Paris, who claimed 23,317*l.* as due to him from Peter's estate, that he should release; stating that a release had been tendered and refused, and therefore, insisting that he should be considered as having broken the condition on which he was to have the 600*l.* per ann. R. Paris Taylor filed his bill, insisting on his demands upon his father's estate, and that he might release when he would, having an option so to do or not, upon the close of the accounts. The cause and cross-cause stood this day for judgment, 13 Aug. 1781.

Lord Chancellor. — I am of opinion it was the true meaning of Peter, to prevent the account Paris sought by his bill, and, therefore, I cannot order such account, or furnish him, by means of this Court, with any intelligence of his father's affairs. This, therefore, excludes every idea of the testator, that he should have an election. The next question is, whether the bill so filed has forfeited the 600*l.* per ann. and that leads to a common rule of the Court, as to conditions precedent. If the Court can put the parties in the same situation as if the condition had been performed, it will never suffer a forfeiture to attach. (1) The release tendered went to the 100*l.* and 200*l.* granted before: (that Paris had a right to refuse) or any other claims under the will: [*] I think his litigating it, did not forfeit the 600*l.* annuity. In order to do justice, I must do no more than declare the will duly proved, and refer it to the Master to (2) prepare a proper release declaring the intent to be to prevent a contest, but that the will did not bar the annuities granted in the lifetime, or any claims of Paris, except as to the mutual dealings and transactions in the negotiation of money.

Costs and further directions reserved.

The cause came on again for further directions on the Master's report, 16th July, 1782, when Lord Chancellor declared that Robert Paris Taylor, having refused (3) to execute the release tendered to him, as settled by the Master, he was not entitled to the annuity of 600*l.* and ordered an account to be taken of all dealings and transactions between the said testator and Paris Taylor, and reserved further directions.

(1) So, in the case of Johnson v. Smith, 1 Ves. 314. (but on this point particularly, Suppl. 154, 5.) where a testator devised his real estate to A. and her heirs, "so as she intermarried with W. J." but if she refused to marry him, he gave it to W. J. and his heirs: she entered into possession, and declined several overtures to marry the person in question; but it was held that she incurred no forfeiture thereby, nor until she made a formal acknowledgment of her refusal. Vide ubi supra.

(2) "To settle a proper release to be prepared and executed according to the said codicil of the said testator of the 19th Dec. 1776; and that the defendant, R. Paris Taylor, should execute such release, or decline executing the same, within three months after the Master should have approved thereof, and the same should have been tendered to him for that purpose." R. L.

(3) The decree, after a recital that "R. P. T. having refused to execute the release tendered to him as settled by the Master, according to the first codicil of the said testator, dated, &c. and according to the decree dated 13th Aug. 1781, declared, that he was not entitled to the annuity of 600*l.*" &c. &c. R. L.

1782.

TAYLOR
against POPHAM.

[ *169 ]

1782.

[ *170 ]

[*] MICHAELMAS TERM,

28 Geo. 3. 1782.

EDWARD Lord THURLOW, Lord High Chancellor. Sir THOMAS SEWEL Knight, Master of the Rolls. LLOYD KENYON, Esq. Attorney General. RICHARD PEPPER ARDEN, Esq. Solicitor General.

The ATTORNEY GENERAL against HIRD.

Appeal from the Rolls.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 26. b.)

Devise of personalty to B. and the lawful heirs of his body, if he should have any, but if he should die without lawful heirs, 1000*l.* to Lady S. and 500*l.* to C. the contingencies too remote. (1)

[ *171 ]

INFORMATION at the relation of the governors of the charity for widows and children of clergymen, for charitable legacies against defendant, the executor of George Bruce. Christian Bruce by her will dated 8th Jan. 1772, gave "to her brother George Bruce, and the lawful heirs of his body, if he should have any, her whole fortune (except a few legacies), but if he should die without lawful heirs, she gave to Lady Stair, 1000*l.* and to James Crawford, 500*l.* the residue to her brother." The property was personal to the amount of about 5000*l.* The testatrix died, and the brother, surviving and having no child, made his will, dated January 1780, by which he gave a like legacy of 1000*l.* to Lady Stair, to her sole and separate use, and also 500*l.* to the said James Crawford, and made Hird executor. He died in July 1780. Two questions arose; first, whether the legacies of 1000*l.* and 500*l.* under Christian's will, in case the brother should die without lawful heirs, were too remote. Secondly, suppose them not so, whether the same legacies being given by the brother was not a satisfaction for the legacies under the sister's will. His Honour decreed that the legacies, as given by the sister's will, were too remote, and that, if not so, the [*] legacies given by the brother were a satisfaction for the former legacies.

Upon an appeal to Lord Chancellor.

Mr. Madocks (for the appellants).—The question as to the remoteness of these two legacies under the will of Christian, depends upon two circumstances; first, the intention of the testatrix, and secondly, whether they are within the rule of law. If she intended the legacies over to be after a general failure of issue, then they would be void: if she meant a failure at a particular time, they may be good. The words must receive a construction from the intent of the testatrix, expressed in other parts of the will. The circumstances shew that she meant a failure at the death of the brother; by the words, "in case he shall die without law"ful heirs." (2) There is no doubt the words may receive a limitation from the circumstances of the case, Lamb v. Archer, 1 Salk. 225. — (8 Vi. 100. Pl. 41.) — Beauclerk v. Dormer, 2 Atk. 308. — Keily v. Fowler, in the House of Lords, 6th January, 1768, 6 Brown Parl. Cases, 309. (3) — George Bruce, by his will in 1780, gave the same legacies, together with other legacies, to charities. If he had intended them as a satisfaction, he would have said so; there is no presumption from the similarity of the sum. There is a circumstance in Lady Stair's legacy that has weight; the second legacy is for her separate use, the first legacy would go to Lord Stair.

(1) See Butterfield v. Butterfield, 1 Ves. 133 & 154. Supp. 81.; and note that in that case the subsequent words were, "if he should die without issue," not "heirs," as in the Report. Vide Supp. 81. from R. L. Upon the point in question, see Bigge v. Bensley, post. 188. Mr. Sanders' note to Hodgson v. Bussey, 2 Atk. 89. and Fearne Ex., Dev. 144. 161. 167. &c. See also Mr. Roper's very useful and comprehensive work on Legacies, vol. 2. p. 393. et seq. Exel v. Wallace, 2 Ves. 117. 120. 318. &c. referred to in the last note to this case. See also Barlow v. Salter, 17 Ves. 479. 482, &c. Elton v. Eason, 19 Ves. 33. and Kirkpatrick v. Kirkpatrick, 13 Ves. 476. et seq. with the notes.

"ful

Mr. Macdonald (on the same side). — She meant to give her brother the whole beneficial interest during his life, and that if he should have children, which would appear at his death, then that they should have it; if not, that 1500*l.* of it should go away, but the rest be at his disposal. Here are controlling circumstances to tie it up to the time of his death. His lawful heirs, if he shall have any, shews it was in her idea that he might not. If he should die without lawful heirs, these words, standing by themselves, would mean generally, but coupled as they are, shew she had the alternative in her mind, which is called a contingency, with a double aspect. If any circumstance will admit the construction to be agreeable to the intent, the Court will give the words that construction. (4) — Pinbury v. Elkin, 1 Wms. 563. In Keily v. Fowler, the only circumstance was the return, — the circumstances here are full as strong, for here the [*] residue is given to the brother, so as he shall personally dispose of it. Forth v. Chapman, 1 Wms. 663. was construed a contingent dying without issue, as to the personalty, though a general dying without issue, as to the real. 2dly. The legacies given by the will of George Bruce are not a satisfaction for those given by Christian. It is held, with respect to satisfactions, that an identical sum owed and bequeathed shall be held a satisfaction, but if there be any circumstance which shews an intention to give a bounty, the Court will restore the words to their natural sense. In Clark v. Sewel, 3 Atk. 96. the legacy being to be paid a month after the decease, was taken as a distinction.

Mr. Graham (on the same side), — cited 1 Wms. 666. for the sake of Lord Parker's expression — also Atkinson v. Hutchinson, 3 Wms. 258. To the 2d question, he said — this was from different funds; the 1st. legacies from the sister's, the 2d. from George's own.

Mr. Attorney General (on the other side). — The construction contended for, would remove the land-marks of property, the rule of law is, that such a bequest to one, with a general limitation over afterwards to the heirs of the body, is void. Keily v. Fowler went to the extreme, and was on the ground of words in the will, and the nature of the property, which was specific personal property, — but here it is not living at the time of his death, or in the life of any particular person, or at a certain number of years. The party has mistaken the legal limits, and therefore the intention must be frustrated rather than overthrow the rule of law. — Butterfield v. Butterfield, 1 Vesey, 133. 154. (5)

Lord Chancellor. — The legacies were payable by the executor immediately, — he has made them payable in six months.

Mr. Selwyn. — The construction must be the same as if she had said, if my brother shall die without issue, and the words if he shall have any, were left out, for they are only expressio eorum quæ tacite insunt.

(2) See Ezel v. Wallace, 2 Ves. 117. 120, 121. 318. &c.

(3) 5 Bro. P. C. 299. 8vo. edit.

(4) See Ezel v. Wallace, 2 Ves. 117. 120, 121. &c.

(5) As to this case, note, the subsequent words used were "if he should die without issue," and not "heirs," as stated in the Report. Vide Supp. 81.

1782.

ATTORNEY GENERAL
against HARD.
[ *173 ]

Mr. Madocks, — replied.

Lord Chancellor. — Mr. Macdonald argued, that the devise was absolute if the brother had no children, qualified if [*] he had. I should think, if it came to that, His Honour's decree must be wrong. [But] the question is, whether there be any thing in the limitation to control the general gift, if he shall die without issue, or if there be an executory devise, if he shall have no issue. I believe she meant, if there was issue who should die, that it should go over. The hardship of the construction is, that the words are carried back to the sense they bear as to real property, and then applied in the same sense to personal. It would be hard in this case, if she meant that if he should die without issue, living at his death, the words should be construed as if applied to real estate. I am sorry the judges have thought themselves bound to construe wills contrary to their own opinion of the intent. (6) The words, if construed here otherwise than they have usually been, would overturn the rules of construction, though not the rules of law. If they have been always held to mean a distant dying without issue, and it should be now held otherwise, it will shake the rule of property, therefore I think the Master of the Rolls' decree right. I remember no case where these words have been thought to be a contingent, not an absolute estate-tail. If I think of nothing further, I must affirm His Honour's decree.

Decree affirmed.

(6) The Courts will avoid a construction leading to a perpetuity, if possible. See Exel v. Wallace, 2 Ves. 117. 120. 318. &c.

Ex parte HARRISON.

A brickmaker taking the earth off the waste, for which he afterwards paid a consideration, and selling the bricks is a trader within the bankrupt laws.
(1)

[ *174 ]

THIS was a petition for a new trial, upon an issue to try the question, whether the petitioner was or was not a bankrupt. At the trial it was proved that the petitioner, who was a farmer, renting a farm of upwards of 100 $\frac{1}{2}$  a year, made bricks of earth, taken off the waste without any licence from the lord (to whom he afterwards paid a consideration), that he had used a kiln, not built by himself for that purpose, and had, at various times, made from 40,000 to 70,000 bricks every year, and sold different quantities, sometimes only to certain persons, and sometimes generally to all who came for them. It was further in evidence, that the kiln was a small one, not fit for burning more than 7000 bricks at a time. One of the witnesses swore, he was employed by the plaintiff to make the bricks at a certain price, and that he sold them at an advanced value. [\*] A commission was taken out 26th May, 1781, and he was found a bankrupt. Upon a petition to supersede the commission, an issue was directed and tried at the assizes at Derby, when the counsel for the plaintiff at law cited 2 Wilson, 169.; which case was not denied to be law by the counsel for the defendant: but they in—

(1) In all similar questions, the being a trader within the scope of the bankrupt law depends not merely upon the quantity of materials bought or dealt in, but the general intention manifest under all the circumstances of each case. See Ex parte Magennis, 1 Rose Rep. Bank. 84. That a person who makes bricks, or works and sells lime, or stone, derived from his own land, or which he rents for other objects, is not such a trader, without more; see in Lord Thurlow's judgment within, and the cases after referred to. See also Sutton v. Weoley, 7 East. 442. Ex parte Ridge, 1 Rose Rep. Bank. 316. Ex parte Gardner, ibid. 377. That a cow-keeper is not subject to the bankrupt laws, where all his transactions of buying and selling are incidental to his occupation of farmer, grazier, or drover, see Carter v. Dean, 1 Swanst. Rep. 64. and S. C. 1 Wils. Ch. 84.

sisted

sisted that the bankrupt was only a farmer, and did not make bricks for sale, but for his own use only. — Mr. Justice Buller, who tried the cause, told the jury the question was, whether the bankrupt kept a public sale-kiln; if he did, it was a trading within the bankrupt laws; but if it was a mere private kiln for his own use, and that having too many, he had only sold to a neighbour, that would not be such a trading. (2) The jury found that it was a public sale-kiln, and consequently gave a verdict for the plaintiff's assignees. The defendant petitioned for a new trial.

Mr. Serjeant Hill (for the plaintiff.) — The opinion of the courts respecting farmers and innholders, dealing much more largely than this man did (2), has been, that they were not within the statutes. No person is within the statutes, 13 Eliz. c. 7. 1 Ja. 1. c. 15. 21 Ja. 1. c. 19. unless he uses merchandise, or seeks his living by buying and selling. The petitioner is not within either branch of the definition; he is no more a trader, than the lessee of a coal mine, or an alum work. This was a selling only in small quantities. (2) The first building of the kiln was, in order to perform a contract with his tenant; but not done for a livelihood, or by way of making a profit. His principal business was that of a farmer: he had no intention of seeking a livelihood by the brick-kiln, which was a very small one. The large kilns for trading (it was in evidence), would burn 13 or 14,000; this would never burn more than 7000. No man can be a bankrupt by selling only, without buying: on this ground it is, that innkeepers and farmers are not within the bankrupt acts (8); for though an innholder buys, it is not his proper trade, Cro. Car. 548. The case of a brick-maker is stronger: he only sells bricks, he does not buy them. It does not appear that this man bought any thing. He only paid a consideration to the lord of the manor. If a man makes bricks upon his own estate, or on that which he rents; or, as in this case, where the trespass is purged by the consideration, it will not amount to a trading, to make him liable to bankruptcy. In [*] Cro. Car. 548. Berkley held that an innholder was liable, because he bought and sold for the use of his customers, and their horses; but the other three judges were of a different opinion. Here he could not mean to get a living. 1 Com. Dig. 522. refers to Cro. Car. 549.; 2 Blackst. Com. 474. 476. From the nature of this dealing, he did not buy; therefore was not within the statutes, any more than the lessee of a colliery, or of an alum work. That a person, generally called a brick-maker, may be a bankrupt, I do not controvert, because they generally buy bricks, but here it is otherwise.

Lord Chancellor. — Beet, one of the witnesses, said he supplied the loam and sand at 10s. 6d. for those for Harrison's own use, and at 12s. for those for sale, and which Harrison sold at 14s. per 1000, and that he made 70,000 at that price.

Serjeant Hill. — In 2 Wils. 169. the Court, without going into the case of a brick-maker, only took a distinction. The earth being manufactured, would be a reason to make it a stronger case than those stated, and would bring it within the reason of the innkeeper and farmer's cases, where they are not bankrupts, because they add to what they buy. It is not merely a buying and selling, but a superaddition, which

(2) It is not the quantity of dealing in any material, whether great or to a very small extent; but all depends on the intention, and it is enough if a person will sell to any one who comes to buy. Such cases are fit for a jury. See Ex parte Magennis, 1 Rose Rep. 84. Ex parte Moule, 14 Ves. 603, 4.

(3) Not as such; but they are not thereby protected if they deal in articles not within the necessity of their situation, as innkeepers, farmers, &c. See Cooke B. L. [37.] & 43. 6th edit. They will not, however, be held to precise strictness. Bolton v. Sowerby, 11 East, 274.

1782.

Ex parte
HARRISON

[ *175 ]

1782.

Ex parte
HARRISON.

is different from Dally v. Smith, 4 Bur. 2148.: here is only a mixture, and a very small one, of buying and selling. If he had dealt in a very small way, not seeking his living by it, it would not be sufficient to bring him within the acts. Mayo v. Archer, Stra. 513. shews the proportions to be material.

Lord Chancellor. — Suppose an innkeeper was to lay in a stock, where every body might be supplied as from any other shop, would not that bring him within the statutes, although the quantity he sold was small, if the demand was no more? (4)

Mr. Madocks cited Crisp v. Pratt, March, 34. A farmer buying under-wood for sale, is not liable to bankruptcy.

Mr. Attorney General (for the assignees.) — I admit it to be necessary that there should be a buying and selling. If a man was to get the clay first, and sell it to the bankrupt, or the bankrupt was to agree with the lord of the manor, to get it at a certain price, either of these would be a buying. If there is no buying [*] here, there are many cases where there could be no commission, about which there has never been a doubt: such as a pottery, — pipe-clay making. Mr. Wedgwood, if his works had not succeeded, might undoubtedly have been a bankrupt. A sugar-baker would, though he should purchase the whole of a plantation. So maltsters, paper-makers, distillers. The nature of the trade therefore is sufficient. The price given will not be material; for if a person gave him the soil, that would be sufficient. Then, as to the extent. The extent to which it is carried on, is matter peculiarly fit for a jury. If he made for his own use, and casually having too many, sold the overplus, I should have thought it not within the bankrupt laws. But the jury here have found that it was a public sale-kiln. The party to be a bankrupt, ought to sell in order to gain, but need not actually gain a livelihood by the trade. If to his character of a farmer, he added another within the bankrupt laws, he certainly might make himself liable to bankruptcy. The place being kept as a sale-kiln, constitutes the person a trader. If a man obtains a chattel interest in the land, and meliiorates it, that will make him liable to a bankruptcy, as laid down by Holt, in Skinner's Rep. 292.

Lord Chancellor. — I take the gist of the case to be, whether a man making bricks out of his own soil, would be within the statutes of bankrupts. If he bought of another, and sold, then that would be within the case of a baker, and a great many other cases. The pipe-maker (5) was owner of the soil; and yet, I think, was held to be a bankrupt: though it was doubtful formerly whether a man, who bought the material, and converted it into another form, as the distiller does, was liable. It seems to me, that the converting coals into another form is not sufficient to make a man liable.

Mr. Balguy (on the same side) cited Watkins v. Caddel, B. R. 14 Dec. 19 Geo. 3. on the trade of an iron-master; where Lord Mansfield said, that the owner of the land, merely preparing the produce for market, is not a trader, as in the case of an alum work †; but where the foundation of the estate was made the basis of a manufacture, as in the case of a brick-maker, that would make a man a trader; and cited two cases on the home circuit, of brick-makers being found bankrupts. The extent of the trading [*] is not material, Priest v. Pidgeon, B. R. 12 Geo. 3. 1772, a victualler sold out of his house, by retail, two gallons of brandy, and five dozen of wine; the jury found him a bankrupt, and the Court refused a new trial: the Court saying, this was a proper subject for the jury to determine. (6) Willet and another, assignees of Aaron, a bankrupt, against Edmonds, East. 13 Geo. 3. 1773. an innkeeper in Cambridge, used to sell liquors by dozens, out in the neighbourhood, to the distance of three miles, Lord Mansfield thought it matter to leave to the jury, whether he was or was not a bankrupt. †

† Newton v. Newton, 1 Cooke's Bankrupt Law, 76. (2d. edit.) [57. & 64. (5th & 6th editions); and see Sutton v. Weeley, 7 East, 442.]

(4) See Ex parte Magennis, and note (2) in the preceding page.

(5) But see Sutton v. Weeley, 7 East, 442. and Ex parte Ridge, 1 Rose Rep. 316. where it was held admissio, that the lessee of a lime-kiln, which he worked as a lime-burner, was not such a trader.

Lord Chancellor. — The only question is, whether a man making bricks on his own estate, or on that which he rents, shall not be a trader liable to the statutes of bankruptcy, though he shall expose the bricks to sale. (7) It seems, here, as if he bought the soil, which founds two questions; first, whether the converting the soil into bricks for sale, would make him liable; second, if the buying the soil, and making it into bricks, will make him so.

Mr. Serjeant Hill (in reply) — cited Skin. 292. and Saunderson v. Rowles, 4 Bur. 2064.

Lord Chancellor. — If I take the case right, the judge reported this fact, that after two persons had used the kiln, the bankrupt took it up and continued it with Beet, who was at half the expense of the kiln, and who was to be at the expense of getting the clay, the fire, &c. and to be allowed so much per thousand for the bricks, which were to be the property of the bankrupt; that the clay was dug for the bankrupt, and under his authority, which made it the same as if he had the lord's licence to take the materials he found necessary for making the bricks; that the bankrupt engaged the other in the making the bricks; and in taking the materials out of the waste. — The judge's opinion given to the jury was, that if he kept a public sale-kiln, he must be found a bankrupt. If it was true that he had set up a private kiln for his own use, and finding he had too many bricks, had sold the surplus, he could not have been a bankrupt; but if, after he had set up the kiln for his own use, he continued to employ it for sale, then the questions arise. (8) I lay out of the case, the buying and selling in the form of bricks; that would not be an arguable case. I lay out of the case also, all that has been [*] said of farmers, innkeepers, &c. exercising other trades; either they must be only consequential, or they must be beyond the measure of their own trade. I therefore think the case of the vintner, who sold five dozen of wine, hard measure. — If a vintner will sell as a wine merchant, the quantity is not material; it is a separate article, by which he seeks his living. (9) If a great farmer would keep a chandler's shop, it would be in vain for him to say he was a farmer: the manner, more than the quantity, points that it is seeking his living. The principle of the old cases is that the parties do not buy and sell, for though they buy, they do not sell in the same form. The effect of the distinction was found to be too large, as it would apply to a great many trades; as, for instance, a distiller. The principle therefore received another application, and now if a man buys raw materials, and † See the cases of Patman v. Vaughan, 1 Durnford and East, 572. and Bartholomew v. Sherwood, ibid. 573. as to the quantum of the trading.

(6) See Ex parte Magennis, 1 Rose Rep. 84.

(7) As to that mere state of facts, it was held in Sutton v. Weeley, 7 East, 442. that such a person was not within the bankrupt laws. See the preceding notes.

(8) But Sutton v. Weeley, referred to in the preceding note, seems to have settled that mere question. Vide 7 East, 442.

(9) See Ex parte Magennis, 1 Rose Rep. 84. and Ex parte Mordaunt, 14 Ves. 602, 603.

1782.

Ex parte
HARRISON.

varies the form ever so much, it will be a trading. Clay and sand turned into bricks, would therefore be within the statutes. But there is another ground upon which it is more uncertain, where he vends the produce of his own estate; because that is not a buying; and therefore the cases have gone upon this, that the man merely selling the produce of his own land, he shall not be liable to be a bankrupt. (10) It is not stated to have been decided that a great brick-maker making from his own estate, can, in that respect, be a bankrupt. The case of Watkins v. Caddel, is only a dictum, since there the bankrupt bought iron. The case of the iron-master, would be like that of the sugar-baker, who had the plantation: I should think if it was brought to a neat question, and the jury thought he only meant to bring his own produce to perfection, they would be right not to find him a bankrupt (10); but it would be very difficult to bring that idea before a jury, and the question would be, whether the man meant to carry on a trade, or merely to meliorate the produce of his own estate. (10) It is very different where a man sets up to sell bricks, and goes about the country to collect materials; the collecting the materials will be held ancillary to the general purpose. Purchasing the earth by obtaining a licence to dig in the waste, might, and I think it would, be held to be for the purpose of carrying on the trade. Here the earth was not purchased, but taken by way of trespass, which would amount to obtaining a licence, and that brings it within the bankrupt laws; that it was not to improve his own estate, but a purchasing of the earth, by licence, ancillary to carrying on the trade of a brick-maker.

Petition for a new trial dismissed. †

† In the case of Parker v. Wells, (11) in the court of King's Bench, Michaelmas Term, 1785. A commission of bankrupt having been issued against the plaintiff, and he having been found, by the commissioners, a bankrupt, as a brick-maker, brought an action of trespass against the messenger under the commission, for the purpose of trying the question whether he was a trader within the bankrupt laws. The cause was tried, and the plaintiff found to be a bankrupt; but, upon the point of law being argued in the court of Common Pleas, the court were of opinion, that, under the circumstances of the case, the plaintiff was not a trader within the bankrupt laws, and Lord Loughborough pronounced that opinion in an argument of considerable length, a full report of which the reader will find in 1 Cooke's Bankrupt Laws, p. 52. 2d edit. Upon this judgment, a writ of error was brought in the court of King's Bench, which was argued in the term, and on Friday, November the 18th, Lord Mansfield delivered the unanimous opinion of the Court, as follows:

Lord Mansfield. — The question which arises upon this special verdict is, whether the plaintiff was a trader within the true intent and meaning of the statutes concerning bankrupts.

The verdict states a demise from the Archbishop of Canterbury, in the year 1767, to John Parker, the father of the plaintiff, of an extensive farm of 800 acres, in which there was a parcel of brick-ground, for 21 years. It states similar demises to John Parker, the father of the plaintiff, prior to that in 1767, and also a subsequent similar demise to the plaintiff in 1780; and states that one William Beraud, for 20 years, and more, before the year 1768; rented the said parcel of brick-ground, from the said John Parker, the father, and made and sold bricks there. That the said William Beraud died in the year 1768, and, upon his death, the plaintiff took the said brick-ground into his own possession; and then and there bought certain materials, and necessary things, which were of the said William Beraud in his life-time used in making bricks there, at the valuation of 150*l.* and then and there made bricks and tiles of the earth there, and sold them; and that, during the time the within-named John Dewy Parker, the plaintiff, so held the said land, he made bricks and tiles for sale, of the earth or clay arising from the brick-ground, and bought sand and fuel, which were necessary ingredients for converting the earth and clay into bricks and tiles.

I shall make two questions,

First, Whether upon this verdict William Beraud was a trader;

(10) So in the late cases of Sutton v. Weeley, 7 East, 442. Ex parte Ridge, 1 Rose Rep. 316. and Ex parte Gardner, ibid. 377.

(11) See Cooke's B. L. p. 40. (5th edit.) 47. (6th edit.) et seq.

Second,

1782.

Ex parte
HARRISON.

Second, If William Beraud was a trader, whether upon this verdict, the case of the plaintiff can be distinguished, so as to make the plaintiff no trader.

Brick-making for sale, abstractedly considered, is, in fact, carrying on a trade, and seeking to live by the profits. Many things are necessary to be bought, which can only be paid by the money to arise from the sale of the bricks. The credit is given to no visible fund, but merely upon speculation to the profits of the trade.

The objection is, that William Beraud rented the brick-ground; and consequently, that the bricks were the produce of his own land.

From the authorities and the reason of the thing, I take the true distinction to be this.

If a man exercises a manufacture, upon the produce of his own land, as a necessary or usual mode of reaping and enjoying that produce, and bringing it advantageously to market, he shall not be considered as a trader, though he buys materials or ingredients; as in the case of a farmer who makes cheese, though he buys runnet and salt; or where a man makes his own apples into cyder, though there is an expense attending the operation, many things to be bought, and perhaps some mixture necessary: but it is the usual mode in the cyder counties, in which the owners of orchards turn their apples to profit, and bring them to market; or as in the alum case, where the operation was proved to be necessary, and the constant mode practised by all the proprietors of alum works; or in the case of coal mines, where raising them out of the pit is as necessary to the enjoyment of that species of produce, as reaping and threshing is to the enjoyment of corn. But where the produce of the land is merely the raw material of a manufacture, and used as such, and not as the mode of raising the produce of land: in short, where the produce of the land is an insignificant article, compared with the expense of the whole manufacture; there in truth he is, and ought to be considered as a trader.

As this distinction turns upon the nature and manner of exercising the manufacture, and the motive with which it is carried on; it depends so much upon the light in which a jury sees the whole transaction, the law and fact are so blended together, that it is hardly possible to distinguish them, and, agreeable to what Mr. Justice Buller did in the case Ex parte Harrison, I directed, when the question in this cause came on before me at Croydon, that if the plaintiff made bricks for the use of his own buildings, though he sold what he did not use, that they should not find him a trader; but, if they thought he carried on the trade for public sale, merely with a view to the gain he expected to arise thereby, they might find him a trader; And a special jury upon that trial found him a trader.

In this case William Beraud took the brick-ground with a view to carrying on a trade for public sale; the land produced nothing, the lease is merely a purchase of the clay, and just the same as if he had bought it by so much a load: he had nothing to do as a farmer; his sole object was making bricks for sale: therefore we think he must be considered as a trader.

Second question: Whether the case of the plaintiff can be distinguished so as to make him no trader?

Upon the death of Beraud in 1768, he took possession, paid for the stock, and carried on the trade in like manner, and made bricks for public sale. He lived with his father, and had, in fact, a joint occupation of the farm with his father; but the father was the lessee, and suffered the plaintiff to take the brick-ground solely. The father had no concern in it, was liable to none of his debts upon that account, and therefore the farm and the brick-ground were as distinct, after the plaintiff carried on the trade, as they were in the time of Beraud.

The plaintiff had no lease or interest in the farm till 1780, but from 1768, he is permitted by his father, upon the death of Beraud, to come in his place, and carry on the trade of brick-making for sale, as Beraud had done for many years.

The lease in 1780 is immaterial, if he traded from 1768 that is sufficient: during that time he only occupies an old brick-kiln, long used for public open sale, and makes and sells bricks accordingly.

The plaintiff acted just as Beraud had done, merely in the capacity of a common brick-maker for sale — Beraud rented the brick-ground as the mode of buying the clay. — Whether the plaintiff paid for the clay, or had it by gift from his father, makes no difference, as to the capacity in which he dealt; which we think was that of a trader.

The Judgment of the Common Pleas reversed.

From this judgment of reversal, the plaintiff appealed to the House of Lords, where the case being argued, the following questions were put to the judges. (12)

1. Whether the finding be sufficient whereupon to grant final judgment.
2. If the finding be insufficient, what award is to be made on such finding.
3. If the finding be sufficient, whether, upon such finding, the plaintiff in error appears to be a trader within the meaning of the statutes concerning bankrupts.

1782.

On Tuesday, 15th March, 1787, the Lord Chief Baron delivered the unanimous opinion of the Judges present upon the first question in the negative; and upon the second question that a venire facias de novo ought to be awarded.

Whereupon it was ordered, that both the judgments should be reversed, and the special verdict (being insufficient) should be annulled, and that the court of King's Bench should award a venire facias de novo, and proceed according to law.

The plaintiff did not proceed on the venire de novo, but brought a fresh action in the Common Pleas, which was afterwards dropped, and an action brought in the King's Bench, which was tried before Mr. Justice Buller and a special jury, 7th December 1787. The jury found a special verdict; but it appearing that the plaintiff had left off brick-making at the time when the petitioning creditor's debt accrued due, the defendant waved the special verdict, and a general one has been entered for the plaintiff. See 1 Cooke's Bankrupt Laws, (2d edit.) 67. and [50, 51.] 57. (5th & 6th editions.)

[ *179 ]

[S. C. 2 Dick. 602. quod vide with the note infra.]

A special direction to the Master in settling an infant's allowance to consider the birth of a child unprovided for refused. (1)

[*] BURNET against BURNET.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 25. b.)

MR. Scott moved for an increase of allowance to an eldest son, and that there might be a special direction to the Master in making the allowance to consider that a posthumous child was born since the former report by which the present allowance was given, who was unprovided for. To shew that such orders had been made, he cited Miss Lanoy v. the Duke of Athol, 2 Atk. 444. Petre v. Petre, 3 Atk. 511. and a case before Sir Thomas Clarke, where he made such a special reference. But the Lord Chancellor refused to make any such special direction, and referred it generally to the Master, to consider of a proper allowance. (1),

(1) The child was not born posthumous. It is very probable from the Report here, and in 2 Dick. that the terms of the motion, as originally made, were altered agreeably to Lord Thurlow's decision, before it was left with the Registrar to draw up the order upon it. Each of the reports, however, has its inaccuracies.

From the entry in Reg. Lib. the application appears to have been merely, "That it might be referred to the Master to consider what increase of allowance was proper to be made for the maintenance and education of the plaintiffs," (two of the younger children,) "and the defendant Thomas, (the eldest son,) for the time to come, and that the Master might state the same, with his opinion thereon, to the court," which was grounded upon a statement that the testator had before his death another child, Gilbert, who was wholly unprovided for (and was a defendant in the suit); and that the sums which had been allowed for the maintenance and education of the several other above mentioned children were inadequate to the expences to be unavoidably incurred on their account. — The order made, was a reference, "whether it was proper to make any and what increase to the allowance for the maintenance of the plaintiffs, and the defendant Thomas, and that the Master should state the same, with his opinion thereon, to the Court." — It appears, therefore, clear from hence, and from the report of the case in 2 Dickins, that Lord Thurlow was far from objecting to the principle laid down in the cited cases, and also in Harvey v. Harvey, 2 P. W. 21. and Roach v. Garvan, 1 Ves. 160, &c. viz. that it is reasonable to make a liberal allowance for children who are provided for, that the benefit may be shared by those who are not; and that his Lordship's objection was merely to avoid introducing any special direction, on that ground, in the order of the Court. Lord Eldon C. has repeatedly declared a Master cannot do a wiser thing for the benefit of a family, than to make a liberal allowance out of children's fortunes, for their maintenance and education, to a mother who is inadequately provided for: but like his great predecessor, His Lordship has declined to prejudice the Master's decision, and to innovate upon the practice of the Court by any special directions.

In addition to these observations, it is rather curious to notice Lord Thurlow's expressions, as reported in the principal case in 2 Dick. His Lordship said "Lord Hardwicke's opinion was better than his order;" and this seems to confirm the Editor's impression as above stated.

WYNNE against HAWKINS.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 28.)

THE plaintiff is the only surviving child of William Wynne, who was the only son of John Wynne. John Wynne, by will dated in 1773, gave some pecuniary legacies, and then went on as follows: "and as I have lately received the melancholy account of the death of my dear son William Wynne, at Bengal, who has left a widow and two small children, and I am informed he died worth five times the fortune I shall leave behind me, which will be a handsome provision: and as I shall leave behind me, over and above the said legacies, only sufficient for a decent maintenance for my loving wife Mary Wynne, by whose prudence and oeconomy, I have saved the greatest part of the fortune I shall die possessed of, not doubting but that she will dispose of what shall be left at her death, to our two grandchildren: all the rest and residue of my personal estate, goods, chattels, monies in the stocks, plate, jewels, watches, and household furniture, and whatever else I shall be possessed of at the time of my decease, I give and bequeath to my loving wife Mary, hereby constituting and appointing her sole executrix." The testator died in September, 1775. The wife died intestate, July, 1781, and this bill was filed, by the surviving grandchild, against her personal representative, for an account of, and to be paid such part of the estate of the grandfather [*], as remained undisposed of by the wife during her life. And the question was, whether these words made an absolute devise to the wife, or operated as a remainder over.

Devise to testator's wife, not doubting she will give what shall be left to my grandchildren, not sufficiently certain to raise a trust.

[For such purpose, the objects must not only be defined (1), but the subject of property precisely ascertained (2), so as to be incapable of diminution by the party.]

[ *180 ]

Mr. Mansfield (for the plaintiffs).—The words "not doubting," (3) are as strong as those made use of in any of the cases, such as request or desire; they express a thorough confidence. He cited 9 Mod. 122. not doubting she would be kind to his children, — no objection was made to the force of the words not doubting. The words in the Institute are peto, rogo, mando, fidei tuæ committo, and have always been held compulsory.

Mr. Hardinge (on the same side) cited Harland v. Trigg, (ante p. 142.) Harding v. Glyn, 1 Atk. 469. — 2 Vern. 466. — Pre. Ch. 200. S. C. Trott v. Vernon, 1 Eq. Abr. 198. — 8 Vin. from 70, to 72, — 1 Ves. 107. — there is no case where the word desire has not been held imperative, though there have been cases, where the decree has been contrary, on account of the uncertainty of the person intended. The cases 2 Vern. 559. — 10 Mod. 404. are too strong to argue from. That of

(1) See Harland v. Trigg, ante, 142.; per Lord Thurlow thereon in Nowlan v. Nelson, post. 491.; and per Lord Eldon C. in Wright v. Atkins, Cooper, Ch. Ca. 121, 122. Vide also the references in Harland v. Trigg, ubi supra, and Bull v. Vardy, 1 Ves. Jun. 270.

(2) — S. P. on the authority of this case, 3 Ves. 7. and Cunliffe v. Cunliffe, cited ibid. p. 11. The point in the principal case and those last mentioned, was, that the party had manifestly the power of spending the property, and making the residue what she chose. See postea in the judgment; and these cases did not at all turn as to a want of precision in the objects (as in Harland v. Trigg, ante, 142.). In Massey v. Sherman, Ambl. 520. the words, "not doubting but my wife will give it [a copyhold estate] to and amongst my children," were sufficient to raise a trust; because the ascertained nature of the property concurred with a precise description of the objects or persons to take. See accordingly per Lord Thurlow, ante, 144, &c.; and per Lord Eldon, C., Cooper, Ch. Ca. 115, 117, 118. All the material cases will be found comprehended and discussed in Wright v. Atkins, 17 Ves. 255. et seq.; 1 Ves. & B. 313. and Cooper's Ch. Ca. 111. et seq.; Parsons v. Baker, 18 Ves. 476, &c.; Prevost v. Clark, 2 Madd. Rep. 458. and Forbes v. Ball, 3 Merivale, 437. &c.

(3) See Massey v. Sherman, Ambl. 520., and the observations and references in the preceding note.

1782.

WYNNE
against
HAWKINS.

Harland v. Trigg [antea, 142.] is quite out of the reason of this case, — hoping he will continue them in the family, is quite uncertain as to the persons. (4) 2 Eq. Abr. 291.

Mr. Attorney General (for the defendants) cited Bland v. Bland †, in 1745, and Birkhead v. Coward, 2 Vern. 116.

Lord Chancellor. — If a bill had been filed in the lifetime of the wife, could I have ordered this money to be laid out, and that she should receive the interest for her life, and then it should go over? These are equivocal words, the intent of which is to be gathered from the context. — If the intention is clear, what was to be given, and to whom, I should think the words not doubting would be strong enough. (5) But where, in point of context, it is uncertain what property was to be given, and to whom, the words are not sufficient, because it is doubtful what is the confidence which the testator has reposed; and, where that does not appear, the scale leans to the presumption, that he meant to give the whole to the first taker. Here he looked upon the provision made by the father of the grandchildren, as an ample provision, and meant this fortune, to pass through the pleasure of his wife, *leaving it to her to use what she pleased, and [*] consequently to make the residue such as she chose.* If he had meant imperatively, he might easily have used such words as would have effected his intention: but it is impossible, upon any rule of construction, to make these words an order upon her to pass the property over. Bill dismissed. ‡ (6)

[ *181 ]

† Cited and stated vol. 2. p. 43.

‡ See Pierson v. Garnet, vol. 2. p. 38—226.

(4) See per Lord Thurlow on his decision of the case of Harland v. Trigg, in Newlan v. Nelligan, post. 491. and the Editor's notes on it ubi suprad.

(5) See Massey v. Sherman, Ambl. 520. accordingly. So likewise Parsons v. Baker, 18 Ves. 476.

(6) Without costs.

BARNES against ALLEN.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 262.)

Devise of the residue of personal estate to the wife for life, if she die without issue living at her death, to testator's two brothers, or if one of them shall be dead, to the survivor; they both died in the life of the wife, the legacy was vested (1) in both as joint-tenants, and therefore goes to the representative of the survivor.

THOMAS Allen, by will, 3 January, 1758, devised the residuum of his personal estate to [trustees for] his wife [if she remained his widow] for life, and, after her decease, to their children; but “if it shall happen that my wife shall depart this life, leaving no child or children, at the time of her death, then my will is, that my trustees shall transfer the securities in which my estate shall then be vested to my two brothers, John Allen and Henry Allen; and in case either of them shall be then dead, then to the survivor [for his own use and benefit], and I hereby give the same to them accordingly.” Henry Allen survived John Allen, but was since dead. The bill was filed by plaintiff Barnes, executor of Henry Allen, against the widow of the testator, and the representative of Bridget Ashe, niece of the testator, and also the representative of John Allen, the other brother, to have the whole

(1) Upon the point of vesting, in such cases, and reference to the principal case, see Perry v. Woods, 3 Ves. 204. 208.; Harrison v. Foreman, 5 Ves. 207. 210.; and Lady Lincoln v. Pelham, 10 Ves. 166. 171. 175. See also Dawson v. Killet, antea, 115. and the notes.

whole of the testator's estate secured for the benefit of the plaintiff, subject to the life-interest of the defendant, the widow. (2)

Mr. Solicitor General, and Mr. Lloyd (for the plaintiffs). — The brothers took vested interests, subject to the life of the wife, — Pinbury v. Elkin, 1 Wms. 563. — Smith v. Ball, 1 Eq. Abr. 245. — 2 Vent. 347. an anonymous case cited in Pinbury v. Elkin. If an estate is given with a charge, it will vest though the party die. Dawson v. Killel, last Michaelmas term. (ante, p. 119.)

Lord Chancellor. — The survivorship, and the taking by survivorship, must be at the death of the wife, and then the question is, both being dead, whether it ever could attach.

Mr. Attorney General (for the defendants). Where the words are, if the party shall die without issue, the legacy must fail if [*] the legatee dies before the first taker. Norris v. Huthwaite, 13 November, 1777, in the Exchequer. †

Lord Chancellor. — The case in Ventris is confirmed by King v. Withers, (Forrest, 117.) — A contingent interest may vest in right, though it does not in possession. I take it to be clear, that if a testator gives a legacy upon a contingency, unless the contingency happens, the legacy does not vest: but the case of an executory devise is, that the interest of the first taker, and that of the subsequent taker vest at the same time. Contingent or executory interests may be as completely vested as if they were in possession. In the case in Ventris, the con-

† In that case, Joseph Smith gave all his mortgages, bonds, and the rest of his personal estate, to his wife, upon the following considerations, (int. alia) that at the decease of his said wife, or if she should marry again, 500*l.* be paid to sister Sarah Smith out of the aforementioned estate within six months after her decease or marriage. — Sarah Smith died, living the wife; and the bill was filed by her representatives, against the executrix of the wife, but was dismissed without costs, on the ground that the legacy was not given till after the wife's death or second marriage, and therefore lapsed by the death of Sarah Smith, in the life of the wife.

(2) The Editor has made some slight corrections in the text, which are apparent, because the original report mis-stated the will. They are from Reg. Liber; and the profession will find the whole will stated, from the same source, with the decree (as stated below) in a note to Perry v. Woods, 3 Ves. 208.

The bill charged, that the defendant, the widow (inter alia) insisted, that both John Allen and Henry Allen having died in her lifetime, upon the true construction of the said will the said testator ought to be considered in equity as dying intestate as to the residue of his personal estate; and that she, as his widow, was entitled to one moiety thereof; and that the other defendants also insisted on the like. But plaintiff charged, that as Henry survived John, the whole of the residue had vested in him absolutely. But if the Court should be of opinion that the residue ought to be considered as undisposed of, then the plaintiff insisted that, as executor of Henry, he was entitled to a distributive share thereof. The bill, therefore, after an account, prayed that the plaintiff might, as the executor of Henry, be declared to be entitled, upon the death or marriage of the defendant, the widow, to the clear residue, &c. and that the same might be paid to him accordingly; or, in case the Court should be of opinion that the plaintiff was not entitled to the whole thereof, as executor of the said Henry Allen, then that he might be declared to be entitled to the said Henry Allen's share thereof.

The defendant, the widow, submitted, that in case the Court should be of opinion that, by reason of the death of John and Henry in her lifetime, the gift to them became lapsed, whether she was not absolutely entitled to such residue for her own benefit as being sole executrix of the will. But if the testator was to be deemed intestate as to such residue, and that the same ought to be distributed amongst his next of kin according to the statute, then she claimed a moiety thereof as his widow.

The Court declared that the clear residue, subject to the defendant the widow's life interest therein (in case she should so long continue unmarried), was vested in John Allen and Henry Allen (who survived the said testator, but were since dead) as joint-tenants; and the said Henry Allen having survived the said John Allen, his Lordship also declared, that the said residue, subject to such life-interest therein as aforesaid, belonged to the plaintiff, the executor of the said Henry Allen. Reg. Lib.

1782.

BARNES
against ALLEN.

tingency was only as to the possession, but there the interest was so vested that it might be transmitted.

It stood over till the first day of causes after term, when Lord Chancellor declared it to have vested in the two brothers (who survived the testator, but were since dead) as joint-tenants, and Henry Allen having survived John, the residue, subject to the wife's interest for life, belonged to the plaintiff, the personal representative of Henry. (3)

(3) See the decree from R. L. at the end of the first note to this case.

[ *183 ]
S. C. 2 Dick.
603.

[*] THOMAS BROOKS, D.D. and ELIZABETH, his Wife, late
ELIZABETH ADAMS, Widow and Executrix of JAMES ADAMS, Esq. deceased, - - - - Plaintiffs.

FRANCES REYNOLDS, Widow, - - - - Defendant.

(1)

There being a decree for payment of debts, &c. on the suit of the trustees, though the parties have not proceeded under that decree, a creditor restrained by injunction, [by bill filed for the purpose] from proceeding at law against the executor. (2)

JAMES Adams, Esq. by his will, gave the greatest part of his plate and linen, together with other considerable specific legacies, and all his ready money, and securities for money, arrears of rent, and debts due to him at his decease, to his wife, the plaintiff Elizabeth, then, Elizabeth Adams, for her sole use and disposal; and appointed her executrix of his will, and gave her the use of the rest of his household goods and furniture for her life, and devised to her considerable real estates for her life; and gave to George Howland, and other trustees, all other his freehold and leasehold estates in particular places, and the estates devised to his wife for her life, after her decease; and also his household goods and furniture, given to his wife for life, after her decease; and all other his freehold, leasehold, and personal estates, upon trust for his children, if he should leave any at his decease; and if he should die, without leaving issue, upon trust to sell part of his freehold estates, and apply the money arising thereby (after payment of his debts) among the children of his niece A. Stonnell, and of his niece E. Williamson, who should be then living; and to convey his freehold, leasehold, and personal estates, devised to his wife for her life, to his nephew James Williamson, his heirs, executors, &c. James Adams died in 1775, without issue, and the plaintiff Elizabeth proved his will, and possessed his per-

(1) No entry, but of an order to enlarge the time for shewing cause on the merits until the last day of Michaelmas term, R. L. 1782. A. fol. 38.

(2) Before this case, it was the opinion that an injunction could not be obtained, whether on a bill by creditors or otherwise, merely after a decree to account; and that it was requisite that the quantum of at least some creditors' demands should be ascertained, agreeably to what Lord Hardwicke C. says in Martin v. Martin, 1 Ves. 213. Lord Eldon C. therefore observes, the point was strongly contended and colourably urged in the principal case; and more especially, since it was not a suit on behalf of creditors. His Lordship, however, approved of the decision, and also of a like determination of Lord Thurlow in Kenyon v. Worthington, in 1785, which is reported 2 Dickens, 668. This, nevertheless, was a suit by creditors. In all cases therefore, where the Court has, by decree, taken upon itself the administration of assets, it will now restrain parties suing the executor at law; and it now is unnecessary to file a separate bill for such purpose, since an injunction can be applied for in the existing suit. See in Paxton v. Douglas, 8 Ves. 520. and Perry v. Phelps, 10 Ves. 39, 40. Et vide Gilpin v. Lady Southampton, 18 Ves. 469. But to obtain such an injunction, Lord Eldon C. has (in a most salutary manner) required that the executor, &c. making the application shall give a statement, on oath, of the amount of the assets. See the above cases of Paxton v. Douglas, 8 Ves. 520. and Gilpin v. Lady Southampton, 18 Ves. 469. — It may be observed here, that a mere decree for an account of plaintiff's demand, and payment of the result, is not sufficient to prevent an executor, &c. paying a judgment, if he pleases. Perry v. Phelps, 10 Ves. 34, &c.

sonal estate, except his leasehold estate; and Howland and his co-trustees entered on the real estates, directed to be sold. In Hilary term, 1777, Howland and his co-trustees filed a bill against the present plaintiff Elizabeth, the testator's heir at law, and the persons claiming under his will, for the directions and indemnity of the Court, in executing their trust; and, by a decree in that cause, 18th December, 1777, the will was established, proper accounts were directed, and it was ordered that the personal estates, not specifically bequeathed, should be applied in payment of the testator's debts, funeral expences, and legacies, in a course of administration, and that the clear residue, if any, should be paid into [*] the bank; but, in case the personal estates, not specifically bequeathed, should not be sufficient for payment of the testator's debts, any of the creditors should be at liberty to apply to the Court for payment of what should be remaining due to them, after application of such personal estate in payment thereof, as there should be occasion. Proceedings were had under this decree, but no report was made; and the defendant Frances Reynolds, a bond creditor of the testator, in Easter, 1782, brought an action against the plaintiff Elizabeth upon the bond. Upon this, the plaintiffs filed the present bill, stating this case, and that the testator died indebted to several other persons, and that the personal estate, not specifically bequeathed, was not near sufficient to pay his debts, and funeral expences; but that the plaintiff Elizabeth, having in her hands the personal estate specifically bequeathed, had assets to pay debts, and could not defend herself at law; and the bill therefore prayed that the defendant might be compelled to seek payment of the bond, under the decree, that the plaintiff might be quieted in the enjoyment of the personal estate specifically bequeathed to her, and that the defendant might be restrained by injunction from proceeding at law. The defendant, by her answer, said she knew nothing of the decree but from the bill, and insisted that the personal estate specifically bequeathed, as well as the personal estate not specifically bequeathed, was subject to her demand, and that she had a right to proceed in her action; that the trustees of the real estate were engaged in a litigation concerning that estate, which might be many years depending, and that she ought not to be compelled to wait the event, especially as her debt bore only 4 per cent. interest. After filing the bill, an injunction had been obtained for want of an answer, and, upon shewing cause against dissolving the injunction after the coming in of the answer, it was insisted on the behalf of the plaintiffs that the creditors of the testator were bound by the decree in 1777: and for this the counsel cited the case of Martin v. Martin, 1 Ves. 211. and Douglas v. Clay, before Lord Camden, 21st February, 1767 (3), where it was held that a decree at the suit of creditors against an executor, for an account of the personal estate of the testator, will bind other creditors; and if they sue at law, the Court will award an injunction.

Mr. Mitford (for the defendant) (4) endeavoured to take a difference between this case and those of Martin v. Martin, and Douglas v. Clay, that the bills in those cases [*] were filed by creditors, where the decree was in the nature of a judgment in their favour; but, in this case, the bill was filed by the trustees: that in the case where a bill was filed by a creditor, those who come in contribute to the suit; that here there was no order for creditors to come in; and that they could not make themselves parties, but must wait till the other parties chose to carry the decree into execution; and then must abide by the decree, however 1782.

BROOKS
against REYNOLDS.

[ *184 ]

[ *185 ]

(3) 1 Dickins, 393.

(4) See Lord Eldon C.'s observations on this argument, 10 Ves. 39, 40, &c. referred to by the second note to this case.

1782.

BROOKS
against
REYNOLDS.

erroneous, as they could not re-hear the cause; and, if any party should die, they could not revive the suit, but must bring a new bill to have the benefit of the decree. And as this was the first instance of an application to restrain the proceeding at law, upon the ground of a decree to which no creditor was a party, it ought not to prevail. But Lord Chancellor thought there was no difference, for the creditors here may come in before the Master; and the reason why the injunction is granted is this, that this Court, having taken the fund into its own hands, will not permit the executor to be pursued at law.

The order [for dissolving the injunction vis] was discharged, and the injunction continued. (5)

(5) See note (2) at the beginning of this case.

[ *186 ]

[*] HILARY TERM,

23 Geo. 3. 1783.

SMITH against GUYON. [GUION.]

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 388.)

Where land is directed by will to be sold generally, and the money to be part of the personal estate, the purchaser is not bound to see to the application of the money. (1)

THE testator ordered his copyhold estate to be sold, and the money arising therefrom to go into the mass of his personal estate, and then ordered his personal estate (subject to his debts) to be divided into four parts: one-fourth part to A. another to B. and the remaining two-fourth parts to secure the payment of certain annuities given by the will. The question was, whether the purchaser was bound to look to the application of the purchase-money. (1) By Lord Chancellor, the purchaser is a mere stranger, and is not bound to look to the applica-

(1) But it is otherwise if it is to be applied in payment of debts which are scheduled; or if the estate is sold under the directions of the Court, and the money is not paid into Court. See Ithell v. Beane, 1 Ves. 215, and Lloyd v. Baldwin, ibid. 173. See also Culpepper v. Aston [or Austin] 2 Cha. Ca. 115. 221. 223. Anon. Salk. 153.; Dunch v. Kent, 1 Vern. 260. So Spalding v. Shalmer, 1 Vern. 501.; from whence it appears; that even where the debts are particularized, a purchaser shall not be obliged to enter into the account, if more of the estate is sold than is necessary. That trustees to sell and pay debts may fairly raise by sale or mortgage, without waiting for a decree, see E. Bask v. E. Bradford, 2 Ves. 587. 590.

The precise point mentioned in the report of the principal case does not appear from Reg. Lib. The bill was filed by a purchaser of certain estates, &c. stating (inter alia) a lease, dated 29th Sept. 1755, of which he averred he had not any notice, and which contained several reservations under it, as of timber, shrubs, and fruit trees, and of a right of way, &c. injurious to his purchase, but as to which it stated his readiness to accept of an allowance out of the remainder of his purchase money, and his willingness to accept of proper covenants in respect of the right of way. It therefore prayed a reference to settle such allowance, if the trees and shrubs so excepted and reserved should not appear to have been released, &c. and that all proper parties might join in conveying, &c. the estate to him, free from incumbrances, and discharged from the right of way. The decree referred it to the Master to inquire whether the lease, bearing date the 29th Sept. 1755, was produced at the time of the sale of the premises in question; or whether the purchaser had any kind of notice given to him of such lease. And it was ordered that the Master should inquire whether the parties in the cause, or any and which of them were necessary parties to the conveyance to be executed to the plaintiff. R. L.

tion.

tion. Where the estate is to be sold, and a specific sum, as 5*l.* to be paid to A. the purchaser must see to the application; but where it is to be sold generally, he is not. †

† The same general doctrine had been laid down by Lord Hardwicke, in Rogers v. Skillicorne, Amb. 188. and by the late Sir Thomas Sewel, when Master of the Rolls, in a case of Tenant v. Jackson, and Cotton v. Eberall, the 10th of February, 1774; who cited, in support of it, Langley v. Lord Oxford, the 11th of May, 1748. It was also adopted by Lord Kenyon, upon a rehearing of the former named cause.

In Jebb v. Abbet, the 9th of February, 1782, (cited by Mr. Butler in his note on Co. Lit. 290. the 14th edit.) Lord Chancellor said, where debts and legacies are charged on lands, the purchaser will hold free from the claim of the legatees; for, not being bound to see to the discharge of debts, he cannot be expected to see to the discharge of legacies which cannot be paid till after the debts: And in the case of Beynon v. Gollins (reported, on a different point, post. vol. 2. p. 323. and cited in the same note by the name of Beynon v. Gibbs) the bill was dismissed as to the purchasers, with costs, they not being bound, under the charge, to see to the application of the purchase-money. The same rule was laid down by the Master of the Rolls, in Williamson v. Curtis, 25th June, 1790.

1783.

SMITH
against
GUYON.NEWMAN against NEWMAN.Appeal from the Rolls. [Decree 5 June, 1781.]

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 129.)

AN estate had been settled, upon the marriage of the late Mr. Newman with the appellant, his now widow, on the husband for life, remainder to the wife for life, remainder to the issue of the marriage, remainder to the wife in fee, and a bond given to secure the sum of 30*l.* per ann. to the wife, in case she should survive, as a further provision. By will, in 1768, the testator [*] devised another real estate to the wife for life, remainder to the issue, if there should be any; in default of issue, then to her in fee, in bar of her other claims; and gave her the residue of his personal estate, after some specific and pecuniary legacies, in the same manner, and made her executrix; but the will was not duly attested to pass real estate. The question was, whether the widow should take the personal estate, together with her other claims, or must elect between them, although the real estate could not pass by the will. It was heard at the Rolls, and his Honour decreed that she must elect, but postponed the election, till an account taken of the personal estate.

The wife, being entitled to a settled estate, the husband gives her by will an interest in another estate, and all his personal property, in lieu of her claims. The will is not duly attested to pass real estate: she cannot take the devised land, but must elect between the personal estate alone, and her claims under the settlement. (1)

[ *187 ]

And now on appeal from the Rolls,
Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Poole, and Mr. Harvey (for the appellant),

(1) His Honour (on 5 June, 1781) declared, "That, as the will of the testator had not been duly executed, the defendant, his widow, could not take any benefit from the estate thereby devised to her for her life; and that she was not obliged to make any election whether she would take under the will, till after the accounts thereafter directed should be taken, and a report made thereon."

The usual accounts were therefore directed; and the Master was specially ordered to ascertain and distinguish all such legacies, as well specific as other legacies, given or intended to be given to the defendant by the said testator, by his will, &c. &c. And his Honour declared, "that in case the defendant should thereafter elect to take the provisions made for her on her marriage, and relinquish her claims under the said will, she was to be considered as a specialty creditor on the testator's estate, for the annuity of 30*l.* secured to her by the testator's bond, and also for two third parts of the leasehold estates mentioned in the deed of assignment, or the value thereof, under and according to the said bond and deed," &c. &c. R. L.

Decree affirmed, and deposit paid to the plaintiff.

1783.

NEWMAN
against
NEWMAN.

insisted she was not bound to make any election, but might take both the personal estate under the will, and likewise what she claimed under the settlement; that it depended on the intention of the testator, who meant to give her the real as well as personal estate, in exchange for her claims, and therefore, as she could not take the whole provision he had made for her, she should not be bound to make her election. On the other side, it was contended she could not take under the settlement, without giving up whatever she took by the will, and for this was cited Boughton v. Boughton, 2 Ves. 12.

Lord Chancellor. — The will relating to real estate, and not being duly attested, is so far out of the case. The words extend to all her claims. The thing required is, that I should confine general words to particular devises. There is no room for the question: his Honour's decree is right. (1)

(1) See note (1) in the preceding page.

BIGGE [BIGG] against BENSLEY. [26, 27 Nov. 1779, and 24 Feb. 1783.]

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 186. b.)

Personal estate bequeathed to F. H. her executors, administrators, and assigns, but "in case of the death of F. H. without issue," remainder over; this remainder over is too remote, as it must be construed a general dying without issue. (1)

[*188]

HARRIS, by his will, made in the East Indies, and bearing date 15th January, 1749, bequeathed all his personal estate to his wife Frances Harris, to hold to her, her heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, for ever, and appointed her [*] sole executrix; but in case of the death of Frances Harris, without issue, then he gave the whole to the eldest son of his brother Richard Harris, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns; and if there should be no such son, then to his said brother Richard Harris. The wife survived her husband, married the defendant, and is since dead without issue. The defendant, who survives her, claims the whole interest in her right. The bill is brought by the plaintiff, claiming under the devise over. This cause was heard in Michaelmas term, 1779.

Mr. Attorney General (for the plaintiff). — The wife proved the will, and married the defendant. If the application of the words, "if she die without issue," be a dying without issue, living at the time of her death, then the devise over is good. There was, in this case, a further supposed event, that Richard Harris should have no son, then the devise was in favour of Richard Harris himself. If the testator meant a dying without issue indefinitely, it could not affect the son of a person then living, much less that person himself. The event must be decided at the death of Frances Harris. Till the time of Dormer v. Beauclerk, 2 Atk. 308. the words dying without issue were construed as they were generally used. In a late case, Keily v. Fowler, 1st February, 1768, Fearne on Cont. Remrs. 368. 3d edit. 6 Brown's Plt. Cases, 309. (2) the opinion of the Judges, given in the House of Lords, put the authority of Dormer v. Beauclerk very much out of the case, except where the cir-

(1) See Butterfield v. Butterfield, 1 Ves. 133. 154. and Supplement, 81. The latter words used there were the same as here, "die without issue," and not "heirs," as stated in Mr. Vesey's Report. See also Attorney General v. Hird, antea, 170. and the references, especially Mr. Sanders' note, 2 Atk. 89. and 2 Roper on Leg. 393, &c. See also Glover v. Strothoff, post. 2 vol. 33.; Crooke v. De Vandes, 9 Ves. 197.; Kirkpatrick v. Kirkpatrick, 13 Ves. 476, &c. &c. with the numerous references and notes; Barlow v. Salter, 17 Ves. 479, &c.; and Elton v. Eason, 19 Ves. 73, &c.

(2) § Bro. P. C. 299. octavo ed. See 13 Ves. 485.

cumstances

cumstances are the very same, Target v. Gaunt, 1 Wms. 432. Pinbury v. Elkin, 1 Wms. 563.

Lord Chancellor. — Was not the argument in Keily v. Fowler, that the obvious meaning of the words was a general failure of issue, but controllable by words or circumstances? I take it, that in a general sense they go to a general failure.

Mr. Selwyn (on the same side). — The defendant insists, that it was a gift of the whole to the wife. The words are to be taken in their obvious sense, Forth v. Chapman (3), 1 Wms. 663. Till Matthew Manning's case, there was no limitation over of personal estate, after that a number of cases carried the doctrine much further. There is a difference where the remainder is vested or contingent; if it be contingent, it may be good or bad, according as the event turns out, Target v. Gaunt; Pinbury v. Elkin; Gower v. Grosvenor, Barnardiston Chan. Rep. [*] 58.; Sabbarton v. Sabbarton, Forrester, 245.; Shepherd v. Lessingham, 30th October, 1751, where the word leaving (3) occasioned the determination that the limitation was not too remote.

Mr. Madocks (for the defendants). — In Pinbury v. Elkin, and Forth v. Chapman, the first disposition was for life only.

Mr. Kenyon (on the same side.) — The rule is, that whatever words would give an estate-tail in land, will give the whole interest in personalty, Duke of Norfolk's case, 3 Ch. Ca. 1. — Prima facie "to a man and his heirs," signifies the whole interest, unless there are words to shew the testator meant issue living at the time of his death. In Forth v. Chapman, the word was leaving. This does not appear in Peere Williams; but Lord Hardwicke, in the case of Dormer v. Beauclerk, said he was counsel in that case, and that great weight was laid upon the word leaving. (4) Lord Hardwicke uniformly made the distinction. In Dormer v. Beauclerk, the words were very like those in this case. In Keily v. Fowler, the executors nominatim were to distribute the property. In Daw v. Lord Chatham, reported by the name of Lord Chatham v. Tothil, 6 Brown's Parlt. Cases, 450. the whole argument proceeded upon the allowance of this principle. Saltern v. Saltern, 2 Atk. 376. (5) The inclination of Lord Hardwicke was to lock up property, but he could not give effect to limitations of this sort.

Mr. Attorney General (in reply). — It would be hard if no other words would supply the place of the word leaving: dying without issue, signifies without leaving issue. The death of Frances Harris is the circumstance which regulates the question; it is to be decided then; if the brother takes then, he takes absolutely; if he does not take then, he never takes. If he had a son born after the death of Frances Harris, that son could not take; so it is of the father, if there be a son at that time. The question is, who is the person to take at the death of Frances Harris. This is a much stronger circumstance than any of those in the cases. The circumstances of Keily v. Fowler were very slight to take it out of the rule. Mr. Fearne states it to be, that the executors were to make the distribution. I believe all the confusion has arisen from attempting to lay down a rule. In Daw v. Lord Chatham, the question was not applicable [*]; the reason there was, that Leonora taking by express words an estate-tail, the remainder over was not good.

Lord Chancellor. — I agree with you, that the general sense of dying without issue is at the time of the death. That is the grammatical con-

(3) See 13 Ves. 203. and 19 Ves. 79, &c. which shew Forth v. Chapman remains unshaken.

(4) See post. by Lord C. in his judgment, and Crooke v. De Vandes, 9 Ves. 197. 204.

(5) All the cases here cited, and almost every other on the subject, will be found stated, commented on, or referred to in those which are cited in the first note antea to this case.

1783.

Bigge
against Bensley.

[ *189 ]

[ *190 ]

struction,

struction, and is the sense, in general of those who use the words. There should be as little contradiction as may be in the determinations of the Court: the words leaving,—and after, go far towards overturning the rule. It would be better sense to say, that in Keily v. Fowler there was no other rule of construction than Mr. Fearne's. The contingency cannot be fixed, until the period of the former event is fixed. It would vest in the father and son, and would transmit. If the father had issue which died, and then the first taker died, the father would take, if the period was to be the death of Frances. I shall not go further than I am obliged, by the cases in determining against what I think the meaning of the testator, which, I am afraid, I must do, or overturn the established rule. I did not know it was to come on to-day, and meant to look into the cases before the first day of causes after Term.

It stood over for judgment.

February 23. 1783, Lord Chancellor gave judgment in this cause. The Reporter was absent, but has been favoured with an accurate account of what passed.

Lord Chancellor.—The first question is, what, abstractedly, from little points and circumstances, would be the effect of the gift to Frances Harris. There is not a single case, not even that of Atkinson v. Hutchinson (3 Wms. 258.), which does not hold that such a limitation, after these general words, is too remote. (6) I shall notice only Dormer v. Beauclerk, in Atkyns: it is a very good note. The general words are to be varied only by circumstances, arising upon fair demonstration. There are not less than 57 cases upon this point. To call dying without leaving issue, the natural sense of dying without issue, is against all the cases. (7) In this case there is no one circumstance which has occurred in the others. In Dormer v. Beauclerk, it was held that the word then could not, and never did make the difference. It is merely a word of relation, not an adverb of time. Upon Lord Hardwicke's authority, I must hold the word then does not make a difference. As to the gift to the [*] brother, Dormer v. Beauclerk is a stronger case as to that point; it was argued there upon the circumstance of the 5000*l.* being meant as a portion, that being a maintenance, and given after a dying without issue: it must mean dying, leaving no issue.

Bill dismissed. (8)

(6) Lyde v. Lyde, 1 T. R. 593. cannot be said to militate against this proposition; for the word "issue," there must be construed "such issue," with reference to the word "children," which preceded it; and held that if it had been "real estate the children" would have taken by purchase.

(7) See Crooke v. De Vandes, 9 Ves. 197. 204.

(8) Without costs. R. L.

a Court,
Easter, 1779.
Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 17th
March, 1783.
S. C. 2 Dick.
51.]

Devise of estate to second son J.
after the decease or marriage of the wife, charged with 100*l.* to testator's daughter Mary. — Mary died, living the wife, but held his legacy vested in Mary, and transmissible to her representative. (1)

GODWIN against MUNDAY.

(No Entry.)

JOHN Munday, seised in fee of an estate, by his will, bearing date the 18th June, 1757, devised the same to his second son Jamer and his heirs for ever, after the decease or marriage of his (the testator's) wife

(1) S. P. Hutchins v. Foy, Cam. Rep. 716. and Dawson v. Elliot, ante, 119. Quod vide with the notes and references, especially Mr. Cox's note to the D. Chandos v. Talbot, 2 P. W. 612.

Elizabeth,

Elizabeth, with a proviso that he should pay unto the testator's daughter Mary, then wife of the plaintiff, and since deceased, the sum of 100*l.* and unto Martha 80*l.* to be paid within one year after the death or marriage of his wife. The testator died some time after, leaving Stephen his eldest son and heir at law: Elizabeth the widow entered, Mary Godwin died 19th May, 1774, Elizabeth the widow died 4th November, 1776. The plaintiff obtained letters of administration to his wife Mary, and filed this bill for 100*l.* given to her charged upon the estate.

This cause was heard in Easter term, 1779.

Mr. Ambler (for the plaintiff). — The question is, whether this legacy vested in Mary Godwin. The legacy vested in her, as much as the estate did in James Munday. The proviso operates as a charge upon the land. "These words, "so as," "provided," "in consideration whereof," all operate as charges, Bacon v. Clerk, Pre. Ch. 500. — Oke v. Heath, 1 Ves. 135. — Kite v. Barne, 1743, which was, I give to Lord ——— all my goods, paying the legacies contained in a schedule. — † Pawsey v. Edgar, before [*] Lord Bathurst. — Where it is uncertain whether the time will come or not, the Court has said it shall not be raised, unless it is wanted. ‡ Fry v. Fry, 27th June, 1753, devise to testator's wife for 20 years, remainder in tail, and a legacy payable to his daughter within one year after the death of the wife, the daughter died in the life of the mother: the question was, whether this legacy sunk into the estate: Lord Hardwicke said, the rule was, that if the legacy was payable at a particular time, and the child dies before that time, the legacy shall sink, because it is never wanted. — But this case is not within that rule. — There was an attempt to contest it where the party died within the year after the death of the person, a year after whose decease it was to be paid, Hodgson v. Rawson, 1 Vesey, 44. where Lord Hardwicke held it vested, and that the time was only given to the remainder-man to turn himself round. Lord Hardwicke there held it vested and transmissible; because the devise of the estate vested immediately, — so also he decreed in Lowther v. Condon, 2 Atk. 127.

Mr. Waller (on the same side). — Where the payment is merely postponed for the benefit of the estate, the legacy will not sink. Here the testator meant, that Mary should have the 100*l.* when the estate should come into possession, and that the son should then pay the charge. The charge vested at the same time with the estate. Hall v. Terry, 1 Atk. 502.

† PAWSEY v. EDGAR, Lincoln's Inn Hall, 17th December, 1776.

Testator, by will dated 9th April, 1759, devised real estate to his wife Temperance for her life, remainder to his son Robert in tail-male, remainder to his (the testator's) right heirs in fee, upon condition that Robert, or those then in possession of this estate, should within six months after the death of testator's wife, pay his two daughters, Mary and Temperance, 1200*l.* viz. 600*l.* to each, and interest at 5*l.* per cent. from the death of their said mother, with power of entry to the daughters, in default of payment: August 1759 testator died, August 1754 Temperance the daughter died, December 21. 1754, Temperance the mother died, 1774 Mary the other daughter died, having administered to her sister Temperance, but never claimed the 600*l.* so bequeathed to her sister Temperance. The personal representative of Mary and Temperance brought the bill against Robert as heir at law, and devisee of the testator, for this sum of 600*l.* bequeathed to Temperance the daughter, with interest from the mother's death, in 1754, and, upon the authorities of Hutchinson and Foy, and Hodgson and Rawson, Lord Chancellor determined that the charge vested with the land, and decreed for the plaintiff.

‡ A very accurate note of this case which the Reporter has met with rests the Chancellor's argument on two grounds: the one, that the daughter Jane died unmarried, and before the time of payment; and therefore that the case stood divested of the circumstances that induced the Court in King v. Withers, and in other cases, to take it out of the general rule: the other, that, in the similar provision made by the testator for another daughter, Eleanor, out of a different estate, he had shewn his intentions that it should not go to her representatives, because he had expressly given it to Jane, in case she should survive her.

1783.

GODWIN
against MUNDAY.

[ *192 ]

[S. C. 2 Dick.
531.]

has 1783.

Godwin
against Monday.

[ *193 ]

has been since varied from, and particularly in Hutchins v. Foy, Comyns, 716. (ci. 1 Ves. 47.) which is exactly this case.

Mr. Madocks (for the defendant). — There is one rule to be drawn from all the cases, that wherever land is charged with a payment, whoever takes the land takes it cum onere; but if there be a condition to be performed by the person taking, and [*] the time is annexed to the payment, if the legatee dies before the time of payment the legacy sinks. Hodgson v. Rawson before Lord Hardwicke, Smell v. Dee, before Lord Cowper, Salk. 415. — Bacon v. Clerk, — Wellock v. Hammond, Cro. Eliz. 204. (1). — In † Thompson v. Dow, before Lord Northington, a right of entry was given, which was held to vest it.

Mr. Ambler (in reply) cited ‡ Morgan v. Gardiner, in the Exchequer, as in point.

This cause stood now for judgment.

Lord Chancellor. — In the case of portions sinking because the party never attained such an age as to want them, Lord Talbot said, it was causa data & non secuta, King v. Withers (2), Forrester, 117. Even if the reasoning in that case should be thought too nice, it is now too late to overturn the rule. — In that case the charge was not intended to operate upon the estate tail of the son, but upon the reversion. There is another case which is always attempted to be reasoned away, the Earl of Rivers v. the Earl of Derby, 2 Vern. 72. That case stood upon its own bottom, and it was equally a gift of the 10,000*l.* to the daughter as of the fund of the estate to the remainder-man. The case of Buckley v. Stanlake, (mentioned in King v. Withers, Forrester, 119.) is also to the same point: there the legatees died before the daughter, and in the life-time of the wife, yet their representatives took the legacies. That case, exclusive of the circumstance of the wife's devise to perform the husband's will, is exactly in [*] point. Jackson v. Farrand, 2 Vern. 424. applies to this point. — It was a case where, if ever, the rule with respect to portions ought to have taken place. — There is one rule which will apply to and reconcile all the cases, but there the heir was so little favoured, that the estate was exhausted. The case of Butler v. Duncomb (3), 2 Vern. 760. also applies very particularly, the Court in that case raising the money by consent, shews they thought it would be raisable at the death of the mother. The next case I cite is Brown v. Berkley, 1 Eq. Abr. 340. I mention it only for the sake of its being there said, that [ *194 ]

† Thompson v. Dow, 1765. — The testator, seised of a reversion in an estate, expectant upon the decease of his aunt, by his will devised this estate to his wife for life, remainder to John Dow in fee; subject to the payment of 200*l.* to his daughter Elizabeth, six months after his wife's decease, with power for the daughter in default of payment to seize the rents. — Elizabeth died in 1750. — The mother in 1754. — The aunt in 1760. Lord Northington held this a vested interest in the daughter, and decreed the 200*l.* to be paid with interest from the decease of the aunt, it appearing, from the words of the will, that the son was to pay this 200*l.* out of the rents of the estate.

‡ Morgan v. Gardiner. Exch. Mich. 1777, or Hil. 1778. — Hugh Price devised his estate to his wife for life, remainder to his daughter Mary and her heirs for ever, chargeable with 400*l.* to his four younger daughters, within one year after the death of his wife, with interest from the death of the wife. Two of the younger sisters died in the life of the mother unmarried, the eldest daughter also died in the life of the mother, so that she was never possessed of the remainder in fee of the estate, but it descended to her only son, and it was held in the Exchequer, that the legacies to the younger daughters were vested interests, transmissible to the representatives of the deceased daughters.

(1) Vide Co. 3. 20. 2 Leon. 114.

(2) King v. Withers, 3 P. W. 414. Forr. 117. Prec. Ch. 348. 3 Bro. P. C. 136, 8vo. edit. Quod vide. And see Fearne. Cont. Rem. 445.

(3) S. C. 1 P. W. 448.

the portion was certainly raisable, though not at that time. Hodgson v. Rawson, 1 Vesey, 44. was after Hutchins v. Foy, Comyns, 716. and determined with reference to it. The postponement of the payment for a year was only to give time to raise the money. The time of marriage or death of the wife, in this case does not make it a portion. It is equally a gift of this part of the reversion to the daughter, as of the other part to the devisee. I am aware that there are many cases, such as Paulet v. Paulet, 1 Vern. 204. 321.— 2 Vern. 366.— Smith v. Smith, 2 Vern. 92.— Bruen v. Bruen, 2 Vern. 439.— Carter v. Bletsoe, 2 Vern. 617.— Tourney v. Tourney, Pr. Ch. 290.— Hall v. Terry (4), 1 Atkins, 502. that cannot be reconciled with the other cases I have now cited, or with Lowther v. Condon, 2 Atk. 127. (5)

Decree for Plaintiff.

(4) Hall v. Terry is mis-stated in Atk. and is better reported 8 Vin. Ab. 383.

(5) See Mr. Cox's note to D. of Chandos v. Tulbot, 2 P. W. 612.

LEE against ALSTON.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 583. b.)

In Court,
Easter, 1779.
Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 18th
March.

SIR Thomas Alston, devised the premises upon which the timber in question was cut down, to Sir Rowland Alston, for life, impeachable for waste, with a contingent remainder to his issue, with remainder to Mrs. Margaret Lee the plaintiff, in fee, Sir Rowland Alston being in possession, an act passed for an inclosure, which empowered the commissioners to make allotments, and gave persons, having lands within the limits of the inclosure, permission to make exchanges, and provided that, where by the means of exchanges, the allotments should pass into other hands than those of the old proprietors, these should have power to go upon the land, and cut down the timber, and that tenants for life might charge the allotments to the amount of 40s. per acre, [*] to be paid to the commissioners for the expences of enclosing. — An award was made, in which were some irregularities, but not such as were material to the cause. Some parts of the land in which Sir Rowland Alston was tenant for life were given, and other lands taken, in exchange in the allotment of lands, and, in order to effect the enclosure, he cut timber, instead of borrowing money on mortgage by virtue of the power; upon which the plaintiff filed this bill, for an account of the timber cut down.

In case of lands exchanged under enclosing acts, tenants for life, impeachable for waste, cannot cut timber for enclosures, but must raise the money for the enclosure by mortgage under the powers in the act. — Estovers from one estate not applicable to the exigencies of another.

[ *195 ]

Mr. Selwyn (for the defendant) contended this bill would not lie: that this Court had a jurisdiction with respect to an injunction, but that calling for an account alone, was not sufficient to transfer the jurisdiction from a court of law to this Court. The defendant having admitted the several quantities and values to be as set forth in the plaintiff's bill, trover might have been brought for the timber, as it is stated by the gentlemen on the other side, that the moment it was severed, it was the property of the remainder-man. He cited March v. Lister, in 1777.

Mr. Attorney General (in reply) cited Bewick v. Whitfield, 3 Wms. 267. where the very objection that trover would lie was over-ruled, and it was held proper in equity. The party must come here for an account which will draw to it relief. In Udall v. Udall, Aleyn, 81. and in Cotton's case, (Garth v. Sir John Hind Cotton, 3 Atk. 751. 1 Vesey, 524. 546.) it was laid down, that timber fallen by a storm would be the property of the remainder-man, but the tenant for life would have a right equivalent 1783.

Lxx
against
ALSTON.

equivalent to his estovers. The act of parliament has not varied the right of parties, Sir Rowland Alston was not empowered by it to cut down the timber, which is the property of the remainder-man, and therefore he must account for the timber he has felled.

Lord Chancellor. — Is there any case, where the Court has disposed of the timber without the consent of the parties? Undoubtedly, if the case required nothing but a discovery, it should not come here, but, on the discovery had, they should proceed at law; but where an account is necessary it carries relief with it. Where the bill relates to the cutting of timber, it has always been laid down that the plaintiff has a right to the account. Here it is stated in the bill, that trees were cut down, and the number and value are set out, and the answer admits all that as charged; the answer gives a full discovery; therefore, if the decree must obtain in this case, wherever a tree is cut down it [*] will draw an account, and the plaintiff will charge in general, that the defendant cut down trees. It is an extreme hardship that the parties should be put to such expence, where there is a clear legal remedy. There is no equity, unless it be made so by being matter of account. I am extremely reluctant to go into it, where the party, at the time the answer came in, had a clear remedy at law. Cutting timber by the tenant for life, impeachable of waste, is not justifiable to defray an expence, which might be paid in any other way. The act of parliament is short in only giving the timber to the proprietor, because it has not determined who shall have it by the name of the proprietor. The remainder-man is not so till it is felled, and the tenant for life has a right to the shade and to estovers; on the other hand it would be going a great way to say that this act had made the tenant for life proprietor, and given him an absolute property in the timber.

The cause stood over, and now Lord Chancellor pronounced judgment after first stating the case.

Lord Chancellor. — Sir Rowland Alston sets up three defences; first, that he had a right to cut the timber; 2dly, that he could charge to the amount of 40s. an acre; that instead of so doing he has applied the timber, as far as it would go, and only charged for the remainder; 3dly, that the former tenant for life left the estate in a ruinous condition, and that he has applied the timber to repair, as the law allows. The first defence is not at all made out; as to the second, the tenant for life has not a right to charge the estate with 40s. an acre, but the money is to be paid to third persons, to be applied to the extent of 40s. an acre; 3dly, the tenant for life has not a right to apply the timber, but to charge by way of mortgage. It makes a great difference to the reversioner, whether the tenant for life charges by way of mortgage, where he is obliged to keep down the interest, or cuts down the timber, which would be of value to him when he comes to the estate, and so it does to the tenant for life, who if he can cut down the timber pays nothing. It is a clear proposition that, where there is a tenant for life and a reversioner, timber fallen by storm or accident is the property of the reversioner. The consequence of this opinion is, that the plaintiff is entitled to an account, and the Master must be directed to apply the account to the timber felled on the respective estates. It is not yet ripe to enter upon the point, whether A. tenant for life, with remainder to B. in four or five distinct estates, unconnected [*] with each other, can take botes from one estate to apply to the exigencies of the other. — There are old cases, upon customary estates, that he cannot; though I do not know whether there are any cases upon the common law. It is the nature of estovers that they are to be taken without assignment, — that they take their description as good or otherwise, from their application, — that they are of utility to the estate itself. — In all these views views the estovers of one estate, cannot be applied to the others. If one is possessed of black-acre and green-acre, and black-acre produces no estovers; if those of green-acre are to be applied to black-acre, the estate must be exhausted. Therefore, the account must be of the timber felled on the estates, according to their respective descriptions with original parcels, or given or taken in exchange; and as to the times when cut, for there was no right to cut after the exchange; also what parts of the timber have been applied, and to what estates, which will raise the point. Further directions to be reserved till after the account. (1) 1783.

[ *196 ]

[ *197 ]

LEE
against
ALSTON.

(1) An account was directed of all timber or other trees felled and cut down by the defendant on any of the lands in the pleadings mentioned, and whereof the defendant was tenant for life, liable to impeachment for waste, or which were felled or cut on any lands duly allotted to the defendant in lieu of such first-mentioned lands, by or in pursuance of the act of parliament in the pleadings mentioned, (intituled, &c.) or which were felled and cut on any lands which, by exchange made according to the provisions and powers in the said act, were duly acquired by and to the said defendant, in lieu and exchange for any of the said first-mentioned lands, whereof the defendant was tenant for life as aforesaid; or which were felled and cut on any lands whereof the said defendant was, by virtue of the deed, dated 23d Aug. 1750, in the pleadings mentioned, tenant for life as aforesaid, which, in pursuance of the said act, were duly allotted to any other person, and from which lands the trees which had been theretofore growing were duly felled and cut by the provision of the said act, after the said allotment made; or which were felled or cut on any of the said lands, whereof the defendant was tenant for life, in manner aforesaid, and which were, by virtue of the said act, given in exchange to any other person before the same were so given in exchange: and it was ordered that the Master should state from which of the tenements, farms, or estates in the deed mentioned, whereof the defendant was tenant for life as aforesaid, any and what number or parcel of the said trees were cut respectively, and also the value of every such parcels respectively; and also whether any and which of the said parcels had been applied and used in repairing any and which of the said houses and tenements respectively, whereof the defendant was or is tenant for life in manner aforesaid, or otherwise employed and used on any of the said estates respectively, as Housebote, Ploughbote and Haybote; and the Master was to be at liberty to state any other matters which should materially conduce to the enquiries above directed, &c. &c. &c. R. L.

PICKERING against VOWLES.

Lord Chancellor gave judgment.

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 19th
March, 1783.

(No Entry.)

THE plaintiff founds his claim upon a bond given by John, his father, previous to his marriage with Ann his mother, in the penalty of [Where a tenant for life of leaseholds under a marriage settlement suffered the lease to expire, and obtained another lease and died, it was held that the renewed lease must be held upon the trusts of the settlement, and not enure for the benefit of his representatives.] (1)

(1) See James v. Dean, determined on appeal by Lord Eldon C. and affirmed also by his Lordship on a rehearing, 11 Ves. 383. 388, &c. and 15 Ves. 236, &c. particularly 11 Ves. 391. 392. and 15 Ves. 240, &c. The sound principle thus established appears, most evidently, from this repeated and much considered decision, viz. that none of the parties interested shall derive a benefit to themselves, even after the expiration of the original term, from the facilities or opportunities afforded by their situation. The principle, therefore, is the same as in those cases where (the leases yet existing) a tenant for life, or any other party interested, has attempted to secure an exclusive benefit to himself, by a renewal for a reversionary term. Taster v. Marriott, Amb. 668.; Owen v. Williams, ibid. 734.; Lee v. Vernon, 5 Bro. P. C. 10. 8vo. edition, quod vide. So, where one partner obtained a further lease of premises where the trade was carried on, in his own name, it was held a fraud; and a trust for the benefit of the partnership, Featherstonhaugh v. Fenwick, 17 Ves. 298.

1783.

PICKERING
against VOWLES.

[As to the apportionment of the expences between the tenant for life, and those in remainder.] (2)

[ *198 ]

400*l.* to trustees, conditioned to be void if he should assign to them, or to other persons to be nominated by Ann, a leasehold estate for the term of 99 years, or such term as he should have therein, for three lives, of which Ann's should be one, to the use of himself for life, remainder to Ann for life, remainder to the issue of the marriage. Ann died under coverture, leaving the plaintiff and another child. The estate was conveyed for the lives of John, Ann, and another life. In 1776 John died, having made his will, and thereby given to Henry his issue by a second wife, all the rest and residue of his estate. It does not appear how many renewals of the estate had taken place, or for what lives, but that John being the last original life, they were all exhausted in 1776. For the executors of the husband and Martha the second wife, it was contended, that all the original lives falling in 1776, there was no obligation on [*] the father, or his estate, to renew, (1) and that the expence of the renewal, having been his, it should be for his benefit. On the contrary it was argued for the plaintiff, that this bond was purely a contract for a marriage settlement, and that the usual mode of executing it, would be to insert a covenant to renew to the same uses, the object of the parties being to give as large an interest to the children as to the parents. For this was cited Lawrence v. Maggs, (3) before Lord Northington, 26th Nov. 1759, that the usual form of the covenant being to keep the lease fully estated, the settlement must be so executed. In that case the party had, while solvent, frequently renewed the lease, and conveyed it to the uses of the settlement, the creditors insisted the lease was part of his assets, and that the conveyances were fraudulent. But the Court thought that having conveyed according to the settlement; it was not fraudulent, but the settlement must be carried into execution. There is no other case applicable to the present, nor do I know of any principle that applies. The next question is, whether the father, having renewed, shall be considered as having so done for the benefit of the settlement, or for his own benefit. He did not, by the marriage settlement, or by any subsequent act, express any intent to do it for the benefit of the settlement, and by his will he has given it, by sufficiently express words, to his son. If a man has estates of his own, and also has pure trusts, and gives the residue by will, only his own estates will pass by the residuary clause; but, if he has an interest as well as a trust, the clause will pass both. But this is the case of a tenant-right, as it is called, and which, though an improper, is become a technical term. In the west many estates derive their value from renewals. The crown also has many estates of the same nature.—It has long been held, that where a trustee or an executor renews such an estate, it shall be for the use of the cestui que trust. — The right of renewal has obtained the name of a tenant-right. The rule has obtained with respect to a tenant for life, who has the opportunity of renewal from being in possession, that he shall not obtain the reversion for his own use only. The Court has therefore obliged him to stand seised as a trustee to the uses of the settlement; [Holt v. Holt, 1 Ch. Ca. 190.: and] that was determined in Raw v. Chichester †, before Lord Bathurst. This

(1) See note (1) in the preceding page.

(2) See Nightingale v. Lawson, post. 440.; Stone v. Theed, 2 vol. 248. and the other references in the last note to the principal case, at the bottom of p. 199.

(3) 1 Eden's Rep. 153.

[S. C. Ambl.
715. and
2 Dick. 480.]

† Raw v. Chichester, April 30. 1773, Richard Raw seised of real estates, and possessed; among other things, of a lease of lands and houses in Suffolk, originally granted by Ch. 2. in right of the duchy of Cornwall, for 31 years, renewable from time to time, upon petition by the tenant in possession, for a further number of years to fill up the term of

This is that case, for, [*] though John was the author of the settlement, it was intended that the lease should be fully estated, and that he and she should have life estates, and that, so fully estated it should go to the children. The renewal therefore must be to that purpose. The son therefore is entitled to the estate, paying the expence of the renewal. I can only direct an account to be taken of the renewals, and at whose expence they have been, in order to regulate what part should be paid by the tenant for life, and what by the remainder-man (4), and must reserve further directions and costs.†

1783.

PICKERING
against VOWLES.

[Apportionment as to the expences of the renewal.]

[ *199 ]

of 31 years, made his will 20th December, 1761, and reciting his being possessed of leasehold estates at Lambeth, and of several estates in land in Cornwall for unexpired terms of years, gave and devised the said several leases to his wife, for as many years of the terms as she should live, and after her decease (if the terms should be then in being) he devises them to William Raw for life, and after his decease among such of the children of William Raw as should be then living, and made his wife executrix, and residuary legatee. — The testator had renewed this lease just before his decease, and the widow during her life renewed several times, stating herself as widow and executrix of Richard Raw, and continued in possession till her death, 1761, upon the 18th of August, in which year she made her will, and disposed of these leases as her own property. The question was whether these renewed leases were the property of Richard Raw, and to go according to the limitations of his will, or were the absolute property of Frances the widow. Lord Bathurst thought she renewed as executrix, subject to the trusts in the will of Richard, and that the plaintiffs had a right to the renewed leases, repaying to the widow's estate the sum she had paid for the fine, deducting the value of her chance in the renewed lease.

† The case of Owen v. Williams, 7th December, 1773, having been decided upon the same principle with the present, the Reporter has added the state of it. — William Williams devised leasehold estates to Sir W. Burnaby in trust to renew the same, then to his wife for life, remainder to his brother John Williams for life, remainder to Bennet Williams, son of John, and the heirs of his body, and made his wife executrix. Seven years of the lease being to come, Lord Grosvenor petitioned for a lease of the reversion; Mrs. Williams discovering this, presented her petition as executrix, giving notice of it to the remainder-man, and got a report from the Surveyor General, that she was in possession, and that the fine ought to be about 1200*l.* or 1400*l.* Lord Grosvenor got a warrant from the Treasury for a lease, but was to pay her a compensation for her right. John and Bennet Williams then presented petitions for renewal; Lord Grosvenor made several offers to Mrs. Williams, who communicated them to John Williams, but it appeared both Lord Grosvenor and Mrs. Williams conceived them to be for her own benefit. At length they settled the terms at 3000*l.* Mrs. Williams gave notice to John and Bennet of the probability of their agreeing, and advised them to take care of their own interests. It was contended on the part of Mrs. Williams, that this 3000*l.* was absolutely her property, and that John and Bennet had no claim upon her for any part of it. But Lord Bathurst held that, in case she had renewed, it would have been a renewal as executrix, that wherever a partial tenant renews, it is for the benefit of the whole, and therefore that the 3000*l.* given by Lord Grosvenor as a recompence for her not renewing, was subject to the trusts in the will.

[S. C. Ambl.
734.]

With respect to the terms of the renewal, and the proportion of the fine, which the tenant for life ought to pay, see the case of Nightingale v. Lawson, post. 440. (4)

[Apportionment.]

(4) When a fund is not provided for the expences of renewals by the author of the settlement, the testator, &c. and it devolves on the Court to apportion those expences between the tenant for life and those in remainder, it was once thought the tenant for life was to contribute one third, and those in remainder two thirds: but the Court has, for a length of time, laid aside that mode of contribution, if it ever prevailed as a positive rule; and has proceeded upon the principle of the portion of enjoyment actually derived by the respective parties. See Nightingale v. Lawson, post. 440. (and the Report rectified, 1 Cox, Ch. 181.); Stone v. Theed, 2 vol. 248.; White v. White, 9 Ves. 554. 556. 557.; Allan v. Backhouse, 2 Ves. & B. 65.; and Lord Montfort v. Lord Cadogan, 17 Ves. 485. The old rule, therefore, or "supposed rule," of contribution, as expressed in Verney v. Verney, 1 Ves. 428, &c. has been long superseded. Vide ubi supra passim. Though there certainly are inconveniencies, there are less than occurred under the other mode. 9 Ves. 555, 556. 559.

1783.

[*200]

In Court,
Mich. 1779.
Lincoln's-Inn-

Hall, 20th
March, 1783.

Bill does not lie against several tenants of a manor for quit-rents:

[the plaintiff's remedy being at law; and the suit also multifarious as to the different tenants.] (1)

[*] BOUVERIE against PRENTICE.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 374. b.)

A BILL to recover 1s. 6d. as a quit-rent due to the plaintiff as lady of the manor. The bill was originally filed against several tenants, all of whom, except the present defendant, had submitted.

This cause was heard Mich. 1779.—

Mr. Madocks (in support of the bill) cited Collet v. Jaques, 1 Ch. Ca. 120.—Cox v. Foley, 1 Vern. 359.—Duke of Bridgwater v. Edwards, in the House of Lords, 4 Brown's Parlt. Cases, 139. (2)

Mr. Robinson (on the same side) said, the bill was filed against many, to prevent multiplicity of suits, that therefore it originally being proper in this Court, the Court would send it to an issue. The Duke of Bridgwater v. Edwards, was dismissed by the Court of Exchequer, as not having jurisdiction: and the order of dismissal reversed by the House of Lords, and the cause sent down again to be determined: that cause was for quit-rents.

Mr. Attorney General (for defendant).—This would be a jurisdiction apparently oppressive, as being always inadequate to the object. All the cases antecedent to the statute of Queen Anne are now to be laid aside, as, whether it is rent-seck, or rent-service, they may now distrain, or they may bring debt. (3) Nothing can embarrass the remedy but the premises being uncertain: there the remedy in Chancery must be admitted (4); that was the case in the † Duke of Bridgwater v. Edwards. The remedy in replevin is much more easy and expeditious.

Lord Chancellor.—Where a number of persons claim one right in one subject, such a bill may be entertained to put an end to suits and litigation. Here no one issue could have tried the cause between any two of the parties.

Mr. Madocks.—There was a cause in the Exchequer, the Duke of Newcastle v. Gordon, about six years ago.

[*201]

[*] Mr. Attorney General.—I was in that; it was for various rents from premises in Newark, which had been totally confounded by building.

Lord Chancellor.—Upon what principle two different tenants, of distinct estates, should be brought hither to hear each other's rights discussed, I cannot conceive. (5) The Court has gone great lengths

† It appears from the report of the case in Mr. Brown's Parlt. Cases, that this was so.

(1) The case of the D. Leeds v. Powel, 1 Ves. 171. and Supplement, 98. was a proper case for relief, because the rent there was an entire one; and there were no demesne lands upon which the plaintiff could distrain. The case of the D. Leeds v. Corporation of New Radnor, post. 2 vol. 338. and 518. was of a contrary description; and upon the ground taken by the M. R. p. 340. the bill should have been dismissed. The admissions, however, in the answer, were ultimately held to give the Court full jurisdiction. See p. 518, 519. Vide the cases cited there. In the case of charities, however, relief is given where it would be refused to individuals. See in Attorney General v. Jackson, 11 Vet. 365. 367, &c.

(2) 6 Bro. P. C. 368. octavo ed.

(3) No distress could be made in the case of the D. Leeds v. Powel, 1 Ves. 171. Supplement, 98.

(4) Vide per Lord Hardwicke C. 1 Ves. 172.; D. Leeds v. E. Strafford, 4 Ves. 180, &c. So if the uncertainty arises from ignorance of the days on which the rent is payable, &c. Holder v. Chambury, 3 P. W. 256. See also Mr. Cox's note, ibid. Those cases are, of course, free from the objection as to multifariousness.

(5) See Mitford, 146.

in bills of this sort; and, taking the authority for granted, I cannot conceive on what ground such a suit can stand. A rent reserved in respect of certain lands in the manor, must be rent-service.

This cause stood now for judgment. The reporter was absent, but understands that Lord Chancellor said: This Court will not relieve in the case of quit-rents, where the party has a remedy at law. He cited the cases of Collet v. Jaques, 1 Ch. Ca. 79.; Davy v. Davy, 1 Ch. Ca. 144.; 1 Rolle's Abr. 375. 378.; Finch, 241. 256.; Holder v. Chambury, 3 Wms. 256.; Benson v. Baldwin, 1 Atk. 598. If the terre-tenant will confound the boundaries, in order to prevent a distress (6), the lord will be entitled to a commission; but that not being the case here, the bill must be Dismissed with costs. (7)

(6) See the cases in the preceding notes.

(7) The principal case seems to have undergone much consideration. It appears to have been argued on two days, with a considerable interval between them, viz. the 27th Nov. and 13th Dec. so far back as 1779. It stood over from the last-mentioned day for His Lordship to consider of his judgment. R. L.

MIDDLETON against SPICER.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 568. b.)

In Court,
Easter Term,
1780.
Lincoln's-Inn-
Hall, 20th
March, 1783.

THIS case stood in the paper for further directions in Easter Term, 1780. Daniel Goodwin seised in fee of copyhold lands, which he had contracted to sell, and also possessed of leasehold and other personal property, made his will, and thereby devised his copyholds and leaseholds to be sold, and the money arising from the sale, he bequeathed to his executors in trust, after payment of debts and legacies, to pay the residue to the society for the propagation of the gospel, and gave legacies to the executors. In 1767, the testator died without issue. In 1773, three of the executors of the testator filed a bill, insisting that the devise in favour of the Gospel Society was void, and claiming the residue as undisposed of. On the 11th Nov. 1774, there was a decree, that the contract for the sale of the copyholds [*] should be carried into execution, and the money to arise therefrom be considered as part of the personal estate, and that the devise of the leasehold estate to the charity was void; it was therefore decreed to be sold, and the next of kin (none of whom were before the Court) were to go before the Master and prove their kindred. The leasehold was sold for 1560*l*. Upon an enquiry after next of kin, nobody claimed as such. And the question now was, whether upon this void devise the executors were beneficially entitled, or the crown, the Attorney General being made a party to the bill, and claiming in that behalf.

Mr. Kenyon (for the executors.)—The question is, how this money is to go. The surviving executors claim, and unless Mr. Attorney can make out a better title on the part of the crown, they must prevail. It is not of course, that whatever has no owner belongs to the King. There is no decision, in any similar case to the present, in favour of the crown. Attorney General v. Sandys, 3 Ch. R. 19.; Burgess v. Wheate (1), 1 Blackst. Rep. 123. are both decided against the claim of the crown.

Mr. Attorney General, contra.—Why is the Attorney General always

A man dying possessed of leasehold property, which he orders to be sold, and the money paid to a charity, which is prevented from taking by the statute of Mortmain: the executor having a legacy, and there being no next of kin, is a trustee for the crown.

[ *202 ]

(1) The profession will find a very valuable Report of Burgess v. Wheate, from Lord Northington's own notes and other MS. sources, in 1 Eden's Ca. Ch. from p. 177 to 261.

1788

MIDDLETON
against SPICER.

[ *203 ]

made a party to bills in cases where there is no heir? On the part of the crown, I claim the undisposed part, amounting to about a thousand pounds. The executors here are entitled only as trustees; a legacy is left them for their trouble. They are not intended to take beneficially. There is not much doubt that the crown is entitled by prerogative. The king is owner of every thing which has no other owner. It is so in the case of a legal intestacy, where there is no will. The grantee of the crown is entitled to administration to a bastard. Here, there is a will and an executor, to whom the ecclesiastical court has granted probate. The executor is owner only of a special property to collect for the next of kin. The case of the Attorney General v. Sandys is very peculiar: it is of a forfeiture for felony, and one of the harshest and most odious forfeitures. In Burgess v. Wheate (2), an estate was vested in Sir Francis Page in trust for several persons, the last died without an heir; Burgess was heir ex parte maternâ, the estate coming ex parte paternâ; Lord Mansfield held, that the trust ought to follow the rules of a legal estate. The opinions of Lord Northington and Sir Thomas Clarke went upon two points: 1st. That the only case where the lord, or the king, was entitled, was the defect of a tenant: [*] where there was a feoffee there was a tenant, whether he were beneficially entitled or not; so that the principle of escheat failed. The argument was pressed by Lord Camden, then Attorney, that, if the land escheated propter defectum tenentis, it would escheat when the line of the trustee failed; for the lord cannot lose his escheat, he therefore must have it on the failure of the line of the trustee, or of the cestui que trust (3); to construe this otherwise, would be to give a trustee, created by the court of equity, one of the mischiefs of use, depriving the lord of his escheat. (3) This argument received no answer, though the Court would not admit his conclusion from it. Admitting this argument would not bear as to the present case; the second ground in that case, was a notion that the court of equity would not grant a subpœna against the feoffee, for any who was not in privity with the feoffor; and, therefore, that the crown not claiming in any privity, could not have a subpœna. That argument begs the question, that this Court will consider the trustee as having something substantial, which cannot be taken from him but by the feoffor, or somebody claiming in privity with him; whereas the Court considers the trustee only as an instrument. Against this argument, stands the course of the Court in making the Attorney General a party, wherever there is no heir or representative. The right to personal property is nominally in the executor, but it is only to collect the property, and attended with circumstances which shew that it is for special purposes only. The position in Salkeld, 37. that the ordinary is not bound to grant administration to the grantee of the crown, but that it is done through respect, and that the property was, at law, in the ordinary, and the administration taken out only in certain cases, is founded upon a loose enquiry into the common law. The ordinary never had any interest in the property. He had jurisdiction in matters testamentary, but was always bound to account with somebody, 2 Inst. 398. He had such an interest as an administrator durante minori ætate, merely an autho-

(2) See note (1) in the preceding page.

(3) It is not yet absolutely determined whether trust estates, or equities of redemption in copyholds, escheat to the lord; and it is a question, whether a trustee or his heir can claim admittance, or hold for their own benefit, where the cestui que trust has died without heirs. See Rex v. Coggan, 6 East Rep. 431.; Scriven on copyholds, 293, 294.; Supplement to Ves. senior, 348, 349. Query, therefore, how equity could interfere if the heir of the trustee had been admitted under a mandamus. It would be a very different case to Williams v. Lord Lonsdale, 3 Ves. 752.

erty, not at all resembling property. We are told the writ de rationabili parte was founded in the common law, to give the wife and children their shares, unaffected by the will. In Wilkins's Anglo-Saxon Laws, and the Laws of the Conqueror, the rights are clearly defined. — Nath. Bacon, 89.† By Glanv. L. 7. C. 6, 7, 8. only the validity of the will was contestible [*] in the Court Christian. In the latter part of H. 3. the right was perfectly fixed in the ecclesiastical court, as appears by the Magna Charta of John and Hen. 3. History tells us, that about the latter end of John's reign, the church obtained fuller authority than before, over wills. In the M. C. of John, c. 27. the administration was to be per visum ecclesie, the church were only supervisors; this was omitted in Henry's charter. The cases are so inaccurate as to take the statute of Westminster, as to payment of debts, as giving a right to the church; but the statute was only declaratory of the common law, which charged the residue with the debts, and the statute enforced the payment of them. The subsequent statutes only regulate the mode of distribution. No doubt the grantee of the crown would be entitled to a mandamus, to compel the grant of administration. In Hobson v. Wells, Aleyn, 53. it is determined the crown may grant administration.

Mr. Kenyon (in reply.) — Mr. Attorney's speech proves that the delay which has been in this case has enabled him to collect every argument the case affords. Still the reasoning does not affect the present case. This is not an intestacy: I could add a case from Peere Williams, to shew that in an intestacy, the crown has a right; but, in this case, the crown has no legal right. The argument from the statute of uses does not apply to Burgess v. Wheate. The ground I go upon is, that the party for whom I am has a legal right. I thought I had a right to call upon them to shew their equity, on the ground that potior est conditio possidentis. The executor has a right by occupancy, and the king has no stronger title. As to the Attorney General being a party to bills; there are many cases in which unnecessary parties are made. From Stamford to Comyns, there is not a saying that there is any such right as this in the crown.

Lord Chancellor. — I do not see how this case is distinguishable in principle from Burgess v. Wheate. The devise vests the legal property in the executor. If there is no executor, the crown may grant letters patent to take out administration. The question results, whether the executor, being appointed only as a trustee, can claim as highly as an occupant at common law. Where there is a trustee, the general rule of the Court is that he can have no other title. — Mr. Kenyon contends, — that the executor, being clothed with a legal title, has a right to hold the property. Burgess v. Wheate was determined upon divided [*] opinions, and opinions which continue to be divided, of very learned men. (4) The argument of the defect of a tenant seems to be a scanty one. Whether that case is such an one as binds only when it occurs speciatim, or affords a general principle, is a nice question. Thus much is decided, that in the case of a trustee who has merely an office, the Court has been of opinion that the same claim which would have been competent if it had been at common law, is not competent for such a trustee. (5) Here, the executor has a common law right. — The crown

1788.

MIDDLETON
against SPICER.

[ *204 ]

[ *205 ]

† See the 36th law of the Conqueror, in Mr. Kelham's edition at the end of his Norman Dictionary, p. 58.

(4) See the report of it in 1 Eden's Ca. Ch. 177. to 261. and the notes especially, p. 259. ibid. See also Walker v. Denne, 2 Ves. jun. 170. 277, &c.

(5) See Williams v. Lord Lonsdale, 3 Ves. 752. King v. Coggan, 6 East Rep. K. B. 481.; Scriven on Copyholds, 293, 294.; and the note on Fawcett v. Lowther, Supp. to Vesey sen. 348, 349.

1783.

MIDDLETON
against SPICER.

would have had a right had there been no executor. — This case I think is obnoxious to every principle that can be drawn from Burgess v. Wheate. The legal estate in the trustee must remain in him, unless there is a claim against him which affects his conscience. If, beyond the general title, there must be a privity with the testator; the crown has no such privity. — If the trustee ought to hold it for every person who would have been entitled if it were at law, then he should hold it for the crown, as well as any other person.

The cause stood over, and now came before the Court for judgment. The Reporter was absent, but has been favoured with the following note.

Lord Chancellor. — It would be mere pedantry to run over all the cases to be met with on this subject, which are collected, and fully stated in Burgess v. Wheate, 1 Black. 123. (6) This is not a case in which the assets can be marshalled, which is never done, unless to make a debt of an inferior nature payable. Lord Mansfield did not assent to the argument of the Master of the Rolls, in Burgess v. Wheate (7), respecting an escheat, but no such question arises in the present case. — Here the executors, having legacies bequeathed, and being clearly trustees, cannot by any possibility take any beneficial interest. In Burgess v. Wheate, and every other case that is to be met with, the Attorney General has been a party, which shews it was always the opinion that the crown had such an interest in cases of this kind, that it was necessary to make him a party. — The executors being excluded, and no relations to be found, I consider the executors as much trustees for the crown, as they would have been for any of the next of kin, if these could have been discovered.

Therefore decreed in favour of the crown, but directed all the executors' expences to be paid. (8)

(6) And 1 Eden's Ca. Ch. 177.

(7) See the note in 1 Eden's Ca. Ch. 259.

(8) The Court (inter alia) ordered, "That in taxing the costs of the defendants the executors, the Master should tax and settle the expences they had been out of pocket on account of their trust and executorship; and they were to be at liberty to claim any allowance that had not been already made to them."

As to the residue, the declaration was, that "the same was a resulting trust in the executors for the benefit of the crown." — And it was ordered to remain in the Bank in the name of the Accountant General, &c. subject to the disposition of his Majesty and the further order of the Court. R. L.

[ *206 ]

In Court,
Mich. 1778.
Lincoln's-Inn-
Hall, 24th
March, 1783.
Devise to trustees to pay

[*] JONES against MORGAN.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 549. b.)

A BILL filed by the plaintiffs William Jones and Elizabeth his wife, Elizabeth claiming as sister and administratrix of the late William debts, then to stand seised to the use of A. for life, without impeachment of waste; after his decease to the use of the heirs male of his body, severally, respectively, and in remainder, is an estate-tail in A. Where tenant for life pays off an incumbrance upon the estate, he shall be considered as a creditor for the money so paid; but where tenant in tail pays, it is in exoneration of the estate of which he may make himself absolute owner. (1)

(1) This is merely a general rule of presumption or primary inference; and therefore liable to be rebutted by circumstantial evidence to the contrary. See the judgment post. 218. Arkham v. Smith, 1 Ves. 258. and Amesbury v. Brown, ibid. 477. (relied on postea in the principal case.) Sarjeson v. Sealey, 2 Atk. 416. and Mr. Sander's note. Et vide Countess of Shrewsbury v. E. of S. 1 Ves. jun. 227. 231. 233, 234. Ware v. Pollard, 11 Ves. 257. 267. 275, 276, 277, &c. St. Paul v. Lord Dudley & Ward, 15 Ves. 167. 173.

Morgan,

1783.

JONES
against
MORGAN.

Morgan, one of the sons of the late Sir William Morgan, to recover against the estate of the late Sir William Morgan, the sum of 1896*l.* paid by the said William Morgan, in discharge of a debt due by bond from the said Sir William Morgan, to Lock, in exoneration of the estate of Sir William Morgan, and for other purposes, under the will, and circumstances following. Sir William Morgan, by his will †, bearing date April the 3d, 1731, devised his estate to trustees, to raise money (in aid of his personal estate) to pay his debts, and, after payment of the same, then to stand seised to the use of his younger son Edward for life, (with the same limitations as in the subsequent devise to William,) and for the default of such issue, to the use of his eldest son William, for and during his natural life, without impeachment of waste, and from and after his decease, to the use and behoof of the heirs male of the body of his son lawfully begotten, severally, respectively and in remainder, the one after the other, as they, and every of them shall be in seniority of age, and priority of birth, with remainder over to Thomas Morgan, in the manner after stated, &c. To Edward and William, powers were given, whilst in possession, of leasing, making jointures for wives, and raising portions for younger children. In the devise over to his brother, the limitations were thus expressed: To Thomas the brother for life, without impeachment of waste, remainder to Thomas the younger, his son, remainder to the first son of Thomas the younger, and the heirs male of such first son, remainder to the second son, and so on to the tenth son, and all and every other son and sons, severally, successively, and in remainder, the one after the other according to their seniority of age, and priority of birth. The testator died the 24th of the same month of April, 1731; Edward died in 1743, unmarried. In 1746, William not being then of age, a mortgage was made by the trustees of the estate, to Savage, to raise 20,000*l.* for the payment of the debts, but the bond-debt to Lock was not among the debts discharged. The 28th [*] of March, in that year, William came of age, and, upon the 29th of April, he took up the bond to Lock, which with the interest due upon it amounted to 1896*l.* and gave his own bond for that sum; from that time to 1761, he paid the interest to Lock, and also the interest of the mortgage for 20,000*l.* and this latter he continued to pay till his death. In 1761, he paid off his own bond to Lock, but preserved both the bonds uncanceled till his death in 1763, when, he dying intestate, Mrs. Jones, his sister, administered to him. Upon the death of William Morgan, Thomas Morgan the elder (remainder-man in the will of Sir William) entered into possession. He died in 1769, and was succeeded by his son Thomas the younger, who dying in 1771, Charles Morgan his brother, the present defendant, came into possession. In 1776, Mrs. Jones filed this bill against Charles Morgan, insisting that her brother William was only tenant for life of the estate, and consequently, that she, as his representative, was entitled to the money which he had paid in discharge of the bond, and exoneration of the estate; or that, even taking him to be tenant in tail, he had shewn that he meant to keep the bond as a subsisting charge upon the estate, and not to discharge the same for the benefit thereof.

[ *207 ]

This case was argued in Michaelmas term, 1778.

Mr. Mansfield (for the plaintiffs.) — The bond being paid off by William Morgan was an exoneration of the estate. The claim made by Mrs. Jones is, as administratrix of her brother William, to be paid the principal and interest of the bond, the whole profits of the real estate being exhausted by the interest of the 20,000*l.* and a further claim for costs of suit, and for so much as William paid for interest of the 20,000*l.*

† This will is printed at length in 7 Brown's Parl. Cases, 136. [and 3 vol. 328, 2d. 8vo. edit.] the material parts only, are, therefore, cited here.

1783.

JONES
against
MORGAN.

[ *208 ]

as was above the rents and profits of the estate. In the answer, it is insisted that William was tenant in tail, and therefore, he having paid off the bond, it is no charge upon the estate. But there is no ground to say he took more than an estate for life. The words are expressly for life, without impeachment of waste, and then, after his decease, to the heirs male, severally, respectively, and in remainder. The testator meant to exclude words of limitation. In the other part of the will the words, "severally, successively, and in remainder," are words of precisely the same import. The testator gives him powers proper to accompany an estate for [*] life. To be sure heirs male are words of limitation, unless there is an intent to make them words of purchase, but where there is such intent they must be so construed. — Lisle v. Gray, 2 Lev. 223. and Lowe v. Davies, 2 Ld. Raym. 1561. are cases at law, where they have been construed words of purchase.

Lord Chancellor. — I did not hear you state any words of limitation afterwards.

Mr. Mansfield. — No. — There are other cases where, upon the ground of intention, they have been held words of purchase. (2) As Bagshaw v. Spencer, 1 Ves. 142. — 2 Atk. 246. 570. 577. This case, as well as that, is upon a trust estate, the legal estate is in the trustees; that case turned upon this distinction.

Lord Chancellor. — It turned, did it not, upon the distinction between trusts executed and trusts executory?

Mr. Mansfield. — That distinction was exploded in Bagshaw v. Spencer; the present case is undistinguishable from that. Here, as in that case, is an estate in fee in the trustees, to sell for the payment of debts, therefore William Morgan took an equitable estate. Then Bagshaw v. Spencer decided, that the words heirs of the body may be words of purchase, and that if the intent be so, the construction shall also be such, although he has used words which are in general words of limitation. The words here are as satisfactory to shew the intent, as those in Bagshaw v. Spencer, and then that case is a full authority. The powers of leasing, jointuring and raising portions, strongly corroborate this construction. And if this be the construction, Mrs. Jones is entitled to a satisfaction for the money paid. When this case was before Lord Mansfield, and in the House of Lords (3), this (though not the point immediately in question) was treated as an estate for life, and that he had given estates for life, wherever he could.

Lord Chancellor. — The consequence would be, that there never would be an estate-tail in a will.

[ *209 ]

Mr. Madocks (on the same side.) — When a tenant for life pays off an incumbrance, he shall stand in the place of the creditor, whether he does or does not take an assignment of the security. — In a case at the Rolls about ten years ago, where the [*] tenant for life paid marriage portions, and only took a receipt for them, without any assignment, upon a bill filed by his personal representative, it was held he should stand as a creditor for the sums paid. Secondly, William Morgan was only a tenant for life, in this Court. This is decided by Bagshaw and Spencer to be a trust estate. The distinction between a trust executed and a trust executory is only in the form. In trust, to convey to A. is executory, in trust for A. is executed; but wherever the cestui que trust is so situated that he can call for the execution of the trust, he is held in this Court to be in possession.

Lord Chancellor. — There never was any doubt but that a trust executed was, in this Court, equivalent to an use at law.

(2) See the judgment postea, and Cruik Dig. 6 vol. 412—414, &c.

(3) 3 Bro. P. C. 323, &c. 8vo. edit.

1783.

JONES
against
MORGAN.

Mr. Madocks. — The whole legal estate is in the trustees, in order that they may sell, which they cannot do unless they have the fee. The consequence of this is, that Morgan's is a trust-estate. Then we contend that Morgan was tenant for life. The construction of trust estates depends upon the intent of the testator, regulated by certain rules. The rule in Shelley's case is a rule of a court of law, — not to be laid aside on the other side of the Hall; but this Court will lay aside the rule when it is against equity and good conscience. — Evidence of the testator's intent will prevail against the rule. — Infallible evidence that the testator intended the first taker should take for life only, will prevail against the rule. Then the question is, whether here are such circumstances as to shew the testator's intention. The evidence here is infallible, independent of the devise being expressly for life, which is clear to shew the intent; the next circumstance is, that it is without impeachment of waste, which was relied upon in Bagshaw v. Spencer. The words shew the heirs were to take by purchase, in remainder; the expression is as strong as if he had said by purchase. We must understand the terms in their legal meaning: — then what is the sense? that the heir takes not by descent, but by purchase, and then the father cannot take an estate-tail. The powers granted are always held concurrent evidence of the testator's intention.

Mr. Attorney General (for the defendants.) — If William Morgan took an estate-tail, the plaintiff does not insist upon any claim to the money paid by him to clear his own estate. The question upon the nature of the estate puts an end [*] to every other kind of question. And this is not very difficult, after the number of cases determined upon it. The words are, "for life without impeachment of waste," but these are followed by other words. The powers are applied to all the takers. Certainly the testator, when giving an estate for life, with limitations over, did not mean them to be defeated immediately; that therefore has weighed very much: but the question has been whether the rule of law could be overturned, and these words construed to be words of purchase. In Lisle v. Gray, the estates were limited to four sons, and then came the general words, "and to all and every, &c." the question was whether the words should be taken as words of reference to the former words, or as independent of them, the Court said they were words of relation, and were to be construed eodem modo. Lowe v. Davies, was a case of the same kind, but the words there were express, (that is to say) the first and other sons, &c. In this case there is no such limitation to the first, &c. sons, to which the words severally, successively and in remainder, can refer. The words mean no more than in a course of descent, and have no other meaning than is imported by the estate-tail, by operation of law. This is so perfectly settled, that it is unnecessary to cite the cases of Colson v. Colson (4), 2 Strange, 1125. and 2 Atk. 246. and Langley v. Baldwin, 1 Eq. Abr. 185. which book is erroneous in stating it to be for life, as the opinion was that it was an estate-tail (see the case as cited by Wms. 59. and also p. 759. in the case of Attorney General v. Sutton and Payman, and 8 Vi. 253. Pl. 16.), and Shaw v. Weigh (1 Eq. Abr. 185. 8 Vi. 257. Pl. 25, 26.) with respect to the powers. — In that case, the intent was clear as far as the sixth son, that they should take as purchasers. In Roe on the demise of Dodson against Grew, 2 Wilson, 322. there was a very satisfactory opinion that the devisee took an estate-tail. The authorities in this Court are equally strong. The rule with respect to what estate is given, is the same here as at law. In Garth v. Baldwin, 2 Vesey, 646, it was determined that the construction is to be the

[*210]

(4) Vide Dougl. 326.

1783.

*Jones
against Morgan.*
[ *211 ]

same here as at law: and the case of † Sayer v. Masterman, before the commissioners [*] in 1757, was equally strong: there, notwithstanding all the circumstances, the commissioners thought it an estate-tail. In † King against Burchell, the devise was to J. H. for life, then to his heir male, (in the singular number,) Lord Henley thought he took an estate-tail. In § Wright v. Pearson, the decision was the same. It is best to go by the same rule in both courts, and that this Court should hold all trust-estates to be under the same rules as legal estates. In executory trusts, in certain cases, the Court may take a greater latitude, but not in construing trust-estates. If this point be with us, the whole question is at an end.

Lord Chancellor. — Either point goes to the dismissal of the bill. 1st. That he was tenant in tail, and obliged to pay the charge. 2d. That if he was tenant for life, in these circumstances, the money ought not to be repaid.

Mr. Ambler (on the same side.) — A tenant for life may pay off a charge, without his representative being entitled to be repaid. Lord Hardwicke's rule was to give an estate-tail wherever the words would admit of it, unless there were words to shew a plain intent to the contrary, as in Bagshaw v. Spencer. This appears by Garth v. Baldwin; and Wright v. Pearson is very strong, as being a case where there were trustees to preserve contingent remainders. — It was to the heirs of the body, and their heirs, Lord Hardwicke, in Garth v. Baldwin, held that the first taker took an estate-tail. Suppose William Morgan to have been only tenant for life, it would be [*] very extraordinary after such a length of time, to let in the representative. — The estate must now be considered as having discharged the burthen.

Lord Chancellor. — It is very possible that, if he was tenant for life, the charge may have been paid off. The first point is, whether the interest was kept down by the rents and profits, or the rents applied to other purposes. — If you insist upon this point, it must go to the Master. I am ready, if you give up that point, to decide upon the other. Then how do you argue, that if William Morgan was tenant for life, he intended to pay off the debt?

† [S. C. Ambl. 344.] That was, — Sayer seized in fee of lands in the counties of York and Durham, by will duly executed, devised the lands in the county of York (after the death of his wife) to his brother E. S. for life, with power of jointuring; and after his decease to such child or children as should be lawfully begotten by him, the males to be preferred before the females, and to succeed according to their births, and in trust to preserve contingent remainders during the life of E. S. to D. R. and, after the decease of his said brother, or failure of issue as aforesaid, to his brother G. S. and the heirs of his body, the males having the preference as aforesaid, and succeeding according to their births; and, to preserve contingent remainders, he gave the same to the said D. R. and on failure of issue of G. S. to his niece M. C. and the heirs of her body, remainder to his right heirs. — And as to his estate in Durham, to his brother G. S. for life, and to the heirs of his body, (with preference to males, and according to births,) and to preserve contingent remainders to D. R. remainder to E. S. and the heirs of his body; with powers to make jointures, and leases to G. and E. respectively; remainder to preserve contingent remainders to D. R. remainder to M. C. ut supra, remainder to his right heirs. — E. S. died without issue, D. R. and M. C. being also dead without issue, G. S. attorned for the sale of the estate included in the first devise, and upon bill filed for specific performance, held that G. S. took an estate-tail. [S. C. Ambl. 344.]

‡ King v. Burchell, before Lord Henley, 1759, [Ambl. 379. and 1 Eden, Ca. Ch. 424. quod vide.] testator devised to J. H. for life, then to the heir male of J. H. and his heirs, and for want of such issue then over; J. H. took an estate-tail, (cited 2 Bur. 1105. where it is said an appeal was brought but deserted.) Fearne, on Cont. Rem. 124.

§ Wright v. Pearson, 16th June, 1758. [Ambl. 353. and 1 Eden, Ca. Ch. 119.] devise to trustees to raise 500*l.*, remainder to T. R. for life, remainder to trustees to preserve, &c. remainder to heirs male of the body of T. R. and their heirs, and for default of issue male of T. R. [living at his death] remainder over, held an estate-tail in T. R.

Mr.

Mr. Ambler. — To exonerate the estate, which would probably go to his children. He borrowed upon his own estate money to pay off the bond, and never made any application for the money, or declaration that he did not mean to pay it out of his own pocket.

Lord Chancellor. — Is not the rule, that if tenant for life pays the debt, he becomes prima facie entitled to be repaid unless you shew he meant otherwise?

Mr Selwyn (on the same side.) — If he was tenant for life only, the case calls for circumstances to shew that he did not mean to charge the estate. The first question is upon the limitation. — It arises upon a will under which all the parties are volunteers. If the question were upon marriage articles, I admit the words would give an estate for life only; but here they are volunteers, which is a different consideration. I admit two different rules; 1st. that trusts are to be construed here by the same rules that legal estates are at law; 2dly. that the intent of the testator, in order to prevail, must be agreeable to the rules of law.

Lord Chancellor. — Is the first rule so? I think your difficulty is to get rid of Bagshaw v. Spencer, where it was held that trusts were not like legal estates.

Mr. Selwyn. — In Watts v. Ball, 1 Wms. 108. and Bale v. Colman, 1 Wms. 142. it is laid down that trusts are to be construed by the same rules as legal estates. 2dly. The intent of the testator, in order to prevail, must be consistent with the rules of law. The rule of law, which applies to this case, is the rule [*] laid down in Shelley's case, and in Coke Littleton, that where the estate is given to the ancestor, and is also given in any part of the same instrument to the heir, or heirs of the body, the estates unite. The cases of Lowe v. Davies, and of Lisle v. Gray, are the only ones that have been cited on the other side, but they are very distinguishable from this: in both those cases the devises were to the 1st. 2d. 3d. and 4th. sons nominatim and distinctly. In Bagshaw v. Spencer, there was a limitation to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, which makes an essential distinction from this case. There are many cases where it has been determined an estate-tail passed, notwithstanding the words without impeachment of waste, Langley v. Baldwin, (cited) 1 Wms. 759. So too, where the words are, severally and successively, Legatt v. Sewell, 1 Wms. 87. where it was determined to be an estate-tail, notwithstanding those words and words of limitation. So notwithstanding a power of jointuring, Broughton v. Langley, 2 Salk. 679. and also of leasing, for tenant in tail cannot, by the statute, make a lease that will bind the remainder-man, which he may under the power. Bale v. Coleman shews this. — Heirs of the body, in their legal sense, are words of limitation, not words of purchase. Their fixed known construction being so, the Court will not, from guesses at the intention of the testator, change them to words of purchase, Goodright v. Pullyn, 2 Lord Raym. 1437. — Garth v. Baldwin, 2 Vesey, Sayer v. Masterman. — The long acquiescence before the filing of the bill, may have prevented evidence appearing of the intention of William Morgan, even if he was only tenant for life.

Mr. Kenyon (on the same side.) — Admitting the rule that where tenant for life pays off a charge, he continues the creditor, unless he intend to discharge the debt: William Morgan paid off all the other debts of his father, and pledged estates for them, of which he was seised in fee. — The other question is attended with more cases than almost any case in the law. It is deduced from Shelley's case, and the judge who reported Shelley's case, inserted it, as his opinion, in his commentary on Littleton, and makes a distinction between a freehold, and terms for years. The rule is maintained in Duncomb v. Duncomb, 3 Lev. 437. Colson v. Colson, and Sayer v. Masterman, and other cases collected

1788.

Jones
against Morgan.

[ *213 ]

1783.

JONES
against MORRIS.

[ *214 ]

collected by Mr. Fearne (in his Essay on Contingent Remainders,) with great [*] accuracy and ability. Perrin v. Blake, in the Exchequer Chamber, established the rule. So in the case from Robinson's Gavel-kind, and in Trollop v. Trollop (both cited Fearne, 140.) the Common Pleas held the words heir male, to give an estate-tail. Wright v. Pearson, and King v. Burchell (5), come up to this. Wright v. Pearson was this: Henry Ramey devised the estate, subject to a charge, to T. Ramey for life, remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to the heirs male of the body of T. Ramey and their heirs. The cases cited on the other side do not break in upon this rule. In Robinson v. Robinson, (2 Vesey, 225.) the words were "for life, and no longer," the House of Lords rejected the words, and no longer, and gave a greater estate. 5 Brown's Parlt. Cases, 278, [folio edit. and 3 vol. 180. octavo,] S. C. So also in Roe, on demise of Dodson v. Grew. In other parts of the will, he has interposed trustees to preserve contingent remainders. Then Bagshaw v. Spencer is said to be decisive upon the subject. The case of Garth v. Baldwin, in 2 Ves. came afterwards before Lord Hardwicke; what he set out with there made him hesitate whether all he had laid down was consistent with Bagshaw v. Spencer. The party there as clearly meant to give an estate for life as in Bagshaw v. Spencer. Lord Hardwicke laid it down that the construction in trusts should be the same as in limitations of legal estates, unless where there was a clear intent to the contrary. — Lord Hardwicke determined Bagshaw v. Spencer, on the ground of there being trustees to preserve contingent remainders. In several other cases it has been held that trusts are now what uses were before the statute. In Lord Glenorchy v. Bosville, Forrester, 3. Lord Talbot took the distinction between the rules of construction of courts of law and equity. — That rule was followed by Lord Hardwicke in Garth v. Baldwin. The case of the Attorney General against Sutton, 1 Wms. and now more fully, 2 Brown's Parlt. Cases, 382. proceeded upon a difference between uses executed and executory, and it was there said that if the uses were executed, there would be no handle for the courts of equity to interfere. Bale v. Coleman was a serious opinion of Lord Harcourt, when considering a former opinion of Lord Cowper's. Garth v. Baldwin, at the time it was decided, was considered as overturning Bagshaw v. Spencer.

[ *215 ]

Mr. Mansfield (in reply.) — Bagshaw v. Spencer, appearing never to have been over-ruled, seemed to me to be decisive. The general position, as laid down by Mr. Attorney General, and some [*] of the other gentlemen is, that where in the same instrument there is an estate given to the ancestor, and to the heirs male, it shall be an estate-tail in the ancestor. — Mr. Selwyn moderates the rule to this, that the words shall not be defeated by uncertain words, to shew an intent. I contend that, of course, the legal import may be defeated by certain words. The rule is laid down upon the construction of a deed; and that at a time when it was material to third persons, whether the person should take as a purchaser, or as heir. It is extraordinary that this rule of law should operate against the intent of the testator, when no other rule of law does; as, for instance, the rule that where an estate is given without words of limitation, the devisee shall take for life only; yet if any thing can be gathered to shew the intent, it shall convey an estate in tail, or in fee. It is true, that in Lisle v. Gray, there are other words; but it is strange to say, that where the intent appears from other parts of the will, it shall not be the same as if the testator had used technical words. The question is said to be, whether he has shewn that he meant that the any persons to take the inheritance should take as purchasers, and the ancestors to take for life only. Mr. Attorney General, and the other gentlemen, have said the rule ought to be the same here as at law; but they immediately contradicted this, because they draw a distinction, and say that it is so in trusts executed, but otherwise in those which are executory. If Bagshaw v. Spencer be an authority, there is an end of the question, for there it was a trust executed. But it is said, that in that case there were trustees to preserve, &c.; but what magic is there in those words? The only inference from them is, that they serve to shew the testator's intent.—If there are other words equally strong, must not the effect be the same? Then there is a stronger ground in this case, from the words severally, successively, and in remainder. What comes of the words in remainder? Could the heirs take in remainder? Those words must be rejected. Then, has Bagshaw v. Spencer ever been shaken? It is said to be so in Garth v. Baldwin. In the report of Garth v. Baldwin it is said, that at the time of the decision Lord Hardwicke had the note of Bagshaw v. Spencer in his hand, and confirmed the doctrine of it, but distinguished the cases. Garth v. Baldwin is not to be distinguished from Bale v. Coleman, which Lord Hardwicke there affirms. Then, has any other case overturned it, or is it no authority? [*] Mr. Kenyon has endeavoured to overturn it by the distinction between trusts executed and executory. The quotation in Lord Glenorchy v. Bosville is made to turn on the trust being executory. The testator directing the execution is only directing what must be done, whether he directs it or not. It is extraordinary his directing it should vary the construction. The same is the case of Attorney General v. Sutton. There may be some reason, perhaps, for this construction, in carrying marriage articles into execution; but the distinction being applied to wills, is much better exploded. This is the only distinction between trusts executed and executory. If Lord Hardwicke did more wisely in Bagshaw v. Spencer, by exploding the distinction, it remains to see whether any subsequent case has destroyed Bagshaw v. Spencer. I find none. Sayer v. Masterman was the case of a legal estate; so was King v. Burchell. Lord Henley affirmed Bagshaw v. Spencer; and in Wright v. Pearson, he treated Bagshaw v. Spencer as rightly determined; but said that in that case (Wright v. Pearson) he thought the testator's intention was to give an estate-tail; he did not mean to shake what had been decided in Bagshaw v. Spencer.

(5) See them as reported 1 Eden, Ch. Ca. 119. 424, &amp;c.

Lord Chancellor.—I do not see how the two can stand together.

Mr. Mansfield.—Bagshaw v. Spencer not only is not shaken, but has received the strongest confirmation from Perrin v. Blake. All the judges who argued there for its being an estate for life, argued upon Bagshaw v. Spencer; and the judges who argued on the other side considered it as an authority.

Lord Chancellor.—If the question was new in this cause, and I had only to give my ideas of equity, in analogy to the rule of law, I should have considered the case the same as if it had been at law. I think no great doubt could have been entertained about it. I take the rule in Shelley's case, never to have been shaken at all. (6) I take that rule to be, that where the heir takes in the character of heir, he must take in the quality of heir. I take the question always to have been, as to the import of the word heir in the proposed case. I never heard it contended, that the testator could vary the sense of the law: whether heirs general, heirs male or heirs female, are to take by those words, they must take in that quality; therefore you must prove that the [*] second taker was not intended to take in that character, but in some other. In

1788
Jury 1788

[*216]

[*217]

1783.

JONES
against
MORGAN.

Lowe v. Davies, and in Lisle v. Gray, the testator shewed his intent that the persons should not take as heirs, but explained the words differently. In Lisle v. Gray, there being specific limitations to the four first sons, the judges understood the words "and so, &c." to be the fifth, sixth, and other sons, and distinguished it from the general sense of the word heirs. But this is a trust estate, and the difficulty arises from the case of Bagshaw v. Spencer, decided by one of the first authorities; and with the greater weight still, that, from the great length of time since that decision, probably a great deal of property may depend upon the rule. I cannot say that I am satisfied with the reasons of that determination. I go upon equity being more liberal than the law, in the construction of trusts; but I cannot conceive how equity can go upon a more liberal principle in such construction than the law does. But it is there said it must be by implication plain. The rule of the courts of law goes further than the doctrine of trusts. The courts of law have always gone upon what a court of equity ought to do. It is said that there is no difference between trusts executory and executed. It is very difficult to conceive, that a slight difference in the words of a will should make a difference of determination; but, in marriage articles, there is something to proceed upon, or to amend by. I cannot distinguish the case of Wright v. Pearson (7) from the present. I know Lord Hardwicke did frequently state the circumstances of there being trustees to preserve contingent remainders, as varying Bagshaw v. Spencer from other cases before him. I wish he had stated his reasons; I cannot see how it varied the case, except by shewing the intent of the testator to give an estate for life; other words of the same import must have the same construction. At law, I should not think the words severally, successively, and in remainder, would make much difference. In construing informal words, the argument takes up the word remainder, and gives it a technical sense, which it refuses to the words heirs male. I shall look into the cases, with which I am not fully acquainted. I shall not be averse to have this cause go up to the House of Lords, if any thing material can be done; but if it is only to determine whether the insertion of trustees to preserve contingent remainders makes the difference, it will be of no use.

The cause stood over, and this day Lord Chancellor, after stating the case, gave judgment.

[ *218 ]

[*] Lord Chancellor. — The question is, whether William Morgan, the son, took an estate-tail, or for life only. If he took an estate-tail, his paying off the charge would shew he meant to pay it in exoneration of the estate. It is a general rule of inference, that where the tenant in tail pays off a charge, without taking an assignment, he does it with that intention; but this rule is capable of being encountered by any evidence to prove the contrary. I say this upon the authority of Kirkham v. Smith, 1 Vesey, 258. which I cite for the purpose of establishing the principle, that a tenant in tail so paying is inference only, not juris positivi. The case of Amesbury v. Brown, 1 Vesey, 477. is on the same ground. (8) William, by giving his bond to Lock, took upon himself the debt of the estate, and from 1746 to 1763 paid the interest to Lock, and the surplus interest of the 20,000*l.* over and above what the estate would discharge. From 1763 to 1776, Elizabeth Jones suffered the matter to sleep; in 1776 she filed her bill. Suppose this to have been an estate for life, as she now contends it to be, the first question will be, whether it is competent to her to come now for this money. For this purpose I cited the case from Vesey (Kirkham v. Smith). The question is, whether William Morgan did not do sufficient acts to shew that he meant to pay off the incumbrance. A tenant for life, in general, paying off a charge, without taking an assignment, is a creditor for the sum so paid; but the smallest demonstration that he meant to pay it off will prevent his representative from coming for the money. Here he paid interest much beyond what the profits of the estate would have discharged, which is a demonstration, prima facie, that though tenant for life, he meant to discharge the estate. Though he was only tenant for life, he knew it was settled on his family, and put himself to extraordinary inconvenience to pay off this debt; and this he did for seventeen years, (during all which time, as tenant for life, he might have called for a sale,) in order to preserve the estate. But she contends he did this on the idea that he was tenant in tail; and in order to bring the case within that of Kirkham and Smith, she says, that he was persuaded that he was so by Thomas Morgan. Where tenant in tail pays off a charge, he is not considered as a creditor, because he may make himself absolute owner of the estate. If William Morgan considered himself as such, he was content with the estate-tail: in such a case as this it would be extraordinary to allow the representative of a person [*] living in this way 17 years, to make such a claim. Thirty years passed from the time of the mortgage, to the filing of this bill; so far was it the sense of the family, that he meant to discharge the incumbrance. If these presumptions were on a mistaken notion of law, it might be set right at any distance of time, but here appears to have been no such mistake. I am not satisfied, supposing this to be only a tenancy for life, that he meant to keep a lien upon the estate; but, if it turned upon that difference, my opinion is, that this was an estate-tail. I am aware I differ from the opinions of those I most respect now living in the profession, and from that of Lord Chief Justice De Grey, thrown out as to this part of the case, in the House of Lords. I am sorry the plaintiff, who does not succeed now, did not succeed there; but the House was of a different opinion, and this limitation was referred to as being an estate for life. According to my own notion, it is impossible this should be so considered. By all the cases, where the estate is so given, that after the limitation to the first taker, it is to go to every person who can claim as heir to the first taker, the word heirs must be words of limitation. (9) All heirs taking as heirs, must take by descent. In cases where I can bring it to the point, that the testator by the word heirs, as used in the will, means first, second, third, and other sons, there I change the words of the will, but here I think the word heirs was the very thing he meant. Suppose William had had a son, which son had had a son, and died living William (10), the eldest son of the son would have been heir. If there had been a title he would have taken it; but the estate, if these had been words of purchase, must have gone to the second son: the devise to the first son, being a lapsed devise, like the case of † White v. White, lately in the House of Lords, from Ireland; [*] but Sir William Morgan

(7) Ambl. 358. and 1 Eden, Ca. Ch. 119. et seq. quod vide.

(8) See the other references in the first note to the principal case.

1788.
JONES
against
MORGAN.

[ *219 ]

[ *220 ]

† Robert Warner, on the demise of Richard White against Hamilton White, House of Lords, 6th May, 1782. [5 Bro. P. C. 435, octavo edition.]—By settlement 24th and 25th of September, 1766, on the marriage between Simon White, eldest son of Richard White, and Frances Jane Eyre, part of the lands in question were conveyed to trustees, to the use of Simon White for life, without impeachment of waste, remainder to the first and other sons of the marriage, remainder to Simon, in tail-male, remainder to Richard in fee, other part to the use of Simon, in tail-male, remainder to Richard in fee; Richard, seised of these remainders, and of other lands not comprised in the settlement, and having issue the said Simon White, his eldest son, Hamilton White, the defendant in error, and a daughter

(9) See Fearne, Cont. Rem. 194—196. (6th edit.)

(10) See Fearne, Cont. Rem. 517. note. (4th edit.)

1783.

JONES
against
MORGAN.

[ *221 ]

Morgan meant the estate to go to whoever should be heir. The cases have been laboriously argued, on points, which I (therefore) dare not call immaterial. I think the argument immaterial, that he meant the first estate to be an estate for life. I take it that, in all cases, the testator does mean so; I rest it upon what he meant afterwards. If he meant that every other person who should be heir should take, he then meant what the law would not suffer him to give, or the heir to take as a purchaser. In conversing with a great authority, whom I will not name, I asked what would become, in the case stated, of the grandson; the answer was, he should take as heir. I know he might; but then he must take by descent. All possible heirs must take as heirs, and not as purchasers. Many cases have been determined on the ground of a devise to the first taker, with remainder to the heir male, in the singular, or heirs male in the plural, as in King v. Burchell (before Lord Henley), where it was in the singular number. (11) The rule in Shelley's case was used as a demonstration that it was indifferent, whether the limitation was in the singular or plural number: it was equally an estate-tail. So where it is to the heir of the first taker, and the heirs of that heir, it has been determined to be an estate-tail. Indeed in all cases where the limitation is of an estate of freehold to a man, and afterwards to the heirs of his body (whether general or special), so as to give it to the heirs as a denomination or class, the heirs shall be in by purchase, and not by descent. And the case stated by Anderson, in Shelley's case, [*] 95 b. of a limitation to the use of A. for life, remainder to the use of his heirs, and of their heirs female, is the only one to the contrary; and, in that case, the word heirs must be a description of the persons, in order to let in the limitation to the heirs female. The cases are so well known, it would be idle to repeat them all. Those of Burchett v. Durdant, 2 Vent. 311.; Goodright v. Pullyn, 2 Lord Raymond, 1432.; and Coulson v. Coulson, 2 Stra. 1125. are that they are words of limitation. But Sayer v. Masterman (12), (17th June, 1757, before the Lords Commissioners Willes, Smythe, and Wilmot), goes the whole length of the pre-daughter named Margaret, 1st Jan. 1775, made his will, and thereby, after several devises of lands to Richard White, the lessor of the plaintiff, and Hamilton White, the defendant in error, gave the rest and residue of lands in Bantry not already settled on the marriage of Simon (except some parts which were devised to Hamilton for life), to Simon, and the heirs of his body, remainder to Hamilton, and the heirs of his body, remainder to Margaret, in tail-general, remainder to his own right heirs, and appointed Simon executor and residuary legatee. Simon died 2d September, 1776, in the lifetime of his father, leaving issue by Frances Jane Eyre, the plaintiff in error, an infant, and three other sons, and four daughters: Richard the father died 27th of the same September, without revoking the will. The defendant taking possession of the lands devised to him, and of the other lands not in settlement, an ejectment was brought in B. R. in Ireland, by the plaintiff, on the demise of his present lessor (the grandson of testator), for the recovery of the same (except some part devised to Hamilton for life), upon the trial of the ejectment, the jury found a special verdict, which being argued in B. R. in Ireland, judgment was given for the plaintiff, the defendant brought his writ of error in the King's Bench here, and in Michaelmas Term, 1781, the judgment of B. R. in Ireland was reversed. Upon this judgment of reversal, error was brought in Parliament, and upon the hearing in the House of Lords, the following question was put to the judges; whether, in the event that had happened, defendant Hamilton White took any, and what estate in the lands of Bantry, under the devise to him for default of issue of Simon White. The Lord Chief Baron delivered their unanimous opinion, that Hamilton took an estate-tail, and the judgment of the Court of King's Bench in England, reversing that of the King's Bench in Ireland, was affirmed. — The determination of this case went very much upon that of Hodges and his wife against Ambrose, B. R. Easter, 1780, (reported by Mr. Douglas, p. 323.) and affirmed in the House of Lords. [3 Bro. P. C. 435. octavo ed.]

(11) See the Report from the Lord Keeper's notes, 1 Ed. Ca. Ch. 424, &c.

(12) Ambler; 344.

1783.

JONES
against
MORGAN.

[ *222 ]

rent case. If there ever was an instance to shew, from the specialty of the limitation, that they were meant to take as purchasers, it was in that case, but the word being heirs, and chalking out the legal course of descent, it was decided otherwise. In Garth v. Baldwin, Lord Hardwicke put it that his opinion in Bagshaw v. Spencer turned upon there being trustees to preserve contingent remainders, and upon the testator having created contingent remainders, which the Court would carry into execution, though he had not correctly stated them as contingent remainders. Bating the learning of that case, one cannot but be rather astonished to hear grave and learned men reason that testators were acquainted with the rules and effects of contingent remainders, and yet did not know how to give a contingent remainder in proper form. Here the testator, in the limitation to Thomas Morgan, does interpose trustees to preserve contingent remainders, and shews his knowledge of the nature of contingent remainders by following them through a long deduction of sons. The good sense of all these cases is to believe that, where persons have expressed themselves right, they knew what they meant. As to Thomas Morgan's family, he did not think it necessary to provide for distant future events, but, in his own immediate family, he did mean to provide for future children, and that all his heirs of blood should take. But it is contended that, however this might be at law, it should be construed otherwise in equity; for that the whole fee was given to the trustees, as it might be necessary for the payment of the debts, but, after the payment of the debts, the testator did not mean to leave any thing executory: No, the trustees were to stand seised to the subsequent uses. If this is not a legal estate, it is only not so because the first use might absorb the whole estate. Then the only question is, whether, under the cases decided, I must consider this point as being different in the [*] case of legal and of equitable estates. Before Lord Glenorchy v. Bosville, Forrest. 3. there was no difference. Lord Nottingham argued it very carefully, in that respect, in the Duke of Norfolk's case, and would not hold a different rule of construction in law and equity. In Bale v. Coleman, 1 Wms. 142. — Phillips v. Phillips, 2 Vern. 430. — and Watts v. Ball, 1 Wms. 108. it was determined that a trust should undergo the same construction as a legal estate. Trevor v. Trevor, 1 Wms. 622. Lucas, 436. — Jones v. Langton, 1 Eq. Abr. 392. — West v. Errissey, 2 Wms. 349. — Warwick v. Warwick, 3 Atk. 291. were cases of marriage-articles, where, if the party took an estate-tail, the uses would be defeated. The Court anxiously distinguished them from cases upon wills, and determined them to be estates for life, on three grounds; 1st. because they are upon valuable consideration; 2d. because they are to be carried into execution against the parents; 3d. that, were they to put the children completely in the power of the parents, there would be no object of the contract at all. It is otherwise, says Lord Harcourt, (in Bale v. Coleman,) of wills, which have not been construed on the same grounds. Though Lord Glenorchy v. Bosville was founded upon Leonard v. the Earl of Sussex, 2 Vern. 526. yet it is observable that there the first gift was to a man and his heirs, so there was no doubt that it was an estate-tail, but the intention there was clear, that it should go to the children, for it was to be so settled that the sons should not have power to dock the entail; the intent was the same also in the case of Lord Glenorchy v. Bosville, which was an executory case. In Bagshaw v. Spencer, the Master of the Rolls took it clearly to be an estate-tail, (1 Vesey, 142.) but Lord Hardwicke said, that if the Court decreed a conveyance, there must be trustees to preserve the contingent remainders, therefore he must insert contingent remainders to be preserved, and Lord Hardwicke there said, he did not contradict the Duke of Norfolk's and the other cases. A few years afterwards.

1783.

JONES
against
MORGAN.

[ *223 ]

Garth v. Baldwin, (2 Vesey, 646.) was heard, and Lord Hardwicke's decree in Bagshaw v. Spencer was pressed upon him; and he attempted distinction; and said, that the construction must be according to the construction of legal estates, unless there was a plain intent to the contrary such declaration plain, as Lord Hobart expressed himself in a case of will, as would overrule the legal construction (Counden v. Clerk Hob. 29.) In Garth v. Baldwin, the exception taken was such a one as explained the rule, and the [*] construction there restored the law that trusts were to be construed in the same manner as legal estates. If that be so, there cannot be a more proper case to apply the rule than this, as there can be nothing so near to a legal estate as the present. It has occasioned much fluctuation in my mind, whether it was a legal or an equitable estate. I think, therefore, the same rule of construction must apply here as at law. Thinking, as I do, that this is an estate-tail; but, whether it be so or an estate for life only, that he meant to exonerate the estate; I am extremely clear his administratrix, claiming this as a debt, cannot prevail; but the bill must be dismissed. (13)

(13) Without costs. R. L.

In Court,
Mich. 1778.
Lincoln's-Inn
Hall, 24th
March 1783.

[S. C. affirmed on appeal,
7 Bro. P. C.
530. 8vo edit.
Quod vide.]
[Where money devised to be laid out in land actually comes into the hands of the person who would be entitled to dispose of the lands if purchased, the money is his absolute property; and will pass by a general bequest of his personal estate. (1)]
Money left by will to be laid out in land; the trustee, being entitled to the money, lays part of it out in a purchase, but afterwards discharges that estate of the trust, and making his will, gives generally (without taking notice of this money) his real and personal estate to A. who afterwards makes his will and gives his real estate to B. and his personal to C. the trust-money passes as personal estate.

WILLIAM PULTENEY, Esq. and FRANCES his Wife, Plaintiffs;
The Earl of DARLINGTON and others, Defendants.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 446. b.)

CASE, — Henry Guy, by will dated 6th July, 1709, devised to John Taylour and Arthur Lake, their executors and administrators, all his messuages, &c. in Stoke Newington, for 99 years, to commence from the 25th day of December next before the date of his will, if Harry Pulteney, Edmund Serjeant and John Mulcaster, or either of them, should so long live, upon trust, to pay them certain annuities for their lives, and the overplus of the rents and profits, if any was, to remain in the hands of Taylour and Lake, for the purposes thereafter mentioned, and as to the remainder, reversion, and inheritance of all his said messuages and hereditaments, after the said term of 99 years, he devised the same unto William, late Earl of Bath (then William Pulteney, esq.) for life, remainder to Thomas Halsey and his heirs, to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to the first and other sons of Lord Bath successively in tail male, remainder to Harry Pulteney, for life, with like remainders to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, and to his first and other sons in tail male, remainder to Daniel Pulteney (the plaintiff Frances's late father) for life, with like remainders to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, and to his first and other sons in tail male,

(1) This part of the abstract is from 7 Bro. P. C. As to the arguments, and many valuable observations on the cases cited, vide 7 Bro. P. C. from p. 548 to 566. On the principal case, &c. vide 2 Ves. jun. 175. See also 7 Bro. P. C. 560.

It is suggested in Bro. P. C. ubi supra, that this case might probably give rise to the statute 40 Geo. 3. c. 56, generally called "Lord Eldon's Act," which enables tenants in tail capable of suffering a recovery to dispense with an actual investment of money directed to be laid out in land. As to the manner of executing that act, see 5 Ves. 12. note; 6 Ves. 116. 576.; 8 Ves. 609.; 9 Ves. 462.

with remainder to William Pulteney (eldest son of Sir [*] William Pulteney and father of Lord Bath) in fee. He appointed Lord Bath, Taylor, and Lake, executors of his will, and devised to his executors, their heirs and assigns for ever, his capital messuages, &c. at Earl's Court, Middlesex, and certain freehold and copyhold estates at Muswell-hill, theretofore mortgaged to him, to the intent that they, or the survivor, his heirs, &c. should sell the same and lay out the money as thereafter directed. And he directed that, after his debts and legacies should be paid, all such monies or other personal estate as should remain in the hands of his executors, or be raised out of his personal estate, or by sale of his estate at Earl's Court, or the estate mortgaged to him, should be laid out by his executors, or the survivor of them, in the purchase of lands of inheritance, which should be settled upon the same persons, or such of them as should be then living, and for such estates for life and in tail male, and in such manner as he had therein before devised the interest in his messuage, &c. at Stoke Newington. The testator died 22 Feb. 1710. On the 2d of June, 1711, Lord Bath, who was an acting executor, and Harry and Daniel Pulteney brought their bill in Chancery, to have the will established and the trusts carried into execution; and on the 4th of August following, a decree was made for that purpose, and directing an account of the personal estate, and a sale of the real estates devised to be sold, and the investment of the money in purchases of lands to be settled, and ordering the money to be placed out, in the meantime, at interest. 26th August, 1713, the Master made his report, and reported that Lord Bath had a balance in hand of 15,327*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.* which was to be placed out. Lord Bath continued to receive and pay money as executor, and before July, 1722, he purchased with the testator's money 17,600*l.* South-sea stock, in the names of Taylor and himself, Lake being dead. 11th July, 1722, an order was made, on two petitions of Taylor and the plaintiffs in the cause, that the estate at Muswell-hill, which had not been sold, should be conveyed to the uses of the will instead of being sold, and that the South-sea stock should be transferred to the Master, who should transfer it to the three plaintiffs in the cause. The conveyance and transfers were made accordingly; the stock being increased, by an addition made by the company, to 18,700*l.* Lord Bath, having a power of attorney from Harry and Daniel, afterwards sold out the stock, and having received 19,048*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* trust-money, and having purchased the manor [*] of Bathwick, and other estates in and near Bath, and the manor of Wrington, and other estates thereabout, for 35,000*l.* he, by indenture dated 9th Feb. 1735, demised these premises to Harry Pulteney (Daniel being dead without issue male) for 1000 years, defeasible if he should, within three years, with the approbation of the Master, lay out the 19,048*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* in the purchase of lands to be settled, with the Master's approbation, to the uses of the will, or should, within three years, lay out the money on securities, and should indemnify Harry, and the executors of Daniel, in respect of the sale of the stocks. By indentures of lease and release dated 3d and 4th May, 1736, to which Harry Pulteney was a party, reciting this security and many of the transactions, and that the manor of Bathwick, and the rest of that estate, were worth 13,000*l.* he in satisfaction of so much of the 19,048*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* conveyed the premises to the subsisting uses of the testator's will. Lord Bath had then a son, William, who was afterwards Lord Viscount Pulteney, and, by will dated 19th May, 1762, reciting the conveyance in satisfaction of the 13,000*l.* and that there remained unapplied 23,488*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.* of the personal estate, which had been ever since, and then was in his hands, and that the manor of Wrington, &c. being improved, were of greater value, 1783.

PULTENEY
against DARLINGTON.

[ *224 ]

[ *225 ]

1783.

PULTENEY
against
DARLINGTON.

[ *226 ]

value, he devised those estates to his son William in tail male, remained to Harry for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, &c. subsisting uses of the will, in satisfaction of the 23,488*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.* On the 12th February, 1763, William Lord Pulteney died without issue male. On the 21st May, 1763, William Earl of Bath made another will which revoked the former, and without taking any notice of the 23,488*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.* gave all his manors, &c. which he was seised or possessed of, or to which he was in any wise entitled, in possession, reversion, or remainder, or which should thereafter be purchased with any trust-monies (except the reversions of the estates of the late Earl of Bradford, and some premises in the possession of Lord Egremont) to his brother Harry in fee, and gave him all the residue of his personal estate, and made him executor. On the 7th July, 1764, he died without issue, and Harry Pulteney proved his will, and took possession of his estates. On the 14th August, 1767, Harry Pulteney made his will and (after disposing of some particular estates in Middlesex) gave all his other estates in Middlesex, and his estates in Somerset, Montgomery, Salop, and York, (except the reversion of Lord Bradford's estates,) subject to a trust term, to his cousin the [*] plaintiff, Mrs. Pulteney, for life with remainder to her first and other sons in tail male, with remainder to her daughter, Henrietta Laura, for life; remainder to her first and other sons; remainder to the Earl of Darlington for life; remainder to his first and other sons, with remainders over; and gave all his money securities for money, goods, chattels, and personal estate not before disposed of, to his executors in trust, after payment of his debts, to lay out the residue in the purchase of lands, to be settled upon Lord Darlington, and his first and other sons, with remainders over, and appointed Lord Darlington, Lord Chetwynd, the plaintiff William Pulteney, and Sir Harry Bernard, executors of this will. On the 20th October, 1767, he died without issue, leaving the plaintiff Frances his heir, and the heir-general of the family, she being the daughter of his cousin, Daniel Pulteney. The bill was brought to have the residue of the personal estate of the testator Henry Guy, which was left in the hands of William Earl of Bath, laid out in the purchase of lands, to be conveyed to the plaintiff Frances in fee. The cause was heard before Lord Chancellor Bathurst, who dismissed the bill, and it came on upon a rehearing before Lord Chancellor Thurlow, 14th November, 1778.

Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Dunning, and Mr. Hargrave (for the plaintiffs.) (2) — The first of these gentlemen the reporter did not hear, but understood that his principal argument was, that although a person entitled to a trust fund, ordered to be laid out in land, might elect in what form he would take, or dispose of it; yet, as the form in which the Court considered it was that of land, which the testator had given it, the person so entitled must mark his election by some specific act, in order to divest it of the form of land. Mr. Dunning, the reporter heard but imperfectly. He added to Mr. Attorney's argument, and particularly insisted, that both Lord Bath and General (Harry) Pulteney, had died intestate with respect to this property; and it not having been in their contemplation, it must descend upon Mrs. Pulteney, as heir at law.

Mr. Hargrave. — The authorities to shew that money to be laid out in land is to be considered as land are numerous, I shall class them under heads. First, With respect to assets: the money so fully becomes land, as not to be assets to pay debts, Baden v. the Earl of Pembroke, 2 Vern. 52.; Lawrence v. Beverly, 2 Keble, 841. cited 2 Vern. 55. Second, As to courtesy: where the feme [*] covert is an equitable tenant in tail, the husband shall have his curtesy,

[ *227 ]

(2) See the elaborate arguments, 7 Bro. P. C. 548. et seq. (8vo. ed.)

1783.

PULTENEY
against
DARLINGTON.

Sweetapple v. Bindon, 2 Vern. 536.; Lingen v. Sowray (3), 1 Wms. 172. but the wife is not entitled to dower, because not dowable of an equitable estate. Third, Where a contract is made to purchase land, money thus circumstanced will pass as land, Milner v. Mills, Mose, 123.; Greenhill v. Greenhill, 2 Vern. 679.; Pre. Ch. 320. S. C. Acherley v. Vernon, (1 Wms. 783.); Langford v. Pitt, 2 Wms. (629.) Fourth, So if the agreement be entered into previous to making a will, the money will not pass, as such, by the will, Alleyn v. Alleyn, Mose, 262.; Langford v. Pitt; but will pass as land by the word elsewhere, Lingen v. Sowray; Guidott v. Guidott (4), 3 Atkyns, 254. And a general devise to a legatee, will not pass money so to be laid out, Cross v. Addenbroke, Fulham v. Jones (5), (both in the note upon 3 Wms. 222.); Shorer v. Shorer, 10 Mod. 39. Equity so assimilates it to land, that where a recovery is necessary, a fine will not be sufficient, Colwal v. Shadwell, cited 1 Wms. 471. 485.; Short v. Wood, 1 Wms. 470.; Cunningham v. Moody, 1 Ves. 174.; Collett v. Collett, 1 Atkyns, 11. Money to be laid out in land, is uniformly treated as land. The cases are of three sorts; 1st. Of money in the hands of trustees; 2d. Where there is only a covenant; 3d. Where it is neither in the hands of trustees, nor secured by a covenant. Of the first kind is Kettleby v. Atwood, 1 Vern. 471. Of the second, Knights v. Atkins, 2 Vern. 20.; Lancy v. Fairchild, 2 Vern. 101.; Scudamore v. Scudamore, Pre. Ch. 543.; Disher v. Disher, 1 Wms. 204.; Fulham v. Jones, Edwards v. Lady Warwick, 2 Wms. 171.; 2 Brown's Parlt. Cases, 494. (6); Lechmere v. the Earl of Carlisle, 3 Wms. 211.; Forrester, 80. S. C. Of the third sort, is Chaplin v. Horner, 1 Wms. 483. The result is, that money agreed or directed to be laid out in land, acquires the property of descending to the heir. 2dly. That it continues so till altered by the act of a party entitled to alter it, that is, by a person having the absolute property. In the present case, Lord Bath intended to preserve it as land, and appropriated a particular estate to the uses, and kept separate accounts of it. In his will, at one time, he had an intention of devising the Wrington estate as a satisfaction for it. — In his last will, he expressly treats the money to be laid out in land as land, "and all lands hereafter to be purchased with trust-money," and limits it to the heirs and assigns of General Pulteney. General Pulteney's will is general; — there is nothing to be gathered from that, or from any act in his [*] life-time, to shew any intent upon the subject. It is objected, that the words "lands, whatsoever, and wheresoever," pass actual lands only, not money to be turned into land. This is arguing against the authorities of Lingen v. Sowray, and Guidott v. Guidott. (4) Then the words "to be purchased," are tied up in argument, to be in Lord Bath's life-time. This is mere gratis dictum; — who can doubt his intent to pass Guy's trust? The gentlemen next result to the doctrine of merger, that the term in the Wrington estate merged in General Pulteney; but the trust did not depend upon the term; there was another fund, the personal estate of Lord Bath. The merger being involuntary, doth not shew the intent of the parties. Then it is objected, that this differs from all the other cases, — that there are no trustees, nor any covenant. But Lechmere v. Lechmere, shews that the Court never wants a trustee. A covenant is equally unnecessary. In Lechmere v. Lechmere (7), the heir was a volunteer, and could not enforce the covenant. In the mortgage,

[ *228 ]

(3) See it cited on the appeal in Dom. Proc. from the Reg. Book, 7 Bro. P. C. 551. 555.

(4) Vide 7 Bro. P. C. 555, 556. octavo ed.

(5) S. C. 7 Vin. Ab. 44, 45. Et vide in the Argument, 7 Bro. P. C. 550.

(6) 1 Bro. P. C. 207. octavo ed.

(7) See the argument, 7 Bro. P. C. 550.

1783.

PULTENEY
against
DARLINGTON.

Lord Bath did covenant for 19,000*l.* of the money. Receiving the money, implies a covenant. Suppose a testator to order a sum of money to be laid out to uses, would not the Court order it to be laid out, though there was no trustee, or covenant? Another objection made is, that General Pulteney was both debtor and creditor, and so the debt was extinguished; but the error here is, the comparing this to a debt. It is not claimed by Mrs. Pulteney as a creditor, but as heir of General Pulteney. It is admitted by the last answer, that Mrs. Pulteney is not a creditor, but heir. The true ground is, the intent of Guy to make it land, affirmed by Lord Bath, and not altered by General Pulteney. As to the Wrington estate being a satisfaction, that is much relied upon. The will by which that estate was to go in satisfaction, is revoked, besides, the intention, if it was as a satisfaction, is not sufficient; for under General Pulteney's will, she is only tenant for life. Then it is said to be like the case of Ferrers v. Ferrers, 1 Ch. Rep. 17.; but, in that case, there was a special declaration converting the money into its original state, and in Cross v. Addenbroke, and Fulham v. Jones, it is held, that there must be such an express declaration. The last argument the gentlemen have made use of, is, the intermixture of the trust-money, with that of Lord Bath and General Pulteney. This was originally by Lord Bath, and he shewed that he did not, by it, intend to discharge the money of its character as land. A further argument arises from his accounts of the balance due to the trust-fund. (3)

[ *229 ]

[*] Mr. Mansfield (for the defendants.) (4) — The question is, whether Mr. Pulteney can take this sum of 23,000*l.* as land, not money, under Lord Bath's will, and whether it was General Pulteney's intention that it should pass as land. There is no doubt that it was the intent of Lord Bath to give this to Lord Darlington. Guy devised the money to be laid out in land. Lord Bath, with the trust-money, purchased Bathwick, and Wrington, which last estate is now worth more than the trust-money. Lord Bath, soon after the purchase of Wrington, intended to appropriate it to the trust, and offered to sell it, but General Pulteney, having joined in acts which would bind him, Lord Bath mortgaged it to him for 19,000*l.* Lord Bath, when he made his first will, intended the Wrington estate to go in satisfaction for the trust-money. Upon the death of Lord Bath, nobody was entitled under Guy's will, but General Pulteney. Lord Bath gave all his property to General Pulteney. It is improbable that Lord Bath should mean that General Pulteney should take the Wrington estate, discharged of the trust, but that the personal property should remain liable. General Pulteney changed all the securities into his own name, and made the will upon which the question arises; he gives all the real estates he had, with descriptions of locality, to Mrs. Pulteney, for life, remainder to Mr. Pulteney for life, remainder to the issue of Mrs. Pulteney, then he gives all his books, &c. and all his securities for money, to Lord Darlington, to be laid out in land, to uses, and ultimately to Mrs. Pulteney; and upon his death-bed, he gave Mrs. Pulteney 2000*l.* in bank bills. — Mr. Attorney General did not rely much upon General Pulteney's intention, for his argument was to exclude intention; but he said, that money to be laid out in land was land to all intents and purposes. But certainly it is not so, it cannot be conveyed by common law conveyances. — It is true, it is so to certain purposes, it will admit of tenancy by courtesy, and goes to the heir, not to the executor; but, except for these purposes, it is not land at all. The counsel

(3) See in Hinchcliffe v. Hinchcliffe, 3 Ves. 521. 529, 530. and per Lord Eldon C. in Druce v. Denison, 6 Ves. 399, 400, 401.

(4) See the condensed scope of the arguments on this side, in the Appeal, 7 Bro. P. C. 564, 565.

1788.

PULTENEY
against DARLINGTON.

[ *230 ]

differ how it would pass by a will unattested; it certainly will pass by a will of personalty, as appears by Lechmere v. Lechmere, and is no otherwise land, than with respect to succession. It will pass by the most informal conveyance in the world. In Edwards v. Lady Warwick, Lord Macclesfield thought a parol matter would convey it. If in the funds, it would pass by the transfer of the person having the ultimate property. And it [*] appears, from the cases cited, that according to the intent of the ultimate possessor, it may be turned into money. The second proposition of Mr. Attorney General, that till there is a person entitled to the ultimate remainder in fee, there is no one who can change the nature of the fund, is against the authority of Lingen v. Sowray, which shews, that a person who has a right to the reversion, though he has not a right to the possession, may change the nature of the fund. When General Pulteney made his will, nobody could claim the trust-fund. Guidott and Guidott supposes the election might be by the husband, who had no right to the possession. It is to be collected from the cases, as the general opinion, that the person who has the ultimate remainder may elect, to make it either real or personal, and that the intention is to be collected from circumstances in this, as in other cases. Lord Bath, or Lord Bath's father, changing the nature of the property, would bind those who took after them. If the ultimate owner, though he has no right to the possession, can change it into money, then the question is, whether it was not treated as money by Lord Bath or General Pulteney. It is an undoubted fact, that Wrington was purchased with the trust-money, and, as long as it was of importance to distinguish the property, Lord Bath meant Wrington to go in satisfaction; after that, he could not look upon any of his money as real estate. Then, as to the words in the will relating to "lands to be purchased with trust-money," it is in proof, that there was other trust-money, under the will of Sir William Pulteney, and this is strong to shew his intent to give nothing as land which was not land. Then, there is an end of the question between us, for there was such a change that it would go to the general legatee. When General Pulteney changed the securities into his own name, could he have any idea that part of them were land, and would go to his heir at law? He then makes the will before stated, mentioning all his real estate, with the counties in which the respective parts lay, and gives the securities to be laid out for the use of Lord Darlington, &c. could he imagine that any part of that was to go to his heir, in quality of heir? It is improbable, that he meant to die intestate, as to any part of his property. This question was before this Court, on a former occasion, when the opinion of the Lord Chancellor (Bathurst), Lord Chief Justice (De Grey) of the Common Pleas, and Mr. Baron Eyre, was, that he did not mean to die intestate, as to any thing. (3) The [*] circumstance of his giving Mrs. Pulteney 2000*l.* makes it improbable that he had any idea that she would be immediately entitled to 23,000*l.*; for he could not think that, in that case, they would want an immediate supply. So long as Lord Pulteney lived, who might claim an estate-tail in the lands, Lord Bath intended Wrington as a satisfaction.—Supposing this did not appear to be the intention of the parties, it would remain a question, whether Mrs. Pulteney can claim this as land. She claims as standing in the place of General Pulteney. She has the trust-money, for she has the Wrington estate; can she claim the trust-money, when she has the estate, under the ancestor how could dispose of it? Lechmere v. Lechmere, Wilcocks v. Wilcocks, [ *231 ]

(3) See in Hinchcliffe v. Hinchcliffe, 3 Ves. 521. 529, 530. and in Druce v. Denison, 6 Ves. 399, 400, 401.

1783.

PULTENEY
against
DARLINGTON.

2 Vern. 558. As to this estate not going in satisfaction, because it is not in fee, that is a question frequently agitated, with respect to satisfaction, but is of no weight here; because General Pulteney had a right to give it her under what limitations he pleased, or might have given it away from her.

Mr. Kenyon (on the same side.)—It was never meant to be controverted on our part, that money once impressed with the character of land, must continue to be considered as land; but it became a question, who might elect to make the subject either land or money. No authority has been cited to prove that it must be the absolute owner. The cases prove otherwise, especially Lingen v. Sowray, (as reported 1 Wms. where Lord Bathurst, in the case of Errington v. Broughton, said it was more accurate than in any of the other books,) for there it was held that the husband could elect against the heir at law, although he was not absolute owner. With respect to congruity, the gentlemen have no better luck. It is said to be incongruous, that the same property should be real in some hands, and chattel in others. But nothing is more common, in marriage-settlements, than, after an estate-tail, to raise terms which may be either real or chattel property. Then, as to the other question, whether Lord Bath, or General Pulteney, have elected, to make this personal property. With respect to the will of General Pulteney, it is in evidence, by Mr. Garden, that, upon the death of Lord Bath, he drew up (for the use of the General) a state of his property, and in that account all that was personal then, and that can be claimed, as part of this was stated as personal property. (3) The General acted in making his will upon that representation of his property. This [*] affords at least a strong presumption. Mr. Attorney General said, there must be a clear act of election. I shall on another head cite a case, to shew that a presumption is sufficient to turn the scale. The question of satisfaction was not determined upon the former occasion. The property which we say should go in satisfaction, is property now in the possession of Mrs. Pulteney, and bought with the trust-money. Suppose he had left no other fund, would not the land have been liable? In Bennet v. Mayhew, where a steward had laid out monies remitted to him, in purchases of land in his own name, Lord Hardwicke thought the property so purchased liable; and that the steward should be presumed to have meant to do the just and honest thing. Whether the purchase, in this case, was made with the trust-money, will appear from Lord Bath's accounts. During the life of Lord Pulteney, he treated the Wrington estate as purchased with trust-money. (3) In the case of Deacon v. Smith, 3 Atk. 323. there was a covenant to purchase lands and settle them, the party afterwards purchased lands; Lord Hardwicke said, many cases had gone upon a strong presumption, and held the lands to be bound by the articles. A strong presumption that Lord Bath intended this estate to be a satisfaction, arises from his having set this aside as a particular fund for the purpose. He did not intend to die intestate, as to any part of his property.

Lord Chancellor.—Do you contend that Lord Bath could make this disposition? Lingen v. Sowray seems to apply to General Pulteney, not to Lord Bath.

Mr. Mansfield.—There is no possible difference, but that the wife might have a posthumous son.

Mr. Lee (on the same side.)—None of the gentlemen have cited a case to shew that a person having the ultimate remainder in fee may not elect, notwithstanding the possible intermediate limitations. Mr.

(3) Vide 3 Ves. 521, 529, 550.; 6 Ves. 399, 400, 401.

1783.

PULTENEY
against DARLINGTON.

[ *233 ]

Dunning seemed to say, it must be by some specific act. This doctrine, if not contrary to the other cases, is so to what was laid down in Lingen v. Sowray, where the single point is said to be whether the party intended to devise, and seems to prove, that wherever the judge can find that the party meant to give it as money, it must be construed so to be; and the same opinion is laid down in Edwards v. Lady Warwick. The only [*] question then is, whether General Pulteney intended to give this as money. General Pulteney's will is not such an one, of which it can be affirmed that he was careless.—Mr. Garden's evidence is very material; he included this under the denomination of personal estate. General Pulteney gives all his real estates in Middlesex, &c. (enumerating the counties) as real estate, copying from Garden's paper; then he meant to give nothing else as real estate. Then he gives his personal estate, all his money, securities of money, goods, chattels, in such a way, that if this was the subject of the devise, the decree is right, and my client must recover. If he knew this was stated as personal estate, and meant to give his personal estate, there can be no doubt. (3) If it were possible for the gentlemen to contend, that there must be some prior act to change the nature of the property, it would be great ground; but there is no foundation for that, in any case that I have found. It is impossible there can be a clearer case of intention.

Mr. Attorney General (in reply.) — It is very possible to reduce the argument, upon this subject, within a much smaller scope. Had this case stood upon Lord Bath's will, I think there could be no doubt that General Pulteney would have been entitled to this, either under the general words of devise, as in Guidott v. Guidott, or as money to be laid out in land. Then it rests upon the acts, or the will, of General Pulteney. I admit that it was in the power of General Pulteney to say of this,—let it be land, or let it be money. But if there was no act done to shew what the intent was, with respect to the changing the nature of this property, the Court will expect as great certainty to disinherit an heir in this case, as in every other. Mrs. Pulteney takes nothing under General Pulteney's will, and therefore, as heir at law, she has a right to every thing the ancestor has not so devised as to bar her claim. The question has been raised, whether a person who could not dispose of the subject in his lifetime as money, can, by his will, alter the nature of the property. In Lingen v. Sowray, the question was, whether words generally descriptive of personal property could pass a species of real property, as the words lands and real estate will pass leaseholds, though they are words to pass real estate. The Court in that case only wants to know what the testator meant to do. It is only a confirmation of Guidott v. Guidott, that, under a devise of real estate [*] in certain places, trust-money to be laid out in land, which has no locality, will pass. The other proposition is, that words to pass personal property will pass certain sorts of real, under a modification. How the question would have stood between an heir at law, and a personal representative, cannot be collected.

[ *234 ]

Lord Chancellor. — If the securities had been all changed, it would have been inconsistent not to have given all.

Mr. Attorney General. — The proposition, for which this case was cited, that a person, not having an absolute interest, may change the nature of the property, is not proved by it. The doctrine will be more consistent, that a person having only a reversionary interest, cannot dispose of it as personal property. He may undoubtedly direct it to be sold, and the money distributed; but we contend that he can only do so under the same qualifications as if he was disposing of land. In

(3) See 6 Ves. 399, &amp;c.

considering 1783.

PULTENEY
against DARLINGTON.

[ *235 ]

considering that point, one is led to consider what interests would pass upon intestacy. If one seised of real estate articles to sell it, the real estate descends to the heir, though the price goes to the person representative; so, where one has articted to purchase land, the money goes to his executor, though the land belongs to his heir. So when real property goes to the executor, nominatim, he must take it as real property. It is sufficient, for the determination of this case, to join with the gentlemen, that a person so circumstanced may do it, but must shew his intention so to do. As to Lord Bath, he had abandoned the intent of turning it into land, and had no such intention when he made his will; he gave all his real estate to his heir at law, and all his personal to his next of kin. General Pulteney, therefore, took it as it then stood, that is, as real estate. Then the single question is, whether General Pulteney had made any alteration in it. It is contended that something less than a clear intent will do, and this is argued from Deacon and Smith, but it is not proved, by that case, that less than a clear intention will disinherit an heir at law. That is a case of a covenant to convey or settle: Lord Hardwicke, however, thought the purchase should be held to be made with a view to the covenant. But I should not be under great difficulty if I were to admit that something less than a clear intent would do. If a man in a will omits any thing, he dies intestate, whether he intended so to do or not. General Pulteney has in [*] fact, died intestate; all his devise of real estate is local. An estate in London, and the shares of the Staffordshire navigation, are not devised, and have passed to Mrs. Pulteney as heir at law. The view of Garden's paper was only to shew General Pulteney the income. The description used there is not ingrafted into the will. (3) The estate in London is the first article in that account, but makes no part of the will. It is necessary, in order to take away the interest of the heir at law, to produce evidence of acts of General Pulteney to shew an intention so to do; without the testator's marking such intent, it must continue as land. There is no expression in the will, that specifically, or in any way, marks out this particular property. It would be impossible, under this reasoning, there should be a case where a man had this sort of property, even without knowing it, that it would not pass.

Mr. Kenyon.—It is admitted by their own bill, that General Pulteney had changed all the securities into his own name.

Mr. Attorney General.—It did not occur to me, that any argument could arise from an act usually done by all trustees.

Lord Chancellor.—This case is, in some respects, a singular one; it differs from the case where the testator has no interest in the fund, but the use of it; there he must describe it by the proper description of the fund. But where the testator has the possession of the fund, if there were no cases upon the subject, I should think there could be no doubt as between the heir and the personal representative. The circumstance of money being possessed a great length of time, and not laid out, would be a circumstance to prevent an heir, who was a volunteer, from taking against the executor. But the cases seem to have gone to the length of this position, that the testator must have shewn an intent to exonerate the fund from the real uses. Then the question must be, whether, in this case, the testator has shewn an intention so to exonerate the fund: I see little reason to doubt that it may be conveyed as money, and the heir not take. The disposition of it, in the nature of a legacy, would exonerate it of the uses. The next case is where no specific part of the testator's personal property is liable to the fund, and it stands merely the same as a covenant. Then the question will be, whether he has so pointedly disposed of every thing as carry it from the [*] fund. Suppose he had bequeathed the stocks, leaving other property, the claim must have gone from the stocks to the other property. Here he has taken more general words, the question is, whether he has expressed them so fully as to clear the property from the uses. The case of Lingen v. Sowray seems as fully reported as it can be, from the Register's book. I shall take time to look into the cases.

(3) See per Lord Eldon C., 6 Ves. 399, 400, &c.

The cause stood over, and this day Lord Chancellor gave judgment.

Lord Chancellor. — The question relative to this sum of 23,488*l.* is, whether it is to be considered as real, or personal, property; if it is real estate, it is not disposed of by the will of Harry Pulteney, ex nomine, which he has done, if it is to be considered as personal estate. If he meant to give it as personal estate, it will be sufficient, it must go as such; and I hardly know any thing that is not sufficient to shew such an intention. General Pulteney's will gives his real estate by local descriptions, so that he had it not in his contemplation to include these sums in that devise. Some stress has been laid upon his giving securities for money; there seems an anxiety in the will to express his intention of giving all his personal estate. It was argued that evidence dehors the will ought not to be admitted to weigh in the construction of it, but the question did not turn upon his will. The question principally is, what presumption arises as to his intention, from the acts he has done. Harry Pulteney, at the time of his death, was as absolute an owner of this fund as could possibly be. The question is, what the law has said on this subject; I confess, I have found it a matter of considerable difficulty to find the opinion of judges upon the subject; but the opinion in Chichester v. Bickerstaff (9), (2 Vern. 295.) is, I think, the right opinion, notwithstanding Lechmere v. Lechmere (Forrest 80.) [90.] It is clear, that had this been a fund outstanding in trustees, and it had been necessary to come hither, in order to obtain it; the money, when obtained, would have been personal property. And so it would also, if the trustees paid it without suit. This is supposing the estate, when purchased, would be a fee-simple, for it would be otherwise in case of its being an estate-tail. It is agreed, on all hands, that it would pass by a will unattested by witnesses, and in the case of Edwards against Lady Warwick (2 Wms. 171.) it was said a parol direction [*] would do. These cases have surrounded the point. I have no doubt, upon all the cases, that the slightest intention to take it as money would make it so. In Kettleby v. Atwood, 1 Vern. 298. determined for the administratrix, and reversed by Lord Jeffries, 1 Vern. 471. the first doubt arose, and the reversal proceeded upon the cant expression, that in equity what is to be done is considered as done. Either that idea should have been carried fully out, or it should have been abandoned. I think it should have been the latter. The matter is only in action, and the party has a right to have it applied as he thinks proper. If A. B. has 20,000*l.* to be laid out in land for his use, he has nobody to sue; the right and the thing centering in one person, the action is extinguished. This point was much considered, in the time of James the First, with respect to the debtor being made executor, and it was determined, on the good sense of the case, that the rule did not apply, on account of the rights of the creditors; but if there is no legal or equitable title out against the party who is in possession of the fund, there the rule does apply, and the heir cannot say there was an use for him. The first cases were, that cited 2 Vern. 55. as founded on a general rule (Lawrence v. Beverly), and Scudamore v. Scudamore, Pre. Ch. 543. and then Whitwich v. Jermin, cited 1783.

PULTENEY
against DARLINGTON.
[ *236 ]

[ *237 ]

(9) See some observations on Chichester v. Bickerstaff, founded on an examination of the records in the Tower, in the argument in Dom. Proc. 7 Bro. P. C. 554.

1788.

 PULTENEY
 against DARLINGTON.

[ *238 ]

2 Vern. 58. but no particular rule can be drawn from them. Then came Kettleby v. Atwood, there the fund was not in the hands of the party who had a right to the money; Lord Guildford thought the wife, having an estate for life, had a right to call for the money. Lord Jeffries reversed it, only citing Lawrence v. Beverly, 2 Keble, 841.; cited 2 Vern. 55. Next came Chichester v. Bickerstaff, 2 Vern. 295. Lord Somers said the money had been bound by the articles, but that whilst it remains money, it shall be part of the personal estate of the person who might have aliened the land<sup>(10)</sup>; afterwards was Sweetapple v. Bindon, 2 Vern. 536. It was cited as governing this case, but there is nothing in it conformable to the case before Lord Somers. In Lingen v. Sowray, 1 Wms. 172. 176. some parts were to go as land, some as money, according to the acts done, Lechmere v. Lechmere, Forrest. 80. and 15.; Viner, 40.; Knights v. Atkyns, 2 Vern. 20. the question was as to the remainder in fee, the money was not in the hands of the husband, Disher v. Disher, 1 Wms. 204.; Chaplin v. Horner, 1 Wms. 483. it was upon a marriage-settlement, but there the money was not in the father's [*] possession. If the case had come before me, without the pressure of great names, I should not have decided it so; the best way would have been to have taken it as money, Hancock v. Hancock, 1 Vern. 605. In Edwards v. Lady Warwick, 2 Wms. 171. the money vested in the hands of the trustees. I omitted Lancy v. Fairchild, 2 Vern. 101.; Symons v. Rutter, 2 Vern. 227. I think Hutchins was right. In Oldham v. Hughes, 2 Atk. 452. the husband claimed, in opposition to his own agreement, to lay it out in land. Guidott v. Guidott, 3 Atk. 254. does not apply; the money was in the hands of the receiver, Bowes v. Lord Shrewsbury, 5 Brown's Parl. Cases, 269.<sup>(11)</sup> In Cunningham v. Moody <sup>(12)</sup>, the question was, whether payment of the money to tenant in tail, with remainder in fee, was a good payment; held not so. It was looked upon, by counsel, to be very much in point to the present case; but as to the money being paid to tenant in tail, with reversion to herself in fee, the Reporter must have mistaken the expression.<sup>(13)</sup> The use that I make of these cases, notwithstanding the dicta they contain, is this, that where a sum of money is in the hands of one, without any other use but for himself, it will be money, and the heir cannot claim; like the case of Chichester v. Bickerstaff, against which I think there is no judgment, though there are a number of opinions.<sup>(14)</sup> I know no better authority than that case. But, whether that is clearly so or not, circumstances of demeanour in the person (even though slight) will be sufficient to decide it: a very little would do: receiving it from the trustees, there is no doubt would be sufficient. Lord Bath did receive it, he had it in his hands.<sup>(15)</sup> Suppose he had it by way of covenant: otherwise, where would there be an end? If he kept it, subject to a covenant to lay it out for 50 years, should the heir come for it, at the end of that term? It would lead to infinite inconveniences. I am of opinion with Lord Bathurst, that the money, under the circumstances, continued money, and that the bill was rightly dismissed. Decree affirmed.<sup>(16)</sup>

(10) Vide per Lord Thurlow, antea in the preceding page, and the reference in the note.

(11) 5 Bro. P. C. 144. 8vo. ed.

(12) 1 Ves. 174. 176.

(13) The reason upon which Lord Hardwicke went was, that although she was tenant in tail, with the reversion in fee, yet she was a feme covert; and, not being sui juris, she could not elect to have it considered as money, without being privately examined.

(14) Vide 7 Bro. P. C. 554.

(15) See upon this in Hinchcliffe v. Hinchcliffe, 3 Ves. 521. 529, 530. Et per Lord Eldon C. in Druce v. Denison, 6 Ves. 399, 400, 401.

(16) And afterwards in Dom. Proc. 3 May, 1796. 7 Bro. P. C. 530. 8vo. ed.

1783.

[*] BODDAM against RYLEY.

[*239]

[Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 611.]

[Vide S. C. post.
2 vol. 2.]

This cause stood for judgment.

Lord Chancellor.

BETWEEN the years 1755 and 1760, Hough and Spencer, the testators of the present plaintiff and defendant, had been in trade together, and had gotten into very involved circumstances. Hough died in 1764, Spencer in 1766. The accounts were, by Spencer's neglect, very much entangled. One Blachford was sent to India to settle the accounts, but the books being lost or in confusion, the principal light he could obtain was from those of a third person [a Mr. Bourchier, deceased], who had dealt with both; and difficulties still remaining, the consideration of what was due was referred to a Mr. Hunter, who has reported a sum due; but the question of interest was reserved. The question now is merely upon the interest. Spencer's representative claims 9 per cent. interest, from year to year, upon the ground that the books were so made up. But I think no such interest can be allowed; for although, where there are cross-accounts, interest is as fair to one as to the other, yet it is not fair after closing the trade. Then whether he shall have Indian interest. — If accounts are regularly made up, upon Indian transactions, they ought to carry such interest as obtained there at the time when the transactions passed. But in this case I am against them, because no account was made up — no demand of the balance — and it was Spencer's fault that there was not — and because it has now been settled upon conjecture. This objection goes to the giving any interest. There are no settled accounts, on which to go; I take it purely on the account, as settled by Mr. Hunter. In what I now say, I do not proceed on the idea that the Court has interest in its discretion. There are cases of arrears of annuities, where the Court has said something that looks like a latitude, and covered itself with that expression. My opinion is, that those cases will afford special grounds, upon which interest is demandable; I take it nothing but what arises from a contract, agreement, or demand of a debt, can give rise to a demand of interest, and this court, in these cases, follows a court of law. The decree must be therefore for payment of the money reported due by Hunter, and it must be referred to the Master to enquire into the value of rupees, and reduce them into sterling money. (1)

In a long unsettled partnership account, rendered intricate by the neglect of a party, he shall have no interest on the balance when settled. (1)

(1) Lord Thurlow's observations here are probably correct, since they are warranted by the facts appearing in Reg. Lib. notwithstanding an inaccuracy or two at the close of the report, and of that in 2 vol. p. 2. when the matter came on by exceptions to the Master's report. The original bill prayed that the plaintiffs, as the personal representatives, in India and England, of John Spencer, might be paid the sums due to them in that right, on the joint trading and private India accounts between J. S. and Samuel Hough, deceased, together with compound Bombay interest on the respective sums of money so due on the India accounts, out of the personal assets of the said S. H., and that the defendants might admit assets, or account, &c. The report or award of Mr. Hunter [dated 9 Jan. 1781] is set out in Reg. Lib. verbatim, from whence the most extraordinary negligence appeared to have taken place on the part of Mr. Spencer, as to keeping books, or in short any accounts, after his partner's leaving India, in 1760, although regular books were kept up to that period. From those books Hough appeared debtor to the joint trade in 34,138 rupees, and Spencer creditor 112,374, at that time. Mr. Hunter, therefore, from the confused state of the accounts after that time, and from want of proper

1783.

per documents, made out the account as well as he could, certifying several sums in rupees to be due to the estate of Spencer, on different accounts, "without any interest."

All that the Court did on this occasion was, on consent, to refer it to the Master to take an account of what was due to the creditors on the joint trade of Hough and Spencer for their debts, and to order, in the usual manner, that the Master should compute interest on such of their debts as carried interest, after such rate as they carried, &c.; and that Mr. Hunter should be at liberty to attend the Master, and rectify a mistake which all parties agreed existed in his report [but which is not stated in R. L.] The Court then directed the Master to enquire "what was the value, in sterling money, of the rupees mentioned in Mr. Hunter's report, at the time the accounts were closed in the said report, and the exhibits referred to by the said report," reserving the consideration of costs and further directions.

It seems the reference mentioned, post. 2 vol. p. 2. must have been subsequent to this decretal order. The Master, on that reference, disallowed all interest upon the sums ascertained by Mr. Hunter (agreeably to the opinion of that gentleman, and the sentiments of the Lord Chancellor ubi supra). Upon an exception taken to the Master's report on that ground, his report was confirmed, and the exception overruled. Vide S. C. 2 vol. p. 2. and 3.

[*240] [*] The Marchioness Dowager of TWEEDALE, - Plaintiff.

[8th, 13th,
15th, 18th,
19th Nov. 1782. and 28th
March, 1783.]

The Earl of COVENTRY, HENRY FREDERICK THYNNE CARTERET, GEORGE THYNNE, THOMAS THYNNE, FRANCES HAY, an Infant (Grand-daughter of the Plaintiff), and others, - - - Defendants.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 460.)

Sir R. W. seised, in fee, of estates in C. which were mortgaged to a considerable amount, and also of an estate in the I. of W. and being seised for life, with an ultimate remainder or reversion in fee, after limitations in tail, to himself, (as heir at law to his brother,) of an estate which was so devised, by his brother, and possessed of an equal interest in money, bequeathed by him to be laid out in lands, devised the mortgaged lands to several uses, and inter alia to the plaintiff for life, remainder to her sons in tail, remainder to her daughters as tenants in common. He devised the estate in the I. of W. to [his executors, as (1)] trustees for 21 years, among other uses to pay his bond and book debts, if his personal estate should not be sufficient, and, by a further clause, to pay all his debts. This trust term, [after] the personal estate, shall exonerate the mortgaged estate. Two other questions were agitated; 1st. whether the reversion in the brother's estate, (which had fallen in since Sir R.'s death,) was assets (2) to pay his debts: 2d. as to the interest of the plaintiff, and her grand-daughter (the daughter of a deceased daughter) in the devised estates; which were not determined. (3)

SIR Robert Worsley, being seised in fee of the manors of Chilton Candover, and Brown Candover, and of other estates in Chilton Candover, and elsewhere in the county of Southampton, and being also seised in fee of estates in the Isle of Wight, borrowed of his brother, Henry Worsley, 6000*l.*; and 14th February, 1736, demised part of the Candover estate for a term of 1000 years, to secure that sum. He afterwards, in 1738, made a further mortgage of other parts of that estate to secure 800*l.* Henry Worsley, who was seised of a freehold house in Burlington-street, and possessed of considerable personal property, by his will in the same year 1738, devised all his real estate, and also the residue (after legacies) of his personal estate, to trustees, whom he made his executors in trust, for purposes in his will, and directed the settlement of his estates on his brother Sir Robert for life, remainder to Thynne Worsley (son of Sir Robert), for life, with remainders over in tail, which

(1) See towards the end of the judgment, post. 260.

(2) A reversion after an estate tail is only assets when it comes into possession. 1 Roll. Ab. 269. (A) pl. 2.; Mildmay's case, 6 Rep. 42. and S. P. ibid. 58. So Kellow v. Rowden, 3 Mod. 253.; Carth. 129.; Kinaston v. Clarke, 2 Atk. 204.; S. C. 2 Cruise, Dig. 447.; &c.; Gifford v. Barber, before Lord Hardwicke C. 4 Vin. Ab. 452, 453. Et vide Mr. Sergeant Williams's elaborate note on Jeffreson v. Morton, 2 Saunders' Rep. 8.

(3) It seems from Mr. Brown's MS. note, post. 248, that this point was determined afterwards by the Court of K. B.

1783.

TWEEDALE
against
COVENTRY.

were exhausted by the death of the late Earl Granville without issue, remainder to his own right heirs ; and he directed his personal estate to be laid out in the purchase of lands, to be settled in the same manner. Henry Worsley died in 1739, and Sir Robert Worsley was his heir at law. Sir Robert Worsley, in 1741, borrowed 22,000*l.* of the trust-money, and he and Thynne Worsley, his son, charged part of the Candover estate with that sum. In 1742, Sir Robert borrowed a farther sum of 8000*l.* of the trust-money, and he and his son jointly charged the same estate with that also. Sir Robert, being thus seised in fee of the Candover estates, subject to the mortgages (which, at the time of the hearing of this cause, were by some means reduced [*] to 17,000*l.* being also seised in fee of the estates in the Isle of Wight, and having a life estate in the freehold estates of Henry, with an ultimate remainder or reversion to himself in fee, and having an equivalent interest in the money ordered to be laid out in land, on the 4th June, 1746, made his will, reciting himself to be seised of the estates subject to incumbrances, and thereby devised the estates in Candover, and elsewhere in the county of Southampton (not in the Isle of Wight), to James and Robert Worsley, and their heirs, in trust by lease, mortgage, sale, or fall of timber to raise 5000*l.* for his granddaughter, lady Frances Carteret (now Marchioness of Tweedale, the plaintiff); and, subject to that charge, he directed the trustees to stand seised of those estates, to the use of his grandson Robert Lord Carteret (afterwards Earl Granville) for life, remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, remainder to the plaintiff for life, remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to her first and other sons in tail male, remainder to all and every the daughter and daughters of the plaintiff, lawfully to be begotten, as tenants in common, and not as joint-tenants, and in default of such issue, to his own right heirs. And he devised his estates in the Isle of Wight, to James and Robert Worsley, and William Pick, for 21 years (subject to a charge of 1200*l.* per annum, to his wife for life), upon the trusts in his will ; and, inter alia, out of the rents and profits, to keep the mansion-house at Apledurcombe in repair ; then to pay 300*l.* per annum to his son's wife for life, in exoneration of the Candover estate, and several other annuities to the amount of 740*l.* per annum ; and, after payment thereof, to pay all his bond and book debts, in case his personal estate should not be sufficient to pay the same, and also all his legacies and annuities, which he should give by his will, or any codicil ; and subject to the said repairs, debts, &c. and after deduction of their costs and charges, and such other payments as they should make to the crown, or any other person, by virtue or in pursuance of any deed by him alone, or together with his son, executed, and such sums as by covenant he was obliged, or by custom had been used, to allow to his tenants for repairs, he directed his trustees to account for all the residue and remainder of the rents, issues, and profits of the premises, so devised to them for the said term, to his cousins, James and Robert Worsley, their executors, administrators, and assigns, equally to be divided between them, to whom he gave all [*] such surplus for so long of such term as they should respectively live ; and after the death of either, to pay his share to his son, and others of the family, in the manner therein mentioned ; and in default of all such persons to pay the overplus, during the remainder of the said term, to the testator's own right heirs, and, subject to the said term, he devised the Isle of Wight estate in strict settlement. In two other clauses of the will, he recited that he had directed his trustees to pay all his bond and book debts ; but in the last clause of the will he directed them, after keeping them down the interest of the incumbrances,

[ *241 ]

[ *242 ]

1783.

TWEEDALE
against COVENTRY.

[ *243 ]

*brances, to pay all his debts, annuities and legacies, and gave (4) the executors 100*l.* each for their trouble, and declared that was all they were to have for their executorship. — Sir Robert Worsley left one daughter (Thynne, his son, having died in his life-time), the late Countess of Granville, his heir at law. She left a son, Robert, late Earl Granville, her heir at law. Robert Earl Granville filed a bill, in 1767, against the plaintiff, and her son (since deceased), and the trustees in the wills of Sir Robert and Henry Worsley, praying that the estates of Sir Robert Worsley, comprized in the several mortgages to Henry Worsley and his trustees, and subject to 3900*l.* of the plaintiff's fortune then unpaid, might be sold, and the money due on the incumbrances paid. On the 3d July, 1770, a decree was made in that cause, that an account should be taken of the several incumbrances, and that they should be discharged by sale of the premises comprized in the mortgages, and further directions were reserved. Some proceedings were had under that decree, but no report was made of the incumbrances, nor were the premises sold. Robert Earl Granville died in 1776, and by his will devised all his estates to trustees, in trust for the defendant Henry Frederick Thynne Carteret, for life, with remainder to the defendant George Thynne, in tail, with remainder to the defendant Thomas Thynne, in fee. — Lord Viscount Weymouth, the Countess Cowper and Lord Dysart, are his heirs at law. — Robert Earl Granville dying without issue, the Candover estate came to the plaintiff, by virtue of the limitations in Sir Robert Worsley's will. — She had married the late Marquis of Tweedale, by whom she had issue, one daughter, Lady Catherine Hay, deceased, leaving issue, by her marriage with William Hay, Esq. the defendant, Frances Hay, the infant. On the 30th April, 1776, Henry Frederick Thynne Carteret filed a supplemental bill and bill of review, to carry into execution the decree of the 3d of July, 1770. The plaintiff, by her answer to that [*] bill, insisted that the money advanced to Sir Robert Worsley, upon the security of the Candover estates, being his debt, and being also secured by his bond, his personal estate, and the personal estate of Henry Worsley, to be laid out in lands, ought to exonerate the Candover estate from the payment of those debts. — That cause came on to be heard, when the Court gave directions relative to Earl Granville's will, but the same were declared to be without prejudice to the question, whether the decree of 1770 should be revived, and out of what fund the 17,000*l.* mortgage-money should be paid, and all parties were to have leave to apply from time to time. After this, the Marchioness of Tweedale filed the present bill, whereby she prayed that the 17,000*l.* mortgage-money and interest might be paid out of the personal estate of Sir Robert Worsley, and out of the rents and profits of the estate in the Isle of Wight, devised to trustees for 21 years, and out of the real and personal estate of Henry Worsley; all the limitations in his will, except that to the right heirs, being determined; and that the estates devised to her might be exonerated, and possession delivered up to her, and for an account of rents and profits, from the death of Robert Earl Granville, and for an account of timber cut down by Robert Earl Granville, and satisfaction for the same out of his assets. She claiming to be tenant in tail, under the will of Sir Robert Worsley, &c. &c.*

Mr. Ambler (for the plaintiff.) — By her present bill, the Marchioness of Tweedale prays that her estate may be exonerated of this debt, out of three funds. 1st. Out of the personal estate of Sir Robert; as to the application of which, as far as it will go, there can be no doubt. 2dly. Then the next question is, as to the trust-term of 21 years, on the Isle of Wight estate, whether that is assets. — The trust under Sir Robert's will is to pay all my bond and book debts — perhaps these words would not make that trust-term liable (5) — but the doubt is fully cleared up by the following words — secured by deed by myself alone, or jointly with my son. — The question which is made, is whether by the premises he meant those in the Isle alone, or those out also, as he had mentioned that the Candover estate was liable to those debts; but his direction as to that peculiar estate to his executors, to pay all they should receive (except their own legacies) in payment of his debts, cannot be controlled to bond and book debts. He meant to make the rents and profits of that estate part of the personalty, and subject to [*] the debts to which the personalty was subject. Thirdly, then as to the reversion (6), which he has not devised. The true question is, whether the reversion of Henry's estate is assets of Sir Robert, and, being undevised, is assets applicable to his debts. I shall consider it under three heads; First, that [the] undevised estate is to be applied in exoneration of that which is devised. Secondly, that the reversion is assets, and is applicable to his debts, if he has not shewn an intent to the contrary. (6) Thirdly, that he has not expressed any such other intent. And first, as to the general question. — At law, a reversion after an estate for life is assets (7), though a reversion after an estate-tail is not, because the tenant in tail may cut off the reversion, 6 Co. 58. but, in this Court, a reversion after an estate-tail is assets, Kinaston v. Clark, 2 Atk. 204. (6) It is somewhat extraordinary to say, at law, that the reversion, after the estate-tail is spent, is not assets, because during the estate-tail it would only be assets quando acciderint; but in this Court it may be decreed to be sold, or if the Court would not do that, it would give leave to apply, when it should fall in. Lord Hardwicke, in Kinaston v. Clark (8), says such a reversion is assets. Lord Hardwicke there thought the devise by the son within the statute, and that the reversion was assets in futuro, and said this Court would go farther than the court of law, in some cases, as in treating an advowson as assets, and as it does in making a debtor executor liable for his debt. But the gentlemen on the other side mean to argue, that, although this reversion would be assets of Henry, yet it is not so of Sir Robert, on the principle of Lord Coke, 1 Inst. 11. b. that he who claimeth as heir, must make himself heir to the person last seised, and that Sir Robert was never in possession. But that is a different question: this is only whether this reversion was not subject to the debts of Sir Robert. Sir Robert had an estate for life, and, subject to intermediate estates-tail, he was seised of the reversion. Such a reversion would be bound by a recognizance. Kellow v. Rowden, Carth. 126. — also 3 Lev. 286. — 1 Shower, 244. Sir Robert could have released or devised this reversion. — He was complete owner of it. — It was within the statutes of bankrupts, for he might depart with it. — So it was too within the statute of fraudulent devises. If he can so far exercise ownership, why should it not be assets to pay his debts? This is in fact a question between creditors and the owner of the estate, for though the bill is brought by the Marchioness, it is the same [*] as if it was brought by the specialty creditors, and if the bill had been so brought, the Court would either order the reversion to be sold, or give leave for 1783,

(4) He appointed these trustees his executors; which Lord Thurlow relies upon towards the end of his judgment, post. 260.

TWEEDALE
against COVENTRY.

[ *244 ]

[ *245 ]

(5) Though Lord Thurlow states the doubt thus admitted, His Lordship's opinion is evident, that he thought those mere words might be sufficient. See post. 260.

(6) See the references second note to this case, antea, 240. et postea; from whence it appears clear that it is not assets until it comes into possession.

(7) Smith v. Parker (cited postea by Mr. Ambler, p. 246.) is not law. Vide post. 246; Mr. Serjeant Williams' note to Jefferson v. Morton, 2 Saunders' Rep. 8.; and Doe v. Hutton, in C. P. 3 Bos. & P. 651.; 2 Cruise Dig. 472, 473.

(8) Kynaston v. Clarke, 2 Atk. 204. and 2 Cruise Dig. 447. from a MS. Rep. 2d edit.

1783.

TWEEDALE
against
COVENTRY.

the parties, when it fell in, to apply. But it will be argued that this doctrine is wrong, and that, though liable to the debts of Henry, it was not so to those of Sir Robert; and for this they will cite Kellow and Rowden, — but that case turned, not on the merits, but on the pleadings only, and it was not determined that it was not assets to pay the debts of the son, as well as those of the father. In Kinaston v. Clark, it was determined that the reversion was assets of the father, although the son had been in possession. Dyer, 368. Pl. 46. shews that the rule in Lord Coke does not apply, for there the second son is charged as heir to the person not last seised. As to the case Cro. Car. 151. — Broke, tit. assets by descent, 19. b. where he says such a reversion is not assets, add quære inde (9), and says it has been determined otherwise; and, where the same case is cited in Kellow v. Rowden, Lord Holt says, that case is not law. — Lord Coke, on warranty, says the same thing, that it is assets of the father. From the case in 2 Atkyns, 57. Godolphin against Abingdon, it appears that the law is not against the rule of this Court. Henry's estate, except the house in Burlington-street, was personal estate. If his will was to be carried into execution, by a decree for a conveyance, the limitations must be to Sir Robert for life, with remainders over, remainder to the right heirs of Sir Robert; but a disposition to a person's own right heirs is tantamount to leaving so much undisposed of. — Henry could not have taken any interest by the conveyance, he being dead. — 2d. The next point is, whether Sir Robert has shewn that the estate was to go cum onere. If he had done this, all I have said would have been out of the case, but he has been silent upon the subject. He has said that the estates, in and out of the Island, are liable to the incumbrance; but it is not to be drawn from thence, that he meant the estates to go cum onere, that notice is not taken in the devising part of the will, and, under the circumstances of the case, cannot make it go cum onere, 2 Will. 386. Serle v. St. Eloy. 3d. As to the third point, what estate Lady Tweedale takes: she must take at least an estate for life, certainly it is given over to the sons in tail, then to the daughters without any words of limitation, no doubt the intent must be, that they also should take estates-tail. The Court will so construe the words as to effectuate the intent, 1 Atk. 432. where it was determined, the mother took [*] an estate-tail; for if she died without son or daughter, was the same as if she died without issue, as issue must be either a son or daughter.

[ *246 ]

Upon the cause coming on again 13th November, Mr. Ambler added to his former citations Smith v. Parker, 2 Blackstone's Reports, 1230. (10)

Lord Chancellor. — Is there any case where such a reversion turns out to be assets quando acciderint?

Mr. Ambler. — That case appears to be the same as this, for the tenant for life there, never was in possession of the reversion.

Lord Chancellor. — The argument there is not worth reading. I do not believe it was reported by Mr. Justice Blackstone (10), there the (9) But he has abridged the same case under title "Recovery in Value," 13. will. quære. See Mr. Serjeant Williams' observations on this, ubi supra, cited in the preceding notes, and in the argument, post. 256.

(10) The decision in Smith v. Parker seems, indeed, of no authority; but it also seems Lord Thurlow was not warranted in the doubt above expressed, as to its being a genuine report of Mr. J. Blackstone himself. Mr. Serjeant Williams compared the report with the paper book of one of the judges who determined it; wherefrom, and from a note taken by that Judge, it appears to be correctly stated in Mr. J. Blackstone's Reports. That the determination there has been held wrong, see Mr. Serjeant Williams' note, ubi supra, and Doe v. Hutton, 3 Bos. & Pull. 651. The Court probably was not aware of Giffard v. Barber, 4 Vin. Ab. 452, 453. which had been determined by Lord Hardwicke, in 1740. See Mr. Serjeant Williams' note.

contingent uses never came into possession. It was therefore not a reversion after an estate-tail, but after an estate for life only.

Mr. Selwyn (on the same side). — On the question, whether the reversion is applicable, the case in Blackstone is precisely in point. The case of Kinaston v. Clark is there cited: but, as Your Lordship does not think that case of Smith v. Parker is to be argued from, I must argue this case as if that had never been determined. Lands descending in fee-simple must be assets to answer all such debts as the ancestor has charged upon the heir. So a reversion after an estate for life is assets, 1 Lord Raym. 53. It is said to have been determined that a reversion after an estate-tail is not assets; but the only case cited for that doctrine, both in Mildmay's case, 6 Co. 42. a. and Brediman's case, 6 Co. 58. b. is Terling and Trafford, 12 & 13 Eliz. which is nowhere to be found. I admit that in Lord Coke's Institute it is laid down as law: if he had been aware of any case, he would have cited it, but he only says that it is of no account in the law. It is true, it is not of any present value, but it is so in futuro, cum acciderit. Lord Hardwicke in Kinaston v. Clark says, that to say it is not assets is a loose and incorrect expression. In practice it is considered as being of value, for the heir cannot plead riens per descent, but must except the reversion, Lil. Ent. 112. It is sufficient to make it assets if it ever may become of value; as an advowson in fee in gross, which, though not of present value, is assets, and may be extended, 2 Stra. 879. Robinson and others, creditors of Tonge [*] against Tonge, affirmed in the House of Lords, 3 Brown's Parl. Cases, 556. (11); Westfaling v. Westfaling, 3 Atk. 460. So is the good-will of a public-house. So in money to be laid out in land where the party will be tenant in tail, the Court says, he shall not have the money, in order that the remainder-man may have his chance of the party dying before he can suffer a recovery. This shews it is valuable, and if so it must be assets, the quantum of the value not being material. But it is insisted that though assets of Henry, it was not so of Sir Robert. — I can find no case on the subject but that cited (from Blackstone) where the bond was entered into by the intermediate tenant for life.

Mr. Price (for the infant.) — The first question is, upon the common adage, that a reversion after an estate-tail is not assets, which arises from a confusion of terms, and mistaking assets in reversion for assets in possession, mediate for immediate, potential for possessory. When they come into possession they are certainly valuable. In the case in the Common Pleas, Lord Chief Justice De Grey talked of assets mediate and immediate. Kellow v. Rowden turns on the same distinction. The question there was only, whether the declaration was right. It is the best reported in 3 Mod. 253. the counsel on both sides agreed the land was chargeable for the debt, but the question turned upon the mode of pleading. It was in that point only that the plaintiff was wrong. In the present case, the facts will support my argument. Henry Worsley made his will in 1738, in 1739 he died. On his death, Sir Robert took an estate for life, with a remainder in fee, (subject to the intermediate estates,) which, whenever it came into possession, would be possessory assets for Sir Robert's debts; that happened in 1776, by the death of Robert Earl Granville, without issue. Then, and not till then, Lady Tweedale's estate came into possession, and Miss Hay, her grand-daughter, became entitled to an interest. The case in Dyer, 368. supports this doctrine, that the charge avails, notwithstanding the intermediate estate, and says the law is the same of grandfather, father, and son, or of grandfather and two daughters.

1783.

TWEEDALE
against COVENTRY.

[ *247 ]

(11) And 1 Bro. P. C. 114. 8vo. ed.

1783.

TWEEDALE
against COVENTRY.
[ *248 ]

Osbaston v. Stanhope, 2 Mod. 50. the reversion is assets; not only of the original owner, but of all the intermediate takers. Smith v. Parker (12), 2 Blackst. Rep.; Rook v. Cleland, 1 L. Raym. 53.; also 1 Lutw. 503. will reprobate the case in Bro. Assets, 19. Fortrey v. Fortrey, 2 Vern. 134. treats the reversion as assets, though the creditor must [*] expect until it falls in. But Kinaston v. Clark is the strongest support of the doctrine, that, when it comes into possession it becomes assets. There the father, being tenant in fee, settled the estate on his first and other sons, with remainder to himself in fee. The father became indebted by bond, and died; the son came into possession, died without issue, and devised the estate. It is taken both by the Bar, and upon the Bench, that at law the reversion would be assets. Sir Dudley Ryder, the Attorney General, said, if there had been no devise by the son, it would have been assets; for, although till it fell in it could not be sold, it might when it did come into possession. The present Lord Chief Justice (Lord Mansfield) for the defendants, did not argue that it was not assets, but that it was not within the statute of fraudulent devises, as not being the devise of the original owner, but of the tenant in tail; therefore, if that had been the case of a descent, it would have been assets. Lord Hardwicke said he was of opinion, that having come into possession, it was assets. Though the defendant may plead riens per descent, where there is a reversion after an estate-tail, that does not prevent its being assets, when it comes into possession. There is a liableness in it, which is sufficient to make it assets. It is like a right descended, or a rent-seck descended, where the heir had not possession; the plaintiff may extend it when it comes into possession. So where there is a dry seignior, and the defendant pleaded riens, afterwards a tenancy escheated, the plaintiff might extend the tenancy, 2 Inst. 293. There is a case, Cro. Eliz. 355. where tenant for life acknowledged a statute, and, tenant in tail dying without issue, all the Judges held the reversion liable. Secondly, In regard to the 21 years' term, Sir Robert had the debts particularly in his contemplation, and provides for the general situation and circumstances of his estate, and the incumbrances upon it. Thirdly, As to the limitation of the estate to Lady Tweedale, and what estate Miss Hay takes, whether any, and what. The fundamental rule of construction is the intention of the testator, under which she must take an estate-tail. The first object of bounty was Lord Granville, to whom he gave for life only, with remainder to sons only in tail; then he gives it to Lady Tweedale for life, remainder to her sons in tail, "and in default of such issue, to all and every the daughter and daughters of the body of Lady Tweedale, lawfully issuing, as tenants in common, and not as joint-tenants (13), and in default. [*] of such issue," remainder over. Under these words the daughters would not take successively, but together. The words are descriptive of his intent, that there should be an inheritance, and will make an estate-tail, Wyld v. Lewis, 1 Atk. 432. No doubt the testator intended the daughters should take something; it could not be estates for life; he would in that case have only repeated the limitations before made as to the sons. It could not be in fee; for that he has given over. It must therefore be estates-tail. Courts of justice have gone farther than is necessary in this case to effectuate the testator's intent, Brown v. Barkham, Pre. Ch. 442. 461.; Forth v. Chapman, 1 Wms. 663.;

[ *249 ]

(12) As to Smith v. Parker, see the observations, supra, and the notes, ante.

(13) This branch of the cause was sent by Lord Chancellor as a case to the Court of King's Bench, where it was argued Hil. 29 G. 3. 1789, and a certificate returned of the opinion of that Court, that Lady Frances Hay took only an estate for life. From Mr. Brown's MS. note in his own copy. That decision is reported 3 T. R. 83.

Now on the demise of Dodson against Grew, 2 Wils. 322. So even where there was an intent to give an estate for life only, but there being an intent that the children should take, made it an estate-tail, Robinson v. Robinson, 1 Bur. 38. There are several instances where the words son and sons are held words of limitation, King v. Melling, 1 Vent. 214. 225.; Pinbury v. Elkin, 1 Wms. 563. In Evans v. Astley, 3 Bur. 1570. it was to every son and sons, without words of limitation, and held that, according to the intent, the sons took estates-tail in succession. The limitation to the daughters should be like that to the sons, to all and every the daughter and daughters of the body of Lady Frances, lawfully begotten, and to the heirs of the body of such daughter and daughters lawfully issuing. Miss Hay, therefore, ought now to be held to take an estate-tail.

Mr. Simeon (on the same side.) — The question consists of three parts, branching out into this general proposition, that Miss Hay has now a vested estate-tail in the Candover estate; second, that she has it exonerated from the incumbrances; which includes the third point, as to the fund from whence the debts are to be paid: that is, whether the reversion is assets; for, on failure of all assets, the Candover estate is undoubtedly liable. The great objection taken is, that Sir Robert had only a reversion in the estate, and the money to be laid out in land; and, therefore, that it could not be charged in the hands of the holder: but I shall contend, that the interest was an interest in possession, not in reversion. First, It is necessary to shew, that Frances Hay has an estate-tail, if it shall be held that the plaintiff, Lady Tweedale, has only an estate for life; and this will appear, 1st. from the object of the testator; 2dly. from the context of the will; 3dly. from the words, which are proper [*] for this purpose. 1st. The object of the will was to provide for the children of the family: the limitation is to Robert, Earl Granville for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, remainder to Lady Tweedale for life, and, under the subsequent limitation to her daughters, the infant is entitled to a vested remainder in tail. 2dly. This appears still more clearly by the context; for he does not give the daughters estates for life, which he certainly would have done if he had not intended them to take larger estates. He has given to them as tenants in common; this shews he meant them an inheritance; as, otherwise, tenancy in common would be less beneficial to them than a joint-tenancy. 3dly. The subsequent words, in default of such issue, are words of limitation. But, if the words themselves were not sufficient, they might be supplied, in order to effect the intention, Lomax v. Holmden, 1 Vesey, 290.; also in 3 Wms. 176.; 3 Bulstrode, 127.; Evans v. Astley, 3 Burr. 1570. Second, supposing the infant to take a vested remainder in tail, she is entitled to take it exonerated from the incumbrances; 1st. by the application of the trust term of 21 years. This part of the case has been very fully argued; the words are, all his debts; the word legacies is also mentioned, which must apply to the 5000*l.* to the plaintiff Lady Tweedale, which is a legacy charged on this estate which is ultimately charged: for the personal estate, or real estate undevised, must be applied in payment of such a charge before the devised estate, unless there are express words of exemption of such personal or descended estate, which is not the case here, Galton v. Hancock, 2 Atk. 424. This brings me to the third question, how far Sir Robert's reversion in the estate of Henry is liable. It has been hitherto contended, that Sir Robert had a reversion, after the contingent limitations in tail, of the estate to be purchased by the personal estate of Henry Worsley: but if it can be proved that the ultimate limitation to Sir Robert was not a reversion descending, but a new interest vested in him by purchase, the whole argument, which 1783!

TWEEDALE
against COVENTRY.

[ *250 ]

1788:

TWEEDALE
against COVENTRY.

[ *251 ]

opposed the making that estate, assets to answer the debts of Sir Robert, must fall to the ground. It will be necessary, for this purpose, to consider the difference between a reversion and a remainder. A reversion is an interest remaining in a person to take effect in possession, after intermediate estates are at an end; it is a right of reverter, according to Blackstone, not merely a returning of the land, as Lord Coke calls it, 1 Inst. 142, which is descriptive only of the property [*] in transitu, and not of the bare existing right. Whereas a remainder is an existing right, not continuing in the grantor and which was never displaced, but granted to another to take effect after intermediate estates to other persons are at an end. Sir Robert Worsley being the first taker of the remainder, he must, ex vi termini, take by purchase, either under deed or will; consequently, had land been purchased and settled under Henry's will, immediately after his death, Sir Robert must have taken the ultimate limitation in fee, as a remainder. For Sir Henry being dead, and the land not to be purchased till after his death, nothing could be conveyed to him, and consequently nothing could descend to Sir Robert as his heir, and there was no middle way. Sir Robert, had the conveyance been made, must have taken, either by descent or purchase; the former being impossible, for the reasons before given, Sir Robert must have taken by purchase; in which case, the defendant, being heir of the first purchaser, the lands in his possession would be liable to the bond-debts of Sir Robert. The words "my right heirs," would have been considered as descriptive of the persons meant to take the ultimate remainder in fee, of the lands to be purchased at the death of Henry, and therefore the ultimate limitation must have been made to Sir Robert, as his right heir, at his death; and if the intention was otherwise, the law would not suffer it to take effect. The rule that "what ought to be done is considered as done" in this Court, must apply here, and laches of trustees cannot affect the rights of parties, which would be the case if the lands were to be purchased now, and the conveyance made to the person who is now right heir of Henry, as such person may not be such right heir to Sir Robert as would take the remainder by descent from him. This property is therefore now assets to pay the debts of Sir Robert.

[ *252 ]

Mr. Attorney General (for the defendant, H. F. T. Carteret, devisee for life, of Robert Earl Granville, who was heir at law, both to Henry, and Sir Robert Worsley, and claims the reversion in fee of Henry Worsley's estate; and an estate for life, in Sir Robert Worsley's estates, after the estates, whatever they may be, of the plaintiff, and defendant Frances Hay.) — It is impossible to support the position that the 5000*l.* is a debt of Sir Robert; it is a mere charge on the estate. First, — The most important question for my client to contend is, that the estate devised to him, by Lord Granville, is to be exonerated by the 21 years' [*] term. The mortgages must be paid from that term, which is charged with all his debts. The rule of construction of wills is to give effect, if possible, to every word; but, if there be any ambiguity, the last words make the will of a testator. — Second, — The next question is, whether the estate devised to the plaintiff, does not come to her cum onere; — this depends upon the words so often alluded to, "in pursuance of" any deed executed by me alone, or jointly with my son." — These words can have no effect, unless they are applied to the charges created by them. The property disposed of by that devise must therefore be charged. Serle v. St. Eloy, 2 Wms. 386. is not so accurately reported as Peere Williams generally does. It appears, by searching the Record, that subsequent to the devise of the estate, subject to the incumbrances upon it, the devise of other lands, was to pay all his debts, though the word all is omitted by the Reporter. — Third, — Then as to the question whether 1783.

TWEEDALE
against CARTERET.

whether the reversion is subject to the debts. Mr. Simeon's argument does not extend to the real estate of Henry, but only to the money to be laid out in land; I shall therefore go first upon the subject of the real estate. I contend that is not assets of Sir Robert. By Co. Lit. 11. b. 15 a. a person claiming as heir, must make himself heir to the person last seized. Would an action, on the bond of Sir Robert, lie against Mr. Carteret? In order to make it assets of Sir Robert, they must shew that Lord Granville took as heir to Sir Robert, which cannot be. Suppose Sir Robert had had a son and a daughter by one venter, and a son by another venter, the eldest son died, not having come into possession, the reversion would not go the daughter, but to the second son, as heir to the father, in whom the reversion first vested. In Hargrave's Co. Lit. 11 b. the case is put of grandfather, father, and son; the father bound in an obligation dies, living the grandfather, the son is not liable, because he may make himself heir to the grandfather. (14) It is in Lord Hale's note, one of whose notes was relied upon in Drury v. Drury, as a very great authority. As to the cases cited, not one of them is like the present. In Kinaston v. Clark, the person who took by purchase, created the debt. (15) As to those supposed by Mr. Ambler, which, not being assets at law, would be assets in equity, they are not so. He instanced advowsons; but by 1 Jones, 24. they are extendible; and in 3 Wms. 401. it was held, that an advowson was assets (16), and Lord Talbot said he wondered it ever was [*] doubted. It is a case constantly occurring, that property which the party, whilst living, may dispose of, will not be liable after his death. As in the case of a copyhold, and estates pur autre vie, where, before the statute of frauds, the heir was a special occupant. In Kellow v. Rowden, the person who created the debt created the estate also, and the same was the case in that cited from Lily's Entries. But, in this, if an action was brought against Mr. Carteret, Sir Robert Worsley would not be named as one of the persons from whom Lord Granville claimed. As to Mr. Simeon's question, with respect to the money to be laid out in land, if Sir Robert was a purchaser of the reversion, it would undoubtedly be assets; but there was an interest in Henry, which descended to Sir Robert; whether it be to be called a reversion, or by any other name, the consequence must be [the] same. Suppose he had ordered the estate to be settled, and not named a remainder-man, the remnant would have gone to somebody claiming under him. In Robinson against Knight (17), 18th Feb. 1761, before Lord Northington, the testatrix gave personal estate to be laid out in lands, to be settled, with several remainders over, remainder to her right heirs; then a residuary bequest; — the question was between the heir at law, and the residuary legatee; Lord Northington decreed the right heir to take. The heir, in that case, could not have pleaded riens per descent, for the possession under the will would be assets. By the will of Henry Worsley, the lands to be purchased with his personal estate were given with reference to the real, to go in the same manner; now the real estate could not come to Sir Robert by purchase, therefore the other lands could not. As to the trust not being raised till the death of the deviser, I answer that the will is inchoate at the time of execution, and speaks to many purposes, when made; as where it gives an estate to A. B. who dies, living the testator: another A. B. comes into case, he will not be entitled to take the devise. The [ *253 ]

(14) See also Mr. Serjeant Williams' note to Jefferson v. Morton, 2 Saund. Rep. 8.

(15) This is the sound distinction. See Mr. Serjeant Williams' note, ubi supra passim.

(16) See also that case of Robinson and Tong, 1 Bro. P. C. 114. 8vo. ed.

(17) And 12 July, 1762. Reported from Lord Northington's MS. 2 Eden, Ca. Ch. 155. Quod Vide.

1783.

TWEEDALE
against COVENTRY.

[ *254 ]

instant Henry Worsley was dead, this money became real estate, and, upon the determination of the particular estate, must go to his heir at law; but here he has coupled and united this to the real estate. There is no case in the books against the rule in Coke Littleton, but that in the Common Pleas. — In Gifford v. Barber, December 1741, 4 Viner, 452; Lord Hardwicke declared his opinion, that the reversion was not liable to a bond; though a judgment, statute, or recognizance attaches upon all the real property, and follows it after it ceases to be assets. In the case of a bond, the declaration must [*] have stated, that the bond was the bond of the person who created the reversion, and to whom the defendant is heir, and would not describe the intermediate heir. — Here the descent is immediate, from Henry Worsley to Earl Granville. Fourth; — As to the interest, the plaintiff and Miss Hay take. — The plaintiff clearly takes an estate for life only; the usual remainder, to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, is interposed. — Miss Hay clearly takes nothing, for the words extend to daughters only. — Are the daughters of Earl Granville, and those of his sons, to be disinherited for Miss Hay? A tenancy in common cannot be taken by descent, and here are no words to give it by purchase. In the cases cited upon this part of the subject, there have been words clearly pointing out the intention. In Robinson v. Robinson there was the word descendants, and both in that and in Duckenfield's case the taking of the name was relied upon.

Mr. Solicitor General (on the same side.) — To the second point, — Sir Robert Worsley, in the will, describes himself to be seised subject to incumbrances. His devisee can only take what he had to give. The plaintiff can therefore only claim the estate, so devised, subject to the incumbrances which affected it in the hands of the devisor. Then, as to the reversion, — the doctrine is the same at law, and in equity; and this question at law is perfectly clear. The report of the case of Smith v. Parker, in Blackstone, must be inaccurate (18), for the Chief Justice is made, there, to doubt whether the assets are applicable first to the debts of the father, or the son. I deny Mr. Ambler's doctrine as to the power of disposition; a man may have a power to dispose, which, if not executed by him, his creditors can take no advantage from. — As to the lands to be purchased, they are to go in the same manner as the other part of the estate. If Mr. Simeon's argument be right, they must go to entirely different uses. — If there had been no remainder to the right heirs in the will, the remaining interest would have descended. — The addition of those words can make no difference. As to Miss Hay's interest, — the words "such issue," can only relate to daughters, — the Court will not supply words, to give an inheritance.

[ *255 ]

Mr. Mansfield (on the same side.) — First, As to the estate of plaintiff Lady Tweedale, and Miss Hay, It is clear neither the [*] plaintiff, nor her daughters, could take more than estates for their lives; the words are not sufficient to carry more, they are estates for life, expressly limited, — there are no words of limitation afterwards. — The only case at all like this, is that of Evans v. Astley; that turned on conjecture, arising evidently out of the will, but to construe this more than a life-estate, would be mere unsupported conjecture. — Miss Hay can take nothing. — Second, — As to the 21 years' term, — the testator meant to put the rents and profits of the Isle of Wight estates, in the same situation as his personal estate, these will be liable to the same debts with the personal. Third, — The plaintiff must take the Candover estate, cum onere. Robert Earl Granville was the first taker of the Candover estate, — the estate would be incumbered in his hands. It must be so, therefore, in the hands of the successive takers. In such a case as this, the description "subject to incumbrances," will weigh, how little soever it might in some others. — Serle v. St. Eloy does not bear upon the question. It turned upon words in the will. Fourth, — Then, as to the reversion, and first, the money to be laid out in lands. — The intention was that these lands should be to the same uses as the real estate; if the distinction can be taken, that intent cannot prevail. The universal understanding of the Master's office is, that the persons who take such reversions take by descent; the words right heirs are never held to give an estate by purchase, though "right heir" will. — Then as to the real estates, — there is no case except Smith and Parker to the effect of that case. — In an action against Lord Granville, he could not have been charged as heir of Sir Robert, he took as heir of Henry. There is a difference between the reversion in fee descending, and the land descending, as appears from Jenks's case, Cro. Car. 151. and Kellow v. Rowden: mere seisin in law, not in fact, is not sufficient to charge the heir, Co. Lit. 239. all the old books speak of such a reversion, as not being assets; being only a possibility of reverter.

(18) But see the note to p. 246. antea.

Mr. Madocks (on the same side.) — The case of Cunningham v. Moody, 1 Vesey, 174. shews that the reversion of money to be laid out in land, is to be considered as if it was already land. — This claim must be against the heir of Sir Robert Worsley. It is true that when the reversion vested in Sir Robert, he might have affected it by deed, will, or judgment; but the bond is a personal demand. — The creditor, to affect the heir, must either shew [*] a lien on the land, or that the heir is bound, that he is heir of the person who made the contract, and has assets from him. As to Sir Robert taking the reversion by purchase, the practice at the Master's office is to make the limitation to the right heirs of the testator. In Brown v. Barkham, Pre. Cha. 461: the limitation was made (according to the devise) to the heirs male of the great grandfather, who was dead.

Mr. Macdonald (for George Thynne, first tenant in tail under Lord Granville's will, and Thomas Thynne, remainder-man in fee.) — First, as to the reversion, — The mere capacity to take an estate, after the expiration of intermediate interests, is not considered by the law as a valuable property, to be liable as assets: — it may never exist, and therefore cannot be applied to the purpose. A reversion, after an estate for life, being a certainty, only postponed in point of time, is assets quando acciderint, but there is no case where such judgment has been given against an heir having a reversion in fee after an estate-tail. Where a reversion is created by the person who also contracted the debt, it is liable, because he transmits the debt with the property which he has in the land: but there is no case where the land has been affected in the hands of the heir, except the ancestor, seised in fee, created the reversion as well as the debt. I rely upon there having been no such determination, and I have the authority of Lord Coke, who thought it was fair, if a principle of law does not appear to be laid down, to argue that no such principle exists. — The gentlemen on the other side now require something further, that the reversion be held assets of the person who did not create it, they must therefore shew some authority for that position. As to the estates Lady Tweedale and Miss Hay take, Lady Tweedale takes impeachable of waste, and with every restraint under which Lord Granville took it, — with respect to Miss Hay, an estate given to persons as tenants in common, without further words, can only be for life.

Mr. Scott (on the same side.) — With respect to the reversion: I do not contend that a reversion after an estate-tail is not in any case assets. It is so for the debt of the first person who was in possession, and who created 1783.

TWEEDALE
against COVENTRY

[ *256 ]

1783.

WARRANT
against CONVEYANCE.
 [*257]

created the reversion, but not for the debt of the intermediate takers. The Quære made by Brooke, Assets by Descent, 19. is answered by Lord Hale, and by other parts of Brooke's own book. (19) In title Execution, pl. 143. he puts nearly the same case, and [*] says it shall not be taken in execution for the father's debt, because he never was seised. In title Recovery, 13. the same case is again put, and Fitzherbert, title Recovery, 14. agrees with it: these restore the authority of Brooke, Assets, 19. — In Godolphin v. Abingdon, the circumstances of the case are not stated, and Lord Hardwicke's opinion is very short. — In the other cases, the dicta either imply nothing, or do not apply to the present case. In all of them the father was seised, and the creditor concluded with an averment that the defendant was heir to the debtor. So it is in Jacks's case, in Bell's case, Hetley, 134. the case in Dyer, and that in Lutwyche. The heir must be charged as heir to the obligor, and in respect of those lands only which he took from him. — If a son have lands, and die seised, and the lands go to the uncle, the uncle dies, and the lands go to the father, the father would not be liable to the son's bond, for the creditor must charge him as heir to the son, which cannot be; Co. Lit. 11. b. If the son made warranty, the warranty would not descend to the father, Gillb. Ten. 18. nor could he vouch as heir, Bro. Abr. tit. Voucher. — As to Sir Robert taking the lands to be bought, by purchase; It has been assumed, that if a conveyance were now directed, it would be impossible to make the heir take by descent; but the conveyance must be to the heir of Henry, who could not be liable to Sir Robert's debts. — Henry meant his heir to take that which was already land, by descent; his intension therefore was the same with respect to the lands to be purchased. — If Henry had taken no notice of his right heirs, I should think what was undesised would not go to his personal representative, as has been said. — Your Lordship in Pulteney v. Lord Darlington, (ante, p. 223.) said, a very slight circumstance would decide it in favour of the heir or the executor. — On the authority of Hopkins and Hopkins, (Forrest. 44.) I should doubt whether it could go to the personal representative, Papillon v. Voise, 2 Wms. 471. — Austin v. Taylor (20), before Lord Northington, 2d June, 1759. — But even a remainder may go by descent, Co. Lit. 376. b. A reversion may be so limited as to be taken by purchase. This was determined in a case before Lord Camden, and it would be nearer the intent of the testator, now, to limit this to the person who is very heir, now, of Henry, than to give it to the heirs of Sir Robert.

[*258]

Mr. Morris (for the trustees of the term, the owners of the beneficial interest in the term, and who are entitled to the personal estate of Sir Robert Worsley.) — The term of 21 years cannot [*] be liable to pay the charges on the Candover estate, unless it is made so by the will of Sir Robert Worsley. — Cases are certainly not wanting to shew that the personal estate may be exonerated, and the real estate charged. It may be done either by expressly charging the real estate, or by appropriating the personality to other uses. If a testator has charged an estate by mortgage, he may appropriate the personal estate, and leave that charged to bear the burthen. In this case there is no intention expressed of making the term liable; on the other hand, there is a recognition that the estates were liable to charges: that recognition is of itself equivalent to a charge upon the estates. — The words in the will are bond and book debts, these words will not include mortgages, even though bonds were given as collateral securities, for the mortgage is a debt of a superior (19) See the note to p. 245. ante, which refers to Mr. Serjeant Williams's important observations.

(20) Reported from Lord Northington's MS. 1 Eden, Ca. Ch. 361.

nature.

1783.

TRUSTEES
against COWLEY.

nature. On that ground, in the disabling statute of Queen Elizabeth, the enumeration of parsons, vicars, and others, is held not to include bishops. — As to the words, subject to the incumbrances made in pursuance of any deed executed by him and his son, Sir Robert clearly intended charges on that particular estate. It would be no objection, that there were no incumbrances on that estate, but, in truth, there was an incumbrance upon that estate, of 500*l.* per annum settled on his son's wife. In four several clauses of his will, bond and book debts are expressly mentioned. In the last clause, therefore, where he mentions all his debts, he must be supposed to mean the debts he had before provided for, and not to introduce any new charge. — Sir Robert knew perfectly well how to charge the Isle of Wight estate, and exonerate the Candover; he has done so as to the 500*l.* jointure: another argument arises from his having intailed the term upon the two Worsleys with cross remainders. He would certainly not take so much pains where the devisees were not likely to reap any benefit; which it was reasonable to suppose they would not, if the term was to be charged with these mortgages. The estate was only about 1000*l.* per annum, over and above Lady Worsley's charge of 1200*l.* upon it. The annuities charged upon it by the will amounted to 740*l.* there were pecuniary legacies to the amount of 17 or 1800*l.* and the simple contract debts, paid by the trustees out of it, amounted to 8000*l.* So that there was little probability of its producing much for the Worsleys, without this additional charge of 17,000*l.* though by the accidental death of Lady Worsley, soon after that of the testator, they have received about 14 or 15,000*l.* more than they have paid. — It is therefore most probable Sir Robert Worsley meant it should be liable to annual charges only.

[*] Mr. Wilson (on the same side.) — In charging the 500*l.* jointure to the son's wife, on the Isle of Wight estate, Sir Robert expressly says, in exoneration of the Candover estate; if he had intended the same exoneration as to the mortgages, he would certainly have expressed himself in the same manner. Mortgages have always been considered as debts of a superior nature to bond-debts, though both are by specialty, as in ex parte Grove, 1 Atk. 104. Lord Hardwicke says, “a landlord is a creditor of a higher degree than others,” though only by simple contract. Therefore the words bond and book debts cannot include the mortgages, they are qualifying words and exclude other debts. Attorney General v. Barkham, cited in Stapleton v. Colville, Forrest. 206.

Mr. Batt (on the same side.) — In the construction of wills all the words are to be construed so as to stand together, if possible. Under this rule, the words all debts must refer to the words bond and book debts, in the former clauses. There are many stronger cases where subsequent words have been controlled by the former parts of the will.

Mr. Ambler (in reply.) — First, as to the trust term, Sir Robert has made it liable to all his debts. As to his having described himself as seised subject to incumbrances, it by no means shews that he intended the estate should remain subject to these charges; even if he had devised them subject to the incumbrances it would not have prevented their being exonerated, in consequence of other expressions in the same will, as appears from the case in P. Wms. (Serle v. St. Eloy.) Though the words bond and book debts should even be held not to include mortgages (which I do not admit) it could not affect the last clause, all my debts. There were no deeds executed by him and his son, but the mortgages of the Candover estate, so that he must have had these mortgages in view, when he made the charge. Second, — As to the reversion in Henry's estate. — This question has got divided in two — one, as to the money to be laid out in land — the other, as to the land itself. If I succeed in either of these, it will be sufficient to exonerate the Candover estate. As to 1783:

[ *259 ]

TWERDALE
against COVENTRY.
[ *260 ]

to the first of these, the case in the Common Pleas is precisely in point, and it was well considered, as it was argued upon a special verdict. In respect to the second, let the money to be laid out be limited how it will, it will be within the reach of these demands. [*] By ordering it to be to the same uses, Henry certainly meant to devise it, not to leave it undevised. It ought to be now limited as it would have been at the death of Henry, when the ultimate remainder would have been to Sir Robert.

Lord Chancellor doubted whether it would not be necessary, in order to enable him to make a decree in the present case, to rehear the former cause, in which the Candover estate had been decreed to be sold, in order to get rid of that decree; as, although it was abated, it was in the power of any party interested to revive it. Mr. Ambler insisted, the interests of the several parties were so entirely varied by the death of Lord Granville, that it would be impossible to bring on again the questions agitated in that cause. Lord Chancellor ordered it to stand over till the first day of rehearings after term, and desired Mr. Ambler to consider whether it would not be necessary to rehear it. The principal cause, and the former cause stood in the paper. The rehearing was not gone into, and afterwards, 28th March, 1783, the Lord Chancellor pronounced judgment.

Lord Chancellor.—The great reluctance I find in pronouncing a decree in this cause, arises from finding myself obliged to charge the trust-term of 21 years, with the payment of the debts. — This makes it unnecessary for me to decide upon the question of the reversion; if that had been necessary, the case in the Common Pleas (21) does not so satisfy my mind, as to have enabled me to decide it without referring it to a court of common law. † But I am obliged (although I am very sorry for it) to charge the trust-term with the payment of the incumbrances. Had the question stood upon the words bond and book debts only, it might have admitted of some doubt, though I do not see how these words, in the case of a gentleman, who can have no debts properly called book-debts, can be other than a general charge; but the misfortune is, that, by the subsequent clause, Sir Robert has directed his trustees to pay all his debts, annuities, legacies, &c. and a still greater misfortune is, that he has made his executors executors in trust, and has made this term a joint fund with his personal estate. — I have tried to find an objection to this execution of the trust, but cannot. — I must therefore direct an account of the funeral expences, debts and legacies of Sir Robert Worsley, and of his personal estate, and of the rents and profits of the trust-term, in order that they may be first applied in discharge of the incumbrances. (23)

† The question whether the reversion was assets of the person through whom it descended, to those in whom it vested in possession (22), was much agitated in the case of Arundel v. Knight, argued at Lincoln's-Inn-Hall, 6 July 1787, when Lord Chancellor expressed his opinion to be against the case in the Common Pleas; but, as this case has not received His Lordship's final decision, no direct inference can be drawn from it.

(21) Smith v. Parker, 2 BL. Rep. 1280. See the notes on it ante, from whence it appears to be against law. Vide inter alia, Doe v. Hutton, in C. P. 3 Bos. & Pull. 651.

(22) If it vests in possession, it will be assets for payment of the debts of that person; contra where there are intermediate estates. See Mr. Serjeant Williams' note, above referred to by the Editor, and the references in the second note to the principal case.

(23) “Whereupon, and on long debate, &c.” After the usual accounts of the general personal estate, the Court directed an account of the personal estate specifically bequeathed; and then, of the rents and profits comprized in the term, which accrued since the testator's death. Reg. Lib. 465.

1783.

[ *261 ]

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 28th
March 1783.

Devise of a leasehold estate held under a College; after the will made the lease is renewed, this new lease does not pass by the will. (1)

A charge of legacies under a vis. [includes only those which follow, and not others at a great distance, separated by other bequests.]

[*] HONE against MEDCRAFT.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 355.)

THOMAS James Selby, Esq. made his will, dated 19th August, 1768, as follows: "I give and devise to my right and lawful heir at law, for the better finding out of whom I direct advertisements to be published immediately after my decease, in some of the public papers, — All my manor of Whaddon and Nash, with their appurtenances, the capital messuage known by the name of Whaddon Hall, and also divers parcels of land, arable and meadow, situate in the parish aforesaid, with their appurtenances; and also my chace known by the name of Whaddon Chace, with all the deer, soil, ground, and timber growing thereon; also all the coppices of wood, being part of the same chace: also that parcel of land, known by the name of Whaddon Park: also all my other messuages, farms, lands, hereditaments, and premises, situate in the several parishes of Whaddon, and Nash, Great Harewood, &c. in the county of Bucks, with their rights, members, and appurtenances; To hold the said manors of Whaddon and Nash, capital messuage, ground, messuages, farms, lands, tenements, hereditaments, tithes, and premises, with their appurtenances, to my heir at law, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns for ever, subject to and chargeable nevertheless with the payment of all my just debts, funeral charges, bonds, annuities, and all legacies hereafter mentioned; that is to say, to the Rev. Mr. Thomas Sawell, schoolmaster, I give 1000*l*. To Sir William Stonehouse, bart. of Oxfordshire, I give 1000*l*. To Joseph Smith, Esq. of Shelbrooke-Lodge, I give 1000*l*. To my dear cousin Temperance Bedford, I give 1000*l*. To E. Page and C. Foster, 500*l*. each. To Thomas Page of Waverdon, in the county of Bucks, I give 500*l*. To Mr. Franklyn, who married Miss E. Wells, I give 1000*l*.: and to Miss Nelly Wells, and Mrs. Franklyn, late Catherine Wells, I give 100*l*. each; eight legacies of 100*l*. each to the Taylors; and to Charles Taylor, John Taylor, and Ann Court, an annuity of 10*l*. each; to the poor of the parishes of Whaddon, Nash, and Totenhoe, I give 300*l*.; — to the poor of Waverdon, 300*l*.; — to Charles Miller, Esq. I give 500*l*. — to Mr. F. Shephard, I give 500*l*.; — to Mrs. Elizabeth Howels, I give 20*l*. a year; — to John Ranby, Esq. I give 500*l*.; — to Mrs. Anne Kent, sister to Temperance Bedford, I give 1000*l*.; to Thomas Foster, I give 100*l*. and 20*l*. a year [*] for life; — to Mr. Simon Taylor, I give 500*l*.; — to Mr. John Hall, I give 100*l*. (there was here a considerable blank left in the will), all which debts, and all other debts by me owed, together with all which legacies, funeral charges, and appointments, I do hereby order and direct to be paid by the said heir at law,

[ *262 ]

(1) Before, and at the time, of the decision of Abney v. Miller, 2 Atk. 592. a distinction had prevailed in these instances upon the mere difference of the words made use of by testators; so that the Court was led to a different decision where the bequest was of "the premises," "my leasehold estates," "my leasehold tithes or lands," "my leaseholds," &c. to where there was a more immediate reference to the lease. See 2 Atk. 597. and per Lord Eldon C. 11 Ves. 390. and 15 Ves. 239. That distinction seems to have subsided even in nine years after Abney v. Miller, when Sir J. Strange decided Rudstone v. Anderson, 2 Ves. 419. and he seems to negative such an inference accordingly. Lord Eldon C. observed, it "has been long destroyed, and Lord Thurlow in Hone v. Medcraft, " (the principal case) put an end to all difficulty upon it." See 15 Ves. 238, 239. and 11 Ves. 394. The true principle now existing is this — viz. That as a general rule, a lease renewed subsequent to a bequest, whether of "the premises," "the leasehold estates," &c. &c. will not pass under it; but that such a lease may pass under an antecedent will, where the whole context of it indicates a clear intention to pass whatever interest the testator may have at his death. Wds 15 Ves. 238, 239. and 11 Ves. 387. 390.

1788.

HONE
 against MILNOR.

[ *263 ]

[ Bequest of the leaseholds. ]

his heirs, executors, or assigns, within twelve months after my decease ; but should it so happen, that no heir at law is found, I then do hereby constitute and appoint William Lowndes, Esq. of Winslow, in the county of Bucks, my lawful heir, on condition he changes his name to Selby ; and I give the estates, and all the manors before mentioned, together with all rights, hereditaments, members, and appurtenances before mentioned, to the said William Lowndes, subject to and chargeable, nevertheless, with all the legacies, annuities, debts, funeral charges, and other charges before mentioned. Next, I give and bequeath all my tenements, and messuages, with the appurtenances thereto belonging, situate in St. Clement's church-yard, and also all those my messuages, farms, lands, and tenements, and tithes, and hereditaments, and premises, with every their appurtenances, situate in the Isle of Ely, and also all that my manor of Hertlingfordbury, in the county of Hertford, with all the rights, members, manors, and appurtenances thereto belonging, to the Rev. Mr. John Lord, of Drayton, and to Mr. Richard Filkes, the elder, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, on trust to sell and dispose thereof; and the monies arising from the sale thereof I give and bequeath to be forthwith paid into the hands of the treasurers of the three charities hereafter mentioned, for the use and behoof of the said three charities, share and share alike (that is to say), to the Foundling hospital, one third share, to the Magdalen hospital, one third share, and to the Asylum, one third share. And I give to the said Temperance Bedford, 1000*l.* over and above what is before recited, this being part of my personal estate, together with all interest that is or shall become due, and which 1000*l.* is out at use, and lent by me to Sir Thomas Alston, Bart. of, &c. — I also give to the said Temperance Bedford, three pictures (as described), and also an iron chest, now in the hands of Mr. Hoare, my banker, containing my mother's jewels, and some other trifles : also my mahogany chest of drawers, in the dressing-room, at Waverdon, together with all bonds, notes, monies, and whatever else is contained in the same. — I also give to the said Temperance Bedford, after the decease of my beloved Mrs. Elizabeth Hone, commonly called Vane, all that [*] my dwelling-house at Waverdon, together with all messuages, farms, lands, and tenements, hereditaments, and premises, with the appurtenances, situate in Waverdon aforesaid, Apsley, Guise, Husborne, Crawley, Heath, and Reach, in the several counties of Bucks and Bedford. — I also give and bequeath to the said Temperance Bedford, the perpetual advowson, and disposal of the living, or rectory of Waverdon aforesaid, for ever, together with the tythes of all sorts, thereof. — I give to Sir William Shenstone, Bart. some pictures (thereby described), and my hounds, and dogs to Mr. Small. — Next I give and bequeath to Mrs. Elizabeth Hone, otherwise Vane, all my interest, dividends, and produce, that is now due or shall hereafter arise and become due, from all my bank-stock, to me appertaining, whether bought in my name, or that of any others, together with all interest, dividends, produce now due, or hereafter to arise from all my South Sea stock, South Sea annuities, indentures, bonds in Mr. Hoare's hands, and all other my securities vested in the public funds to the aforesaid Elizabeth Hone, alias Vane, for the term of her natural life, to be received by her, or by her order, and for her use and behoof. — And I do likewise give and bequeath to the said Elizabeth Hone, otherwise Vane, all that my dwelling-house at Waverdon, together with, &c. (as before to Temperance Bedford), together with all the use of all the furniture, plate, and every the goods, &c. contained, and now being in the said dwelling-house, for her use, and her friends, during her natural life. — All the residue and remainder of my goods and chattels, together with the several sums of money that shall be due to me at the time of my death, from my tenants, and others (save and except whatever whatever bonds, and other personalties are contained in the barrow given to Miss Bedford), I do hereby give and bequeath to the said Mrs. Hone, otherwise Vane, and also all monies that are vested in my banker's hands, and all money whatsoever, and wheresoever (excepting as before excepted); and I do hereby constitute and appoint her, the aforesaid Mrs. Hone, otherwise Vane, together with the Rev. Mr. John Lord, and Mr. R. Filkes, the elder aforesaid, joint executrix, and executors of this my last will and testament; and I do give and bequeath to the said Mr. John Lord, and to Mr. R. Filkes, to each of them, 1000*l.* for their trouble in executing the above trusts, and their aiding and advising Mrs. Hone in the management of her affairs. By a codicil, dated the same 19th August, 1768, the testator gave as follows:—[*] after the decease of Mrs. Elizabeth Hone, I direct that Mr. John Lord, and Mr. R. Filkes, or the survivor, his heirs and assigns, shall immediately sell out all my money whatsoever vested in the public funds, whether Bank stock, South Sea stock, or annuities, or what else, for the best price they can get, and divide it into four equal shares, paying one fourth share to my cousin Temperance Bedford, her heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, and the other three shares, share and share alike, to the treasurers for the charities hereinafter mentioned, for the use and behoof of the said charities, that is to say, one third share to the Foundling hospital, one third share to the Magdalen hospital, and one third share to the Asylum.

The rectory of Waverdon [otherwise Whaddon] was held by the testator, by lease, from New College, Oxford, for the term of ten years, from 1766, and, after the will made, he surrendered up that lease, and took a new lease, dated 6th May, 1770, from the college, for 10 years more, and was possessed of the rectory, by virtue of that lease, at the time of his decease, 7th December, 1772.

On a hearing for further directions, two questions had been made. 1st. Whether the advowson passed by the will, or the devise was revoked, by the surrender of the former, and acceptance of the new lease. 2d. Whether the real estate was charged only with the legacies enumerated under the videlicet, or with all the legacies in the will.

Lord Chancellor this day gave judgment.

I have looked over Abney v. Miller (2 Atkyns, 593.), and all the other cases on the subject, and find I must contradict them all, if I did not construe this devise of the leasehold estate, which was afterwards surrendered, to be a lapsed devise; it must be part of the personal estate. — The enumerated legacies are expressly charged on the estate. — According to the cases of Adams v. Meyrick, 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 271. and Gascoign v. Duncan, in the Exchequer, 28th January, 1774, you may gather, from the parts of a will, the variation of a charge from one part of the estate to another. A probable intent would be sufficient, without implication plain, for this purpose; but it is stronger, a multo magis when he has clearly charged the real estate, Stapleton v. Colville, Forrest. 202. Here he leaves all the estate charged [*] with the legacies after mentioned, that is to say, — (enumerating them), and takes up the consideration of defraying them, which is to be done by his heir, or by Lowndes, whom he substitutes in default of an heir. He then gives a legacy out of his personal estate, and afterwards disposes of his leasehold and other personal estates specifically; that is, he disposes of every part of it. — But this provision does not extend to the other legacies.

His Lordship, therefore, [“after long debate,” R. L.] declared that the several legacies given by the testator's will to the poor of the parishes of Whaddon, Nash, Totenhoe, and Waverdon, were void, as being within the act of the 9th of Geo. 2. intitled an act to restrain the disposition of lands whereby the same become inalienable, it was ordered that what was reported 1788.

Hone
against Mortgage

[ *264 ]

[ *265 ]

1788.

HONE
against MEDCRAFT.

reported due for principal and interest of the testator's debts, and the subsequent interest to be computed thereon, and also what was already reported due for principal and interest of the several other legacies given by the testator's will, and the subsequent interest to be computed thereon, except the legacies of 1000*l.* each, given to John Lord and Richard Filkes, his executors, *be raised by mortgage or sale of the testator's estate called Whaddon Chase, Whaddon Park, and other his lands subjected to the payment thereof, by the said testator's will, or of a sufficient part thereof, with the approbation of the Master: and it was ordered that the money so to be raised by such mortgage or sale should be applied in payment thereof accordingly, and, as to the legacies of 1000*l.* each, to Lord and Filkes, and the interest thereof, it was ordered that the same should be paid out of the residue of the said testator's personal estate. And it was declared that the lease of the rectory of Whaddon, and the lands and tythes thereto belonging, having been surrendered by the testator, and a new lease taken thereof, after the making of the said testator's will, that the same fell into, and was to be considered as part of the residue of his personal estate (2); and the accumulated rents of the estate at Whaddon, in the mean time, were ordered to be paid to the defendant William Lowndes Selby, [the parties agreeing to settle the proportions thereof belonging to them respectively between themselves.] And it was declared that the Whaddon estate, devised by the testator's will in manner therein mentioned to the said defendant, was to be considered as belonging to him [the said W. S. Selby]; and it was ordered that he should be let into possession, and that the title-deeds should be delivered to him; and it was declared that the devise in the testator's will of the freehold and leasehold estates given to charities, were void devises, as being within the 9th Geo. 2. and that the leasehold fell into, and constituted part of the residue of the testator's personal estate (3)*

(2) The former editions contain a note which cites Coppin v. Fernyhough, post. 2 vol. 291. S. P. But as many might be misled by the false deduction of law made by it, the Editor conceives himself more than warranted in suppressing it. Mr. Brown thereby supposes the long exploded distinction to exist, which is stated in the first note to this case to have once prevailed. And it is the more remarkable as to his want of accuracy, since it is known from the highest authority, namely, that of Lord Eldon, who was present in Court, that Lord Thurlow, in his judgment in this very case, most expressly prevented all future misunderstanding, and “put an end to all difficulty upon the subject,” see in James v. Dean, 11 Ves. 394. and 15 Ves. 239.

(3) Although Mr. Vesey, in his 11 vol. p. 394. states the decree in the principal case not to be accurately set forth, the Editor finds it agree with the entry in Reg. Lib. as far as it extends; and that nothing material to the point in question is omitted. The Editor has supplied a sentence or two, which is within brackets, as usual. The rest of the decree is to the following effect: — The title-deeds of the estates in Saint Clement's Church-yard, and at H. in Hertfordshire, were ordered to be delivered to Sir Rowland Alston, who had recovered possession thereof. The receiver thereof was discharged; and he, after passing his accounts, was to pay the balance to Sir Rowland Alston. The title-deeds of the estates purchased by the testator after making his will, were to be delivered to the other defendants, who had recovered the possession thereof. And the receivers which had been appointed of the leasehold estates were to deliver possession thereof to the plaintiff E. Hone; and be discharged, and pass their accounts, and pay the balance to her. And it was ordered, “that the Master should apportion the costs before directed between the several estates in question; and that so much of the costs as related to the manor of Whaddon and Nash, and other the premises devised to the defendant Lowndes, be paid out of those estates; and, if necessary, that the same be raised by mortgage or sale of those estates in like manner as the said testator's debts and legacies thereinbefore directed. That so much of the costs as related to the personal estate should be paid out of the personal estate, and so much of them as related to the testator's other estates respectively should be paid out of those estates respectively.” Reg. Lib. 359.

Apportionment of costs between the different estates,
&c.

1783.

[*266]

[*] Lord Thurlow resigned the Great Seal, Tuesday the 8th of April, 1783;— and it was delivered, by His Majesty, to Alexander Lord Loughborough, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, Sir William Henry Ashhurst, one of the Justices of the Court of King's Bench, and Sir Beaumont Hotham, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, at Lords Commissioners.

[*] EASTER TERM,

[*267]

23 Geo. 3. 1783.

ALEXANDER Lord LOUGHBOROUGH, Sir WILLIAM } Lords
 HENRY ASHHURST, Sir BEAUMONT HOTHAM, } Commissioners.
 Sir THOMAS SEWEL, Master of the Rolls. JAMES WALLACE, Esq.
Attorney General. JOHN LEE, Esq. Solicitor General.

FIDELLE against EVANS. [8 May.][S. C. 1 Cox,
Ca. Ch. 27.]

(No Entry.)

AN agreement in writing having been made amongst the parties to this suit, a part of which was, that the plaintiff's bill should be dismissed without costs, the plaintiff gave notice of motion; and Mr. Graham moved, that it should be so dismissed; but the defendants did not (1) consent at the bar. The Court thought they could not make an order to dismiss without costs, but upon consent; but gave a rule to dismiss unless cause should be shewn to the contrary.†

Motion to dismiss bill without costs, cannot be, but upon consent.

† Vide Knox v. Brown, vol. 2. p. 186.

(1) They did not appear. See 1 Cox, 27.

Ex parte CATER.

APETITION in the matter of Byde, a bankrupt, by annuity creditors, that the arrears of their annuities might be computed and the growing payments valued, and that they might be admitted to prove debts, to

A special meeting of creditors directed, in order to their consent or dissent, as to admitting annuitants to prove as creditors. (1)

(1) Before the late act 49 Geo. 3. ch. 121. s. 17. nothing but arrears could be proved under a commission in the case of a mere personal annuity, unless the penalty in the annuity bond had become forfeited: but now, by that act, any annuity creditor, whether his security be by bond or covenant, or bond and covenant, &c. &c. and whether there shall or shall not have been any arrears of the annuity, at or before the time of the bankruptcy, may prove under the commission as a creditor for the value of such annuity, to be ascertained by the commissioners. See that Act, and Cooke's B. L. 154. 6th edition, and 139. 5th edition.

1788.

Ex parte
CATER.

[ *268 ]

the amount under the commission. The assignees consented, but the Court ordered that a special meeting of the creditors should be called to take their opinion, whether the assignees should consent; the creditors now claiming [*] being annuitants, who had bought, for the life of the bankrupt, at five years' purchase, and coming in competition with fair debts.

Ex parte BURROW.

A PETITION of other annuity creditors in the same bankruptcy with the former, but praying in the alternative to be admitted for the value of the annuities, or for the money paid for them; ordered to stand over to be amended, by stating the time when the act of bankruptcy happened, in order to see whether or not the bond was then forfeited at law. (1)

(1) See the note to the preceding case, especially Cooke, B. L. 154. [139.] and the act lately passed of 49 Geo. 3. ch. 121. s. 17.

Lord, Commissioner,
Ashurst and Hotham.

BILLINGSLEY against CRITCHET. [14 May.]

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 445. b.)

Mother married to a second husband, not obliged to maintain the children by the first, but shall have an allowance from the interest of their fortunes.

A BILL filed by the children of the late John Billingsley, against the widow, now married to the other defendant, Critchett. — J. Billingsley, by his will, had given to the children about 4000*l.* stock. He had likewise made a provision for the widow, who had a further estate from her own family. The question was, whether the mother was obliged to support these children, or it was to be done by an allowance out of the interest of the stocks given to them by their father.

Mr. Selwyn, for the defendants, said, he admitted the practice to be, that where the father applies for a maintenance for a child out of its separate fortune, the Court refers it to the Master to inquire whether the father is of ability to maintain the child, but that there is no such reference when the mother applies. That, in this case, there was a discretion in the trustees, whether they would give an allowance or not, and, upon application, they thought it unnecessary. The mother is under a natural obligation to maintain her own offspring; — there is nothing in the will to restrain the trustees but their own discretion.

Ashurst, Lord Commissioner. — If the mother still continued unmarried, I should have some doubt; but, since her marriage, she is entitled to an allowance: otherwise, it would be compelling the [*] second husband to keep the children, who is under no natural obligation so to do. King v. Munday, Fort. 803. (1)

Hotham, Lord Commissioner. — The Court must see what should be applied to the maintenance. It is wise to let the children have part of their fortunes applied to their education. The discretion to be exercised must be under the view of this Court. — Ought not the Court to see to the application of part to their education? The second husband

(1) This doctrine is undoubted law, and Rex v. Munday is properly reported in Fort, though defectively in Strange. See Tubb v. Harrison, 4 T. R. 118, 119.

husband on his marriage thought he was to have the wife's fortune uncharged. † (2)

† See on the point of this case also, that of Woodford and Lilburn, (20 Geo. 2.) cited from a MS. in Bott's Poor Laws, p. 87. pl. 147.

1783.

BILLINGSLY
against CRITCHET.

(2) It was (inter alia) referred to the Master, "to see what was proper to be allowed for the maintenance and education of the plaintiffs the infants from the time of the intermarriage of the defendant Critchet and his wife, and for the time to come." R. L.

RUSSEL against RUSSEL. [16 May.]

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 402. b.)

Lords Commissioners, Lord
Loughborough,
Ashurst.

A LEASE having been pledged by a person (who afterwards became a bankrupt) to the plaintiff, as a security for a sum of money lent to the bankrupt, [and other sums in which he was indebted to him] the pledgee brought this bill for a sale of the leasehold estate. (1)

Mr. Lloyd (for the plaintiff) merely stated the case, and that the plaintiff had a lien upon the estate.

Mr. Kenyon (for the defendants, the assignees,) insisted the plaintiff's claim was against the law of the land; for that it would be charging land without writing, which is against the 4th clause of the statute of frauds.

Lord Loughborough. — In this case it is a delivery of the title to the plaintiff for a valuable consideration. — The Court has nothing to do but Pledge of a lease carried into effect, against assignees of a bankrupt. (1) Evidence of the bankrupt, he having had his allowance and certificate allowed to be read.

(1) The bill stated that the bankrupt, at the time of the deposit, promised to execute an assignment when required; and it also stated that the assignees had sold the premises to some of the other defendants by auction, after notice to all parties of the plaintiff's claim. It prayed "an account of what was due to the plaintiff from the bankrupt's estate; and that the plaintiff might be declared to have a specific lien upon the said lease and premises; and that the same might be declared to be liable thereto, and charged therewith; and that the defendants, or some of them, might be decreed to pay the plaintiff what was due to him with interest; or to execute an assignment of the said lease and premises to him as a security for the same; or that the same might be sold, and all proper parties decreed to join therein; and the plaintiff might be paid his principal, interest, and costs thereout." R. L.

Before this case, the point was much doubted. It was the first determination on the subject, and though confirmed (after the result of the inquiry, see 9 Ves. 117.) by Lord Thurlow, and often followed, has been uniformly disapproved of upon principle, for the most important reasons. See in Plumb v. Fluit, 2 Anstruther, 438. Ex parte Coming, 9 Ves. 117. Ex parte Haigh, 11 Ves. 403, 404. Ex parte Findon, ibid. 404. note. Norris v. Wilkinson, 12 Ves. 196, 197. Ex parte Mountfort, 14 Ves. 606, 607. Ex parte Coombe, 17 Ves. 370, 371. Ex parte Hooper, 1 Merivale's Reports, 9. where Lord Eldon C. regretted the latitude to which he had (in one case) extended the doctrine to cover subsequent advances. That case was Ex parte Langston, quod vide, 17 Ves. 230, 231. in connection with Lord Eldon's observations in the case last cited. It seems his Lordship would not go so far again in a similar case; and his Lordship observes, that "at all events, the doctrine is not to be further enlarged." See in most of the cases above referred to; from whence it seems that the Court will not now allow the deposit to be a security for future advances, without the most distinct evidence of an agreement for the purpose.

The general order in bankruptcy for sale of mortgaged premises (of the 8th March, 1794,) does not apply to these cases on deposits, or any other than legal mortgages. See Ex parte Puyler, 16 Ves. 454. It was held that such an equitable mortgagee is not entitled to the costs of his application to have the property sold, although it was owing to the bankruptcy that a regular mortgage was not made. Anon. 2 Madd. Rep. 281. But in a subsequent case, Ex parte Brightens, Lord Eldon C. allowed them, where the deposit was under a written agreement to execute a mortgage. 1 Swanst. Rep. 3. So that probably the case in 2 Madd. Rep. would be otherwise decided now.

1783.

RUSSEL
against RUSSEL.

[ *270 ]

to supply the legal formalities. — In all these cases the contract is not to be performed, but is executed.

Ashhurst, Lord Commissioner. — Where the contract is for a sale, and is admitted so to be, it is an equivocal act to be explained, whether the party was admitted as tenant or as purchaser. — So here it is open to explanation, upon what terms the lease was delivered.

[*] A question arose as to reading the bankrupt's evidence, he having had his allowance and certificate, but the Court suffered it to be read, thinking him not bound to refund.

An issue was directed to try whether the lease was deposited as a security for the sum advanced by the plaintiff to the bankrupt.

Upon the trial the jury found it was deposited as a security. †

† The reporter has been informed that this cause came on afterwards (though he has not been able to ascertain the date) before Lord Thurlow, on the equity reserved, when his Lordship ordered that the lease should be sold, and the plaintiff paid his money. (2)

The same point has been since determined in the cases of Featherstone v. Fenwick, May, 1784, and Hurford v. Carpenter, 17th and 18th of April, 1785, where Lord Thurlow held that the deposit of deeds entitled the holder to have a mortgage, and to have his lien effectuated; although there was no special agreement to assign; the deposit affords a presumption that such was the intent. (3) [On these cases, see per Lord Eldon C. 14 Ves. 607.]

(2) See accordingly per Lord Eldon C. 9 Ves. 117.

(3) See the cases in the first note to this case; also Birch v. Ellames, 2 Anstruther, 427. Card v. Jeffray, 2 Scho. & Lefr. 374. and Ex parte Wetherell, 11 Ves. 398.

Ex parte CRINSOZ.

Where a party has clearly distinct demands on a bankrupt, he may sue for one and come under the commission for the other, but not, if they are only different securities for the same debt.

THE house of Brown and Collinson having several demands on that of Rabone and Crinsoz, (which, as well as the former, had become bankrupt,) viz. — A demand secured by an assignment of ships, another by bond, and a third by simple contract; proved the simple contract debt under the commission, and brought an action upon the bond. — This was a petition that they might elect to proceed on both at law, or under the commission.

Mr. Walker (against the petition). — Notwithstanding the case Ex parte Botterill, 1 Atk. 109. a party having debts of different natures, or, where the debts are in different rights, may prove one, and proceed at law for the other. Where the party has proved the debt, and proceeds at law also for the same debt, he may be put to his election. The petitioning creditor cannot elect, but must proceed under the commission; Ex parte Ward, 1 Atk. 153. but any other creditor may elect.

Mr. Arden (in support of the petition). — In this case it is really the same debt, the bond and the assignment both being to secure whatever was, or should become due.

Lord Loughborough, Lord Commissioner. — The petitioning creditor cannot proceed in any way but under the commission; he is precluded. — Any other creditor has his election, but he cannot take a dividend under the commission, and take the bankrupt in execution for the same debt. — He cannot take a dividend without giving up his execution; but if he has different debts he may have different remedies. But this case is different from all those in the books, there being an assignment, a bond, and another debt. [*] If this is not covered by either of the others, they may come under the commission for that duty. But I have some doubts as to the bond. I think the creditor is bound to prove all the debts that would be covered by the certificate. In Botterill's case, the the bankrupt was in execution when the commission issued. In Ward's case, it was held that being assignee did not preclude from election. It is no where held that the creditor may prove parcel of his debt under the commission, and sue for the rest at law, where it is the same debt, and of such a nature as to be proveable under the commission: a mortgagee cannot take a dividend on the mortgage and sue upon the bond. Here the bond and the assignment seem to be the same debt. If a mortgagee has a separate debt, which cannot be tacked to the mortgage, he may proceed differently for that debt.

[ *271 ]

Ashhurst, Lord Commissioner. — In any case, it is hard that a creditor should both prove, and bring an action, even where the debts are distinct; but here the case is very different.

Hotham, Lord Commissioner. — I do not see the good sense of distinguishing the petitioning creditor from any other; true, he has made his election, but that applies to any creditor who has proved his debt.

The petition stood over.

1783.

Ex parte.
Cainson.

CAMPBELL against The Earl of RADNOR. [20 & 26 May.]

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 441.)

Lords Commissioners, Lord
Loughborough,
Ashhurst, Ho-
tham.

ARCHIBALD Hutcheson, having a considerable estate in land, and also a large personal estate upon mortgage on lands in Norfolk, by his will, bearing date 22 July, 1740, gave to trustees a sum of 7000*l.* to be laid out, after the death of his wife, in the purchase of lands in Ireland, the rents and profits to be distributed among poor persons in Ireland, who should appear to be related to him, (though ever so remotely,) or, in default of poor relations of his, to poor persons in the county of [*] Antrim in Ireland. Elizabeth Hutcheson, his wife, proved that will, and afterwards, by her will, dated 1 August, 1761, reciting the will of Archibald Hutcheson, and that his personal estate was out upon mortgage in Norfolk, she ordered her real estate to be sold, and the 7000*l.* to be paid to the uses declared by the will of Archibald Hutcheson. She, by the same will, gave several legacies, among others, to Mary Call, 10*l.* also to Mary Wooldridge and Barbara Smith, other legacies. By a codicil, dated in 1768, she gave to Mary Call 40*l.* instead of 10*l.* in the will — to Mrs. Wooldridge, for her and her brother, 100*l.* — to Barbara Smith, 200*l.* By a second codicil, in 1777, she gave to Mary Call 40*l.* instead of 10*l.* in the will — to Mary Wooldridge, for herself and family, 100*l.* — to Barbara Smith, 300*l.* The prayer of the bill was to establish the will, and that the second codicil should be declared to have revoked the first.

A. H. by will, gave money upon mortgage to a charity in Ireland: the wife, by her will, affirming that bequest, held to be an admission of assets of the testator, and therefore good, though out of land. There being several codicils to a will, some of which were bare repetitions of others, the court declared them to be only substitutions.

Mr. Madocks. — The testator's whole personal estate, being upon mortgage in Norfolk, could not be applied to the charitable uses in Ireland; Attorney General and Meyrick, 2 Vesey, 44. and her will confirming it, and ordering the estate to be sold to pay the 7000*l.* is certainly void. As to the first and second codicils to the will of Elizabeth, the second was made under a variation of circumstances, to enlarge some of the legacies; she considered the first codicil as being to be immediately destroyed after the execution of the second. For this fact, Mr. Madocks offered to read the evidence of Hugh Jackson, the attorney, who prepared the second codicil; which being opposed,

Lord Loughborough said, — If the reading of the evidence of Jackson is opposed here, I think you had better go upon it to the ecclesiastical court, for a repeal of the probate of the codicil. That evidence would have been a ground to exclude the codicil from the probate. The be-1783.

[ *272 ]

CAMPBELL
against
The Earl of RADNOR.

[ *273 ]

quest to the charity is good, being to a charity in Ireland, if it was not made otherwise by the circumstance of the money being upon mortgage on an estate here, which could not be liable to the devise to a charity; but it is too late to take that objection on the will of Elizabeth, she admitting, by the devise to the same uses, that she had personal estate of the testator; she is therefore paying a debt, not giving money that is upon mortgage, but only admitting that she had 7000*l.* personal estate from him; which, as she was executrix and [*] residuary legatee, is admitting a debt to his estate. Although the Court will not marshal assets for a charity, yet it will make the legatees go upon the mortgage. (1)

The cause stood over, and coming on again a few days after, the Lords Commissioners pronounced a decree, that the second codicil was a mere substitution for the first (2); and, therefore, that the defendants were entitled to the legacies given by the [second] codicil only, and, the plaintiffs submitting, the charitable legacies were also directed to be paid.

(1) See Attorney General v. Tomkins, Ambl. 216, 917.

(2) “Declared that the codicil of 14th September, 1768, was to be considered as virtually revoked by the second codicil, dated 22d September, 1777, which was substituted in the room of the said first codicil.” R. L.

Lords Commissioners Ashurst and Hotham.

COOMBES against GIBSON.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 95.)

[Introductory words referable to all testator's worldly estate amounting to a charge of simple contract debts. (2)]

Under such a charge, copyhold lands are liable as well as freehold.

[In this case there was also a copyhold which had not been surrendered; this was also declared liable. (3)]

THE only question, in this case, was, whether in failure of the personal estate, copyhold lands were liable to debts, under the common commencement of a will (1), “As to all my worldly estate, I desire all my just debts should be first paid.”

Mr. Price

(1) The introductory words were these: — “And as for what worldly estate and effects it has pleased God to bless me with, I give and dispose thereof as follows: First, I will and desire that all my just debts and funeral expences be fully paid and satisfied.” The testator then gave unto N. Gibson, one of his executors, two guineas for a ring, and then gave to his sister and another person two several annuities, “to be paid out of the rents and profits of his freehold and copyhold estates, which he thereby charged with payment thereof.” The testator then reciting that he had “lately purchased of R. P. another copyhold estate, which had not yet been surrendered to his use, directed it to be surrendered to the use and behoof of the said N. Gibson and J. Oscliffe, their heirs and assigns for ever, upon the trusts, &c. thereafter mentioned, concerning his other copyhold estates; and he devised all his right, title, estate, &c. in his said copyhold estates to his said two friends, their heirs, &c. upon various express trusts; and he gave the residue of his personal estate, after paying the remainder of the purchase-money, fines, fees, &c. for the unsurrendered copyhold, to his niece S. W. her executors, administrators, and assigns, and appointed Nath. Gibson and Sarah Waring [not J. Oscliffe also] executor and executrix of his will.”

(2) As to cases of this nature where the Court has held such introductory words to amount clearly to a charge, see Trott v. Vernon, Prec. Ch. 430. and S. C., 2 Vern. 708. more especially in Mr. Raithby's edition, Stanger v. Tryon, and Kay v. Townsend, ibid. 709. in Mr. Raithby's note. Hatton v. Nichol, Forrester, 110. Kentish v. Kentish, post. 3 vol. 257. Williams v. Chitty, 3 Ves. 545. Finch v. Hattersley, in 1797, from a MS. note, 7 Ves. 210, &c. A distinction has, however, prevailed where the debts have been directed by a testator to be paid by his executors, and the real estate has been disposed of to others. See Bridges v. Landen, in 1786, before Lord Thurlow, stated 3 Ves. 550. and 7 Ves. 210, 211. Keeling v. Brown, 5 Ves. 359. 361. and Powell v. Robins, 7 Ves. 208.

Mr. Price (for the plaintiff) cited Cloudesly v. Pelham, 1 Vern. 411.— 2 Vern. 229. Alcock v. Sparhawke, 1 Wms. 444.— 2 Vesey, 582. where a surrender was supplied for wife and children, and extended to creditors. Pre. Ch. 449. Harris v. Ingledew, 3 Wms. 96. Hassen v. Hassen, 1776, where there were portions for children, and an annuity for their education, to be paid by the executor: but Lord Bathurst thought the heir liable.

Mr. Richards (for the defendant.)— The copyhold estate is not the natural fund for the payment even of the bond debt of the ancestor. It is too late to argue now, that freehold lands are not charged by these words; but there is no case where copyhold has been held charged, where the testator had freehold. (4) In Tudor v. Anson, 2 Vesey, 582. there was no freehold estate, and therefore the words shewed the testator's intent, which must take effect — but does any such intent appear here? — Here is a freehold estate which is the proper fund. — In Challis v. Casborn, Eq. Abr. 124. Pre. Ch. 407. Lord Chancellor would not supply the defect of a surrender, where there was freehold estate. Here the charge is satisfied by the other devises.

[*] Lord Commissioner Ashurst. — The doctrine is, that where the introductory words make the real estate liable, it shall extend as well to the copyhold, as to the freehold lands. — The freehold is as unnatural a fund for the payment of debts as the copyhold. (5) It is admitted that if there had been no freehold, the copyhold would have been liable. (6) If the freehold had been devised to one person, and the copyhold to another, the freehold might have been first applied. (7) But I am clearly of opinion, that they both are liable.

Lord Commissioner Hotham. — If the copyhold is charged by the will, there is nothing in the case to discharge it. The law follows the testator's intention, to apply the whole real estate to the payment of debts, which covers the copyhold as well as the freehold. (8)

It is observable, that although the direction in the principal case was not that the debts should be paid "by his executors," his executors and trustees were different persons; and that no direct devise at all appears as to the testator's freehold estates.

(3) This point appears by the decree in Reg. Lib. but, it is observable, without the distinction afterwards laid down in Growcock v. Smith, 2 Cox. Ca. Ch. 397. that unsurrendered copyholds shall not be applied before the freehold and the surrendered copyhold have been exhausted. Copyholds which have been surrendered shall be applied with freeholds rateably. Ibid.

(4) But see Growcock v. Smith, 2 Cox. Ca. Ch. 397.

(5) See Aldrich v. Cooper, 8 Ves. 384, 394, 395, &c.

(6) Kentish v. Kentish, post. 3 vol. 257.

(7) See square; et vide Growcock v. Smith, 2 Cox. Ca. Ch. 397.

(8) This report is wholly defective, in not stating the liability of the copyhold which was unsurrendered, as well as those which were surrendered. It seems no distinction was adverted to by the Lords Commissioners, as to the non-application of the unsurrendered copyhold before the freeholds and surrendered copyholds had been exhausted, agreeably to the doctrine in Growcock v. Smith, 2 Cox. Ca. Ch. 397. The decree declared that the deficiency ought to be made good and raised out "of the testator's freehold and copyhold estate devised by his will in manner therein mentioned; and for that purpose that the defect of a surrender of the copyhold estate purchased by him ought to be supplied and made good," &c. R. L.

1783.

COOMES
against GIBSON.

[ *274 ]

1783.

In Court,
Hilary Term,
1782.
Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 21st
March, 1783,
before Lord
Thurlow, —
17 & 24 May,
1783, before the Lords Commissioners.

Vide S. C.
4 Bro. P. C.
319. 8vo. edit.

Lord F. left plate, &c. to be enjoyed as heirlooms, by the persons who should be in possession of his respective houses. A son being born, who was tenant in tail (subject to his father's life estate) the chattels, so left, vested absolutely in him (1), and he dying, vest in his father as his representative, whereby they became liable to the father's creditors. (2) [Vide also the marginal abstract to Toml.
Ed. 4 Bro.
P. C. 319.]

[ *275 ]

The Hon. ANDREW FOLEY and THOMAS FOLEY an Infant, his Son, by the said ANDREW FOLEY, his Father and next Friend, Plaintiffs.

JOHN BURNELL, HENRY KITCHEN, JOHN GRANT, JOHN BATTYE, EDWARD FOLEY, and ROBERT FOLEY, D. D. (since deceased), and ROBERT DALLAS, - - - Defendants.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 340. b.)

THIS bill was filed by Andrew Foley and Thomas Foley his son, praying that the defendants Burnell and Kitchen, late sheriffs of London and Middlesex, might deliver up plate taken by them in execution, in the house of Edward Foley, in Portland Place, in the county of Middlesex, and for his debt, at the suit of Grant, who had assigned to Dallas and Battie, annuitants of Lord Foley and Edward Foley, the defendants in the cause, and that they might be enjoined from selling the same upon the following case:—The late Lord Foley, being seised in fee of Foley-House, in St. Mary-le-bone, of a house at Stoke, and also of a house at Witley, by will bearing date 19 June, 1777, gave and devised the house at Stoke to the defendant, Dr. Robert Foley, and Abraham Turner (since deceased), their executors, administrators, and assigns, as trustees, for the term of 101 years, without impeachment of waste, [*] remainder to the use of Edward Foley, his second son for life, remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to trustees for a term to raise a jointure for the wife of Edward, remainder to other trustees for a term to raise portions for younger children, remainder to his first and other sons; remainder to plaintiff Andrew for life, with like remainders to preserve contingent remainders, and raise portions; remainder to his first and other sons, with remainders over; he devised Foley House and Witley to the use of his other children; he also bequeathed, “all the standards, fixtures, “household goods, implements of household, furniture and pictures, “gold and silver plate, china, porcelain, glass, statues, busts, library, “and books, which should be at Stoke, Witley or Foley House, to be “held and enjoyed by the several persons, who, from time to time, “should respectively and successively be entitled to the use and possession “of the same houses respectively, as, and in the nature of heir-looms, to “be annexed, and go along with such houses respectively for ever (3); “but it was his will and intention that one of the services of table “plate, late belonging to Thomas Lord Foley, should go to, and be

(1) Vide S. P. Vaughan v. Burslem, post. 3 vol. 101. and Carr v. Lord Errol, 14 Ves. 478.

(2) Lord Foley's object was to prevent the creditors of his sons from having any resort to the property in question: but as this was personalty, attempted to be limited by way of entail, the law vested it absolutely in the sons, and it therefore “remained subject to all the incidents of property.” Vide per Lord Eldon C. in Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. 434. and see that case from 429. and Carr v. Lord Errol, 14 Ves. 478. As to what things have been deemed heir-looms, et c. contra, &c. besides the cases cited above, see Boon v. Cornforth, 2 Ves. 277, &c. Wyth v. Blackman, 1 Ves. 196. 202. Supplement, 110. Carr v. Lord Errol, 14 Ves. 478, &c. with the cases there cited.

Upon the limitations of the will in the principal case, the distinction attempted by Lord Com. Ashurst, &c. see in the case of L. Lincoln v. D. Newcastle, on Appeal in Dom. Proc. 12 Ves. 225. 233, 234, &c.

(3) See 12 Ves. 233, 234.

“enjoyed

“ enjoyed by, the possessor of Witley, and the other to the possessor of Stoke for the time being, and appointed Andrew Foley, Lord Clanbrassil, Mary Foley, Ann Winnington, Robert Foley, and Abraham Turner, executors, and executrixes of his said will.” By a codicil, 17 September, 1777, the testator substituted the plaintiff Andrew Foley, as a trustee, in the room of Abraham Turner deceased. The testator died without revoking the will, otherwise than by the codicil, and Robert Foley (since deceased), and the plaintiff Andrew proved the will; Robert and Andrew permitted Edward to take possession of the service of plate at Stoke, and he removed it to his house in town, where it was taken in execution. The bill further stated, that Edward Foley was only tenant for life of Stoke, and had no son born, that Andrew is a remainder-man for life, and that the plaintiff Thomas, his son, the first remainder-man in tail, now in esse, and prayed that the plate might be restored to the house at Stoke, and that Edward might give an inventory and security for its preservation.

1789.

FOLEY
against BUANELL

The cause was argued in Hilary Term, 1782.

Mr. Price, Mr. Kenyon, and Mr. Hollist, argued for the plaintiffs, — that they had such interests as entitled them to come for a remedy into this court (4) immediately upon the death of Lord [*] Foley, the property in the plate vested in the executors, but, upon their assent (5) to the legacy, the property vested in Edward, the first taker for life, and was divested out of the trustees; that though Edward had such a vested property, it was qualified; he had not such a right as would make the plate liable to an execution for his debt, for there were subsequent rights to the plate in specie, yet these were not such as to entitle their owners to bring actions at law, the executors and remainder-men must, therefore, come into this court for their remedy. This is the proper jurisdiction, where parties are entitled to the property in specie. (4) The Duke of Somerset v. Cookson, 3 Wms. 390. If Edward had contracted to sell the plate, the remedy must be here, the plaintiffs must have filed a bill to prevent the sale, to restore the goods to the house, and to give security for their production to the remainder-man. Bracken v. Bentley, 1 Ch. Rep. 110.; Hart v. Hart, 1 Ch. Rep. 260.; in Cadogan v. Kennet, Cowp. 432. relative to the goods settled upon the marriage of Lord Mountford, the trustees had the legal property, and therefore recovered; but, in this case, they could not have supported an action or have applied to the Court to set aside the execution.

[ *276 ]

Mr. Thompson (for the defendant, Edward Foley). — Edward Foley had a right to remove the plate, the use was not restrained to Stoke. It is no answer to the plaintiffs, that an action would lie at law, wherein they might recover damages; when the damages were recovered, it would be very difficult to apportion them. If a term is given to one for life, with remainder over, the executor assents partially. (6) If, in this case, the assent is total, the property was out of the executors; and it is a question, whether any other person could support the action. Andrew could not declare as for his goods. Edward is equally stopped.

(4) That, in proper cases, there is a jurisdiction in equity for the specific delivery of chattels personal, and especially of heir-looms, see E. Macclesfield v. Davis, 3 Ves. & B. 16.

(5) Upon the mere point of assent, the law was so settled in this case in Dom. Proc. Vide 4 Bro. P. C. 54. octavo edition, in connection with the above more material branch. Ibid. 319.

(6) Determined contra in Dom. Proc. — That the assent to the first devisee is an assent also to the interest of the person in remainder. 4 Bro. P. C. 54. octavo edition.

for,

1789.

Foley
against
BURNELL.

[ *277 ]

for, if the goods are his, the sheriffs are justified in taking them. Neither the remainder-man nor his son has any present interest. This Court, therefore, which loves specific justice, will take the property out of the hands of the sheriffs.

Mr. Solicitor General, Mr. Selwyn, and Mr. Walker, for the defendants Dallas and the sheriffs.

The goods in the houses are to go with them as heir-looms; the two sets of plate are to be enjoyed by the owners of Stoke and [*] Witley, but are not annexed to the houses; and this set, in fact, was not at Stoke, at the decease of the testator. In Trafford v. Trafford, 3 Atk. 347. the personal estate was held not to go with the real, for want of words to annex it; in this case, such words are also wanting. Edward Foley has the use of the goods for life, the creditors are therefore entitled to that use, which, of itself, is of considerable value, 16l. per cent. per annum is paid for the use of plate; if the executors had the property, they had assented to the use only; therefore they must bring trover or detinue. It is objected that detinue could not bring the plate back if sold, — no more could a decree here. In this case there is a legal remedy. Lord Mountford's case does not apply — that was in a court of law; there the house was settled, together with the furniture, (which was scheduled,) upon the marriage. Lord Mansfield considered the goods so settled and scheduled as vested in the trustees, and therefore held that they could support the action. The cases cited have been between the heir and executors, or the former possessor and remainder-man; the present is between a remainder-man and his creditors.

Lord Chancellor. — If the property was in the trustees, and they refused to assert their legal right, any person, ever so remotely interested, might come here to compel the trustees to assert their legal property; here they come to make Edward a trustee, to show that he has abused his trust, and that it ought to be reposed in others, for the persons interested. I do not know how to make him a trustee, for he seems to have both the legal and equitable property.

Mr. Price (in reply) cited Mathew Manning's case, 8 Co. 94.

[ *278 ]

Lord Chancellor. — The whole prayer of the bill is, that the goods be returned in specie to Stoke House, to the possession of Edward Foley, and that an inventory of them should be taken and delivered to the proper parties. This would have been ordered, as a thing of course, if an account had been taken.(7) The goods would have been delivered to the first taker, and an inventory would have been taken of them, the use of which would be, that it would make the first taker liable when the remainder should take place. The question puts the Court upon discovering what interest the first taker and the remainder-man have. The goods are to be held and enjoyed by the persons who should [*] have the houses respectively; one set of the plate to go to and be enjoyed by the possessor of Stoke, for the time being. I mean to state this as a matter of precedent. The creditors must come here as creditors. If they obtain this plate, they must succeed in applying it differently from the testator's intention. As to Edward's having an apparent property, I lay that out of the case, because it is a clear proposition, that the law does endure that, as where the property is in trustees, and the use of it given to the party, the execution would be bad, the party holding under the trustees in whom the legal property is, and there being only an equitable interest in the first taker. Then it is a material question, whether this clause

(7) See E. Macclesfield v. Davis, 3 Ves. & B. 16.

1783.

Foley
against Burdell

in the will is to be construed as only directory, as in Lord Mountford's case, where the use only was to go to the first taker. It is clear that the creditor of the trustee taking the goods in execution would have himself been converted into a trustee. If a trustee had himself the use of a specific chattel during his life, the equitable property would bind the legal. This differs from that — this must be interpreted, a devise of personalty to A. for life, remainder over to persons who would have a springing use. In law it vests in such taker. When the executors deliver the chattel, it vests in the taker for life, and the estate of the executor is divested. (8) If a term be devised, and the executor deliver the term to the first taker, the remainder-man, when entitled, might bring an ejectment. When the party becomes entitled, he may bring the action. Here the legal interest vests in Edward Foley, and the subsequent interests are legal interests to be carried into execution when they arise. Then the question is, whether the first taker is answerable to the persons who would be entitled to the springing uses, so that they can insist that the goods shall be placed in other hands, for the use of such future takers. Suppose the case of a real estate descending to the heir at law, subject to a springing use, timber falling would go to the heir at law. Suppose a chattel given to one for life, remainder in tail, which would be equivalent to a fee in the remainder-man, the person having such a springing interest might come here to prevent the destruction of the subject; but that is to prevent the use from going beyond the intent of the testator. But the question here is, whether the goods being liable in this way, is going beyond the intention. He might have let this property together with the house. If I can take it away, it is entitling the persons having such future claims, to take from him the [*] use contrary to the testator's intention. The difficulty arises hence, that the testator, instead of vesting the property in the trustees, has vested it in Edward Foley, subject to the springing uses. There is a very strong principle of justice for preserving these goods for the benefit of the persons entitled, if I can so secure them.

[ *279 ]

This cause stood for judgment, 21 March, 1783.

Lord Chancellor. — This cause comes to a shorter end than was expected. The bill was filed upon a supposition that the plate was not liable to an execution, or that the trustees would have a right to secure the eventual property of it, even if they should be obliged to part with the temporary possession. The plate was ordered to be used with the house at Stoke, and was removed from thence to town, where it was taken in execution; the plaintiffs insist it ought not to be sold, and I had gone the length of persuading myself, that this was the justice of the case, upon the authority of Trafford v. Trafford, 3 Atk. 347. The cases as to tenant for life giving security for the goods have been over-ruled, and the Court now demands only an inventory, which is more equal justice; as there ought to be danger in order to require security. But upon looking over the evidence, I find that Edward Foley had a son born in 1779, who died soon after (in fourteen days), so that the whole interest vested in that child, and in Edward as administrator to him. — Therefore the bill must be dismissed.

The decree not being satisfactory to the parties, as being upon a new point not made at the bar, a rehearing was applied for, in order to let in the new point, that although such son was born, yet as he did not live to come into possession of the house at Stoke, the property of the chattels left as heir-looms did not vest in such son, and consequently could not vest in the father as his representative.

(8) See 4 Bro. P. C. 54. Teml. edit.

1783.

FOLLY
against BURNELL.

[ *280 ]

It came on before the Lords Commissioners, 24 May, 1783.

Mr. Price, Mr. Kenyon, Mr. Poole, and Mr. Hollist, argued for the plaintiff, that it was too late now, and had been so for a century past, to assert that personal property may not be limited [*] over, till a person comes into esse who would be tenant in tail.— This point had been established in Massenburgh v. Ash, 1 Vern. 234. 304. Sabbarton v. Sabbarton, Forrester, 55. 245. recognised in Lady Catherine Pelham v. Gregory, 5 Brown's Parlt. Cases, 435. (9) — That the cases went further, and shewed the vesting of the chattel-interest might be suspended, not only to the birth of the son, but till he should attain his age of 21, or come into possession, as appears from Trafford v. Trafford, 3 Atk. 347. and Levison v. Grosvenor, in Barnardiston, 54. (10), where, at the bottom of p. 62. the line of descent is pointed out, and by the † Duke of Bridgewater

† This case being very imperfectly stated in Mr. Vesey's Report of it, the following accurate statement of it is added.

Duke of Bridgewater, an infant, v. Richard Littleton, Esq. and Rachel Dutchess of Bridgewater, his wife, Egerton and others.

January 29th and 1st February, 1750.

Bill states the settlement 18th and 19th July 1722, on the marriage of Scroop, Duke of Bridgewater, plaintiff's father, with the defendant the Dutchess, the plaintiff's mother, by which pin-money was provided for the wife, and a term created for securing it and the settlement in the usual way of strict settlement. January 28th, 1744, the Duke, plaintiff's father, died and left two sons, John Lord Brackley, and plaintiff and three daughters. By will 5th of February, 1742, the Duke devised his capital house, in Cleveland Court, wherein he then dwelt, and the stables and coach-houses thereto belonging, and all his leasehold houses, stables and coach-houses adjoining to his capital messuage, with their appurtenances, and also the use of his pictures, household goods and furniture in the said house, and the use of all his plate both in town and country, to his wife the defendant the Dutchess of Bridgewater, during her widowhood, and desired his executors to cause an inventory to be taken of the same; but declared it to be his will, that when his eldest son for the time being should have attained his age of 21 years, or be married, he should (in case he desired the same, and gave six months' notice in writing to the wife) have the said houses, pictures, household goods, furniture and plate, as also his coach-houses and stables, for his own use, paying to the wife 400*l.* a year during her widowhood. He desired that all his books both in town and country should be deemed and taken as heir-looms; and should go to such person as should be entitled to the possession of his capital mansion-house at Ashridge, by virtue of the limitations, in his settlement; and he gave the residue of his personal estate to his son Lord Brackley. December 1745, the Dutchess intermarried with the defendant Littleton, and forfeited the devise of the house in Cleveland Court, &c. February 1747, John Duke of Bridgewater died under 21, intestate, and the defendant, the Dutchess administered. The defendants Littleton and the Dutchess and Lady Diana Egerton, one of the daughters, by their answer, submit whether as the devise to the Dutchess during her widowhood, of the capital messuage, pictures, &c. became void on her marriage with the defendant Littleton, such part thereof as was personal ought not to be considered as part of the personal estate of Duke Scroop, undisposed of by him, or became part of the residue of his personal estate. They insist that the books did not pass to the plaintiff, with the capital house, as heir-looms, but that Duke John being tenant in tail in possession, took an absolute interest in the books, and he dying intestate, they ought to be distributed.

Lord Chancellor declared that the said testator's books both in town and country, mentioned in his will, were, according to the events that had then happened, to be considered as part of the personal estate of the said John late Duke of Bridgewater, and his Lordship also declared that the said John Duke of Bridgewater dying under the age of 21 years, and unmarried, and the plaintiff, being then the eldest son of the said Scroop, late Duke of Bridgewater for the time being, would, when he should attain his age of 21 years, or be married, and on giving notice of his desire for that purpose pursuant to the will of his said father, be entitled to the said testator's houses, coach-houses and stables, with the appurtenances in Cleveland Court, and also to the pictures, household goods and

(9) 3 Bro. P. C. 204. octavo edit.

(10) See post. 3 vol. 106., per Lord Chancellor, and per Lord Eldon, 12 Ves. 233. et seq.

water v. Egerton, 2 Vesey, 121, where it was suspended till the attaining 21, and giving six months' notice, [*] that the law being thus, reduced the present case to a question of intention, which was, not that it should vest on the birth of a son, which would have made all the subsequent uses void, or that it should vest in any particular person, but in such person only as should come into possession of the estate, of which this chattel real was by the will constituted a member. The certainty of the person to take was therefore suspended until it appeared by the event, who suited the description (11); and, as if Lord Foley had given a real estate to Edward for life, and then to such person as should come into the possession of Stoke, the devise had been legal, and the freehold had been, in the mean while, in the heir at law; so, here, in the case of the personal estate, the property in the mean time would be in the executor. — The construction here is large enough for this purpose — 'Tis given to Edward whilst in possession; who is to take next being uncertain till shewn by the event, but this suspension is not contrary to law, the property is in gremio legis. — This gives effect to all the words of the will, which are very clear, and distinguishable from those in Lady Catherine Pelham v. Gregory. The remainders to Andrew and his son are contingent interests. In all such cases this court is the only competent jurisdiction, and will carry the uses into execution as far as the law will permit.

1783.

FOLLY
against BURNELL.

[*281]

Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Selwyn, Mr. Walker, Mr. Scott, and Mr. Harvey, argued for the creditors and the sheriffs. — First, As to [*] the remedy — that this being an absolute gift to Edward Foley, for life, with remainder to his son, and the property being in the possession of the father, nobody could come here, there being no trust, and Andrew and his son having no present interest, but mere future contingent claims, on account of which the Court, even in the case of real estate, would not entertain any jurisdiction. Hart v. Hart, Ch. Rep. 260. — Second, As to the limitation. — If the plate vested in the son absolutely, there is an end of the question. — This was a gift to Edward, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, remainder to Andrew and his first and other sons — in which case, by Pelham v. Gregory (12), the property vests on the birth of the son. — They did not deny that property may be so limited as to take place on a contingency during a life in being, or within 21 years after, nor that the character of heir-looms might be superinduced upon personal chattels, by compelling the tenant for life to give security. — But the question here is, whether it is extended further than the common rule, that the whole vested in the son tenant in tail. — The case in Fitzgibbons, 314. of the Attorney General at the relation of the Goldsmith's Company v. Hall, proves that the words which give an estate tail in the real estate, must give the absolute interest in the personalty. The prinfurniture in the said houses, and also to the said testator's plate mentioned in his said will: but that the defendant the Dutchess of Bridgewater, having married again, was not entitled to the 400*l.* a year mentioned in the said testator's will, or any part thereof: and his Lordship further declared, that until the plaintiff the Duke of Bridgewater should attain his age of 21 years or be married, and give such notice of his desire as aforesaid, the rents and profits which had accrued or should accrue, or be made of the said houses, with the appurtenances and furniture, from the time of the defendant the Dutchess's second marriage, until the time that the plaintiff should attain his said age of 21 years, or be married, and give such notice of his desire as aforesaid, ought to be considered as falling into the residuum of the testator's real and personal estates respectively.

[*282]

(11) See per Lord Eldon, in Ly. Lincoln v. D. Newcastle, in Dom. Proc. 12 Ves. 228, 229, 233, 234, &c.

(12) 5 Bro. P. C. 204. octavo edit. (5 vol. 435. folio.)

1783.

FOLEY
against
BURNELL.

[ *283 ]

principal reliance of the plaintiffs is on Gower v. Grosvenor, in Barnardiston, and Trafford v. Trafford. The first of these was, as far as they can by law (13), and the only matter decided was, that it was not the property of the tenant for life. And Lord Hardwicke says, "If the property was limited over after an estate tail, it would vest in the person who took the estate tail." Lord Hardwicke also laid particular stress on the words, as far as the law will permit. He said they shewed there was a future act to be done, that the Court would direct the chattels to go as far as the law would allow — but here is no such direction, nothing executory, or any similar words. Trafford v. Trafford is a very different case from this. — It was to the person being 21, who should be in possession of the real estate, as long as the law would permit. — The suit was brought by a tenant in tail not in possession, and Lord Hardwicke determined it upon the words of the will, considering them as executory, and therefore declared them to be heir-looms as long as they might be, and that the plaintiff would be entitled to them at 21. Much has been said about the intent of the testator — he has [*] expressed too ardent an intention, and although the Court will aid the intention whilst within the rule of law, it will not where he endeavours to do what the law will not permit — Lord Foley would give a more durable estate in the chattels than in the real estate, for the tenant for life and the remainder-man in tail might bar the estate by recovery, but, as the present case is argued, they could not dispose of the personal chattels, and if they were to endeavour to sell by joining, yet if the remainder-man should die in the lifetime of the tenant for life, the estate would go one way, and the chattels another, which Lord Foley himself could never possibly intend. As, on the contrary, he must have intended, that whoever could convey the real estate should be able to dispose of the chattels, which is the same as that whenever a tenancy in tail vested in the real estate, a tenancy in tail should also vest in the chattels, and then the law says, that the absolute interest is vested by law, not by the act of the party, the disability of the tenant in tail is under of disposing of the real estate during his minority not preventing the law from disposing of the personal.

[ *284 ]

Lord Loughborough. — It is very desirable that where a point seems material it should be gone into; this was, therefore, a very proper subject for a re-hearing, but I am of opinion that the Lord Chancellor's judgment was perfectly right and correct. (14) The intention ascribed to the will by the plaintiffs is not against any rule of law. Lord Foley might have given the personal property in such a way as to carry that intention into execution. (15) The only question is, whether this intention appears clearly upon the face of the will. — The words are, "as and in the nature of heir-looms," and "that one of the services of plate should go to, and be enjoyed by, the possessor of Witley, and the other to the possessor of Stoke." Upon these words the plaintiff's counsel contend, that it is clear it shall not vest in a son of Edward Foley, during the life of Edward. It is clear it shall not vest in Edward, but whether it can vest during his life is the question. They have argued what would be the intention as to a son who should be born and live a day; clearly this is a fallacious mode of reasoning, you are not to reason upon subsequent events. It is clear he meant to annex the chattels to the real estate as heir-looms; all beyond that is inference: that it should vest in the son so as to go to his father would not [*] have been the intent of (13) These words make no difference, and are mere surplusage. See in Vaughan v. Burslem, post. 3 vol. 106. 12 Ves. 235, &c. 14 Ves. 478, &c.

(14) And it was affirmed in Dom. Proc. in 1785. 4 Bro. P. C. 319. octavo edit.

(15) See 12 Ves. 228, 229.

1783.

Foley
against Burnell.

Lord Foley. — But the Court cannot decree upon that construction; you must make the construction perfect. If it does not vest in this case, neither would it in a son attaining 21, in the life of the father. I do not see it clear that Lord Foley could have an idea of a case in which the estate might be sold, and yet the plate remain; but the son, attaining his age of 21, might, with the consent of the father, sell the estate; if that case had been stated to Lord Foley, he would have said, let them take the plate with the estate; I think, in that event, he would have given it so, though if the present case had been stated, he would not have followed the same construction. But it is sufficient for the present purpose that the intent is not clear. I cannot give it effect as an implied intent, for every implied intent must be free from doubt. But supposing for a moment this to be his intent. — It is argued, that from his anxiety to protect this property, he has given a sufficient hint to the Court to carry on the limitation. — Will not any hint which shall go to one case go to another? Suppose a son living a day after the death of the father, would not the same argument have gone in favour of Andrew against the mother? — Then consider what a series of directions the Court must give in a case where there is nothing clear. — You must prevent its vesting so as to go to the father or a stranger, yet not prevent its vesting at 21, for all this might have been done with precise words; therefore the Court can go no further than the clear devise. The legal consequence is, that an event has happened which has separated the chattels from the real; the real estate will go on in the line of the devise till some one shall be able to suffer a recovery; the personal must go to the first taker in tail. The rule of law being admitted, the rules of construction are no farther necessary, than in all cases upon wills, where they apply very little. In Pelham v. Gregory, [3 Bro. P. C. 204. octavo ed. and 5 vol. 435. folio,] and every case where there are terms and real estate, the terms vesting in infant tenants in tail in reversion is always against the intention of the testator; the same general argument which has been applied here, was made use of in those cases. The Court cannot imply an intent not clearly expressed, it would be to make, not to construe, a will, we should be forming a will upon probability only. The construction must be consistent, and upon an apparent ground. The cases that have been cited, are Levison v. Grosvenor (16), and Trafford v. Trafford, they are both very inaccurately reported. In Levison v. Grosvenor, the decision was no more than that the [*] personal property to go as heir-looms, was not part of the property of Sir Thomas Grosvenor. The other was only an incidental point: it was argued that Sir Thomas was heir-male of the family: Lord Hardwicke only said, the words, taken together, shewed that some person not in esse was in view, he does not throw out that he should not have thought them vested in a son of Sir Thomas or Sir Richard; I do not apprehend he thought the words, as far as the law will allow, extended the power. (17) In Trafford v. Trafford, it was clear the plaintiffs should not take during the infancy; the question was whether Sigismund did not suit the description of the person who was to take the heir-looms as well as the residue. Lord Hardwicke held the claim to apply to different persons: when it was found who was to take, it was agreed he was not to take till 21, there was no question upon that part of the case. Both the cases prove no more than that the will might be such that the first taker should not take the whole. A tenant in tail having come into esse, the personal property vested in him, and through him in the father.

[ *285 ]

(16) See per Lord Thurlow, post. 3 vol. 106.

(17) And they are held clearly not to do so. Vide 3 vol. 106. and 12 Ves. 235, &c. 14 Ves. 478, &c.

Ashhurst,

1783.

FOLKY
against
BURNELL.

Ashhurst, Lord Commissioner. — The general rule is, that where the chattel interest comes to one who would be tenant in tail of land, the limitations over are void. — There is also another rule that the interest may be so given as not to vest absolutely in the first taker. Where the testator leaves it to the Court to make the conveyance (18), the Court will protect the property as far as may be; here, he has taken upon him to be his own conveyancer. The chattels are to accompany the estate. — When a tenant in tail comes into esse it must vest; otherwise the absurdity must happen of the personal estate being tied up longer than the real. We can only adopt so much of the testator's intent as was legal. It must follow the rule of law; and a person becoming tenant in tail must have the absolute interest in the personal property.

Hotham, Lord Commissioner. — Wherever the intention of the testator comes under discussion, the Court desires to carry it into execution as far as possible; but if it should be so carried into execution against the rules of law, every thing would be afloat. The testator intended his plate should go to every one who came into possession of the estate; but that is impracticable, because it is absurd to put the personal estate into a better situation than the real. If the remainder-man could not have [*] the property at 21, it would be impossible to point out when he should have it, if not at his birth. In Gower v. Gower, [Barnard. 54.] Lord Hardwicke expressed a very anxious wish to carry the intent into execution, but says, it must be agreeable to the rule of law. This was a vested interest in Edward Foley's son, and went to his father.

Decree affirmed, and the original bill dismissed.

[ *286 ]

From this decree there was an appeal to the House of Lords, which was heard on the 12 & 13 July, 1784, and the following question was put to the judges; whether Edward Foley had such an interest in the plate in question as rendered the same liable to an execution, at the suit of the creditors, or whether the plaintiff had any such interest therein as barred such execution? And the judges differing in opinion, they were heard seriatim thereupon, on the 27 April, 1785, when the House affirmed the decretal order of the Lords Commissioners. [See 4 Bro. P. C. 319. octavo edition.]

An action of detinue was afterwards brought in order to try this question again, in B. R., and a case reserved which was brought on in Easter, 1786; but the Court refused to hear an argument on a case which had been decided in the House of Lords. Upon a writ of error being brought in the Exchequer Chamber, that Court affirmed the judgment without hearing any new argument on a similar reason; and the House of Lords, on a writ of error there, affirmed that judgment also without argument. (19)

(18) The distinction here attempted by Lord Commissioner Ashhurst, between articles of covenant, and a will where as is said “The testator takes upon himself to be his own conveyancer,” though supported by Lord Loughborough C. in the D. Newcastle v. C. of Lincoln, 3 Ves. 387. 397, 398. gave much dissatisfaction to the great Judges who sat upon the Appeal in Dom. Proc. in that case. See per Lord Ellenborough C. J. and Lord Eldon, 12 Ves. 225. 227, et seq. 235, &c. It seems from what Lord Eldon says, ibid. 235., that such a distinction cannot now prevail: so that the quære made by Mr. Vesey, in Carr v. Lord Errol, 14 Ves. 478., may imply no more than that the point was noticed.

(19) It seems there must have been much argument by the counsel on both sides on some most material points unnoticed by Mr. Brown. See per Lord Eldon in the D. Newcastle's case, in Dom. Proc. 12 Ves. 233, 234. Since, however, the principal case itself underwent so much discussion in the House of Lords, where the arguments are very well reported, and since it has been so much commented upon in the subsequent cases referred to by the present Editor's notes, Mr. Brown's omission seems immaterial.

1783.

[*] TRINITY TERM,

[ *287 ]

23 Geo. 3. 1783.

PRIDEAUX against PRIDEAUX.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 638.)

Lords Commissioners, Lord Loughborough, Ashhurst, Hotham.

[S. C. 1 Cox, Ca. Ch. 34.]

MR. PRICE moved, that the biddings should be opened, upon the several lots mentioned in the notice, and the sale set aside upon the ground of inadequacy of price, and also of irregularity in the exposure to sale, &c. The bill had been filed by small legatees for their legacies. The decree was, that the personal estate should be first applied to the payment of debts and legacies; and, if there was a deficiency, that such part of the real estate as should be necessary should be sold to make it up. — Without any [complete] account taken of the personal estate (1), or any application, on the part of creditors, that appeared, and the mortgagee expressly disavowing it, the premises were advertised for sale, and sold at very inadequate prices, viz. an estate of 900*l.* per annum for 12,000*l.* — an advowson for one year's purchase — and other lots at equally small prices. — The purchasers paid their money into the bank, and got the decree inrolled, and the Master's report confirmed as early as possible. Mr. Price cited several cases; one of Gower v. Gower (3), another of Lord Hallifax's estate, where biddings had been opened, merely on the inadequacy of price. The motion was opposed by Mr. Kenyon, Mr. Arden, Mr. Hardinge, and Mr. Scott, for the several purchasers, on the ground of inconvenience that arises to purchasers at the Master's chambers, from the facility of opening biddings — that the difference of price might arise from the different states

[Sales in the Master's office set aside after confirmation of the Report, as being thought irregular before the amount of the personal estate had been ascertained (1): the Court disclaiming doing so from the mere inadequacy of price. (2) This order, however, was afterwards reversed.]

(1) This decision was against the practice of the Court, and was ultimately reversed by Lord Thurlow, because it was the uniform custom in all the Master's offices to proceed to a sale of real estates under the usual direction, when it was merely presumed that the personalty would not answer the purposes; that purchasers in the Master's offices had nothing to do with the fact, whether the personal estate might or not ultimately prove sufficient, if the Master had proceeded to a sale under the order of the Court; and could never be safe, even after confirmation, if the order of the Lords Commissioners was to stand. That it was impossible the order which existed (and which was not to open the biddings, but to set aside the sale) could be made on the ground of inadequacy of price; and indeed that was disclaimed by the Court. See inter alia the facts stated by the present Lord Redesdale in Watson v. Birch, 2 Ves. jun. 53.

(2) The principle which exists is a sound one, and was formed by Lord Thurlow upon the principle of the great case of Gower v. Gower (above cited) on the one hand, and the safety of purchasers on the other; namely, that although a purchase in the Master's office may be set aside, even after confirmation, where there has been fraud or misconduct in the purchaser, or such fraudulent negligence in another party as makes it unconscientious in a purchaser to take advantage of it; the Court will not so interfere under other circumstances, such as general negligence, surprise, inadequacy of price, &c. &c. Vide Scott v. Nesbitt, per Lord Thurlow, post. 3 vol. 475. Per Lord Eldon, in Wren v. Kirton, 8 Ves. 502. Morrice v. Ep. Durham, 11 Ves. 57. and White v. Wilson, 14 Ves. 151, 152, 153.

(3) Gower v. Gower was decided first by Lord Northington. See the report from his Lordship's MSS. 2 Eden, Ca. Ch. 348. That order was affirmed in Dom. Proc. Vide 6 Bro. P. C. 306. octavo edit. and p. 148. folio edit. See further 2 Eden, 356, and 2 Ves. jun. 54.

1783.

PRIDEAUX
against PRIDEAUX.
 [ *288 ]

of war, when the sales were made, and of peace now, when the application came to the court; and that the irregularities were matters to which the purchasers were strangers, and of which they could not avail themselves to get rid of their bargains, if they turned out bad ones.

[*] Lord Loughborough. (4) — The decree was perfectly right, but in the execution of it, it was necessary to take an account of the personal estate of the late Sir [John] Prideaux, come to the hands of his widow and executrix, and of her personal estate, in the hands of her executor, which were first to be applied. The charges allowed to exhaust these were shocking. One creditor (Stokes the steward) set up all the money he had received on account, as presents, and claimed his whole bill. — The sale was ordered in March, 1781, without the application of a single creditor, and at the most disadvantageous time; so that justice has not been done to the unborn children who have claims on the estate, and vast bargains made on the part of the purchasers, to such an amount that, if it was between party and party, it would perhaps entitle the vendor to relief. In the case of Lord Gower's estates, the sales were to persons who were neighbours, and knew much more of the value of the estates than the family. The neglect which appears here shews much less knowledge of the value in this case than there was in that. I do not go therefore on the inadequacy of the value only, but upon the estate's being sold at a period when it should not have been sold, the mortgagor disavowing any application, and the reports not having been made, which ought to have been, before the sale. The order for sale, therefore, and all the proceedings under it, must be set aside. The money paid in must be repaid, with interest, and the costs of the purchasers.

Ashhurst, Lord Commissioner. — No account has been taken of the personal estate, which ought to have been previous to the sale. It is an ingredient in this case, that there is a gross inequality in point of price, but I do not rely upon that.

Hotham, Lord Commissioner. — I am of the same opinion. On a ground of policy, the Court ought to be very slow in opening biddings, as much property is sold under the authority of the Court; but justice must not give way to policy. The circumstances of this case are so strong, as to make it difficult for any abilities to get the better of them, and these cases must be, in a great measure, decided upon their particular circumstances, as there is no principle that will pervade them all, unless the law of the Court were that we could in no case get at a bidding. This case, of all others, is that which would demand the interposition of the Court.

[*] Order for the sale, &c. set aside; but as the Lords Commissioners were not perfectly agreed upon the form of the order, the motion stood over. (5)

This order was afterwards discharged by Lord Thurlow, with costs. (6)

(4) Some more of the particulars of Lord Loughborough's statement of the case appear in Mr. Cox's Report. It is rather curious that Mr. Brown seems to have copied the other parts of Mr. Cox's note (rather inaccurately too), omitting Lord Loughborough's judgment as there given, and also the order actually drawn up, there stated. 1 Cox, 36.

(5) The application made to the Court was, that the several sales of lots 1. 5, 6, & 7. might be wholly set aside for irregularity; or otherwise that the several biddings for such respective lots might be opened; the defendant the Earl of Lisburn undertaking to bid several sums, specified, for such respective lots. R. L. The order drawn up was as follows. — “ The Court being of opinion, that the said estates have been sold prematurely, “ their Lordships do order that the respective biddings for the said estates, and the orders “ for confirming the same, be set aside, and the money be paid back to the purchasers; “ and the Master is to compute interest at 5l. per cent. thereon; and the Master is to “ take an account of all costs, charges, and expences, of every kind that the purchasers “ have been put to; and such interests and costs are to be paid to the purchasers out of “ the cash in the Bank, on account of rents and profits.” 1 Cox, 36. and Reg. Lib.

(6) Vide in Watson v. Birch, 2 Ves. jun. 53. et antea, note (2).

[ *289 ]

1783.

ALURED PINCKE, Esq. only Son and Heir at Law, and also the only acting Executor of ELIZABETH PINCKE, Widow, deceased, who was one of the Co-heiresses at Law of ELIZABETH HANDASYDE, Widow, deceased, and ANN THORNYCROFT, Spinster, the other Co-heiress at Law of the said ELIZABETH HANDASYDE, Plaintiffs.

EDWARD THORNYCROFT, Esq. only Son and Heir at Law, and also Devisee and sole Executor of HENSHAW THORNYCROFT, Esq. deceased, who was the Devisee, and sole Executor of the said ELIZABETH HANDASYDE, deceased, and others, Defendants.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 399.)

ELIZABETH Handasyde, the wife of the late General Handasyde, was in her life-time seised of several estates in tail, under the marriage-settlement of her father, Sir John Thornycroft, deceased, with remainder to Sir John Thornycroft, junior, as heir to Sir John Thornycroft, the elder, in fee. Sir John Thornycroft, the son, by a will made in 1739, devised all his estates to Henry Foster, in fee. This will was contested by Mrs. Handasyde, as heir at law to the testator, and the suit compromised. On which Foster conveyed by deed all his claims to the late General Handasyde, and Mrs. Handasyde, in fee. Mrs. Handasyde survived the General, and made her will, dated 24th April, 1772, in which, among other estates, she gave her "estate and manor of Stockwell, in the parish of Lambeth, in county of Surry, and all thereunto belonging," to Henshaw Thornycroft, father of the defendant, and his heirs male; she also made Henshaw Thornycroft executor. — She died in 1772, leaving the plaintiffs her heirs at law. — Among the estates to which Mrs. Handasyde was entitled under the settlement, was [*] one situate in the parish of St. Mary Newington, in the county of Surry, but which is not within the manor of Stockwell. — Of this, among the other estates, Henshaw Thornycroft took possession, and in Hilary term, 1773, with his wife, levied a fine, and suffered a recovery, in order to bar the estate tail. The title-deeds of the estates were also in his hands, as executor of Mrs. Handasyde. — Elizabeth Pincke (since deceased), and Ann Thornycroft, filed their bill, praying a discovery of deeds relative to the estates, and also of what estates Mrs. Handasyde died seised, which did not pass by her will; and about January, 1778, brought an ejectment against Goater, the tenant of the estate in St. Mary Lincoln's Inn Hall, 2d July 1783. Lords Commissioners, Lord Loughborough, Ashurst, Hotham.

[S.C. Reversed on appeal in Dom. Proc. 4 Bro. P. C. 92. (octavo edit.) Quod vide.]

Filing a bill for equitable relief, [in a matter of equitable jurisdiction,] is equivalent to bringing an action in its effect, of preventing a fine from being set up as a bar; but filing a bill merely for discovery, is not. (1)

A bill in equity, however, is not such an action as will avoid a fine, if the subject matter be of legal jurisdiction. (2)

[*290]

(1) The order of dismissal was reversed by the House of Lords: "And it was further ordered and adjudged, that the bill should be retained for twelve months, and that the plaintiffs should be at liberty in the mean time to bring such action or actions at law as they should be advised, &c. And it was further ordered and adjudged, that the said Edward Thornycroft should not insist in such action or actions, or on any trial to be had thereon, on the fine mentioned in the pleadings, or on any non-claim which had ensued thereon, or on any other fine or non-claim which might have been incurred since filing the original bill." 4 Bro. P. C. 102. octavo edit. and Cruise on Fines, 342.

It is difficult to say that the circumstance of the bill having prayed an account was of any substantial validity, though noticed in 4 Bro. P. C. 92. Lord Eldon C. seems to negative it, 6 Ves. 89. The true ground is stated by Lord Redesdale C. in Bond v. Hopkins, 1 Scho. & Lefroy, 432.: "that it was against conscience to make use of a fine levied pending the suit upon which the ejectment proceeded." Lord Redesdale adds, the ultimate decision of this case has always been cited with approbation.

(2) See per Lord Loughborough, post 291. and the case in Dom. Proc. 4 Bro. P. C. 92. octavo edit. and Cruise on Fines, 329.

1783.

PINCKE
against THORNYCROFT.

Newington; but Mrs. Pincke then dying, and her claims descending upon the present plaintiff, Alured Pincke, no notice of trial was given till just before the Summer assizes, 1778. A few days before the trial was to come on, Mr. White, the solicitor for the defendant, informed the solicitor for the plaintiff, of the will of Sir John Thornycroft the son; and that the production of that will, and setting up the title of Henry Foster under it, would nonsuit the plaintiff in ejectment, but he did not mention the fine, or the deed by which Foster's title was conveyed to Mrs. Handasyde — that deed being, in fact, not then discovered. — The heirs at law gave notice of trial for the Lent assizes, 1779, when Henshaw Thornycroft set up the fine, and non-claim, and there having been no actual entry, the plaintiffs were nonsuited. Upon this the plaintiffs filed a bill of revivor and supplement, making Mr. White a party, praying that, under these circumstances, the defendants might be restrained from setting up the fine, and might account for the rents and profits (3), which bill, upon the death of Henshaw Thornycroft, was revived against the present defendants.

The question before the Court was, Whether, under these circumstances, the plaintiffs ought to be barred by the fine.

For the plaintiffs, it was contended, that they should have proceeded to trial at the summer assizes, 1778, which was before the expiration of the five years, if they had not been prevented by Mr. White's information of a title being out in Foster, which would nonsuit them; — therefore they contended, this was a proper case for the interference of this Court. — They insisted further, that the filing of the bill in this Court was of itself sufficient to prevent the bar arising from the fine and non-claim taking place. — They cited 1 Vern. 73. [*] Gilbert v. Emmerton, 2 Vern. 503. Baker v. Pritchard, 2 Atk. 387.

For the defendants, it was urged, that there was no impropriety in Mr. White's conduct; that this Court would not interfere to prevent the operation of a fine, unless in cases of fraud; and that the bill being in substance a mere bill for discovery (4), could not operate, to prevent the bar obtaining. — They cited Lake v. Hayes, 1 Atk. 282. — 2 Atk. 1. — Mackenzie v. the Marquis of Powis, 4 Brown's Parlt. Cases, 328. (5) Cradock v. Marsh, 1 Ch. Rep. 205. — Hurdret v. Calladon, 1 Ch. Rep. 214. 2 Ch. Ca. 217. — Brereton v. Gamul, 2 Atk. 240.

Lord Loughborough. — If it were made out that the plaintiffs were prevented from trying their cause by fraud, I should think, under the principles of this Court, the defendants ought to be restrained from setting up the fine as a bar; but here the plaintiffs take it for granted, that a bill filed in this Court for any purpose will prevent the statute of limitation, or a fine barring. — All legal interests are bound by the fine: if the subject-matter of the suit be of legal jurisdiction, the bringing a suit in equity will not bar the operation of the fine. (6) If a demand of a debt be made here, in case of a legal debt, this Court being applied to for a discovery, will not prevent the statute of limitations from running; but if it be for payment out of assets, for which this is the proper jurisdiction, there the filing of the bill is the commencement of a proper suit. I do not say, that a case may not exist where the bad faith of parties may make a ground to prevent a fine from barring; but here was only a communication of the truth of the case; the attorney stated all he knew: it was not his duty to give notice of the fine. It is not in proof that it was in consequence of this they did not try the cause. It

(3) Vide note (1).

(4) See per Lord Eldon C. in Pulteney v. Warren, 6 Ves. 89. and note (1) antea.

(5) 7 Bro. P. C. 282. octavo edit.

(6) See the case in Dom. Proc. 4 Bro. P. C. 92. Total. Edit.

was their own judgment that decided upon it. A legal bar has taken place in consequence of a legal provision (7), — whether that provision be wise or not, it must bind. No hardship has occurred, in consequence of which they can say, that, in conscience, the fine should not be set up. This is a legal title (8), over which this Court has no jurisdiction, and no fraud has intervened. The bill must therefore be dismissed.

Lord Commissioner Ashhurst. — I am of the same opinion; — where a bill is filed, with a prayer for equitable relief, the policy of the law suspends the statute of limitation; just as in the case [*] of the commencement of an action. But with respect to a fine, the case is different: the bringing an action is not sufficient to bar the operation without an actual entry; no more can the bringing a suit here be so, unless the entry was prevented by fraud. In any other case the filing the bill cannot prevent the bar; and, in this case, there was no fraud, but a fair disclosure.

Lord Commissioner Hotham. — If the filing of the bill is not a sufficient bar, it will stand on the circumstances of the case. It was a mere bill of discovery (9), which is not sufficient. If the circumstances were such, that there had been an imposition upon the party, I think the Court should interpose; but it was a fair candid conversation.

Bill dismissed. (10)

This decree was reversed upon appeal to the House of Lords, 28th February, 1785. (11)

(7) See the conclusion of note (1) antea, the marginal abstract at the head of the principal case in 4 Bro. P. C. 92. octavo edit. and the case there.

(8) But see note (1) antea.

(9) Quære this; and see 4 Bro. P. C. 92.: but nevertheless vide the conclusion of note (1) antea, and especially 6 Ves. 89.

(10) “And the defendant not desiring costs, such dismissal is to be without costs.” Reg. Lib. It was ultimately held, that the fine was levied against conscience. See 1 Scho. & Lefroy, 432.

(11) See 4 Bro. P. C. 92. et ante, note (1).

PEARSON against PEARSON.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 639.)

THE testator gave, by his will, [a house and] ten acres of land to his son, subject to a rent-charge of 10*l.* per annum, to his wife for life, and 5*l.* a year to his brother. The bill was filed by the widow for the annuity and her dower: and the only question was, whether the rent-charge to the wife was a bar of her dower, it not being so circumstances such as to shew it must be so intended (1).

(1) As the law is now settled, “The right to dower being in itself a clear legal right, an intent to exclude that right by voluntary gift must be demonstrated either by express words, or by clear and manifest implication. In order to exclude such right, the instrument itself must contain some provision inconsistent with the assertion of such legal right.” Per Lord Redesdale C. in Birmingham v. Kirwan, 2 Scho. & Lefr. 452, 453. French v. Davies, 2 Ves. jun. 572. Foster v. Cook, post. 3 vol. 347. Strahan v. Sutton, 3 Ves. 249. Greator v. Cary, 6 Ves. 615. Lord Dorchester v. E. Effingham, Cooper’s Ca. Ch. 319. A widow must elect where the case amounts to the latter description. See Wake v. Wake, post. 3 vol. 255. and S. C. 1 Ves. jun. 335. Jones v. Collier, Ambl. 730. Arnold v. Kempstead, and Villa Real v. Lord Galway, cited in Mr. Brown’s notes to the principal case, and the cases cited in the argument. Per Lord Eldon C. in Garthshore v. Chalie, 10 Ves. 20. Chalmers v. Storil, 2 Ves. & B. 222. Mr. Hargrave’s note (6) to Co. Litt. 36. b. and Mr. Raithby’s note to Lawrence v. Lawrence, 2 Vern. 365, 366.

1783.

PINCKE.
against THORNYCROFT.

[ *292 ]

Lords Commissioners, Lord
Loughborough,
Ashhurst, Hotham.
Lincoln’s Inn
Hall, 4th July,
1783.

Rent-charge devised to a wife, not a bar of dower, unless so expressed, or the so intended (1).

1788.

PEARSON
against
PEARSON.

expressed in the will. Mr. Kenyon and Mr. Lloyd cited Lawrence v. Lawrence, Eq. Abr. 218, 219. (1 Bro. Parl. Ca. 591.) [and 3 vol. 483. Toml. edit.]; Davis v. Edwards (before Lord Bathurst) that a rent-charge will not bar dower, unless so expressed. On the other side was cited Villa Real v. Lord Galway, before Lord Camden, (Harg. Co. Lit. 36 b.)

Lord Loughborough. — The law is perfectly settled, and very plain. The gift of an annuity to the wife may be a bar of dower, or may not, according to the language of the will: Arnold v. Kempstead (cited in the same note upon Co. Lit. 36 b.) In Villa Real v. Lord Galway† (2), it

† [This case is since reported Ambl. 682, but] the Reporter having been favoured with a very accurate note of Lord Camden's judgment on the point of dower in this case (in which the former cases on the subject are considered,) he has added it here.

Lord Chancellor stated the testator Mr. Villa Real's will to be as follows:

" I give and devise to my dear wife one annuity or clear yearly sum of 200*l.* of lawful British money, to be paid her by two equal half-yearly payments, &c. which annuity I give her during her natural life," &c. And subject to the payment of the said yearly annuity or yearly sum of 200*l.* to my wife during her natural life, I give and bequeath all and every my messuages, cottages, &c. &c. and also my personal estate as hereinafter mentioned, i. e. " I give and devise," in words comprehensive of all his real estate, " to trustees and their heirs, in trust, to preserve and support the contingent uses and remainders from being defeated and destroyed, and for that purpose to make entries; yet, nevertheless to permit and suffer my daughter or her trustee hereinafter mentioned, to receive and take the rents and profits of all and singular the premises to and for her proper use and benefit, and to let, set, and demise the same for the best rents, without taking any fines for her natural life, and then in trust for the use and behoof of the heirs of the body of my said daughter, and in default of such issue, remainders over.

" All the rest and residue of my ready monies and personal estate to Lord Galway in trust, to vest the same in the purchase of lands, to be conveyed to the trustees in trust, for the same uses, as before limited, of his real estates.

" If the annuity be behind or unpaid, his wife to enter on the said estates, or any part thereof, or into any estates to be purchased to distrain, &c. till arrears fully paid and satisfied."

The questions upon this will,

1. Whether Mrs. Villa Real is to take this annuity in satisfaction of dower out of her husband's real estate.

2. Whether Mrs. Villa Real is intitled to this annuity clear of the land-tax.

At the hearing of this cause, two cases were relied upon by each side upon the first point.

The first, the case of Pitts and Snowden, determined by Lord Hardwicke, where, upon a like will, he determined the widow to be intitled both to dower and annuity.

The other, the case of Arnold and Kempstead, where Lord Northington, in a similar case, was of opinion, that the widow was entitled only to one, and put her to her election.

Pitts v. Snowden was thus: Devise to his wife of an annuity of 50*l.* a year payable out of his copyhold and his freehold messuages, with clause of entry and distress, to be made good out of his personal estate. And, subject to the annuity, he gave his freehold messuages to his three children, &c.

Arnold v. Kempstead. Testator gave some leasehold estates to his wife, for life, and then gave his wife 10*l.* a year, (20*l.* whereof to be paid within twelve months after his decease,) to be paid to her yearly, during her natural life, or so long as she should continue a widow, out of the rents and profits of his freehold estates in Queen's Square.

No clause of entry and distress.

But gave all his freehold estates in Queen's Square to his son, with remainders over.

The case now before the Court is more exactly correspondent in the form of the devise to Pitts and Snowden, than to the other case; for in these two there is an express clause of entry and distress, whereas there is no such power in Arnold and Kempstead; and they more perfectly resemble each other in another circumstance, as the annuity, in both, is charged upon other funds not subject to dower, as well as upon the dowable estate; whereas in Arnold and Kempstead the annuity is made to issue only out of the freehold estate subject to dower.

(2) See per M. R. in French v. Davies, 2 Ves. jan. 577. and Strahan v. Sutton, 3 Ves. 250, 251. Note however the principle as collected antea in the first note, referring to 2 Scho. & Lefroy, 453.

[S. C. 2 Eden,
Ca. Temp. Ld.
Northington, 236. Quod
vide.]

it was held to be a bar, because otherwise the other devisees in the will could not take effect. In this case, if the value of the lands should not be 1783.

PEARSON
against
PEARSON.

These two being alike in all their circumstances, I must admit, that Pitts and Snowden is an authority in point one way, Arnold and Kempstead the other.

The question upon this case is this :

1. Whether if a rent-charge is given to the widow, issuing out of the estate subject to dower with power of distress, this devise shall operate as a bar or satisfaction of her dower.

I am of opinion that it shall, because the claim of dower, 1st. disappoints the will, and 2d. is inconsistent with it.

It is admitted that every devisee must confirm the will in toto, if he claims any interest under it; and will, consequently, forfeit such interest, if he impeaches or intercepts any part of it.

In this case, the will is contradicted by the claim of dower. 1st. Because it puts the trustees out of possession; for they cannot hold the whole, subject to the annuity and distress, without being in possession of the whole: nor can the annuitant, consistent with the will, take possession of any part, because her right of entry into the whole puts her out of possession of the whole, till her right accrues upon default of payment.

And though the present case gives the right of entry upon the whole, or any part, in more explicit terms than Pitts and Snowden; yet the general power of entry and distress in Pitts and Snowden is tantamount in this particular.

The position therefore of the trustees being co-extensive with the annuities and the distress, it is not possible, in such a case, to make the land subject to the dower, and the rent-charge at the same time, because

As annuitant, the widow must be out of possession of the whole; as doweress she must be possessed of a part.

Hence, it follows, that where the testator gives the estate, subject to the annuity, as he doth in this case, he must be intended to give subject to the annuity only, and the residue of the rents and profits being given to the devisee, that devise must exclude all charges, except only the annuity.

In this view of the matter, the widow, by the claim of dower, disappoints the will in the most essential part of the testator's plan; by reducing the interest of the devisee, and loading the estate with an additional burthen.

2. The claim of dower is inconsistent with the will in another light, as it will diminish the annuity itself, which is contrary to the very words of the will.

The annuity is either given over and above the dower, or in satisfaction of it. He intended only one, or he intended both; if both, he intended both should be enjoyed in their full extent; the whole annuity and the whole dower.

Now can the widow enjoy the annuity, as the will has given it, if she claims her dower?

It is most clear that she cannot.

For if she enters into a third right of her dower, she must sink so much of her annuity as that third ought to bear in proportion. That is a violation of the will, and whether the annuity clashes with the dower, or the dower with the annuity, it is equally decisive, for she can never enjoy both, unless both can be reconciled to the will.

Nor is there any pretence to say that the whole annuity, by an equitable marshment, shall be thrown upon the two remaining thirds; because that would, in terms, contradict the will, which charges the whole and gives the power of distress on the whole.

This is sufficient to shew the testator's intention; it is an intention that does not stand upon a loose presumption, but from the mode of devising in the will itself; — and then the case comes within the rule of Noys and Mordaunt, that no person shall dispute a will that takes under it.

This rule is universal and without exception; and a doweress has no more right to be exempted from it, than any other devisee.

The cases of Lawrence v. Lawrence (3), Hitchen v. Hitchen, Lemon v. Lemon, &c. may be all admitted to be good law; the will, in all these cases, being consistent with the claim of dower.

In all these cases the dowable estate was devised generally; and, as the testator had

(3) The Editor is in possession of a MS. note from a source of acknowledged authority. Lord Loughborough is there stated thus to express himself: — “The case of Lawrence v. Lawrence has been taken too strongly. The affirmance in the House of Lords was upon a different point; and therefore is in reality no confirmation of Lord Somers's opinion.” On the contrary to this position, however, see the case in Dom. Proc. reported 3 Bro. P. C. 483. octavo edit. and Mr. Raithby's note on Lawrence v. Lawrence, 2 Vern. 366. which refers to the Journals of the House of Lords, 20 vol. p. 458.

1783.

PEARSON
against PEARSON.
[ *293 ]

be sufficient [*] to satisfy the two annuities and the dower, it would prove it was intended to be in bar, otherwise there is nothing in the will to shew such intention; and there must be such an intent to make it a bar to dower.

The cause stood over, in order to inquire into the value of the land; plaintiff's counsel agreeing, that if it should not be sufficient to answer the annuities and the dower, the widow should relinquish her claim. (4) not expressed the wife's bequest to be in satisfaction, the Court would not presume it, and the estate passed cum onere.

There, no violence is done to the will; and the wife takes no more from the devisee than the testator intended she should; nothing being declared to the contrary.

But where the dowable estate is so divided that the claim of dower makes a material change in the will itself as it does here, the widow must be barred, by necessary implication. For where is the difference between declaring she shall not hold both, and devising so that she cannot hold both without disturbing the will?

And, therefore, if the claim of dower will disappoint the will, she is barred of her dower by necessary implication; which will, according to the doctrine of all the cases, be equivalent to an express declaration.

I will now say a word upon the case of Arnold and Kempstead.

There is no power of distress in that will, and yet I do think it substantially within the reason of the other two cases; for the very gift of an annuity to the wife out of the dowable estate does, from the nature of the interest, throw her out of possession, and makes the claim of dower inconsistent with the will.

I must not conclude, without taking notice of a circumstance that may be urged, against my opinion, as a proof of intention in the testator, to give both dower and annuity to the wife. And that is, that the annuity is made to issue out of more than the dowable estate, from whence it may be argued that the testator enlarged the fund for payment, in order to leave sufficient for the satisfaction of both the demands.

I answer, 1st. That it is totally unknown whether he extended the charge and the remedy with that view; it is at most but conjecture, and it may as reasonably be supposed that he meant only, by augmenting the security, to give an easier and safer remedy for recovering the annuity, as nothing is more common, where a rent-charge is granted, than to charge an estate of ten times the value for the payment of it.

Secondly. That this supposed intention is rebutted by a declared intention to the contrary, manifested and expressed in the will itself.

I wish these cases could have been reconciled, feeling in myself a modest unwillingness to sit in judgment upon two men greatly superior to myself in learning as well as capacity: but that, which, in a private man, would have been presumption, is an indispensable duty in a judge; the tax is imposed upon me by my office, and I undertake it with more ease of mind, knowing that there is a jurisdiction superior to us all, which is able to confirm or reverse my opinion by a final decision.

(4) The Master was to enquire and state what was the value of the testator's real estate at the time of making his will and at the time of his death. R. L.

Lords Commissioners, Lord
Loughborough,
Ashurst, Ho-
tham.

MARSH against MARSH. [4 July.]

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 617.)

Devise to trustees to invest in stock, and pay dividends to testator's son for life, and after his decease, to his eldest son and his heirs for ever, and in case of their death, without issue, to his (testator's) nearest relation, and the nearest relations of such nearest relation, for ever. 1st. this is a double contingency, and, in the event of the son dying without issue, is good. 2d. it goes to the person who was nearest relation at the time, the half-sister: though there were living representatives of a person as near, viz. a half-brother.

MILBOURNE Warren made his will, and ordered [the residue of] his personal estate to be laid out in the purchase of stock, and that the trustees should pay the interest, &c. to his son William Warren for life; and, from and after his decease, to his eldest son and his heirs for ever; and in case of their death, without issue, unto his (the testator's) testator's) nearest relation, and to the nearest relations (1) of such nearest relation for ever. At the time of making the will, the testator lived separate from his wife. He had only one son, who was unmarried (and who afterwards died in the life of his father); he had a half-sister, the plaintiff; and there were also alive children of a deceased half-brother, who, with the testator's widow, were the present defendants. (2)

Mr. Madocks and Mr. Brown, for the plaintiff, insisted, that, under the description of nearest relation, no single person could take but the half-sister, she being nearer than the son of the half-brother. The wife cannot take under the description of a relation, Worsley v. Johnson, 3 Atkyns, 758. (3)

Mr. Scott (for the widow.) — The claim of the widow may be supported on other grounds. She contends, that the contingency, upon which the property is given to the nearest relation, is too remote; and that the testator has therefore died intestate, and the estate to be distributed; of which she claims her own share, and also that of her deceased son, as his representative. The question therefore is, whether this is to be considered as a single [*] contingency, too remote to take place; or a double contingency, one part of which not having happened, the other is good; as if the devise had been to his son, and after his decease to his eldest son, if he should have one, if not, then over. But that intent is not expressed here, any more than in Clare v. Clare, Forrester, 21, where Lord Talbot said, that it could not be altered by the subsequent event. Stanley v. Leigh, 2 Wms. 618. the only case against it, was over-ruled by the case of Clare v. Clare — Burgess v. Burgess, 1 Mod. 114.

Mr. Selwyn and Mr. Hood, for the children of the half-brother, cited Higgins v. Dowler, 2 Vern. 600.; Stanley v. Lee, as cited Forr. 23. They contended, if there had been five or six persons, in equal degree, that they must have taken equally; there could be no preference; that in this, as in every case where the testator has used such words, that the Court cannot give them a construction, it will let in the next of kin. In Whithorn v. Harris, 2 Vesey, 527. such relations only were held to be within the description, as were within the statute of distribution, 2 Ch. Rep. 77.; Thomas v. Hole, Forrest. 251.; Green v. Howard, (ante, 31.) Where there is a doubt, the Court always leans in favour of the next of kin, Sheffield v. Lord Orrery, 3 Atk. 282.; and this goes in exclusion of the wife, Worsley v. Johnson.

Lord Loughborough, Lord Commissioner. — The testator did not mean to restrain the interest of any one but his son: if the son had a son, that son would have taken the whole from his birth. It is a clear double contingency, one way good, the other not so. Upon the decease of William without issue, the remainder over was good. There is no affectation of a perpetuity. The devise is, "To my nearest relation, "and the nearest relation of my nearest relation;" the nearest relation at the time was the half-sister. If there had been more persons in the same degree, there must have been a division, because each would have been nearest relation. (4)

. Ashhurst,

(1) The words here, as in R. L. are "relation heirs."

(2) The bill insisted that under and by virtue of the words of the bequest, the principal of the said testator's estate, and not merely the interest, well passed; and was then beneficially in the plaintiff. And it prayed (after the usual accounts) that the clear residue of the testator's real and personal estate and effects might be paid over, transferred, or assigned to her for her own use and benefit. R. L.

(3) And see Garrick v. Lord Camden, 14 Ves. 372. et antea.

(4) Lord Loughborough added, "The testator certainly meant that the nearest relation at the time of the decease of the son should take the property; not the nearest at " his 1783.

MARSH
against MARSH.

[ *294 ]

1783.

MARSH
against MARSH.

[ *295 ]

Ashhurst, Lord Commissioner.—It is a contingency, with a double aspect: in the event that has happened, it is lawful. He meant, that whoever happened to be his nearest relation at the time of the event should take; not any representative. It is therefore clear in favour of the plaintiff.

[*] Hotham, Lord Commissioner.—Of the same opinion.

Decree for the plaintiff. (5)

“his own decease. To suppose he meant a reversion to his son is impossible, and his widow clearly has no title—the surviving sister is alone entitled.” From Sir S. Romilly’s MS.

(5) Declared “that the plaintiff was entitled under the will, in the events which had happened, to the residue of the testator’s personal estate and effects:” and she waiving an account, certain admitted sums were ordered to be paid to her. R. L.

[S. C. on the present rehearing, 1 Cox, Ca. Ch. 37. Quod vide.]

23 March, 1782, before Lord Thurlow. 5 July, 1783, before Lords Commissioners, Loughborough, Ashurst, Hotham.

Bond, conditioned that executors pay 5000*l.* to a natural son at 21, (if he should attain that age): by will, afterwards, the father gave 15,000*l.* to trustees, to pay 200*l.* per ann. for the maintenance of the son, till 25, and then to pay him the principal; and, if he should marry between 22 and 25, and die, to pay the whole to the issue; but if he died unmarried before 25, the whole over. This devise is not a satisfaction of the bond. (1)

[ *296 ]

JEACOCK against FALKENER.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 488. b.)

THOMAS Crowder, in 1764, entered into a bond to trustees, reciting, that he was desirous of providing for one of the defendants, Thomas Crowder, his natural son, then about four years old, and conditioned, that his executors should, six months after his decease, pay the sum of 5000*l.* to the trustees, for the use of the said Thomas Crowder, the interest to be applied for his maintenance and education till twenty-one, and the principal then to be paid to him; but if he should die, living the father, or under twenty-one, then not to be paid. In 1778, Crowder made his will, whereby he gave the defendants, the trustees, all his estates in trust to pay legacies, and to lay out 15,000*l.* on securities, and to apply 200*l.* per annum to the education of Thomas Crowder till twenty-five, and then to pay to him the 15,000*l.*; but if he should marry between twenty-two and twenty-five, and should die, to pay the whole to the issue; and if he should die unmarried before twenty-five, he gave the whole over; the residue, so far as 15,000*l.* to Caleb Jeacock for life, remainder to his children; but if the residue should exceed 15,000*l.* then half the surplus to go to Thomas Crowder, the other half to the Jeacocks. The bill was filed by the Jeacocks, praying that the legacy given to Thomas Crowder by the will, might be declared to be in satisfaction of the sum secured by the bond.

The cause was heard 23d April, 1782.

Mr. Mansfield (for the plaintiff).—These are portions for the maintenance and education of this young man. Where Crowder is disposing of his whole fortune, he seems to have equal intent to provide for the Jeacocks, by an equal distribution of his fortune. The circumstance of these two sums being for the same purpose, is sufficient to make one a satisfaction for the other: [*] Copley v. Copley, 1 Wms. 147.; Clarke v. Sewel, 3 Atk. 96.; Lee v. D’Aranda, 3 Atk. 419.; [Mascal v. Mascal,] 1 Ves. 323. so Eq. Abr. 203.

Lord Chancellor.—Those cases do not apply; they are cases where legacies are adeemed by subsequent acts.

(1) Lord Alvanley, when M. R., said he was perfectly satisfied with this decision, upon the reasoning; although it was a strong case, and, he confessed, a hard case. See in Hinchcliffe v. Hinchcliffe, 3 Ves. 528. Lord Eldon C. also observed, “the case [itself] is intelligible, though the dicta attributed to Lord Thurlow (noticed in the next page,) were not so.” Druce v. Denison, 6 Ves. 401.

On the point of satisfaction generally, see Warren v. Warren, postea, 305. 308, &c. and the notes.

Mr.

Mr. Mansfield offered to read evidence to prove a conversation between the testator and one of his trustees, in which he mentioned his intentions respecting the provision for Thomas Crowder. This being objected to, he cited 2 Vern. 593. 1 Vesey, 323. 3 Atk. 77. as cases where such evidence had been allowed.

Lord Chancellor. — Evidence cannot be read to prove what the testator meant by the words used in his will, but it may as to facts upon which the testator made his will. (2)

Mr. Lloyd (on the same side) cited the case of Errington v. Broughton in the House of Lords (Brown's Parlt. Cases, 12.) (3) where the attorney's evidence of Sir Brian Broughton's declaration of his intention at the time of making his will, was allowed.

Mr. Attorney General (for the defendants) cited Brown v. Selwyn, Forrester, 240.

Lord Chancellor. — If this evidence be offered to explain the will, I must reject it; if otherwise, I must consider it further.

Mr. Mansfield gave up the point of evidence.

Lord Chancellor. — The rule is, that where portions are charged on an estate which will go to the eldest son; additional portions on condition shall be like laws made after others, and repeal the former; — but there is no case where such a provision as this has been so held. Here the bond is the original gift; then the will provides for that only child and other relations. — He chose to give it to the child, until he should be twenty-five years of age; but he gives it over as effectually, if he dies without issue between twenty-one and twenty-two, as if he died before twenty-one. The intent of the testator, collected on fair grounds that the party should not have both, is the only ground on which such a decree can be made. (4) The bond here is not satisfied by the legacy; the 15,000*l.* must, therefore, be applied to the trusts of the will.

[*] This cause was re-heard before the Lords Commissioners, 5th July, 1783. The argument was little more than a repetition of the former, and the same cases were again cited. Immediately upon the close of the argument, the Lords Commissioners gave judgment. (5)

Lord Loughborough. — Though Crowder gave the legacy payable at twenty-five, with a supposition that the legatee might marry at twenty-two with consent; in case of his death before twenty-five without issue, it sinks into the residue. The next object of his bounty was the family of Jeacock; he gives them the residue, but if that should amount to more than 15,000*l.* the surplus was to be divided between them and Thomas Crowder. Long before this time the bond was given for 5000*l.* payable to Thomas Crowder at twenty-one. It is contended he was not to have

(2) Lord Eldon C. said, "Lord Thurlow's memory was disgraced by Mr. Brown's Report of this point, and that in Fonnereau v. Poyntz," post. 472. MS. note by the Editor taken in court. The reasons of his Lordship's observation appear forcibly by the cotemporary Report of Mr. Vesey. Vide in Druce v. Denison, 6 Ves. 400, 401.

Lord Eldon says these latter words "are not intelligible;" and this applies equally to the dicta attributed to Lord Alvanley, 3 Ves. 529. which the Lord Chancellor refers to more expressly, 6 Ves. 400. His Lordship observes he understands the dicta of Lord Alvanley, if they only mean that evidence is admissible to explain what subjects of bequest the testator meant to describe, which could not be understood upon the face of the will, but not if they went further. Lord Hardwicke also approved of its admission "to ascertain identity," &c. See 2 Ves. 28. As to declarations of testators before their wills, subsequently to them, and cotemporary with them, see in Langham v. Sanford, 2 Merivale, 23.

(3) 7 Bro. P. C. 461. octavo edition. See Lord Eldon's observations, 6 Ves. 400, 401, &c.

(4) His Lordship added — "In this case, the two provisions are so totally different, that I cannot presume the testator meant one to be in lieu of the other. Therefore, the bond," &c. From Mr. Cox's MS. note.

(5) See the judgment of the Lords Commissioners, also reported 1 Cox, Ca. Ch. 37. this 1783.

JEACOCK
against FALKNER.

[ *297 ]

1783

JEACOCK
against FALKNER.

this 5000*l.* on account of the legacy given by the will. In order to this, they should shew an intent that he should not have the 5000*l.* — They have raised an idea that the testator meant an equality between Crowder and the Jeacocks, but no such idea prevailed; for Crowder was certainly to have 15,000*l.* so that the circumstance is not made out. It would be difficult to shew that the testator recollected the bond, and meant to satisfy it. There is a strong circumstance in the case to shew that he did not mean this, for in a legacy to his housekeeper, in the same will, he expressly gave it in satisfaction. As to the case of portions, and the Court saying that parties shall not take double portions, against a general representative either in land or money; here, they are not portions, but Crowder's share is to be made equal, if there is more than 30,000*l.* — It is taking the precipuum, not a part out of it.

Ashhurst, Lord Commissioner. — The testator knew, that, where a legacy was to be a satisfaction, it was necessary to say so. — Here the legacy, if considered as a satisfaction, might have been a detriment, as it was not payable till twenty-five, and the bond was payable at twenty-one.

Hotham, Lord Commissioner, — concurred.

Lord Thurlow's decree affirmed. (6)

(6) That decree “declared that the legacy of 15,000*l.* given for the benefit of T. C. “in manner mentioned in the will, was not to be considered as a satisfaction of the bond “entered into by the testator. And the defendant T. C., when he should become entitled to the said legacy, or, in case of his death before that time, any of the parties “or other persons, who should, upon that event, become entitled to the said legacy, “should be at liberty to apply.” R. L. On this re-hearing, the deposit which had been made by the plaintiff was to be divided between the defendants. R. L.

Lords Commissioners, Lord
Loughborough,
Ashhurst, Hotham.

[ *298 ]

Testator gave the use of 800*l.* to his wife for life, and after her decease made a disposition of parts of the principal; he then gave several other devises, and afterwards to J. M. 100*l.* J. M. died, living the widow: held that his legacy was vested and transmissible.

[*] MONKHOUSE against HOLME. [30 June & 7 July.]

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 586. b.)

JONATHAN Monkhouse, by will, dated 14th April, 1761, gave to his wife, the use, interest, and produce of 800*l.* during her life, to be raised out of his personal estate; and, from and after her decease, gave and disposed of the said sum of 800*l.* in manner following; that is to say, to Letitia Ball, 100*l.* to Mary Monkhouse, 200*l.* to Edward and Charles Holme, 100*l.* each; to Mary Hall, 5*l.* a-year. (1) Then followed other devises, some of real, some of personal estates; among others, to a servant, 5*l.* and then the legacy on which the question arose. *I also give to Jonathan Monkhouse, son of my brother George, the sum of 100*l. He then gave the rest and residue to his wife. The nephew, Jonathan Monkhouse, (legatee of the 100*l.*) died in June, 1771. His father administered to him, and the plaintiffs are his representatives. Elizabeth, the widow, lived till October, 1779, and made the defendant her executor. — The bill was filed for the 100*l.* legacy.

Mr. Selwyn and Mr. Scott (for the plaintiffs) contended, First, That this legacy of 100*l.* was not part of the 800*l.* or, Second, If it was so, still it was a vested legacy in Jonathan Monkhouse the nephew, and

(1) To be paid to her quarterly by his executrix after-named; then to one Joseph M — 40*l.* a-year, to be paid to him quarterly by his executrix after-named. Then follow devises of real estate, tythes, &c. Then three legacies of 20*l.* each to B. C. and D. provided they should be respectively living at the death of his wife. [This seems somewhat material.] Then a devise of other real estate to his wife; and then the 100*l.* in question, as above stated; viz. “*I also give to Jonathan Monkhouse, son of my brother George Monkhouse, the sum of 100*l.” R. L.

transmissible

transmissible to his representative. They argued the first point from the intervening legacies, but relied little upon it, principally relying upon the second point, that it was a reversionary interest, vested at the death of the testator, and only postponed to give the widow the use of the fund during her life: and cited 2 Eq. Abr. 548. Kemp v. Davy (ante, p. 120. note.) Pawsey v. Edgar (ante, p. 191. note.) [S. C. 2 Dick. 531.] Dawson v. Killet (ante, p. 119.) Morgan v. Gardiner, in the Exchequer (ante, 193. note.)—1 Vesey, 208. Barnes v. Allen (ante, 181.)—1 Vesey, 44.—1 Wms. 566.

Mr. Kenyon, Mr. Arden, and Mr. Lloyd (for the defendants) contended, that the plaintiffs had themselves put upon this legacy the construction of being part of the 800*l.* never having filed their bill till after the death of the wife; that there was a direction after this legacy in the will, to apply the 800*l.* to the foregoing legacies, and that this supposition raised the general question.—The cases of [*] real estate should be put out of the question, an uniform distinction having been taken between them and cases of personalty.—This disposes of King v. Withers, and Hutchins v. Foy; upon which last Killet v. Dawson, and Kemp v. Davy depend;—but wherever the legacy arises out of personalty, the rule is, that if it is given by words de futuro, the legatee must live to the time, in order to take; though if the gift be by words de præsenti to be paid in futuro, it vests. This rule is laid down in 1 Eq. Abr. 295. and has obtained ever since. In Norris v. Huthwaite, in the Exchequer, (ante, 182. note.) it was, *at the decease of my wife, or if she marry, I then give 500*l.* out of the fund to my sister*: the sister died in the life of the wife.—Mr. Baron Eyre laid down the law, that it was not a case of contingency, nor did it depend upon its being a mixed fund, because the personalty was sufficient, and the real estate only collateral. It must be determined upon the rule of law, the time of the gift being future, and the party dying before the event happened, the legacy lapsed.—In Smith v. Salmon, Exchequer, 23d June, 1778, it was *to lay out 500*l.* on land or in stock, and pay the yearly interest to testatrix's sister, and from and after her decease, she gave and bequeathed 100*l.* thereof to Margaret Smith*, who died in the life of the sister; the Court held the legacy was lapsed. In the case of Barnes v. Allen the words were immediate, though the distribution was future.

The cause stood over till the 7th July, when judgment was given.

Lord Loughborough.—Two points have been contended.—First, That this is a single legacy, payable out of the assets, not an aliquot part of the 800*l.* As to that, though it is not clear from the pencilling of the will, yet it is contrary to the sense of the parties and the apparent intention of the testator. The second is, that, if part of the 800*l.* it is lapsed by the death of the legatee. The 800*l.* is a gift to the trustees, to pay the interest to the wife for her life, and then in parts and shares. That shews his intent to be to give a vested interest to the several legatees. (2) But, this is said to be contrary to the rule of not vesting legacies given by words de futuro. (3) I rather take the rule to be, that where the time is annexed not to the form, but to the substance of the gift, [*] there it lapses by the death of the legatee. (4) There are

(2) The Editor also thinks that the testator's expression of the three legacies of 20*l.* being given to B. C. and D. "provided they should respectively be living at the death of his wife," (as noticed from Reg. Lib.) and his not coupling the bequest in question with any such restriction, is of itself a very strong reason for its being held to vest.

(3) See Atkins v. Hiccocks, 1 Atk. 500. and Elton v. Elton, 1 Ves. 4. and 3 Atk. 504.

(4) For a comprehensive reference as to these points, several others which are above noticed by Lord Loughborough, and especially as to the distinction noticed by His Lordship referrible to Love v. L'Extrange, see 1 Roper on Legacies, p. 151. et seq. particularly p. 173.

1783.

MONKHOUSE
against HOLME.

[ *299 ]

[ *300 ]

1783.

Mowhouse
against Holme.

instances both ways in Dyer, 59. b. on the will of Lord Latimer. The rule in legatory cases is taken from the civil law. It is of importance that the rule should be the same in both courts; there is much upon it in Swinburne, 30—34. with various limitations and exceptions, but there is little precision in it; but the authorities there cited, upon being examined, clear the matter. The Digest, L. 36. Tit. 2. L. 21. says, Si certa sit dies legati, statim cedit; si incerta, nisi tempus obtigit, neque res pertinere, neque dies legati cedere potest: [nec interest utrum scribatur "si" vel "cum," &c. (5)] If the day is certain, it is vested; but where uncertain, the true question will be, "whether it is the nature of a condition," for if it is conditional, then, in the very nature of the thing, the time is annexed to the substance of the gift, as in the case of marriage, of puberty, or of any other situation of life; when the arrival of the time is a condition, without which the testator would not have made the gift. In Cloberry's case, 2 Ventr. 342. Lord Nottingham said, the giving interest shews no contingent legacy was intended. [In Chancery Cases, the same case is mentioned to have come before Lord Guilford, who was inclined to reverse Lord Nottingham's decree; but his final determination does not appear. However, Lord Nottingham's decree was affirmed in the House of Lords. (6)] The anonymous case in 2 Ventr. 347. approved in Pinbury v. Elkin, 1 Wms. 566. I take to be good law; the limitation over was not in the nature of a condition. Corbet v. Palmer, 2 Eq. Abr. 548. is to the same effect. In Lowlands v. Stephenson, in the Exchequer, 1773, the legacy was held to be vested. In Killet v. Dawson, [antea, 119. n.] before Lord Thurlow, it was not a condition, but held to be vested. Barnes v. Allen [181.] was to the same effect. Norris v. Huthwaite, [antea, 182. n.] in the Exchequer a few years ago, was cited against this; but, if the note that was read was taken accurately, I do not agree with the rule there laid down. [It is not a general rule] that a legacy given in future, where the legatee dies before the time, lapses; but where the time is annexed to the substance of the gift, [and where the gift, therefore, is not in substance vested, it does not take effect. (7)] as I before said. Smith v. Salmon is not a case from which one can reason; the penning of the will was extremely special, and the Lord Chief Baron has told us the determination went on the particular penning of the will. There is a case which has not been cited, which is stronger for vesting than most of those which have been cited. It was in the House of Lords, in 1727, and is correctly stated in Mr. Brown's Cases in Parliament, upon an appeal from Lord King (Love v. L'Estrange (8), 3 Brown. Plt. Ca. 337.) that the words there were annexed to the gift was very clear; but the probable ground of determination is, that it was a residue. (8) One might have expected a different determination if it had been the case of a general legacy. The circumstance of introducing a legatory subject by the word "after" [*] cannot be construed so to affect the gift as to make it a condition. The solid substantial distinction is, whether the testator meant it as a condition. This cannot be construed as making a new rule of law. The rule (which I take to be that of the civil law) not being broke in upon, but allowed, and construed as it was by Lord Talbot,

[ *301 ]

(5) See per Sir W. Grant, M. R. in Hanson v. Graham, 6 Ves. 243, 244, &c.

(6) From Mr. Cox's MS. notes.

(7) From Mr. Cox's MS. notes.

(8) 5 Bro. P. C. 59. octavo edition. See 6 Ves. 248. on 4 Ves. 405. 408. in which the late Lord Alvanley doubted whether Lord Loughborough's observations here are correctly stated; though he acknowledged there might be such a distinction as to a residue. Sir W. Grant, however, thought it unnecessary in Love v. L'Estrange, to resort to that point. Vide 6 Ves. 248.

Lord Hardwicke, and Lord Thurlow. We are all of opinion that the legacy vested, and that interest must be paid from the death of the wife. †

† The cases of Holecroft v. Phittion, at the Rolls, May 24, 1784, and Benyon v. Maddison, (post. vol. 2. p. 75.) support the doctrine of this case, with which the latter is in point. There has been a subsequent case in the Exchequer, Hamilton v. Sneyd, which has received a similar decision; and where the case of Norris v. Huthwaite was again reprobated.

1783.

MONKHOUSE
against HOLME.

CATOR against the Earl of PEMBROKE and others, Trustees, and Lord Viscount BOLINGBROKE.

(No Entry in this Year.)

THE manor of Beckenham, in Kent, was vested in trustees with power to sell, laying out the money to the uses under a settlement, by which Lord Bolingbroke was entitled to a life estate, with remainders over. Lord Bolingbroke had granted rent-charges on the estate to Hans Wintrop Mortimer, Esq. and Mrs. Hare. The trustees, with Lord Bolingbroke, afterwards sold the estate (without notice of the rent-charges) to Cator the plaintiff, and Lord Bolingbroke covenanted that the premises were free from incumbrances. The trustees invested the purchase-money in South Sea annuities. Lord Bolingbroke granted the annual dividends, during his life, to Boldero, one of the defendants, with a covenant that the money should not be laid out in land during his life-time; and the trustees gave him a letter of attorney (irrevocable) to receive the dividends. Boldero knew the South Sea annuities were the purchase-money for the estates in settlement, but knew nothing further of the circumstances. Mrs. Hare afterwards evicted Cator, who filed the present bill to have the South Sea annuities re-transferred, insisting he had a lien upon them.

Mr. Kenyon and Mr. Hollist (for the plaintiff.) — Where a purchaser does not pay the purchase-money, the vendor has a lien upon the estate. This principle applies to the present case. Cator would have a right to follow this stock against Lord Bolingbroke: and the legal estate in it is in the trustees. If the legal estate had been in Boldero, the Court might have refused to take away the tabula in naufragio; but, as it is, the Court will look to the elder title. In exchange, the very act includes a warranty [*], and the person who conveys, and is evicted, may bring a warrantia chartæ. Here, Lord Bolingbroke gives land, Cator money; if there had been a total eviction, Cator had a right to have his money back; for the estate would be worth nothing. Eton College v. the Bishop of Winchester, 3 Wils. 468. and there can be no difference as to a partial eviction. If this be so at law, why not also in equity? Ought Boldero to keep the money which Cator has paid for

Lords Commissioners, Lord
Loughborough,
Ashurst.

[S. C. Decree affirmed on rehearing, post.
2 vol. 282.]

[Although the vendor of an estate has fraudulently concealed an incumbrance, yet the purchaser has no lien on the purchase money after it has been paid over. (1)]

Purchaser, without notice of a rent-charge, transfers stock in payment; the party entitled for life grants an annuity out of the dividend, secured by a letter of attorney to receive the dividends, to a person who had not notice of the transaction: the purchaser of the estate is evicted
by grantee of the rent-charge,
he has no lien
on the stock. (2)

[ *302 ]

(1) Vide Sugden, V. & P. 416.; 2 Raithby's Vern. 280.; post. 420.; and 6 Ves. 752. &c.

(2) This decree affirmed by Lord Thurlow, (post. 2 vol. 282.) who held the power of attorney equivalent to a declaration of trust; and that there can be no lien after purchase-money paid over. Vide 2 vol. 289, 290.

As against such a fraudulent vendor himself, the case of Edwards v. M'Leay is very material. There the vendor, knowing a want of title to part of the premises, which was of consequence, and which he did not disclose, the sale was wholly rescinded after a conveyance executed and the purchase-money paid, on a bill by the purchaser; with a decree for the return of the purchase-money and all expences; although the latter had never been evicted. Decree by Sir W. Grant M. R. affirmed on appeal by Lord Eldon C. 11 July, 1818. Cooper, Ch. Ca. 308. Sugden, L. Vend. & P. 416. (5th edition.)

1783.

CATOR
against BOLINGBROKE.

the manor of Beckenham? The legal estate being in the trustees, and the stock not conveyed, Cator's prior title must prevail. Boldero knew the money was the purchase of settled estates. His whole title is an equitable one, to take the dividends during Lord Bolingbroke's life. Mr. Cator having a prior equity, the decision must be in his favour; and the trustees be decreed to give him a power of attorney to receive the dividends. Mr. Cator bought the manor at the full value of the estate at the time. Mr. Boldero bought the dividends at seven years and a half's purchase, and has had them eight years; so that, in point of consideration, Mr. Cator has also a better claim.

Lord Loughborough, Lord Commissioner. — The principle, in case of purchase-money remaining unpaid, is the same as in the case of an exchange; the estate remains subject to the vendor's right to his money against the heir, if the purchaser is dead, or against a third person, to whom he has made a legal conveyance: but if that person has paid the value of the estate, it becomes a question (3) whether it was with, or without notice of the first vendor's claim. — If, by recital, the title is deduced from the first vendor, still that will not be sufficient to affect him, for that does not shew it was not paid for. — That is precisely the case here: Boldero had only notice that it was money paid for a settled estate. It is said, Boldero has no legal title; but that is nothing to the case. He has got an advantage, of which he is in possession by the letter of attorney from the trustees, and both Cator and he being unfortunate, and he having an advantage which does not affect the integrity of his mind, the Court could not relieve Cator without injuring Boldero.

Ashhurst, Lord Commissioner. — I am of the same opinion. Boldero has a letter of attorney irrevocable, from Lord Bolingbroke and the trustees (4), so that he is in possession: and although he[*] had notice of the annuities being the purchase-money for the estate, he had no notice of the eviction.

Hotham, Lord Commissioner. — I am of the same opinion; the notice does not go far enough to affect Boldero. It is only that it was purchase-money.

Bill dismissed without costs. †

† This order of dismissal was affirmed on a re-hearing before Lord Thurlow, 18th December, 1787. Vide post. v. 2. p. 282.

(3) Lord Thurlow observed on the re-hearing, "The Lords Commissioners did not say 'the money might be pursued; and if they had, he thought he should have differed from them.'" Vide post. 2 vol. 289, 290.

(4) Lord Thurlow afterwards held this equivalent to a new declaration of trust. Post. 2 vol. 290.

As to a vendor's lien, see also Chapman v. Tanner, 1 Raithby's Vernon, 267, 268.; Bond v. Kent, 2 Vern. 280. and Mr. Raithby's note; Blackburn v. Gregson, post. 420.; and Nairn v. Prowse, 6 Ves. 752. &c. See also the observations and collection of cases in the note to Becket v. Cordley, postea, 358.

THE END OF THE FIRST PART OF THE FIRST VOLUME.

1783.

LAWSON against BARKER. [8 July.]

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 582.)

BILL filed by the creditors of George Lewis Scott, Esq. against the defendant, the executor, without making the residuary legatee a party.

Lord Loughborough thought he ought to have been a party, as being interested to resist the demands, and because, otherwise, the residuary fund might be exhausted by collusion.

But Mr. Ambler and Mr. Maddocks (as amici curiæ) said, that the practice was not to make the residuary legatee a party. And Mr. Graham, (who was in the cause) said, he had examined, and that it was unnecessary, even where the bill was by a legatee — referred to Eq. Ab. 73. pl. 13. [S. C. 1 Vern. 261.]

Lord Loughborough observed, if this was so, it was an anomalous case, in a Court of equity, where all parties who are interested are to be before the Court.

But the decree was taken as prayed.†

† Same point, so held, in Love v. Jacomb. Hill. 1776.

(1) And see accordingly, Brown v. Douthwaite, 1 Madd. Rep. 446.

HEMMINGS against MUN[C]KLEY, and others. [July 15.]

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 603.)

WILLIAM Clutsam, by his will, [inter alia] gave five sixteenth parts of the residue of his personal estate to trustees, “to lay out the same, and to pay over the same” to his daughter Rachael, on her [*] attaining her age of 28 years, or day of marriage, which shall first happen, provided his daughter should marry with the approbation of his said executors, [in trust] or such of them as should be then living. He gave the eleven [other] sixteenth parts among his other four children (1); and in case either of his sons or daughters should die before his, consent, and in case any of the children should die before their shares became due, the share to go to the rest of the [testator's] children, and their issue per stirpes. [The testator left five children.] R. married without consent, had one child since dead, [and another who was before the Court.] and died under 28, — held the portion never vested in her; [that four parts of it belonged to the testator's surviving children; and that one moiety of the remaining part belonged to the surviving child of R., the other belonging to the father of the deceased child of R. as its representative.]

(1) And in the meantime, and until the same should become payable respectively, the interest and profits of the said several shares were to be paid and applied by the trustees, in the same proportions, for the use of his said sons and daughters respectively; and in case either of his sons or daughters, &c. [as in the Report above.]

Rachael married James Curley, one of the defendants, without the consent of the executors, and died under 28, having had two children (not one only, as stated above and in Mr. Cox's Report.) One of them, Mary Ann, was actually before the Court. The other had died an infant, and the father J. C. was its administrator.

The bill was filed by the testator's four surviving children against the trustees and James Curley, the husband of Rachael, and her surviving child Mary Ann.

The decree in Reg. Lib. on this point is as follows: — “And as to the remaining Lords Commissioners, Lord Loughborough, Ashhurst, Hotham.

In a bill against the executor, either by creditors or legatees, it is not necessary to make the residuary legatee a party. (1)

Lords Commissioners, Lord Loughborough, Ashhurst, and Hotham.

[S. C. 1 Cox, Ca. Ch. 38.]

[*304]

[Inter alia, five sixteenth parts of a residue were bequeathed to trustees, to pay the same to testator's daughter R. at 28, or marriage with 1783.

HENNINGES
against MURKLEY.

his, her, or their share or shares should become payable, then the part or share, parts or shares of him, her, or them so dying, should go and be paid among all the rest of his children, who should then be living, and the issue of a deceased child or children, (if any) per stirpes, and not per capita, at the same time as their original shares would become due.

Rachael Clutsam married James Curley, one of the defendants, without the consent of the executors, and had a child (1) (to whom Curley is administrator), and died under twenty-eight.

Mr. Kenyon (for the plaintiffs) insisted the portion never vested in Rachael, she marrying without consent, and not attaining twenty-eight years of age.

Mr. Scott argued for the defendant the husband, who claimed as administrator both to her and the child — that it vested on the marriage notwithstanding the proviso, which was only in terrorem, and cited Underwood v. Morris, 2 Atkyns, 184. (3) — and that, whether the condition be precedent or subsequent, it will not prevent the legacy vesting, unless it be given over.

Lord Loughborough, doubted the authority of the case (3), and decreed that it did not vest; but there being five children of the testator, he held the infant (2) child of Rachael to be intitled to one-fifth of the legacy under the devise over: (as being “the issue of a deceased child,”) and decreed the same to her father, in her right.

“ 5-16 parts of the said residue given by the said testator's will to his daughter “ Rachael Clutsam, upon her attaining the age of 28 years, or marrying with the con“ sent of his executors as therein mentioned; Their Lordships do declare that the said “ R. C. having died before she attained the age of 28 years, and having married without “ such consent as required by the said will; the said 5-16 parts are divisible into 5 equal “ parts; and do declare, that one-fifth part thereof belongs to the plaintiff Elizabeth H.
“ (to be secured for her benefit), one other to plaintiff G. C., and another fifth part to “ plaintiff S. C., and do order that the same be paid to them accordingly; and their “ Lordships do declare that one other fifth part thereof belongs to the plaintiff Thomas C.
“ the infant, and do order that the same be paid into the Bank, &c. to his account, “ subject to the contingencies in the will concerning the same, &c. &c. And as to the “ remaining fifth part of the said 5-16 parts so given to the said Rachael, the late wife “ of the said J. Curley, their Lordships do declare that the same is divisible into moieties.
“ and that one moiety thereof belongs to James Curley, as administrator of Rachael C.
“ his late daughter, deceased, and do order and decree that the same be paid to him; and “ do declare that the other moiety belongs to the defendant Mary Ann Curley, the infant,”
&c. &c.

(2) See note (1) in the preceding page.

(3) Vide post. 2 vol. 488. and 2 Dick. 723. For one of the latest and most important cases on the subject of conditions on marriage with previous consent, &c. see Clarke v. Parker, 19 Ves. 1. which comprises most of the former decisions.

[ *305 ]

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, July 23.
Lords Commis- sioners, Ash-
hurst, Hotham.

[ * ] Earl of LEICESTER against PERRY.

[ John Sidney styling himself Earl of Leicester v. Perry. (1) ]

Plea that a writ of right has been tried and determined against the plaintiff,

BILL for discovery and relief, and to prevent the defendant from setting up a legal title in a trustee, as a defence to a writ of right against the plaintiff, a good plea to a bill for discovery of matter relative to the title.

(1) The Editor cannot find any entry of the plea, or of the allowance of it, in the Registrar's Book; but he found short entries of the same cause as to other matters. They are entitled E. of L. commonly called John Sidney, Esq. v. Perry; but that description is not so accurate as the one inserted above, since he was an illegitimate son of the former Countess, born during her separation from the Earl, and always brought up and treated as such for 40 or 50 years. Lord Redesdale's MS. notes.

brought brought by the plaintiff, to try the title to Penshurst park and other estates. The defendant pleaded that the writ of right had been tried and determined against the plaintiff (2), which was held a good plea to further discovery.

1783.

LEICESTER
against PERRY.

(2) There was an averment in support of the plea, that the title in the trustee, which the bill sought to have removed, had not been given in evidence at the trial. Upon this case, Lord Redesdale makes some observations in the second edition of his valuable treatise (p. 204.); but his Lordship has enlarged them in the third edition, p. 207. It is there stated that "the bill was brought before the trial in the writ of right, and the plaintiff had proceeded to trial without the discovery and relief sought by his bill for the purposes of the trial. The plea was subsequent to the judgment. It may be doubted therefore whether the averment that the title in the trustee had not been given in evidence on the trial of the writ of right was necessary, as the judgment was a bar, as a release subsequent to the filing the bill would have been; and if the plaintiff could have avoided the effect of the judgment because the title in the trustee had been given in evidence, it should seem that the fact, together with the fact of the judgment, ought to have been brought before the Court by another bill, in the nature of a bill for a new trial, either as a supplemental bill, or as an original bill; the former bill being dismissed."

As to such pleas, of a judgment, or of a verdict and judgment, and in particular as to the principal case; for references as to the effect of a writ of right, and the form of the judgment at law thereupon, which is utterly final and conclusive, see Mr. Beames's most valuable work "The Elements of Pleas in Equity," pp. 197, 198. et seq. with the elaborate and important notes.

Sir JOHN BORLASE WARREN, CAROLINE his Wife, and the Trustees of his Marriage Settlement. Plaintiffs.

ARNOLD WARREN, AUGUSTUS PARKINS, and FRANCES his Wife, which ARNOLD and FRANCES are younger Children of JOHN WARREN the Testator. — FRANCIS HURST the surviving Trustee of the Term, and others. Defendants.

[S. C. 1 Cox,
Ca. Ch. 41.
Quod vide.]

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, July 26.
Lords Commissioners, Ash-hurst, and Hotham.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 595.)

JOHN Warren, Esq. father of the plaintiff, Sir John Borlase Warren, by indenture of lease and release, after marriage, dated 1st and

In the marriage settlement, by which a life

estate was given to the wife, there was a power to raise 10,000*l.* for younger children; the settlor [forgetting that he had made such a settlement (1), and] by will reciting that he had made no settlement on the wife, provided portions of 5000*l.* if but one younger child; and 2000*l.* each if more. There being two younger children, decreed that this provision by the will is in part satisfaction of the portion by settlement; and that only 10,000*l.* should be raised. (1)

(1) For a more explicit statement of the facts of this case, see Mr. Cox's report of it, 1 Cox, Ca. Ch. 141. Et vide postea, 310.

It is most material to observe, that Mr. Brown must have been under a total mistake in this case, where (at p. 308.) he represents Lord Thurlow as denying the existence of the rule that a double provision will be a presumed satisfaction in the case of a parent and child, where it would not be so as between strangers, (agreeably to Mr. Cox's note in Chancey's case, 1 P. W. 410. and Wallace v. Pomfret, 11 Ves. 342, &c. &c.) The very cases his Lordship is stated to have relied upon disprove such an inference; and the subsequent authorities clearly shew that such a rule exists as between a child and a parent, or any one who assumes the character of a parent. See per Lord Alvanley, when M. R., in Hinchcliffe v. Hinchcliffe, 3 Ves. 526, 527, 528. Sparkes v. Cator, ibid. 530. 535, &c. and in Tolson v. Collins, 4 Ves. 491. Copley v. Copley, 1 P. W. 147. and the cases in Mr. Cox's note, ibid. 148. Per Lord Eldon C. in Trimmer v. Bayne, 7 Ves. 515. in Twisden v. Twisden, 9 Ves. 427. in Ex parte Pye and Dubost, 18 Ves. 140. and per Sir W. Grant, M. R. in Robinson v. Whitley, 9 Ves. 577. 579. Bengough v. Walker, 15 Ves. 507. 512, 513. and the references in Hartopp v. Hartopp, 17 Ves. 191. and Wetherby v. Dixon, Coop. Ca. Ch. 279. 281. See also Mr. Sanders' note to Bellasis v. Uthwaite, 1 Atk. 427. and Rickman v. Morgan, antea, 63. postea, 2 vol. 394, &c. decided by Lord Thurlow; and Pearson v. Morgan, ibid. 384, &c.

1783.

WARREN
against WARREN.

[ *306 ]

2d July, 1754, conveyed his estate to trustees, to the use of himself for life, remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders; remainder to his wife for life, remainder to trustees, for a term, to raise 10,000*l.* for younger children; remainder to his eldest son in tail; remainder over to other sons, &c. — In the settlement was a power reserved to him to raise money, but subject to the wife's life estate and the provision for the children; and also a proviso, that in case he should, in his life-time, give to any of his younger children any sums of money towards his or their portions and advancement, and declare the same, by writing, to be in part of his or their portions, they should go pro tanto, in satisfaction thereof. — By his will, 14th [*] of November, 1758, reciting, that he had made no provision for his wife by settlement or otherwise, he declared it to be his will, that the trustees should pay her 600*l.* per annum for life, in bar of dower, and if he should have one younger child only, they should raise 5000*l.* for such one child, if more, 2000*l.* each, which he charged on his personal estate, and in default thereof, upon the settled estate. He died in 1763, leaving plaintiff his eldest son, and two of the defendants, his younger children. The prayer of the bill was to declare the will well proved, and that the two younger children should be declared to be entitled to only one of the two provisions, and that upon payment to them of 5000*l.* each, Hurst should be decreed to assign the term.

This case was argued before the late Lord Chancellor on the 11th, 12th, and 14th June, 1782.

Mr. Mansfield (for the plaintiffs.) — The younger children set up a claim to both the provisions. The testator, in making the provision by will, had forgotten the settlement. — This appears clearly, for he gives his son exactly the same interest in the estate he had by the settlement; but recites, that he had made no provision for his wife, for whom, in fact, he had provided. He orders the interest of the 2000*l.* to be applied by way of maintenance, and for the education of the children. He had no estates but what were settled. There was a power in the settlement to raise money, without which there would have been no fund out of which to raise the charges; and that power was subject to the provisions for the wife and children. In † Hartop [*] v. Whitmore, 1 Wms. 681. a less sum advanced in the lifetime, was held a satisfaction. In Thomas and Keymish, 2 Vern. 348. in a charge on certain lands by marriage-settlement, and afterwards an equal portion charged on other lands, this was held a satisfaction. — This case is stronger against double portions than any other.

[ *307 ]

Mr. Hardinge (on the same side) cited Cox v. D'Aranda, 3 Atk. 519. Copley v. Copley, 1 Wms. 147. Rawlins v. Powel, 1 Wms. 297. Clark

† This case is very inaccurately stated in 1 Wms. and although more correctly, yet imperfectly, in Precedents in Chancery, 541.; the words of the will as taken from the record were as follows: — “ I further will, devise, give, and bequeath to my daughter Dorothy Whitmore 300*l.* if she should be then living and unmarried, or married by and with her said mother's full consent, first had and obtained in writing, but if married, when it is appointed to be paid her, and that without her mother's full consent first had and obtained in writing, then and in such case, I hereby will and bequeath her only 200*l.* and that to be paid her at her age of 23 years,” and made his wife (the defendant) executrix. The daughter married Young, the bankrupt, in the life of the father, without consent (though after a treaty and offer of 200*l.* portion, which had been refused): the husband, after marriage, applied for her fortune; the father offered him 200*l.* and the defendant Sarah said, if she survived her husband, and had it in her power, she would give her another 100*l.* The husband would not then accept it, but afterwards wrote a letter for it, and it was paid to Flemming for his use, who gave a receipt for it. Young became a bankrupt, and the plaintiff was his assignee, and filed a bill for the legacy. — Bill dismissed.

v. Scwell,

v. Sewell, 1 Atk. 96. † Ackworth v. Ackworth, 19th July, 1773. Jesson v. Jesson, 2 Vern. 255.

1783.

WARREN
against
WARREN.

Mr. Attorney General (for the younger children.) — The portions must be accumulative; the intent certainly is not clearly expressed, but it appears from the state of the family: he was a man of very large property. As to the execution of the power, Mr. Mansfield admits it would be good if the children were unprovided for, but a court of equity goes further, and will hold it well executed for younger children, unless it goes to the disherison of the heir at law, the same rule prevailing as in the case of supplying surrenders. The will, here, is within the limitation of the power. Though in this case there is not a valuable consideration, it is sufficient to its being a good execution of the power, that it is for a person having a meritorious consideration. When he made his will, his fortune was not diminished, there was no reason, therefore, to diminish the portions of the younger children. There are several cases where portions being to be raised by a settlement, and the money is afterwards paid eo nomine, the settlement has been held to be satisfied; but those cases do not apply to this; 10,000*l.* was to be raised by the settlement, 4000*l.* by the will, how can this be a satisfaction? If it was a debt being less, it would be no satisfaction; so held [*] in Rawlins v. Powel, that if the second portion is larger, it shall be a satisfaction. — It follows, that if the second portion be not as great, or greater than the former, it is not a satisfaction. As to his having forgotten the provision; he recites, that he had not provided for the wife; he might have forgotten the provision for the wife, without having forgotten that for the children, there are no such introductory words to that clause. The interest of the 4000*l.* is to be paid towards the education and maintenance; — he was conscious this was not sufficient, but must be supplied from elsewhere, which could only be from the settled fortunes. — As to Lord Hardwicke's language, that it is hard a party should take two portions, where one only is intended; it appears by Shudal v. Jekyll, 2 Atk. 516. that it does not apply, where the intent is to give both.

[ *308 ]

Lord Chancellor. — A great number of cases have been cited to shew that the Court leans against double portions: but I have not found that it would do as a distinct rule (2), that where a parent has made a provision by will for a child, whom he has afterwards provided for in marriage, it is prima facie a satisfaction. (2) If it is so prima facie, the Court should on all occasions examine whether there be ground enough to repel the presumption. Several of the cases appear to be repugnant to the rule. What is there to shew the extent of the parent's bounty? It would be difficult to reconcile Thomas v. Keymish, as reported by Freeman. (2 vol. 207.) If the rule is differently laid down, it must be subject to exceptions. It is important to consider the rule, because if there be no rule, the question will be, whether the presumption that he had forgotten the settlement will be sufficient. If there be a rule, it is † ACKWORTH v. ACKWORTH.

[ Vide 3 Ves. 528. ]

Before marriage, a sum of money, partly belonging to the husband, partly to the wife, was settled to the use of the husband for life; remainder to the wife for life, remainder to the children, to be equally divided among them. There were several children, and the money amounted to only 2400*l.* among them. The father afterwards made his will, and gave each of the children 2000*l.* and the residue of his estate among them. Lord Rathurst decreed, that what they took by the will should be in lieu of their portions under the settlement.

(2) Lord Thurlow never meant to deny the existence of such a rule in the case of a parent and child, relative to a portion. Vide 3 Ves. 526, 527. and the observations and other references, &c. in the first note, antea, p. 305.

1783.

WARREN
against WARREN.

[ *309 ]

much fortified by the apparent forgetfulness; but, without the rule, it is difficult to say, he did not mean it accumulatively. Suppose there to be such a rule, there is another question of some consequence, whether parties have not a right to contract in contradiction to it. Here, they have so contracted, if he shall advance portions in his lifetime, and guard it by writing. It is hard to say, that if he had advanced money without such a declaration, that he should not give it augmentatively. The argument is, that this is by will, not in his lifetime. It is not in the terms of the deed to be sure. Being a provision it might be held, that unless he guarded it by writing it would be the extent, and the second question [*] would not be material. Suppose he had charged it in the words of the power, it would have been sufficient, though he had not ordered it to be raised by mortgage. If a man gives that ownership which must arise out of the power, it will be an execution of the power. I will try if I cannot, from the case, draw a rule, without resting on the Court's leaning to, or against double portions: the Court ought to go on more precise rules.

Adjourned.

Lord Thurlow not having pronounced judgment in this cause, it was re-argued before the Lords Commissioners, upon the 22d of this month, by Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Hardinge, and Mr. Hollist, for the plaintiffs, who used much the same arguments, and cited the same cases as upon the former occasion, except that Mr. Hollist added to those formerly cited, † Byde v. Byde, East. 1 Geo. 3. before Lord Northington, and the † Duke of Somerset v. the Duchess of Somerset and others, 9, 10, and 11th of March, 1767, before Lord Camden.

Mr. Ken-

[S. C. 2 Eden,
Ca. Ch. 19.
Quod vide.]

† Byde v. Byde. — R. S. Byde, having issue by a former wife one son, upon marrying a second wife, by settlement, July 3, 1699, settled lands on himself and his wife, for their lives, remainder to trustees to sell the same to his son, by the former marriage, for 5000*l.* for a provision for the children by the second marriage. Afterwards, having three children, and his wife being enceint, he by will, July 10, 1705, gave 1000*l.* to each of the three children by the second marriage, by name [as and for his and her portion respectively], and 1000*l.* to the child of which the wife was enceint, and charged his lands with these portions. After his death, the son paid the 1000*l.* portions, and accepted the purchase, and the wife dying in 1755, after her decease, the plaintiff, the only surviving child of the marriage, brought this bill to have the purchase completed, and to be paid the 5000*l.* over and above her portion under the will. Lord Northington thought the testator meant to give each child an election, and that, by accepting the legacies, they had made their election to take under the will; and therefore dismissed the bill without costs.

‡ Duke of Somerset v. the Duchess Dowager of Somerset. Lords Webb, William and Francis Seymour, and Vincent John Biscoe, Esq. administrator of Lady Mary, his wife.

Sir Edward Seymour, and Mr. Webb, the paternal and maternal grandfathers of the plaintiff, upon the marriage of the plaintiff's father, entered into articles of agreement, dated March 2, 1716, — whereby Sir Edward Seymour agreed to settle the estates at Berry-Pomeroy, on the plaintiff's father, chargeable with the following portions for younger children, namely, 4000*l.* each, for one or two, or 12,000*l.* equally to be divided between three or more children, payable at 21, or marriage, which should first happen after the death of the father, besides which he agreed to advance 1600*l.* to be laid out in lands as an additional jointure for plaintiff's mother, and for the benefit of her issue male.

Sir Edward Seymour died in 1740, — whereupon plaintiff's father, the last Duke of Somerset, took under the marriage articles: and he also died in 1757, leaving plaintiff his eldest son, defendants his widow and younger children.

But plaintiff's father, by his will, made fresh provision for every branch of his family, and bequeathed to his three younger sons 5000*l.* each; and to his daughters the third part of his Worcestershire estates, or 8000*l.* in lieu thereof, with cross bequests between his sons and daughter, in case of any of them dying under age, and charging the whole upon his estates at large, which he devises to the plaintiff, his eldest son, with remainders over to his younger sons, successively in tail male.

Plaintiff filed his bill, praying, amongst other things, that his younger brothers, and sister's husband, might elect to take under the articles or will.

Defendants,

[*] Mr. Kenyon, Mr. Arden, and Mr. King, again, argued for the defendants.

And this day, Lord Commissioner Ashhurst pronounced judgment. The question is, whether the two thousand pounds given by the will, shall go in part satisfaction of the provision made by the settlement: and we are of opinion that it shall. Upon the general ground, this is a strong case for satisfaction. The general rule (3) is laid down in Clark v. Sewell, (3 Atk. 96.) In the case of portions, as both move from the same person, the Court will overlook the difference of the time of payment, and consider the one as a satisfaction for the other. In Lee v. Cox, 3 Atk. 419. the distributable share was considered as a satisfaction. In Hartop v. Whitmore, 1 Wms. 681. a less sum was so considered. Copley v. Copley, 1 Wms. 147. and Jesson v. Jesson, 2 Vern. 255. are exceeding strong cases. They all shew the rule to be, that whether the sum be greater or less is immaterial, but in the latter case, it shall only be a satisfaction pro tanto. On the other side, they have cited Saville v. Saville, and Duffield v. Smith. Saville v. Saville, 2 Atk. 458. turned on the peculiar penning of the will. Duffield v. Smith, 2 Vern. 258. was held no satisfaction, because less, and the other portions were contingent; and as to the sum given by the brother, there was a fair implication that he meant to give it in addition. As to the question whether the testator had forgotten the prior provision; it is admitted, if he had, this bequest ought to go in satisfaction. — We think there is ground to suppose that he had forgotten it; he shews he had as to the wife, which makes it probable he had also forgotten the other. A further reason for supposing this is, his giving the interest of the 2000*l.* for maintenance. In truth, it is probable that, at the time when the settlement was made, his whole intent in suffering the recovery was to bar the intail, and the other part of the deed was only suggested as what he [*] might as well do, and that the provision had afterwards been forgotten. We must decree, therefore, that the 2000*l.* is in part satisfaction, and that upon the payment of the 5000*l.* each, the surviving trustee is to assign the term.†

1783.

WARREN
against WARREN.

[ *310 ]

[ *311 ]

Defendants, Lord Francis Seymour and Vincent Biscoe, submit to the Court, whether they are compelled to make their election; but, if compelled, prefer to take under the will, as evidently the larger and better provision.

At the hearing of the cause, the Lord Chancellor directed all the defendants to make their election.

† See on this subject the case of Hanbury v. Hanbury, post. vol. 2. 352—529. [and Mr. Eden's notes on Byde v. Byde, 2 vol. 25. with note (1) antea.]

(3) See the first note to this case.

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, Oct. 31.
Lords Commissioners, Lord
Loughborough,
Ashurst, Ho-
tham.

LINGARD and others, against the Earl of DERBY and others.

THOMAS Barlow, by his will, directed all his debts to be paid out of his estate with all convenient speed, and ordered his personal

T. B. devised his estate to trustees to pay yearly rents and profits (1), in discharge of his wife's jointure, his sister's annuity, and in payment of his debts, and the interest thereof; then to certain uses. — The creditors file a bill, praying a sale: but this Court cannot, under such a devise, decree the estate to be sold. (1) Devising an estate for payment of debts, takes it out of the statute of fraudulent devises. (2)

(1) So also Conyngham v. Conyngham, 1 Ves. 522. and Supplement, p. 221., where the case is given from the Registrar's Book. See also the observations and references there, 1783.

LINGARD
against DERBY.

estate to be converted into money and applied in aid of his real estate, in payment of funerals and debts, as far as the same would extend. In case he should die without issue, he devised his estate of Barlow Hall, (subject to the charge) to trustees in trust, to pay the yearly rents and profits as follow: In discharge of his wife's jointure, and his sister's annuity, and in payment of such of his debts, and the interest thereof, as his personal estate should fall short of satisfying, and subject thereto to pay his brother Humphrey Barlow, an annuity of 100*l. per annum*, to continue till after his debts affecting his lands should be paid off by the rents and profits of his estate, and immediately after the payment of his debts, then 200*l. per annum*, in lieu of the 100*l.* and an additional annuity of 50*l.* to his sister. And, as to the residue of the rents and profits, he gave them to the first and other sons of Humphrey Barlow, with remainders over. One of the sisters has a son, who, under the limitations, is first remainder-man, in tail, in esse. The bill was filed by the specialty creditors, and annuitants against Lord Derby, a mortgagee, and the other parties; praying an account of the personal estate, and that if it should prove insufficient to pay the debts, the deficiency might be made up by sale of the real estate. Upon a reference to the Master, it appeared that the personal estate was little more than 300*l.* and the debts amounted to above 8000*l.* and his Honour ordered the money for the payment of debts, to be raised by mortgage. It came on, now, again for further directions, it appearing by the report, that a sufficient sum could not be raised by mortgage, and the question merely was, whether the Court, under the will, could order a sale.

[ *312 ]

[*] Mr. Arden (for the plaintiffs) contended, that under the words of this devise the estate might be sold, and cited, for that purpose, Rawlins v. Brotherson, in the Exchequer, Feb. 21. 1783, which was a term of five hundred years, and a direction to pay, out of the annual rents and profits, all the debts the testator should owe; then to pay legacies, and, after payment of both, the term to cease; the Court thought the term ought to be sold. — The Master of the Rolls having decreed a mortgage, it may be equally a sale, for a mortgage may be equivalent to a sale. — Such a will as this cannot stand by the statute of fraudulent devises; for a bond creditor, without the devise, may compel a sale of the land, and this devise tends to defeat his claim. Can the devise amount to saying the debts shall not be paid? If there is not a sale, the annuitants never can have any thing during their lives.

Lord Loughborough (without hearing the other side). — Where the devise is to pay the debts out of the profits of the estate, it is equivalent to a devise to the trustees to sell, and a decree for a sale is only an execution of that trust. But I am afraid you will find that, both by the words and construction of the statute of fraudulent devises, where there is a devise for the payment of debts, it takes the case out of the statute † (2), and it stands as it would have done before the statute was made :

† See the statute, 3 William and Mary, c. 14. and what Lord Hardwicke says of it in the Earl of Bath v. the Earl of Bradford, 2 Vesey, 590. See also the case of Hughes v. Doulsen, post. vol. 2. p. 614. [and 2 Cox, Ca. Ch. 170.] where Lord Thurlow differed in opinion, on this subject, from Lord Loughborough.

there, as to the general construction of the words "rents and profits," &c. in wills or settlements, especially on Mr. Cox's note to Trufford v. Ashton, 1 P. W. 418.

(2) Not so however, if the effect of the devise would be to take away from a creditor any fund unto which he had a right to resort, or if any fund would prove deficient by the mode prescribed. Vide in Manning v. Spooner, 3 Ves. 118, 119. and in Hughes v. Doulsen, post. 2 vol. 614. and 2 Cox, Ca. Ch. 170.

the

the creditor can come only as the will directs. (3) I take it to be the clear intent of the testator here, that not an acre should be alienated for the payment of his debts; therefore, there cannot be a sale.

It was ordered to stand over in its present state, to give an opportunity to the parties to apply to parliament.

1783.

LINGARD
against
DERBY.

(3) This is not correct; for if the devise for payment of the debts does not provide for that object in a practicable manner, the statute will apply. Lord Thurlow, expressly advertng to the principal case, says, "As to the case that has been cited, if it is only meant to determine that the inconveniency of the mode prescribed by the testator for the payment of his debts would not bring it within the statute of fraudulent devises, provided the fund was ultimately sufficient, I agree with that case; but if it was meant to be laid down, that even though by the mode prescribed the fund would turn out ultimately insufficient for the purpose, I never can accede to that. Whenever such a case comes before me, I will refer it to the Master to state to me, whether, according to the mode prescribed by the testator, the debts could be paid, and if the Master tells me that the debts cannot be paid by this mode, I will consider this as a fraudulent devise until I am controuled by the House of Lords. I wish that whoever decided the case alluded to, had gone to the length of declaring, that although the fund as directed to be applied appeared to be insufficient for the purpose, yet because there was a devise for payment of debts, the bill should be dismissed; in order to have the point properly discussed. For my part, I never will give into that doctrine, until I am compelled to it by the highest authority." See in Hughes v. Doulsen, post. 2 vol. 614. and 2 Cox, Ca. Ch. 170.

[ *313 ]

[*] MICHAELMAS TERM,

24 Geo. 3. 1783.

ALEXANDER Lord LOUGHBOROUGH, Sir WILLIAM } Lords
HENRY ASHHURST, Sir BEAUMONT HOTHAM, } Commissioners.
JOHN LEE, Esq. Attorney General.
JAMES MANSFIELD, Esq. Solicitor General.

THONG against BEDFORD.

Lords Commissioners, Lord
Loughborough,
Ashurst, Ho-
tham.

WALTER Thong, by his will, devised the premises in question to his wife for her life, remainder to Sawbridge and another, as trustees, to preserve contingent remainders, and immediately after the decease of his wife, he gave the same to his daughter Elizabeth (one of the defendants) for her life, remainder to the same trustees to preserve contingent remainders during the life of his daughter, remainder to the heirs of her body lawfully begotten, remainder to plaintiff, his heirs and assigns for ever:—and went on thus: "It being my will and meaning, that after the decease of my wife, my said daughter shall have only an estate for life in the premises; and that, after her decease, it may go to the heirs of her body, and, in default of such heirs, should vest

W. T. devised to his wife for life, remainder to trustees, to preserve contingent remainders; remainder to E. for life; remainder to trustees ut supra; remainder to the heirs of her body;
remainder over.

In a subsequent clause he declared his intention, that E. should have only a life-estate. Upon a bill filed by the remainder-man for a conveyance, in which E. should take only a life-estate; it was demurred to, and the demurrer allowed, because these are all legal estates.

" in 1788.

Thong
against Bedford.
[ *314 ]

“ in my grandson (the plaintiff) and his heirs: and that my said daughter should not have any power to defeat my intent;” and he gave powers to his trustees to do all necessary acts to effectuate his intentions. [*] The wife of the testator is dead. — The bill was filed by the remainder-man in fee, praying, that the will should be declared to be well proved, that the trusts might be carried into execution, that the defendant, Elizabeth, might be declared to be only tenant for life, and that a conveyance might be made by the trustees, and all proper parties join therein, to Elizabeth for life, remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to her first and other sons, in strict settlement; remainder to daughters, and, in default of such, to the plaintiff in fee. — To this bill the defendants demurred, and for cause of demurrer said, that the defendant Elizabeth is seised of a vested estate-tail; and that the plaintiff has no vested estate whatsoever.

It was argued by Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Scott, in support of the demurrer; 1st. that these were legal estates; 2d. that even were they equitable interests, Elizabeth would have an estate-tail. 1st. These are legal estates in the several takers; no estate is given to the trustees, they are purely trustees to preserve contingent remainders. There are no debts to be paid, or acts to be performed by them. — There is no case in the books where trustees of this sort are construed to have any estate given them for other purposes. The power given to do all proper acts is merely equivalent to the common power of trustees to preserve contingent remainders, to make entries, and bring actions. 2d. On the second head, they cited Bale v. Coleman, 1 Wms. 142. Garth v. Baldwin, 2 Vesey, 646. Colson v. Colson, 2 Atk. 246. Ambrose v. Hodgson, Douglas, 323. Jones v. Morgan, ante, p. 206.

[ *315 ]

Mr. Kenyon and Mr. Lloyd (for the defendants) argued, 1st. That these were equitable estates; that the trustees were to do acts to prevent the testator's intent from being defeated: in order so to do, they must have such an estate in them as would enable them to do such acts as should be necessary, and whenever there are acts to be done, the Court will raise an estate for the purpose, as in Shaw v. Weigh, 1 Eq. Abr. 184. — They cited to the second question, West v. Errissey, 2 Wms. 349. Neale v. Neale, before Lord Bathurst; Lloyd v. Roberts, before Lord [*] Northington; Lowe v. Davies, Lord Raym. 1561. Bagshaw v. Spencer, 1 Vesey, 142. Lisle v. Grey, 2 Lev. 223. Attorney General v. Sutton, 1 Wms. 754. Papillon v. Voyce, 2 Wms. 471.

On the 11th of November Lord Loughborough delivered the opinion of the Court. — He stated the case, the prayer of the bill, and the cause of demurrer. — The case depends on two points; 1st. It is contended by the defendants, that these are devises of legal estates, consequently that the trustees have no estates to convey. If this proposition be true, the consequence is clear, that the demurrer must be allowed. 2d. That, supposing them equitable estates, Elizabeth is entitled to a vested estate-tail, consequently no conveyance can be ordered, as it would be nugatory. The second question involves the consideration of several important cases, as Bagshaw v. Spencer, and Garth v. Baldwin. It is unnecessary to enter into this question if the former is clear. And we are all agreed that these are legal estates. The first to the wife is a clear legal estate; that to the daughter is also a clear legal estate: after the widow's estate, unnecessarily, and after the daughter's, necessarily, as the parties thought, are introduced trustees to preserve contingent remainders, who take clear legal estates pur auter vie. The subsequent words go to restrain the estate of the daughter: how far they will operate is a proper question for another jurisdiction, they are not stronger than the words that have been used in other cases, as in Robinson v. Robinson, 3 Atk.

3 Atk. 736. the giving an estate without impeachment of waste, or the interposing trustees to preserve contingent remainders. But it is contended, from the power given to the trustees, that it is sufficient to turn their estates pour auter vie into an estate in fee, or that it is giving a power which requires a fee to be able to give it effect. In fair reasoning, the latter part of the proposition is no more than the first. If we were to use these words to enlarge the estate of the trustees, we should go too far, for it would be to render other words in the will useless.— The estates to the trustees for the lives of the wife and daughter must be struck out; they could not have a legal fee and estates pour auter vie at once in the same lands. The meaning only was, that they should have the powers incident to their character of trustees to [*] preserve contingent remainders. The demurrer must be allowed, and it is unnecessary to anticipate any future case as to the effect of the limitation. Demurrer allowed.

1783.

THONG
against BEDFORD.

[ *316 ]

TURNER against TURNER. [30 June. 10. 11 Nov.]

(Reg. Lib. 1783. B. fol. 105.)

Lords Commissioners, Lord
Loughborough,
Ashurst, Ho-
tham.

[S. C. Ambl.
776.]

[ *317 ]

NATHANIEL Turner, Esq. by his will, dated 7th January, 1734, gave to his wife, Elizabeth Turner, 300*l.* per annum during her life, to be paid annually by his executors, and after her death the said 300*l.* per annum should be improved by his executors, to make a fortune to be given to his first daughter who should marry, after the decease of his said wife, with the consent of the executors; and after one of his said daughters should be married, then to be improved, to make a fortune for the rest of his daughters' marriages, one after another; and when all his daughters were married, that the said 300*l.* a year should be given, and remain to his eldest son, Nathaniel Richard Turner, and on his decease to the heirs-male of his body; and in case of his having no issue male, then the same should remain to his next eldest son, and the heirs-male of his body; and gave the residue, real and personal, among all his children, to be equally divided: and appointed his three brothers executors [in trust]. He died soon after, leaving ten children, viz. five sons, named Nathaniel Richard Turner, Richard Farmer Turner, John Worthington Turner, William Turner, and Charles Turner, and five daughters.— Soon after his death, Sarah, one of the daughters, died, and the mother took out administration to her.— Soon after, a bill was brought in Chancery, in the name of the nine surviving children, against the mother as administratrix of Sarah, and against the executors for an account of the personal estate, and a distribution of the residue, according to the will.— A decree was obtained for that purpose on the 2d April, 1736, which directed the executors to pay the widow the 300*l.* a year, and to set apart a sum to answer the same.— The Master reported the [*] accounts, &c. as directed, and interest, and that 7500*l.* South Sea annuities had been set

N. T. devised an annuity of 300*l.* per annum to his wife for life, then to accumulate to make a portion for his first daughter who should marry; then, in order to raise portions for other daughters; then to remain to his eldest son, and, on his decease, to the heirs-male of his body, and in case of his having no issue, remainder to his next eldest son and his heirs-male.

The daughters married in the life of the wife; the eldest and two other sons of testator died, leaving the wife without issue. This is not personal estate, vesting absolutely in the eldest son (on the principle, that it would be an estate-tail in land;) neither does it vest as an executory devise in the fourth son of testator who survived, but it is an annuity, and being exhausted by the events, there being nobody to take it as such, sinks into the residuary estate of the testator. (1)

(1) See passim in E. Stafford v. Buckley, 2 Ves. 170. 177, 178, 179, 180, &c. and in Priddy v. Rose, 3 Merivale, 86. 101, &c.

apart,

1783.

TURNER
against
TURNER.

apart, and reserved by the executors to answer the annuity of 300*l.* which he deducted out of the clear residue, and then divided what remained into ten parts.

By an order of 27th February, 1737, on the petition of Elizabeth Turner the widow, stating her apprehension that 7500*l.* South Sea annuities was not a sufficient security to answer the annuity, it was referred to the Master to set apart so much of the personal estate as would be sufficient.—The Master reported that he had set apart 10,000*l.* part of 20,000*l.* old and new South Sea annuities, to answer the annuity of 300*l.*

Nathaniel Richard Turner died in the lifetime of the widow his mother, without issue, having made his will, and devised the residue of his estate whatsoever and wheresoever, unto John Turner deceased, and plaintiff, upon trust for the several persons therein mentioned, and appointed them executors. — Richard Farmer Turner, John Worthington Turner, and William Turner afterwards died, without issue, in the lifetime of the said Elizabeth their mother. — The daughters had been satisfied their portions out of the rents and profits, in the lifetime of the mother. — Elizabeth the mother died 8th July, 1782.

The bill was brought by the plaintiff, surviving executor and trustee of Nathaniel Turner, to have the directions of the Court as to the 10,000*l.* South Sea annuities, and the annuity secured by it.

And the questions were, whether the 300*l.* per annum, under the will of Nathaniel Turner vested (subject to the life-estate of the wife, and to the accumulation for providing fortunes for the daughters) in Nathaniel Richard Turner, and passed by his will; or whether the same was part of the estate of Nathaniel Turner the elder undisposed of, and distributable among his next of kin; and also, whether Charles, in the events which have happened, took any, and what interest in the same, other than as claiming a distributive share of the undisposed estate of Nathaniel, or under the will of Nathaniel Richard his brother.

The cause came on first on the 30th of June last, at Lincoln's Inn Hall.

[ *318 ]

[*] Mr. Selwyn (for plaintiffs).—An absolute interest passed by the will to Nathaniel Richard; the testator orders it to go to him, and the heirs male of his body, which, in real estate, would be an estate-tail; and therefore this being personalty, vested absolutely.

Mr. Madocks (for Charles).—This is the same as if he had ordered a sufficient part of the personal estate to produce 300*l.* a year, to be set aside for his wife for life, then the interest to be paid to his daughters as they should marry; and when they should all be married, to be given to Nathaniel Richard Turner, and upon his decease, to the heirs-male of his body. Nathaniel Richard has given all his interest among the other children, so that if Charles has no claim, it comes to the same thing as if it was distributable.

Mr. Mitford (for Charles).—Charles's claim is as next eldest son, Nathaniel Richard being dead without issue. This is a gift to the wife of an annuity as a general charge; that gift satisfied, the next, and every subsequent gift are substantive and separate gifts, first to the wife, then to the daughters, then to the son,—not limitations over. Nathaniel Richard, being dead at the time of the death of the wife, could not take: then the other gift takes place to the next eldest son, by which he meant such son as should be eldest at the death of the wife; Charles is the only person who then sustained that title.

Mr. Kenyon (for the defendants in the same interest with the plaintiffs).—The annuity given to the daughters, &c. is certainly the same annuity that was first given to the wife, and is referred to as such; there is no ground for the ingenuity which has represented them as separate annuities, and Charles in the light of taking a substantive gift.

As a chattel-interest, it vested in Nathaniel Richard. Supposing it to be an annuity, to continue for ages, it would be a fee-simple conditional at common law. No limitation could be made after the estate-tail to Nathaniel Richard, there could be nothing but a reverter, which would bring it to the general fund ; but I contend, that it vested absolutely in Nathaniel Richard. It was held in a case cited here lately from the year-book, that the vesting was not suspended till the death of the first taker.† It [*] was so held also in Pelham v. Gregory, 5 Brown's Parliament Cases, 435.

1783.

TURNER
against
TURNER.

[ *319 ]

Mr. Scott (for other defendants in the same interest.)—The case must be argued upon absurd principles, if it is not allowed that Nathaniel Richard took an estate-tail ; for the testator certainly meant he should take as large an interest as any other son, and the next eldest son would take an estate tail. But I argue, that Charles is not within the description of the next eldest son. If the intermediate son had had issue, the testator did not mean to prefer Charles to that issue ; he, therefore, meant his next eldest son at the time of making the will. The words "heirs male of his body," are only descriptive of the quantity of interest he was to take. The whole is a distribution of the same fund, and is the common case of money given to A. for life, remainder over, which vests immediately. Suppose it to have been distributable to all the sons, the interest would have been vested : then it must vest in the single object. Corbet v. Palmer, 2 Eq. Abr. 548.

The cause stood over to the 7th of July, when it was in the paper for judgment.

Lord Loughborough. — A doubt has struck me. The subject of the bequest is, an annuity of 300*l.* per annum, given to the wife, and afterwards to the daughters, and then that it should be, and remain to the eldest son. The first question is, what estate Nathaniel Richard took ; the second, whether it vested in the life of the wife. But I have a doubt, whether Nathaniel Richard took any interest. Where a person, if the subject was land, would take an estate-tail, there he should in personalty take an absolute interest ; but my doubt is, whether this rule is applicable to the subject matter. An annuity cannot be barred by the same means as a real estate. No recovery can be suffered of it, Dr. and Student Dial. 1. c. 30. (p. 97.) What is the consequence ? that you cannot entail an annuity ; therefore you do not reason aptly to an annuity from another kind of estate. It can only be affected by a feasible condition. Then Nathaniel-Richard Turner took nothing, for nothing would have passed to him but the use. Then there is a reverter in the donor, (Nathaniel Richard taking nothing,) which will be distributable. But there may be another question, whether it may not pass by an executory devise. If it [*] may, it would be a conditional devise to Nathaniel Richard, with an executory devise to somebody else, — as for instance, to Charles. Then it would be a question, whether it could be distributable during the life of Charles. It will be material to consider, whether there be any rule of law to prevent its passing by executory devise ; from whence another question will arise, whether the description applies to Charles. If there can be no such executory devise, then it must be a reverter, and part of the testator's personal estate. There was a case before Lord Northington (which bore two or three arguments) of Middleton v. Price. (2) It was of an annuity out of the customs of the port of Hull, granted in fee, and

[ *320 ]

† The Reporter presumes Mr. K. meant 37 Hen. 6. fo. 30. cited in Lord Hastings v. Douglas, Cro. Car. 344. and lately in Foley v. Burnell, ante, 274. et seq.

(2) It seems to have been compromised. Vide the report in Ambler, 391. 393.

1783.

TURNER
against
TURNER.

made the subject of a strict settlement. The question was, whether it would pass by a recovery.

Mr. Jackson (as, the reporter understands, Amicus Curiae.) observed, that the legislature, by the act of 4 & 5 W. considered a perpetual charge on the public revenue as real property, which it would be now, if the legislature had not expressly made it personal.

The cause again stood over, and was put in the cause paper for the first day of causes in Michaelmas term; but came on upon Monday, the 10th of November, when Mr. Selwyn and Mr. King argued for the plaintiffs, the representatives of N. R. Turner, the eldest son. Mr. Ambler for Mr. Clyfford, one of the representatives of Nathaniel Turner, the father; and Mr. Kenyon for other defendants, nearly in the same interests. Mr. Madocks and Mr. Mitford, for Charles; and Mr. Scott, for other defendants, nearly in the interest of the plaintiffs.

For the representatives of Nathaniel Richard, it was argued, that this was pure personal property, and having been given to him in such a manner, that, had it been land, he would have taken an estate-tail, he must have taken an absolute estate, expectant on the death of the mother, and the provision for the daughters, which has now taken effect; and that having, by his will, given his interest to his brothers and sisters, it must now be divided among them, and the representatives of those of them who are dead. That it had been contended, these were several annuities, but there is no room to separate or distinguish the one part from another. That the gift of personal estate in tail, gave the whole interest, 1 Rolle Abr. [*] 611.; Leventhorpe v. Ashbie, Seale v. Seale, 1 Wms. 290.; Daw v. Pitt, (Earl of Chatham v. Tothil, 6 Brown's Parliament Cases, 450.) was expressly the same limitation; there the first taker disposing of her whole estate, disposed of this interest. The gentlemen on the other side have likened this to a fee-simple-conditional at common law; the only cases of fee-simples-conditional, are those of estates pur auter vie, and of inheritable estates. In case of estates pur auter vie, the first taker may dispose of them by simple alienation, though he has not had issue. In personal chattels, he need neither have issue, nor alienate; it is absolutely vested in him at once, Finch v. Tucker, 2 Vern. 184. It has also been said, if it is not good in these views, that it may be so by way of executory devise; but here the limitation is, in case there shall be no heir-male, not upon a dying without issue living at the death. It is after a clear estate-tail.

In behalf of the representatives of the father. — It is a mistake, to say that the 10,000*l.* South Sea annuity, or any money, is the subject of debate in this cause; the questions relate to an annuity of 300*l.* a year. The 10,000*l.* South Sea annuity, is only a security for payment of it, the usual and proper caution of the court to require sufficient of the effects to be set apart to answer such demands. It is more or less, according to the interest the fund produces: 7500*l.* stock was at first set apart, and afterwards increased to 10,000*l.* stock. The subject matter being clearly an annuity, the next step is to see what sort of an annuity it is; and from thence judge of its continuance, whether it now is, or when it will be, at an end. It is not an ancient annuity, in esse, at the time of the devise — not perpetual — not issuing out of lands; but is a mere personal annuity, created de novo by the will — to have a limited duration, that is, as long as there shall be heirs-male of the body of the donees. When they fail, the annuity ceases; and the South Sea annuities become discharged from it, and are instantly distributable, as so much of the residue of Nathaniel Turner's estate, which was locked up as long as the annuity continued. It is not like a mere personal thing, as money; which, being given to one and the heirs, or heirs-male, of his body, body, passes the absolute interest in it to him, and any limitation over is void; but it has a peculiar property, a descendible quality, and will pass from heir male to heir male ad infinitum, unless a certain event happens, and an act is done, by which its progress is stopt; and the whole interest, as long as the annuity lasts, [*] becomes the property of one person, that is, the having issue-male and alienation. It differs from a rent-charge; it cannot be limited over, after a limitation to one and the heirs, or heirs-male, of his body as a rent-charge may; it is not the subject of a recovery or fine; is not within the statute de donis, but remains as it did at common law, before that statute. This kind of property is, in general, called a fee-simple-conditional, — properly so, as to rent-charge, — not so, as to a mere personal annuity, but which is the same thing, by performing the condition and alienation, the person acquires the whole interest. In case of a rent-charge, with a limited duration to A. and the heirs, or heirs-male, of his body, he may gain a fee; but it is a base-fee, determinable when the heirs, or heirs-male of the body fail. In case of a personal annuity, he may acquire the whole interest as long as the annuity lasts, but nothing beyond it, for no more is granted. In Chaplin v. Chaplin, 3 Wms. 229., a widow was held not entitled to dower, where the rent-charge determined on the death of her husband without issue-male; for there was nothing out of which she could have it, the grant being at an end: and it was particularly hard, because the rent-charge was given over in fee; but the person to whom it was given over, being owner of the land, the fee of the rent-charge was merged in law. Weeks v. Peach, 2 Lutw. 1218., in avowry for rent, was the case of a rent-charge. There were two questions. 1st. Whether a rent-charge could be limited over after an estate-tail, and held it might, being within the statute de donis, as issuing out of land. 2d. Whether it was necessary to name the grantee, or sufficient to aver that the grantee, or his heir-male, was existing to shew that the grant was not expired. This brings it to the true question between the parties; the widow being dead, and the portions for the daughters being satisfied. 1st. As to the claim of the executors and legatees of Nathaniel Richard. They cannot be intitled, for he never performed the condition; he died without issue, and therefore had no power of alienation. 2d. As to the claim of Charles, two answers are to be given to it. 1st. He is not the person described; he was not the next eldest son. It is not sufficient to say he was so at the death of the mother: to entitle him, he must be so at the death of the father. Suppose Richard, John, or William, had left issue-male, they would have taken, and not [*] Charles. — 2d. If he does answer that description, yet he cannot take, the limitation over to him being void; not because it is a limitation over of a mere personal thing, but because, after a grant of such an annuity to one and his heirs-male, the donor has nothing left but a possibility, and that is not grantable by a private person, though it is by the King, and so considered by Lord Hardwicke in the case of Lord Stafford v. Buckley, 2 Vesey, 170. Before the statute de donis, a rent-charge could not be limited over after an estate-tail. Plowden, Com. 35. And it was not settled that it could, till the case of Weeks v. Peach. In answer to the argument, that the limitation to the next heir-male is an executory devise. 1st. It is a remainder, and not an executory devise, Smith v. Farnaby, Cart. 52. An executory devise is the taking of something in a particular event out of an estate in fee, Pells v. Brown. Cro. Jac. 590. 2d. If it is an executory devise, it is too remote, Neither of those claims being founded, it follows that the residuary legatees in Nathaniel Turner's will are intitled to have the 10,000*l.* South-sea annuity distributed, as being now discharged of the annuity of 300*l.* which is at an end; for securing of which only, they have been locked up, or would have been distributed long ago.

[ *321 ]

1783.

TURNER
against
TURNER.

[ *322 ]

[ *323 ]

For 1783.

TURNER
against
TURNER.

[ *324 ]

For Charles.—It was argued, that at the death of the mother there was nobody but himself to take by the description. Admitting that it is a personal property of a peculiar species, which will be inheritable, and go to the heir, not the executor; and that it may be so limited, that it will be governed by the rules of a fee-simple-conditional, at common law, that when the party has issue, he may aliene: if he does not aliene, it remains his as long as there is issue: if he does, he may defeat the reverter. Here the reverter could not take place, because there is a person to take within the description; the other sons being dead, Charles now takes as the first taker. If it cannot be limited over after an estate-tail, still it is capable of being so limited, that if the first person never came into possession, another person may take. The intent was, that, when the mother died, and the other purposes were answered, the son who should then be eldest should take; (and this remainder cannot be too remote, for that which the testator looked at was, whether [*] Nathaniel Richard had, or had not, issue); so that Charles now takes it as a fee-simple-conditional at common law; if he has issue-male, he will have performed the condition; if not, it will revert to the donor. The words, next eldest son, under which Charles claims, could not apply to the second or third sons in being at the time of the will, for, as they were born, the testator might have described them; he therefore meant the next eldest son at the time it should vest.

The next day, November 11th, Lord Loughborough pronounced the judgment of the court, There are three sets of claimants, the representatives of Nathaniel Richard Turner claim what is given by the will, or what comes instead of it, as personal property limited to him and the heirs of his body, which being an estate-tail in land, they say gives him the personalty absolutely. Charles insists the annuity is still a subsisting charge, to which he is entitled, at least for life, and if he has a son, that that event will make it his own. The other claimants are the representatives of the father, contending, that the annuity is at an end, and they are entitled to it as part of the residue. It has been very fully argued, and the first thing to be considered, is, what is the subject-matter? Not the South Sea annuities, which never were the testator's property, but were purchased by the court as a security merely. Mr. Ambler contends clearly and justly, that it is not a gross sum of money, or an aliquot part of the testator's property, but a mere annuity. (3) Cases of this kind do not happen often; but the law is clear as to this sort of property. It has been a little argued, that this must always be considered as personal property; but this is not so, for, from the earliest period of the law, this species of property has been as clearly distinguished as either real or personal estate. Fitzherbert, tit. Annuity, has defined it, — that it either proceeds from the lands or the coffers of another. His definition is mostly copied (though with additions) from Co. Lit. 144. b. Where it is charged upon land, it may be real or personal at the election of the holder: he may proceed against the land, or against the person. If it is out of the coffers, it is personal only as to the remedy; but the property itself is real as to its descent to the heir. In Buckley v. Lord Stafford, it is said, that where there is a rent-charge, and out of it a new rent created, it will be a mere annuity, and will not charge the land, but the [*] person only. An annuity then, when granted with words of inheritance, is descendible; but as to its security, is personal only: it may be granted in fee; of course, it may as a qualified or conditional fee. But it cannot be entailed, Co. Lit. 20. and consequently there can be no remainder of it, for there can be no remainder of property which is not within the statute de donis. Weeks v.

[ *325 ]

(3) See in E. Stafford v. Buckley, 2 Ves. 177. 181, &c.

Peach (4), where it was held, contrary to an old opinion, that there might be a remainder of a rent-charge, [after an estate-tail]; but for a reason which shews that there could not of an annuity. It is argued, that, as there could not be a remainder, there could not be a limitation by way of executory devise. I cannot see the reason of this, provided the executory devise was within the common rules of executory devises. If the objection, that there is only a possibility, which cannot be granted, prevail, there is no reason why a like annuity (for there is no necessity that it should be the same) should not be raised; but it will, from what I shall observe in the sequel, be unnecessary to determine this. Another character of this kind of property is, that an annuity must not tend to a perpetuity, for a fee-simple conditional must end, or become absolute, in the life of a particular person. We are all of opinion, that there is no ground for the claim of Charles. If it could take place by way of executory devise, I think it would be too remote. The words, next eldest son, cannot apply to Charles, who was the fourth son. It could not be intended he should take if either the second or third son had left issue, yet Charles would then have borne the description of next eldest son (at the death of the wife); therefore it must have meant the next brother to Nathaniel-Richard. The argument for the representatives of Nathaniel-Richard is equally excluded, as turning on the nature of the property being personalty only. The nature of the case being such, there is nobody now who can bring a writ of annuity; the purposes of the annuity being at an end, the annuity itself is so too, and the 10,000*l.* must return to the fund to which it belongs, the residuary estate of Nathaniel Turner the father.

Decreed it therefore to be divided into ten parts to the surviving children of Nathaniel Turner, and the representatives of those who are dead.

(4) 2 Salk. 577. 1 Ld. Raym. 679. and Lutw. 584.

[*] DIXON against SAVILLE and others.

(No entry.)

BILL filed by the plaintiff, widow of Abraham Dixon, praying, that her right of dower might be declared, and that she might be paid one-third of the rents and profits of the estate in question, or her dower be set out. The bill stated that Dixon, the husband, died seised in fee of the premises, and devised the same to Arthur Onslow, the infant defendant, in fee; that he made no provision for the plaintiff his widow. — The defendants, in their answers, set forth, that the estate was, prior to the marriage, and still continues in mortgage in fee to the defendant Holford; and that, therefore, the plaintiff has no right to dower.

Mr. Arden, Mr. Hardinge, and Mr. Brown (for the plaintiff.) — The estate of the husband was covered by a mortgage in fee, before the marriage. — The husband thought this circumstance would not deprive the plaintiff of the right of a wife, and has therefore only given her, by his will, his carriage and horses. Although the current of opinion has been against the claim, there has been no determination that a wife shall not have dower of an equity of redemption. As to a trust-term, — in Lady Williams v. Sir Bouchier Wray, 1 Wms. 137. Lord Keeper Wright refused to aid the dowress, by removing the trust-term out of her way;

VOL. I,

§

but 1783.

TURNER
against
TURNER.

Lords Commissioners, Lord
Loughborough,
Ashurst, Hotham.

A widow is not dowable of an equity of redemption.

[ *326 ]

1783.

DIXON
against SAVILLE.

[ *327 ]

but his decree was reversed by Lord Harcourt. In Lady Radnor v. Vandebendy, Shower's Parlt. Cases, 69. Vandebendy was a purchaser; and, on that ground, might defend himself against the widow's right of dower. (1) Equity goes so far as to remove legal obstacles out of the way; but the claim is of so precarious a nature, that a purchaser shall not have a term taken from him. But there is a great opinion in our favour, not shaken yet by any determination, Banks v. Sutton, 2 Wms. 700. where two points were made, first, as to the trust-term; second, as to the equity of redemption: this latter has never been overturned; although the former, of the difference between a trust descended, and a trust created, has in the Attorney General v. Scott, Forrester, 138. A mortgage in fee is, in equity, considered as nothing more than a pledge; and shall only be liable to the burthen of the mortgage-money. In all other respects, the [*] mortgagor has the same property as before; so, in the case of a revocation of a will, the mortgage is only a revocation pro tanto, Lord Lincoln v. Roll, Shower's Parlt. Cases, 154. because it is only a pledge. It would be strange the doctrine should be different as to dower. Sir Joseph Jekyll thought it was not. In Godwin v. Winmore, 2 Atk. 525. the other point only is determined. The Attorney General v. Scott is said to have exploded Banks v. Sutton; but, there, it was a trust-estate before the marriage. In Fletcher v. Robinson, the case cited there, the man had done every thing that he could to obtain the legal estate. Lord Hardwicke's opinion was against Sir Joseph Jekyll's upon trust-estates, but not upon an equity of redemption. In Casborne v. Scarfe, 1 Atk. 603. he held that, on a mortgage in fee, previous to the marriage, the husband was entitled to the tenancy by the courtesy. In that case Penville v. Luscombe is cited, as determined by Sir Joseph Jekyll, that there could be no possessio fratris of an equity of redemption; and it is also said that, in the case of Reynolds v. Messing, 11th March, 1730, Sir Joseph Jekyll determined that there could not be dower of an equity of redemption, and that the same was determined in Robinson v. Tongue†, Michaelmas, 1730, by Lord Chancellor King. The case of Reynolds v. Messing, or Reynolds v. White (as it stands in the Register's book) is misrepresented, and does not warrant the point said to be determined by it.

Mr. Kenyon and Mr. Graham (for the defendants.)—It is recited as the law of the land, in the preamble to the statute of uses, that one of the evils of uses was, that they prevented dower. We are called upon to shew a difference between a mortgage in fee, and mortgage for years. In the latter case, the writ of dower lies; only the judgment is with a cesset executio during the term: in the other, no writ of dower lies at all.—Dower being a legal demand, the widow can have no right to have it assigned in equity. The attempt to argue this case, is to remove landmarks.

[ *328 ]

Lord Loughborough.—The argument in the cases cited has generally sprung from compassion.—The case of an estate by the courtesy in a trust, is the anomalous case, not the rule that the wife [*] shall not have dower. I confess I think it so much settled, that it would be wrong to discuss it much.

Ashhurst, }
Hotham, } Lords Commissioners, of the same opinion.

Bill dismissed, but without costs, the defendants not praying them.

† This point does not appear in any of the reports of this case.

(1) So also Swannock v. Lyford, Ambl. 6. But see Maundrell v. Maundrell, 7 Ves. 567. and 10 Ves. 246. et seq.; from whence it is settled, that a purchaser, to avail himself of an outstanding term, must have procured an assignment of it, or a declaration of trust, or have obtained possession of the deed which created it. See also Sugden on Vend. & Purch. 377, 378, 379, &c. (5th edit.)

1783.

BOWKER and others, next of Kin of FRANCES BAYLEY, Widow, Plaintiffs.

HUNTER and EATON, Executors of the said FRANCES BAYLEY'S
Will, - - - - - Defendants.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. A. fol. 40.)

In Court, Hil.
1783, before
Lord Thurlow.
In Court, Mich.
1783. Lords
Commissioners,
Lord Loughborough, Ash-
hurst, Hotham.

Unequal legacies given to the executors,
by their own names, they shall nevertheless take the residue. (1)

FRANCES Bayley, being possessed of a considerable personal estate, 31st January, 1777, made her will, containing, int. al. the following words: "And as to that temporal estate, wherewith it hath pleased God to bless me, I give and dispose thereof in manner following." — She then gave to Thomas Vickars Hunter, Gent. (one of defendants) the sum of 200*l.* — and after a great many legacies to a variety of persons, among whom were some of (but not all) the plaintiffs, the next of kin; she gave to the Rev. James Eaton (the other defendant) the sum of 50*l.* and, after some charitable legacies, she appointed Thomas Vickars Hunter and James Eaton, executors, but made no disposition of the residue. And the executors having proved the will, the plaintiffs filed this bill for an account of the residue of the testatrix's estate, and praying that, the executors having legacies, it might be distributed. The defendants admitted assets more than sufficient to pay debts, legacies, and funeral expences; but insisted that they had a right to her personal estate, there being nothing inconsistent with such right in the will, or indicative of a contrary intention; the legacies not being given to them as executors, but by their proper names, and there being a great inequality between them, by which the testatrix shewed she meant to dispose of the whole, and not to die intestate as to any part thereof.

Heard 28th January, 1783.

[*] Mr. Attorney General, and Mr. Hollist (for the plaintiffs) cited Brasbridge v. Woodroffe, 2 Atk. 68.; and Andrew v. Clarke, 2 Ves. 162. That since the case of Foster v. Munt (1 Vern. 473.), where a legacy is given to the executor, he shall not have the residue; and that it is so, notwithstanding the legacy is not expressly given for care and pains.

[ *329 ]

Lord Chancellor. — The simple question is, whether the giving legacies to the executors will turn them into trustees; though the legacies, being unequal, will point out a different view, and they will take differently, as the residue will go to them jointly.

Mr. Solicitor General (for defendants), to shew that they were not excluded by these legacies, cited Newstead v. Johnston, 2 Atk. 45. and a case in 4 Brown's Parlt. Cases, 1. where one executor has a legacy, the other none, neither is barred from taking the residue, though they will, by taking equal legacies. Unless it appears that the testator has given a specific legacy, and meant no more, the rule of law must prevail.

Mr. Balguy (on the same side) cited Lawson v. Lawson, in the House of Lords, 28th April, 1777, 7 Brown's Parlt. Cases, 511. in which Lord Mansfield said, that when the legacies to the executors are consistent with taking the residue, there is no implication to exclude them. — Lady Granville v. the Duchess of Beaufort, 1 Brown, Parlt. Ca. 305.

(1) See the observations and references in note (2) to Martin v. Rebow, antea, 154. the judgment in Clennel v. Lewthwaite, 2 Ves. jun. 471, &c. and Mr. Cox's elaborate note to Farrington v. Knightley, 1 P. W. 550. with Oliver v. Frewen, post. 590.

1783.

BOWKER
against
HUNTER.

Blinkhorn v. Feast, 2 Ves. 27. The same principle applies in the present case.

Mr. Attorney General (in reply) said, — Those cases were exceptions from the general rule. — That a wife shall take beneficially, notwithstanding her legacy. — So in the case of infants and specific legatees; but this case was within the rule itself.

[ *330 ]

Lord Chancellor. — I confess it struck me, at first, that the general rule did apply to this case, but I, now, think rather otherwise. — The first consideration is to make the rule systematical, to consider which way the presumption leans. The fundamental presumption which the law makes, is, that the appointment of executors is a gift to them of what is undisposed of. — It must be considered abstractedly from any thing interposed; therefore, but little can be rested upon the introductory words. — It rather turns on the general doctrine. — Where the executor loses the surplus, it is, because he is turned into a trustee. — [*] Here the intention is declared in more slender words than in any of the other cases. When the testator gives the executor part by express words, and in the same manner as he appoints him executor, it shews his intent to be different from that expressed by the fact of making him executor. — In order to make a gift of part a bar to taking the residue, the general gift must make the intent as clear as the other intention is from making him executor; where it will bear another intent, it will not bar him from taking the residue. The fundamental distinction is established, by laying it down that the rule, that the executor shall take the residue, must prevail, unless there is an irresistible (2) inference to the contrary. (3) Is the gift of unequal legacies purely the gift of part, in the same manner that they are appointed executors; and is it impossible to assign any other purpose for such a gift, than that of barring the residue? If the gift of the legacy is qualified, it is sufficient to prevent its barring the residue, or it may be given for a different purpose. The gift of unequal legacies may have a different ground from the gift of the whole: it may in many events be different; — for instance, if 100*l.* be given to one, and 50*l.* to the other, it may be different, in case of deficiency, from giving the one 50*l.* the other nothing. The implication is, that he must have had a different intent, and that must rebut the equity; therefore the bill must be dismissed, and the rather on account that the decree of the Master of the Rolls (in Brasbridge v. Woodroffe) goes to the point.
Bill dismissed.

Upon a rehearing, the cause was re-argued very fully, and all the authorities in the books gone through; but as they are all cited or referred to in Lord Loughborough's argument, it is unnecessary to repeat them here.

Lord Loughborough delivered the opinion of the Court. — All that is material to state of the will of the testatrix is, that it contains a great many legacies to persons, several of whom are her next of kin; among the other legatees are Hunter and Eaton, who are afterwards appointed executors. The bill is filed by the next of kin for the surplus. The executors contend, that there is nothing in the will to prevent their taking it, they having unequal legacies, which amounts to the same as if there was a legacy only to one of them. This is a rehearing from a decree of Lord Thurlow's, who held the executors to be entitled

(2) This is incorrect. The presumption must be “a strong and violent one,” as is stated in many of the cases. See per M. R. in Clennell v. Lewthwaite, 2 Ves. jun. 471, &c. Langham v. Sanford, 2 Merivale, 6. 16, &c. &c.

(3) See (inter alia) per Lord Eldon C. in Langham v. Sanford, 2 Merivale, 16, 17, &c. and the references in the note to Martin v. Rebow, antea, 154.

[*] to the surplus. In stating the opinion of the Court, which is in affirmance of Lord Thurlow's decree, I shall state very generally the grounds on which it seems to rest. By law the executor takes the whole. This is the common opinion of the world, but however that may be, it is certainly the legal meaning, that where the law casts the property, there ought to be something certain to take it away. That there may be circumstances to turn the executor into a trustee, appears from the subsequent cases. Foster v. Munt, 1 Vern. 473. Pring v. Pring, 2 Vern. 99. Cordel v. Noden, 2 Vern. 148. were all decrees that the executors should be trustees for the next of kin, without any expression of a trust. In all of them, the executors had legacies, but the question did not turn upon the legacies alone, but upon express words, to shew they were only to have the office, not to take the surplus. (4) The legacies were for care and pains which the testator intended should be repaid. Cordel v. Noden was particular, for the decree was for the persons who claimed under the will. — Thus it stood in 1690, but the point soon proceeded further, for in Petit v. Smith, 1 Wms. 7. (5) and in Lord Bristol's Case, 2 Vern. 645. — (see 3 Wms. 194. note) — it was so held upon the legacy alone, upon the idea that the gift of a part excludes that of the whole, and, from that time, this has been treated as settled, insomuch that upon a doubted case, Mr. Vernon, an old practitioner, said he considered it as a settled point. This is an established rule, but must not be considered as invariable. Several exceptions have been taken to it. 1st. Where the gift to the executor was only an exception out of another legacy, as in the cases of Griffith v. Rogers, Pre. Ch. 231. and Lady Granville v. the Duchess of Beaufort, 1 Wms. 114. — Where there has been a specific instead of a pecuniary legacy, a distinction has been attempted to be taken, Southcot v. Watson, 3 Atk. 226. but I cannot find that it has prevailed. — Another distinction is as to the quality of the gift, as in Ball v. Smith, 2 Vern. 675. where the specific thing given had belonged to the wife, before the marriage; and in the late case of Lawson v. Lawson, H. L. 28th of April, 1777 (6), where it was of a chose in action, which was hers, and never had been reduced into possession. (7) — Another distinction has been made upon the condition of the legatee, as where the executor was the wife, or near relation of the testator, and the next of kin remote; but that distinction, though it has prevailed in some [*] cases, has, in others, been overruled, 1 Wms. 549. 552. † — Another where there has been a legacy to the executor, and also to the next of kin; that succeeded in one case, Attorney General v. Hooker, 2 Wms. 338. but has since been denied. Davers v. Davers, 3 Wms. 40. and Andrew v. Clarke, 2 Vesey, 162. — Another difference has been taken where there were two or more executors, and a legacy given to the one, but nothing to the other, Buffar v. Bradford, 2 Atk. 220. There the intent has been apparent to prefer the one to the other, and, there being no presumption in favour of the next of kin as to the one, there has been held to be none as to the other. From all these various distinctions, a general conclusion has, in late times, been laid down, that where the legacy is consistent with the intent of the executor's taking the whole, it shall not exclude him from it.

† See also Martin v. Rebow, May 7, 1782, ante, 154.

(4) See note (4) to Martin v. Rebow, ante, 154.

(5) See Mr. Cox's notes, ibid. and 1 vol. 550. et vide 2 Ves. jun. 472, &c.

(6) 4 Bro. P. C. 21. octavo edit. and 7 vol. 511. folio edit.

(7) It was not exactly a chose in action. The sum was 300*l.*, which Mrs. L.'s husband had received as part of her fortune, and which was lent out on bond at the date of the will. Vide 4 Bro. P. C. 21, &c.

1783.

BOWKER
against HUNTER.

[ *331 ]

[ *332 ]

1783.

BOWKER
against HUNTER.

[ *333 ]

Lawson v. Lawson, ubi supra by Lord Mansfield. The reasoning is fair, though I confess the rule has great latitude, and a good deal of uncertainty; but it is doubtful whether it can be drawn with more certainty after the points which have been determined; viz. 1st. That the appointment of an executor is a gift to him of the whole. 2dly. That a legacy given to him excludes him from the surplus. I doubt whether, after these points have been settled, a more certain rule can be laid down. The case now before the Court is a case where there are legacies to both the executors, but of different sums. If you try the effect of this, and the giving one of them a legacy and the other none, in every possible way, it will be the same to the executors, and to the testator's assets; and may, therefore, be fairly said not to give the idea of confining the bounty of the testator as to the residue. I acknowledge I do not find the ground of reasoning from the cases so strong as to resist authorities, and, therefore, if there was any satisfactory case cited, I should have thought it safer to have rested on authority, than to have innovated from my own reasoning. With respect to the cases cited for the executors, Newstead v. Johnson, 2 Atk. 45. was cited as a case of unequal legacies, and the executors taking the surplus; but Lord Hardwicke, in his notes, says, he decided that case on the principle of Griffith v. Rogers, and Lady Granville v. the Duchess of Beaufort. — Buffar v. Bradford, 2 Atk. 220. That is a legacy to one executor and none to the other, though [*] there was a devise with limitations, under which he was interested. Blinkhorn v. Feast, 2 Ves. 27. 1 Wils. 285. Burn's Ecclesiastical Law. It is said, as to this case, that they were specific legacies, but that distinction was not relied upon by Lord Hardwicke, in Southcot v. Watson, 3 Atk. 226. — but, on the contrary, rejected. Whether it is a good distinction, I do not now say, but if Lord Hardwicke held the same opinion at the time of the two determinations, that circumstance could not weigh in Blinkhorn v. Feast. Brasbridge v. Woodroffe, 2 Atk. 68. as it stands, is a determination that the difference of the legacies repels the presumption in favour of the next of kin. It has been said, the Master of the Rolls relied upon Batchelor v. Searle, which does not apply. It is Atkyns's note of what the Master of the Rolls relied upon. Batchelor v. Searle, as reported in 1 Eq. Ca. 246. (where it is best reported) it is true, goes upon proofs, but the Court also goes into reasoning, which is the same with that in Brasbridge v. Woodroffe. The result of the whole is, that the cases are not so certain as to be said to be an authority in point. If those on the other side had come up to the matter, I should have been in great doubt. One case in point would have varied my opinion. Three cases have been cited, Darwell v. Bennet, Bailey v. Mead and Powell, and Vachel v. Jeffries. Darwell v. Bennet, 2 Vern. 677. I lay out of the case, as being decided upon evidence. Bailey v. Mead and Powell, Pre. Ch. 92. 2 Vern. 361. is very inaccurately reported both in Precedents in Chancery and in Vernon. (8) It struck me as strange, in that case as it stands in Precedents in Chancery, that the executor should be made to pay the costs. Mr. Hollist went to the Register's book. (8) Upon looking into it myself, it was impossible to decide otherwise. There were legacies to most of the next of kin, and to their children. Mead's children had legacies, the executors also had legacies, though unequal, one 50*l.* the other 20*l.* The executors had represented to the next of kin, that there would be no residue; Powell had arrested Bailey, one of the next of kin, for debt due to the testatrix; and had, upon remitting the debt, and a promise of 30*l.* (of which he paid him only 10*l.*) obtained from him a release; by some means Bailey got the release again, and destroyed it;

(8) See also Mr. Raithby's edition of Vernon, note (2), 2 vol. p. 361.

by other representations, Powell obtained releases from the other next of kin. — After this, Bailey attacks the executors, Mead assigned a moiety (the whole being 700*l.*) to the next of kin, Powell was indebted to [*] the testatrix 350*l.* The prayer of the bill was to set aside the releases. Powell insisted in his answer upon parol evidence, and undertook to prove the testatrix's intent that the surplus should go to the executors; he also insisted that the debt was discharged by his being appointed executor. Mead acknowledged in his answer, that he had aided Powell in this scheme; but that, being of opinion the next of kin ought to have the surplus, he had assigned it to them: he acknowledged that he had drawn the will, and that no direction was given as to the surplus. Powell filed a cross-bill, insisting upon the releases. The decree was, that Powell should pay the debt, the residue be distributed, and that Powell should pay costs.—Thus stated, the case does not apply to this point, being under very peculiar circumstances, and it being certain the testatrix intended the executors nothing beyond their legacies. —In Vachel v. Jeffries, Pre. Ch. 169, to be found faithfully stated in Mr. Brown's book (1 Brown's Parl. Cases, 167), (9) it is true, that in fact, the executors had unequal legacies, and that the residue was decreed to be distributed, but that was not the point on which the case was determined: I fancy (but it is only my own supposition) the executors had disclaimed; the question was between the acknowledged children and the others, and the only point was, whether the distribution should be among all, or should exclude the two who had only 10*l.* each given them. No question could occur there that went to this point. Being relieved from any difficulty that could arise from these cases, it remains that the cases, such as they are, are in favour of the executors. I think the safer proceeding will be, to affirm Lord Thurlow's decree, which will throw this case into the line of those determinations which have proceeded on the distinction; without overthrowing those where a legacy is given simpliciter to the executor.

(9) 5 Bro. P. C. 51. octavo edit.

[*] HAWKINS against COMBE.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. A. fol. 74.)

THIS bill was filed by Thomas and Martha Hawkins, children of Grace Hawkins, against the defendant Combe (executor of the surviving executor of the will of Thomas Strode) and against William Hawkins and Grace his wife, (father and mother of the plaintiffs) for the interest made of the third part of the residue, bequeathed as under, since the plaintiff Thomas attained his age of twenty-one years. — Thomas Strode, by will, dated 16th of March, 1757, gave the residue of his personal estate to trustees, to pay the legacies given by his will, and, after payment thereof, as to two-third parts thereof, for the benefit of two of his nieces, in the manner therein mentioned, and should survive her husband, and have issue under 21 years of age, the trustees were to apply the interest for their maintenance till 21; and upon the children attaining their ages of 21, equal shares of the principal to be transferred to them: the interest accrued between the elder and the younger children coming of age, decreed to be divided between them. (1).

(1) Vide Chaworth v. Hooper, antea, 82. and the references in the note. See also Tissen v. Tissen, 1 P. W. 500. Nichols v. Osborn, and Taylor v. Johnson, 2 P. W. 419. 504. Green v. Ekins, 2 Atk. 472. and Shepherd v. Ingram, Ambler, 448. Sisson v. Shaw, 9 Ves. 287. 289, &c.

1783.

BOWKER
against HURTER.
[ *334 ]

*Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 8th
December.
Lords Commissioners,
Ashurst and Hotham.*

[ *335 ]

T. S. gave the residue to trustees, int. al. to lay out one-third part in securities, the interest to accumulate for the benefit of the children of his niece, — and, if she 1783.

HAWKINS
against COMBE.

[ *386 ]

as to the other third part in trust, to lay out and invest the same in securities; and from time to time, during the joint lives of his niece Grace, the wife of William Hawkins (the defendant) and of William Hawkins her husband, or until some one of the children of his said niece should attain his or her age of twenty-one years, to lay out the interest; dividends, and proceed thereof, in like manner, to accumulate for the benefit of the issue of his said niece, or such other persons as were therein-after mentioned. It being his intent that his said niece, during the life of her said husband, or her said husband, should not receive, or be benefited by, any part of his estate; and in case she should survive her said husband, and should have issue by him, or any future husband, under twenty-one years of age, testator directed that the trustees should pay the interest, &c. to her or to some other person, to the maintenance and education of such children, until they should attain their respective ages of twenty-one years; and, upon their respectively attaining their ages of twenty-one years, upon trust, to pay, and transfer the funds, and all arrears, to all and every the children, in equal shares and proportions; and if there should be one child only, to that one child at twenty-one years of age. And in case his said niece should survive her said husband, and have no issue then living by him, or having such issue, such issue should die under twenty-one years of age, then to pay the interest to Grace Hawkins for life, with remainders over, and made the trustees executors. — The plaintiff, Thomas Hawkins, attained his age of [*] twenty-one, in 1775, and Martha Hawkins her age of twenty-one, in 1782. — Bill prayed, that the rights of the plaintiffs might be ascertained, and that if the plaintiffs were entitled to the interest, and dividends of the bank annuities, &c. accrued since Thomas came of age, the same might be paid to them; and the only question was, whether the interest vested in such children as should be living, when the eldest attained his age of twenty-one years.

Lord Commissioner Ashhurst, this day, delivered his own opinion, and that of Lord Commissioner Hotham. He stated the will as above, and said — The bill does not contend as to the vesting of the legacies. The only question is as to the disposition of the interest and dividends. It seems, the testator had conceived a displeasure at his niece Grace Hawkins having made an imprudent match, and therefore intended she and her husband should not be benefited by his estate; but that intention did not extend to the children. He, therefore, intended the interest to accumulate until some one of the children should attain the age of twenty-one years. But somebody was to take the interest at that time, the accumulation then ceasing. Who could take it but the person who would be entitled to the principal? I do not mean that the plaintiff Thomas became entitled to the whole dividends upon his coming of age, but that the plaintiffs became entitled to equal moieties. As the accumulation ends there, the other moiety must ensue the principal, which will be in the other child: although the principal was contingent till they came of age, that could not prevent the dividends from vesting. The case of Nicholls v. Osborn, 2 Wms. 419. (2) is very strong as to this point, that the child who would take the contingent interest, should take the dividends in the mean time. That of Shepherd v. Shepherd †, cited by Mr. Mitford, is directly in point. —

† Reported (by the name of Gibson v. L. Montfort) 1 Vesey, 485. [See also Shepherd v. Ingram, Ambl. 448.]

(2) See Mr. Cox's note on that case, and the references in the first note, antea.

Declared,

Declared, therefore, that the interest accrued since Thomas attained his age of twenty-one, belongs to, and is divisible between the plaintiffs in equal shares, and should be so paid to them, and the future interest and dividends in the same manner: with liberty to the parties to apply as there should be occasion.

1783.

HAWKINS
against
COMBE.

[*] December 22, 1783, the Great Seal was restored to Lord Thurlow, as Lord Chancellor, who sat the next day to hear the remainder of the petitions which had been set down before the Lords Commissioners.

[ *337 ]

[*] HILARY TERM,

[ *338 ]

24 Geo. 3. 1784.

EDWARD Lord THURLOW, Lord High Chancellor. Sir THOMAS SEWEL Knight, Master of the Rolls. LLOYD KENYON Esq. Attorney General. RICHARD PEPPER ARDEN Esq. Solicitor General.

Countess Dowager of SHELBURNE and JOHN HAMILTON FITZMAURICE, an Infant, only Son of the Honourable THOMAS FITZMAURICE and Lady MARY his Wife, (two of Defendants) Plaintiffs.

MOROUGH Earl of INCHQUIN, and MARY Countess of ORKNEY and INCHQUIN his Wife; and said THOMAS FITZMAURICE and Lady MARY his Wife, and others, - - - Defendants.

[ 3 Feb. 1784. ]

[Vide S. C. on the Appeal,
5 Bro. P. C.
166. octavo ed.]

[ *339 ]

THE late Earl of Shelburne, by his will, dated 5th of April, 1756, gave all his lands both in England and in Ireland, to plaintiff Mary Countess of Shelburne, his wife, for her life, in case she did not marry again; and after her death unto all or any of such one, or more, of his the testator's children, or grand-children, for such estates and interests, and in such shares and proportions, &c. as the plaintiff should by deed or will appoint: and in default of such appointment to his second son, the [*] defendant Thomas Fitzmaurice, in fee. — On the marriage of Lord Inchiquin with Lady Orkney, several estates in Oxfordshire of the said Lord Inchiquin, of the yearly value of 1500*l.* and in Buckinghamshire, of the yearly value of 1100*l.* were settled on Lord Inchiquin for life, remainder to Lady Orkney for life, remainder to the issue of the marriage in tail general. Lady Mary Fitzmaurice is the only child of the mar-

Lady Mary Fitzmaurice having joined her father, the Earl of Inchiquin, in raising 24,000*l.* to pay his debts; afterwards, upon her marriage, a settlement being made, by which 30,000*l.* was to be raised for the payment of the Earl of Inchiquin's debts. — It was determined by the Court, and affirmed in Parliament, that the 24,000*l.* should be taken as part of the 30,000*l.* and not raised beyond it.

riage.

1784.

SHELburne
against INCHiquin.

riage. — Lady Mary Fitzmaurice, then O'Brien, being come of age in 1776, and the father Lord Inchiquin being considerably in debt, Lady Mary joined in suffering a recovery of the Oxfordshire and Berkshire estates, the uses of which were declared to be to Lord Inchiquin in fee, in order that the same might be sold and applied in payment of his debts; and in July, 1777, they were accordingly mortgaged by Lord Inchiquin for two several sums of 20,000*l.* and 4000*l.* — A marriage being in contemplation between said Thomas Fitzmaurice, and Lady Mary, by articles of agreement bearing date the 17th of December, 1777, between the plaintiff, Lady Shelburne of the first part, said Thomas Fitzmaurice of the second part, the said Earl of Inchiquin of the third part, said Lady Mary, then Lady Mary O'Brien, of the fourth part, and Henry Dagge and John Patterson, of the fifth part; it was, in consideration of marriage, covenanted and agreed in manner therein mentioned; and Lady Shelburne did on her part covenant and agree to limit and appoint (in pursuance of the power given to her by the said late Earl of Shelburne's will) to the said Thomas Fitzmaurice, and his heirs, certain lands in Ireland, of the yearly value of 3000*l.* and upwards, part thereof immediately in possession, and other parts thereof to him after her decease. — And the said Thomas Fitzmaurice covenanted and agreed with the said Dagge and Patterson, as soon after the execution of such deeds by Lady Shelburne as conveniently might be, to convey and assure to them the said Dagge and Patterson all his estate, right, and interest in the said Irish premises, in trust for himself for life, remainder to Lady Mary for life, for her jointure, remainder to first and other sons in strict settlement. And the said Earl of Inchiquin and Lady Mary did on their part, covenant and agree with Dagge and Patterson to convey and assure to them the said estates in Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire, in trust, by a mortgage of the whole, or any part thereof in fee, or for a term of years, to raise the sum of 30,000*l.* towards discharging the then present debts [*] and incumbrances of the said Earl of Inchiquin, and subject thereto, and also to the payment of 1000*l.* per annum, to the defendant the Countess of Orkney for her life, to the said Thomas Fitzmaurice for life, remainder to Lady Mary for life, remainder over to their first and other sons in strict settlement. — The marriage took place; and, in June, 1778, the Earl of Inchiquin, and Thomas Fitzmaurice and Lady Mary joined in suffering a common recovery of the Buckinghamshire estate to the use of such person or persons as they should jointly appoint; and by indentures of the 26th and 27th of June, 1778, the said Earl of Inchiquin, Mr. Fitzmaurice, and Lady Mary, appointed the said Buckinghamshire estate to trustees, for two thousand years, in trust, to raise by sale or mortgage of the said term, the sum of 23,000*l.* to be paid to Lord Inchiquin, and subject thereto to Lord Inchiquin for life, remainder in trust to pay Lady Orkney 1000*l.* per annum for life, remainder to Mr. Fitzmaurice and Lady Mary, and the survivor in fee. The present bill alledged, that the plaintiff Lady Shelburne had no notice of the former incumbrance of 24,000*l.* on the Oxfordshire estate, and therefore prayed that the said articles might be carried into execution, and that it might be declared that the said sum of 24,000*l.* was to be considered as part of the 30,000*l.* provided by the said articles towards paying Lord Inchiquin's debts and incumbrances, — and that the indentures of the 26th and 27th of June, 1778, might be rectified by restraining the trust of the term of two thousand years, to the raising the sum of 6000*l.* and by letting in limitations to the issue male and female of said Thomas Fitzmaurice and Lady Mary in tail-male, &c. according to the articles.

Mr. Attorney General and Mr. Hollis (for the plaintiff) insisted that on the face of the articles, only 30,000*l.* was to be raised upon Lord Inchiquin's chiquin's estate. — That the plaintiff had no notice of any prior incumbrance, and that she entered on the treaty with the idea that that was to be the sole charge upon the estate.

[ *340 ]

Mr. Solicitor General, Ambler, Scott, and Lloyd (for the defendant Lord Inchiquin,) offered to read the evidence of Mr. John Patterson, to prove that the plaintiff had notice of the prior incumbrance of 24,000*l.* and that it was the intent of all parties, that the 30,000*l.* should be raised over and above the [*] 24,000*l.* — which being objected to, as tending to contradict a written agreement by parol evidence, — it was contended for the defendants, that this evidence does not go to contradict, but to explain the articles. — The articles themselves do not import that the 30,000*l.* is to be the only charge upon the estate, — but if otherwise, on the ground of mistake, parol evidence is to be admitted. — It is certain that this Court will relieve against either fraud or mistake: — For either of these purposes, there must be parol evidence. — In many instances this Court has been more liberal in admitting parol evidence in the case of articles, than it would have been in the case of deeds. — Articles are merely the heads of the parties' meaning; and therefore in the case of articles, — the meaning must be resorted to at all events. — Even in conveyances the Court will receive parol evidence where the words will admit of two meanings, or where the extent is doubtful; but in articles, which are executory, the Court has nothing to resort to but the meaning. — And the only case in which they could refuse to hear parol evidence as to articles, is where it goes to contradict flatly the whole substance of them; — but in this case it goes to support the plain meaning of the words, or at least to explain doubtful words. — Eden v. Lord Bute, 7 Bro. Parl. Ca. 204 — 445. Uvedale v. Halfpenny, 2 P. Wms. 151. Goman v. Salisbury, 1 Vern. 240. Pitcairn v. Ogbourne, 2 Ves. 375. and the cases there cited. Legal v. Miller, 2 Ves. 299. Baker v. Paine, 1 Ves. 456. Brown v. Selwin, Cas. Temp. Talbot, 240.

On the part of the plaintiffs, it was insisted that this evidence, if admitted, would clearly contradict the written agreement, in as much as it would prove that 54,000*l.* should be raised on the estate, instead of 30,000*l.* that this was a case of articles on marriage, and was clearly within the statute of frauds.

Lord Chancellor. — I think it is impossible to refuse, as incompetent, parol evidence, which goes to prove, that the words taken down in writing were contrary to the concurrent intention of all parties. (1) To be sure it must be strong irrefragable evidence (2), but I do not think I can reject it as incompetent. It is the only way of explaining latent ambiguities. So if there are two manors of Dale, you must make out that fact by parol evidence; and if you go to parol evidence to raise the [*] ambiguity, you cannot well refuse it to explain such ambiguity. So parol evidence of the actual situation of the subject spoken of, is introduced into this court, to make the deed intelligible; but if the words themselves are intelligible, there is no instance where parol evidence has been admitted to explain them into a more vulgar sense, and clearly into an ungrammatical one. — The case in the House of Lords was a very nice one, and rather against my opinion, though I had great doubts about it. — I think the evidence here must be admitted.

(1) So also Taylor v. Radcl, decided by Lord Thurlow, cited in Barstow v. Kilvington, 5 Ves. 595. See likewise that case of Barstow v. Kilvington, 5 Ves. 593, &c.; and, in particular, the observations of Lord Eldon C. on Lord Thurlow's admission of the evidence in the principal case, and upon the admissibility of evidence in cases of mistake, in M. Townshend v. Stangroom, 6 Ves. 334. 333, 334. 335. 328, &c. &c. with the cases there cited; and Woodum v. Hearn, 7 Ves. 211.

(2). Vide per Lord Eldon C. upon this, 6 Ves. 333, 334.

1784.

SHELBOURNE against INCHQUIN.

Parol evidence of the attorney admitted to prove a party to a settlement had notice of a prior incumbrance.

[ *341 ]

[ *342 ]

On 1784.

SHELburne
against INCHiquin.

[ *343 ]

On reading Mr. Paterson's evidence, the substance of it appeared to be this :— That he was employed by Lady Shelburne in the way of his profession, and particularly as her law-agent in several of her affairs. On the 30th of November, 1779, he was first informed by Mr. Fitzmaurice of his being in treaty with Lord Inchiquin, for a marriage with Lady Mary, and was by him desired to wait upon his mother, to know what part of her estates she was willing to settle upon the said marriage. — The next day, being the 1st of December, he waited upon Lady Shelburne for that purpose, when she expressed the highest opinion of Lady Mary, and her own readiness to promote a match so agreeable to her son, although the terms thereof did not appear to be so advantageous for her son, as, in her opinion, a man of his fortune and expectations might reasonably demand ; from which expression, deponent was induced to believe, that Lady Shelburne had been fully apprized of the terms proposed on the part of Lady Mary. Lady Shelburne then agreed to settle the premises mentioned in the articles, and deponent took down in writing what Lady Shelburne said on that subject. On the 14th, deponent was desired, by Lord Inchiquin and Mr. Dagge, to prepare the articles. On the 15th, deponent prepared them, and in the evening read them to Lord Inchiquin ; on the 16th, to Mr. Fitzmaurice, and in the afternoon went with them to Lady Shelburne's, with George Black, Mr. Fitzmaurice's secretary ; and, from the instructions given by Lady Shelburne, filled up and completed the said draft ; and George Black made out two fair copies on stamped paper, which were read over to Lady Shelburne, and by her signed, sealed, and delivered, about one o'clock in the morning of the 17th, in presence of deponent, George Black, and her ladyship's servant. That at the time of this deponent's drawing the said articles, he understood [*] from the conversation which passed between Lord Inchiquin, Mr. Fitzmaurice, and deponent, that the Oxfordshire estate was already incumbered with mortgages, to the amount of 30,000*l.* and upwards ; and that it was intended to charge that estate, together with the Buckinghamshire estate, with a further sum of 30,000*l.* for the purpose of discharging Lord Inchiquin's then present debts and incumbrances, particularly several of Lord Inchiquin's engagements for post obit, and other annuities, which deponent then understood amounted to a considerable sum. That Lord Inchiquin not being satisfied with the money agreed to be raised for him by the articles, and Mr. Fitzmaurice being desirous to extricate Lord Inchiquin from his difficulties, deponent made a proposal in writing to Lord Inchiquin and Mr. Fitzmaurice, thereby reciting, that the incumbrances, at the time of marriage, amounted in all, to 30,000*l.* That 30,000*l.* more was to be raised by the articles, and that Lord Inchiquin wanted 5000*l.* more ; it was proposed, that 65,000*l.* in all, should be raised in manner therein mentioned ; but Lord Inchiquin not being then satisfied, it was afterwards agreed between Lord Inchiquin and Mr. Fitzmaurice, that beside the two sums of 30,000*l.* a further sum of 8000*l.* should be raised. — Mr. Orme, and Mr. Dagge, in substance, confirmed Mr. Paterson's evidence. Mr. Dagge added, that he had been present at several meetings between Lord Inchiquin and Mr. Fitzmaurice, previous to the articles, where Lord Inchiquin told Mr. Fitzmaurice of all the incumbrances affecting the Oxfordshire estate, and the whole situation of his affairs ; that when Paterson brought the draft of the articles to deponent, deponent observed to him that the incumbrances already affecting the Oxfordshire estate, should be noticed in the draft, and deponent then gave Patterson some words on a slip of paper, to be inserted for that purpose, which were, “ which estate in Oxfordshire is now charged with “ 30,000*l.* by several mortgages thereon ;” and Paterson agreed that such such words should be inserted. Deponent expected to have the draft shewn to him again with such insertion, but was informed the next day, that Patterson had carried the said articles to Lady Shelburne to be executed; that Patterson afterwards acknowledged to the deponent, that he considered the words made use of in the articles as sufficient to convey the meaning of the parties.

It was then insisted, on the part of the defendant, Lord Inchiquin, first, that it appeared, by the words of the articles [*] themselves, that the 30,000*l.* was to be raised over and above any incumbrances then affecting the estate. Secondly, that the words were at least doubtful, and therefore a proper case for the admission of the parol evidence now offered. Thirdly, that this parol evidence is decisive in favour of the defendant. As to the first, it is the natural import of the words of the articles; they covenant to convey to trustees in trust, to raise the sum of 30,000*l.* The agreement was made about an estate then subject to a charge. The estate, so subject, was the subject-matter of the bargain; that was all they had to go to market with. The former incumbrances were raiseable without the help of these articles, and therefore, if they mean any thing, they mean that 30,000*l.* more should be raised over and above the incumbrances then affecting the estate. Every man is presumed to look into the title of the estate about which he is contracting; and, on that ground, it is to be presumed that these parties knew that the estate, about which they were then about treating, was an encumbered estate. If Lord Inchiquin had pretended to be intitled to the estate, free from all incumbrances, the plaintiffs would have come into this court with a good case; but not so on the face of the articles, by any means: for the words of the articles by no means import that the 30,000*l.* is the only sum raised, or to be raised, on the estate. — On the whole, therefore, the words of the articles are with the defendant. But, secondly, the words are at least doubtful, and therefore it is a proper case to admit the evidence we have to adduce; for the doubt being, whether the parties meant to add this incumbrance to the others before affecting the estate, or whether they considered themselves as contracting about a clear estate, it is surely very proper to prove that the parties at the time knew the estate to be incumbered. So it will be proper to admit it on the ground of a mistake, if it shall appear that the words in the articles were contrary to the concurrent intention of the parties, and what was actually agreed upon by them. As to the statute of frauds, this court, in many cases, particularly in the case of fraud, will give relief even against a conveyance without any declaration of trust, notwithstanding the statute. Hutchins v. Lee, 1 Atk. 447.; Young v. Peachy, 2 Atk. 254. and 2 Eq. Ca. Abr. Tit. Agreement, &c. So if an agreement is, by fraud, prevented from being reduced into writing, the court will relieve, notwithstanding the statute. So, in one case, on surprize purely, which is *South Sea Company v. [*] D'Oloff*, cited 2 Ves. 376. (3) And the case of a defendant is much more favoured than that of a plaintiff (4); for, as defendant, we can set up a parol agreement, waving a written one, (5) though, as plaintiff, we could not carry a parol one into execution. Then, thirdly, as to the effect of the evidence; all the parties who were present, when the articles were agreed upon, clearly knew the situation of the estate. And, we contend, that knowledge bound all the parties concerned. —

1784.

SHELburne
against INCHiquin.

[ *344 ]

[ *345 ]

(3) And see it also stated from Lord Hardwicke's note, 5 Ves. 601.

(4) See in Richards v. Syms, Barn. Ch. 91, 92, &c. Woollam v. Hearn, 7 Ves. 211, &c. Cadman v. Horner, 18 Ves. 10—12. Savage v. Brocksope, ibid. 335.

(5) See accordingly Fife v. Clayton, 13 Ves. 546. and Gwynne v. Lethbridge, 14 Ves. 585.

1784.

SHELburne
against
INCHiquin.

The infant was bound by the knowledge of the contracting parties ; for his interest arose merely under those articles. Lady Mary was bound by the contract made by the father. In all marriage-contracts, the agreement is made by the parents on behalf of their daughter, and the daughter herself never stands forward in the business. She was of full age at the time, and has never complained, nor does she now. And she has done all that she could do, as a feme-covert, to confirm the articles, by suffering a recovery. Mr. Fitzmaurice clearly knew the situation of affairs, and so did Mr. Patterson. The only doubt is as to Lady Shelburne's being bound ; but Mr. Patterson clearly acted as agent for Lady Shelburne, in the business ;—nobody else appeared on Lady Shelburne's part ; and if so, the fraud, or negligence (whatever it may be) of the agent, must bind the principal. At any rate, Mr. Patterson appeared in the business, as being authorized by Lady Shelburne to treat. And so Lord Inchiquin understood him to be. He treated with him, upon the confidence that he was treating with the agent of Lady Shelburne ; and thought that every circumstance was communicated to her. Lord Inchiquin would never have given his consent, on the terms which the plaintiffs now insist upon : he was tenant in fee of the Oxfordshire estate, which was valued at 45,000*l.*, and there was an incumbrance of 24,000*l.* only, affecting it. He could not have given up the rest of that estate for 6000*l.* only. This being the clear intent of Lord Inchiquin, and he having communicated this to the only person who appeared for Lady Shelburne ;—it would be very hard upon Lord Inchiquin to force him to part with this estate contrary to such intention. If any body must suffer, it must be the plaintiff. Le Neve v. Le Neve, 3 Atk. 646.

[ *346 ]

Attorney General (in reply.)—As to the annual value of the estate, it is exaggerated by the defendant ; but, computing it at its [*] real productive value, it will be considerably deficient to answer all the charges upon it, if Lord Inchiquin's demands are to be complied with. The first question has been made on the import of the words themselves : “ towards discharging incumbrances,” must mean incumbrances then affecting the estate.—But, secondly, they say these will admit of explanation by parol evidence. On minute attention to the case, I cannot think they come home to this. The case of a parol waiver is quite another thing ; there, there are two distinct agreements. But here the evidence goes to prove, that the very agreement never existed. But if admissible,—then, thirdly, how far does Lady Shelburne appear to be bound?—for what Mr. Fitzmaurice and Lord Inchiquin meant does not affect her. Lady Shelburne was a very material contracting party, and Mr. Patterson merely carried the terms she proposed, backward and forward. If Mr. Patterson was a complete agent, why did he not sign the draft for Lady Shelburne ? why were not the articles engrossed in town ? where was the necessity of shewing them to Lady Shelburne before they were engrossed ? Lady Shelburne was certainly bound by the agency, to the extent of such agency ; but it went no further than carrying her terms to Lord Inchiquin. He was not intrusted to do any one thing of himself.

Lord Chancellor.—This is a bill brought by the infant son of Mr. Fitzmaurice and Lady Mary his wife, to carry articles entered into previously to that marriage into execution, and to restrain a subsequent settlement, to the raising of the sum of 6000*l.* only. There are two questions raised in this cause ; first, whether the plaintiff has a right to his claim, according to the grammatical import of the words of the articles. Second, how far he is to be restricted in that claim by collateral circumstances. The first point is very material ; for if that will not support the plaintiff, there is an end of the whole. The articles were between Lady Shelburne, of the first part ; Mr. Fitzmaurice, of the second 1784.

SHELburne
against INCHiquin.

[ *347 ]

second part; Lord Inchiquin, of the third part; Lady Mary, of the fourth part; and the trustees, of the fifth part. — Lady Shelburne is therein recited, to be entitled to the estates of the late Lord Shelburne for life, with a power of appointment; and she thereby covenants to appoint the lands therein mentioned to Mr. Fitzmaurice, in fee; and Mr. Fitzmaurice [*] covenants to settle them in strict settlement; and Lord Inchiquin and Lady Mary contract, &c. (as in the articles.) — The first question is, whether, according to the effect of the words, the intention of the parties appears to have been to raise 30,000*l.* only, for payment of Lord Inchiquin's debts and incumbrances, or to raise 30,000*l.* over and above all such incumbrances as might then be upon the estate. — In the course of the argument, I have not been able to draw a probable foundation for doubt to arise, on the words of the articles only. The first part of the clause purports to be a settlement of those estates. It is argued, that it is usual to insert, "free from all incumbrances," whenever estates are intended to be so settled; but the question is not now what are the ordinary and proper cautions upon those occasions, much less in this case, where those who so argue are found, in every part of the case, to complain of remissness in the execution of the instrument: but the question is, whether there does not arise a definite and precise meaning on the grammatical construction. — My opinion is, that where parties contract to settle estates to given uses, the natural and genuine import is, that the whole estate is to be settled. — But this case does not depend on this construction, for the parties have gone on to say how they mean the estates should be incumbered, for they are vested in trustees for the purpose of incumbering them with 30,000*l.* towards discharging the debts and incumbrances of Lord Inchiquin. — On the whole of the clause, it is impossible to doubt, that the contracting parties expected that 30,000*l.* only should be raised, and that the estate should go, with that incumbrance only, as a partial discharge of Lord Inchiquin's debts and incumbrances. — There is nothing in the instrument that refers to any examination having been made of the actual condition of the estate with respect to incumbrances. — It might be fairly contended from the words, that the discharge of some incumbrance, then affecting the estate, was in contemplation of the parties at the time, — for the word "incumbrances" occurs in no other place. — In that view the articles are sufficiently distinct, to prove that the intent was, that the charge on the estate should be 30,000*l.* only. — But then it is argued, that this construction is altered by the subsequent words, "subject thereto;" which are said to imply, that the charges then affecting the estate shall remain thereon at all events; on the ground of "debts and incumbrances" [*] being the last antecedents. — But these are not properly the last antecedents, — for the antecedent must be a distinct member of a sentence; — but here it is merely a word of description of the extent of the preceding words, — "and subject thereto," means only subject to the limitation to trustees so described. — In this state of the case, the circumstance of Lady Orkney's interest, and the childrens' interest in the estate, are articles, which at present I am not at liberty to enter into, — for I am now going on the mere words. But if these circumstances were to be admitted, (and I think it is the proper business of a description of the subject to explain any doubt on the words), they go a great length to shew, that it is impossible to put any other construction on the words; for, according to the evidence of the value, the estate would be insufficient to yield these charges, if Lord Inchiquin were right in his demand. — On the construction of the articles, therefore, I think the prayer of the bill is properly conceived, and that it is fit to declare against all parties, except the incumbrancers, that the estate shall be settled, free from all incumbrances,

[ *348 ]

1784.

SHELBURNE
against INCHIUIN.

[ *349 ]

except the single sum of 30,000*l.* — But then it is said that the collateral circumstances of the case shall rebut the demand which the plaintiff has, according to this interpretation. — The outlines of the evidence are a history of the treaty, and of the articles from the beginning ; — and the condition of both Lady Shelburne's and Lord Inchiquin's estates appear. — Under the settlement made on Lord Inchiquin's marriage, in 1753, Lady Mary was tenant in tail. — She came of age in 1776, and, the very next term, she was prevailed upon by her father to suffer a recovery of the Oxfordshire estate to him in fee. — It is suggested in the pleadings, as well as at the bar, that the purpose for which she was so prevailed upon to join in the recovery was, to discharge her father's debts ; — but it is not stated, that the quantity of his debts, or any more specific proposal was made [known] to her. — Lord Inchiquin took the estate in fee, — and it is not said that any branch of the family, that could give any degree of authority or propriety to the transaction, was concerned. It has been argued, that I must lay this transaction out of the case ; because it has been acquiesced in, and is not now complained of, — I have been inclined to lay it out of the case, and to consider this case in an abstract light : — it is more convenient to the policy of justice, that cases should be determined on general principles, I therefore [*] lay it out of the case, except so far as it brings forward this point, viz. whether Lady Mary could impeach this transaction in a court of equity ; — for if so, she had still some interest in the estate. This question is not now ripe for decision ; — but it is a material question, whether Lord Inchiquin had the same right in equity as he certainly had at law. — The first step in the business was no earlier than December ; — then it first appears that Lady Shelburne had been applied to. — Lady Shelburne sent a proposal in writing of what she would do ; — what she said was merely that the match was not so advantageous as her son might expect, but that she highly approved of Lady Mary's character ; and that she would therefore accede to the proposal with such sort of countenance as was expressed in the paper. Mr. Patterson, on oath, draws the conclusion from this circumstance, that Lady Shelburne knew what was in the contemplation of the other parties. — But we must remember that we are now on this part of the case, viz. by what means it is, that an agreement in writing should be changed. — What I now say, must be considered as being spoken with that view. — Considering what the circumstances of the several parties actually were, to say that it was not probable that Lady Shelburne should make such proposal, and say what she did say, respecting the match, without such knowledge of the intention of the other parties, is ridiculous. — It cannot be looked upon as any kind of proof of her being apprized of the terms. On this proposal of Lady Shelburne's, a meeting was had, when the terms now under contemplation were, in some loose and general way, reduced into writing. — At this meeting were Mr. Fitzmaurice, Mr. Dagge, Mr. Patterson, and Lord Inchiquin. — And it is said it was the intention of all of them, that there should be 30,000*l.* raised, over and above the incumbrances then affecting the estate. It appears, from the evidence, that there must have been a great deal of conversation on the subject — It was then put to Mr. Patterson, to draw the proposals into some more distinct form — and he was then to shew them to Mr. Dagge ; — and, on the 15th, he accordingly shewed them to Mr. Dagge. — Mr. Dagge reminded him of the conversation that had passed, and suggested him the words which he thought ought to be inserted ; taking notice of the prior incumbrances. — Patterson drew up the articles without inserting the words. The instrument was carried to Lady Shelburne, as correspondent to her instructions, and the [*] circumstance of Lady Shelburne's signing the paper is the only proof of her knowledge of the terms.

[ *350 ]

The 1784.

SHELburne
against Inchiquin.

The paper was carried to Lady Shelburne's on the 16th, — and, it should be observed, for what reason it was carried to her in an unfinished state; which was, that Patterson said it was necessary to have a more exact description of the estate which Lady Shelburne was to appoint. Black, who ingrossed the articles, had nothing to do with the law, but was employed merely as writing a good hand. On the 17th they were carried to Taplow. — Now, observe who were present when Lord Inchiquin signed — Mr. Orme, and Mr. Wallis. Mr. Wallis is, I suppose, the gentleman whom we all know, and who is a very proper person to be consulted on an occasion of that sort. The paper was in fact signed by Lord Inchiquin, and that is all I know of the business: yet it is said, that it was a surprize upon Lord Inchiquin, — how can that be? There is no hint of incapacity in Lord Inchiquin, or of any thing like surprize, in the evidence, so that fact is out of the case; — and indeed it goes directly the other way; at least, Lord Inchiquin seems to have executed the articles quite upon as great deliberation as Lady Shelburne. Now, under these circumstances, the question was, first as to the competency, and secondly, as to the effect of parol evidence. I think I could not avoid admitting it; for it is clear, that where an equity is attempted to be raised, founded upon a ground collateral to the contract, there must be evidence dehors the contract, to shew the fact. As when 400*l.* was inserted instead of 500*l.* by the husband, to cheat the wife, and many other cases of the same sort in Eq. Ca. Abr. all of which go on the subject of fraud. — Now, the moment you impeach a deed for fraud, you must either deny the effect of fraud on the deed, or you cannot but be under the necessity of admitting evidence to prove it. So if two persons intrust a third person to draw up minutes of their intention, and such person does not draw them according to such intention, that case might be relieved; for that would be a kind of fraud. It must be an essential ingredient to any relief under this head, that it should be on an accident perfectly distinct from the sense of the instrument. — So on the head of ambiguity; if there be a latent ambiguity, it must be explained by parol evidence; for though the words do not, prima facie, import an ambiguity, yet if such ambiguity can be made to appear from parol evidence, it must be admitted to explain it, as well as to raise it: but if words have in themselves a positive precise sense, [*] I have no idea of its being possible to change them, and I take it to be an established rule that words cannot be changed in that manner. — It has been said, in this case, that notice to Patterson ought to bind Lady Shelburne — I wanted to have this more argued. — It is clear, that if a man purchases an estate, subject to an equity only, if he, or if his agent know it, it is a fraud; but when an instrument is signed by all parties, that the intention shall be interpreted contrary to such instrument, by notice to an agent that some of the parties had such intention, is quite beside all the cases. — If this then were the fact, it would be impossible to bind Lady Shelburne, unless she had consented, — for employing him to draw out such terms for her into form, is not employing him to make terms for her. — Is it making him her attorney to agree to new terms? If therefore it had stood on this ground, I think it would have bound Lady Shelburne: but I do not think that it turns upon this; for I do not think that the conversation, however it may now occur to the gentlemen, purported to be a distinct demand of terms, without which Lord Inchiquin would not agree to the marriage; and my belief is, that if Lady Shelburne had insisted upon her terms, Lord Inchiquin would not have insisted upon his. — And those very gentlemen are as far from carrying their agreement into execution as Lady Shelburne's; for what they did execute was quite adverse to both, and charged a further sum of money on the estate than was intended by either party; and indeed the case has been opened to me in 1784.

SHELburne
against INCHiquin.

[ *352 ]

four or five different ways. — There is enough to shew that these circumstances were open and perfectly intelligible between Lord Inchiquin and Mr. Fitzmaurice: from which another opinion might be entertained, which I have now nothing to do with. Another circumstance is, the very great age of one of the gentlemen who have been examined; his memory very possibly fails him. Under these circumstances it will be too much to put a new sense, and much more a contrary sense, upon the articles against the interest of the plaintiff; but if this could be done as against Lady Shelburne, will it do the whole? The plaintiff, the child, derives two interests — one from Lady Mary in the Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire estate, whatever it may be. Had Lady Mary notice? She joined in the articles, and was bound by the articles, as the rest were. — But did Lady Mary ever agree to any other terms than what were in the instrument? — and how can the children be bound if she never consented? On the whole, therefore, [*] whether the case is considered on the articles merely, or on the evidence, (which I do not think should be admitted to the extent of changing the effect of these articles,) or in any other point of view; I cannot deprive the children of their interest under these articles. — The articles therefore must be carried into execution, and Lord Inchiquin is bound to discharge all incumbrances on the estate above 30,000*l*.

His Lordship declared, that the articles ought to be specifically performed, and decreed that they should be carried into execution, by a conveyance of the estates, to be settled by the Master, and that the mortgage of 24,000*l*. should stand as part of the 30,000*l*. to be raised under the deed. (6)

From this decree Lord Inchiquin appealed to the House of Lords, but the printed case of the respondent John Hamilton Fitzmaurice, the infant, having stated that the estates in Oxfordshire and † Berkshire, were charged by mortgage deeds, dated the 25th and 26th of September, 1777, with the payment of a further sum of 3000*l*. to the Honourable George Grimston; the House of Lords, on the 4th of March, 1785, ordered the cause to stand over to the 2d of May, with liberty for the respondent, the infant, to bring a cross appeal. Under this order a cross appeal was brought, and, on Friday the 13th of May, 1785, the House of Lords was † The estates called in the former part of the case the Oxfordshire estates, were found to comprise some farms in Berkshire.

---

(6) Lord Thurlow C. declared, “ that the articles entered into previous to the marriage of Thomas Fitzmaurice and Lady Mary his wife, dated the 17th of December, 1777, ought to be specifically performed, and did order and decree the same to be carried into execution by a proper conveyance and settlement of the estates thereby covenanted to be settled, agreeably to the said articles; and referred it to the Master to settle such conveyance; and that all proper parties were to join therein as the Master should direct: and his Lordship declared that the estates to be conveyed, pursuant to the said articles, were to be subject only to the payment of 3675*l*., the charges and expences attending the inclosure of the estate of the E. of Inchiquin, at Brothwell and Filkins, in the county of Oxford, under the act of parliament, in the pleadings mentioned, and to the term to be created and vested in the trustees, for the purpose of raising 30,000*l*. for the benefit of the appellant; and his Lordship also declared, that the mortgage for 24,000*l*. was to stand as part of the said sum of 30,000*l*. to be raised under the deed; and that the term to be created by virtue of the deed, should be subject only to so much of the said 30,000*l*. as the said mortgage and the interest accrued thereon should not exhaust [A]; and out of what should not be so exhausted, the plaintiff was to be paid his costs of the suit, to be taxed by the Master,” and such other costs as by the decree were directed. Vide 5 Bro. P. C. 174. octavo edit.

[A] The variations made by the House of Lords were to be inserted here. See the next note.

pleased pleased to order the decree to be amended (7), to let in the 3000*l.* and the interest due thereon, as part of the charge of 30,000*l.* and to order the Master to enquire whether the Earl of Inchiquin had introduced any other incumbrance upon the estate; and if he should find any, that the residue of the 30,000*l.* should be applied in the payment thereof, and, with these amendments, affirmed the decree. (7) Ex relatione.

1784.

SHELburne
against INCHiquin.

(7) Their Lordships ORDERED and ADJUDGED, That the decree therein complained of, should be amended by inserting after the word exhaust, the following words: — “*And that the residue of the said 30,000*l.* should be applied to the discharge of the mortgage for 3000*l.* mentioned in the answer of the appellant, the Earl of Inchiquin, and also of the interest due on the said sums of 24,000*l.* and 3000*l.*, and let the Master for that purpose inquire what is due on the said mortgages respectively, and whether the Earl of Inchiquin has introduced any other incumbrance on the estate in question, and if he shall find any such, let the rest of the said sum of 30,000*l.* be applied in the discharge thereof; and after the words in like manner, to insert the following words: And if after paying the costs of this suit, any part of the said 3000*l.* shall remain unexhausted, let the same be paid to the said Earl of Inchiquin; and it was further ordered and adjudged, that, with these amendments, the said decree should be affirmed.*” 5 Bro. P. C. 178. octavo edit.

[*] OLIVER BECKETT, Esq. - - - Plaintiff. [ *353 ]

THOMAS CORDLEY, GEORGE IVESON, JOHN IVESON, (a Bankrupt,) and MARGARET his Wife; JOHN PRINCE, (Assignee of JOHN IVESON, the Bankrupt,) ROSEY IVESON, and THOMAS TAYLOR. Defendants.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. A. fol. 288.)

BY indentures of lease and release of the 14th and 15th days of June, 1772, George Iveson, and his eldest son John Iveson, (both deceased) conveyed the manor of, and lands in, Bilton, in the county of York, to Henry Stapleton and Thomas Thornton, and their heirs and assigns for ever, upon trust to sell the same, and, with the money thereby arising, to pay certain sums amounting to 8500*l.* and to place out the residue of the money on real securities; and after the said George Iveson's death, to pay to the defendants George Iveson, Margaret Iveson, and Rosey Iveson, the younger children of the said George Iveson, the sum of 3000*l.* equally among them, and to pay the residue (if any) of the money arising by such sale to the executors or administrators of the said George Iveson. Before any sale was made of the estates, George Iveson died. After his decease, John Iveson came to an agreement with the trustees, for the purchase of the trust estates, for the sum of 14,668*l.* 10*s.*; and to enable him to complete his purchase, and to answer other occasions, he procured a loan of 16,000*l.* from Harriet Amyand, for which she was to have a mortgage of the said estates; and accordingly, by indenture of twelve parts, dated the 18th of August, 1774, whereto the Trustees, John Iveson deceased, George Iveson, John Iveson and Margaret his wife, and Rosey Iveson, were parties; it was witnessed, that, in consideration of the sum of 3000*l.* paid by the said Harriet Amyand to the defendants George Iveson, John Iveson and Margaret his wife, and a fresh sum advanced: the claims of the younger children have priority in equity, and shall be preferred to plaintiff's mortgage. (1)

J. I. being about to mortgage an estate, upon which his younger brothers and sisters had charges, got them to join in the conveyance, and acknowledge the receipt of their portions, giving them an undertaking, that he would grant them a subsequent mortgage, and enter into no prior security. He afterwards makes a subsequent mortgage to plaintiff for money lent before on bond,

(1) See the observations of Lord Eldon C. on this case, &c. in Evans v. Dicknell, 6 Ves. 183. 192. and the notes postea.

1784.

BECKETT
against CORDLEY.

[ *354 ]

Rosey Iveson, in full for the sum of 3000*l.* mentioned in the indentures of the 14th and 15th of June, 1772, the receipt of which the defendants did thereby acknowledge, and in consideration of other sums therein mentioned to be paid by the said Harriet Amyand, amounting with the said 3000*l.* to the sum of 16,000*l.* the Trustees, John Iveson deceased, and the defendants George Iveson, John Iveson and Margaret his wife, and Rosey Iveson, did convey the manor and estates [*] unto the said Harriet Amyand, her heirs and assigns for ever, subject to redemption, by the said John Iveson deceased, on payment of the said 16,000*l.* with interest. The defendants George Iveson, John Iveson, and Margaret his wife, and Rosey Iveson, also respectively subscribed their names to receipts indorsed on the deed for the sum of 3000*l.* John Iveson afterwards borrowed of the defendant Taylor 500*l.* with which he also charged the estate.

In the month of March, 1778, John Iveson deceased, being indebted to the plaintiff, in 2400*l.* secured by bond, applied to the plaintiff for a further sum of 1200*l.* who agreed to lend him the same, provided he would convey the estates to a trustee to sell, and out of the money arising therefrom, to pay the plaintiff such two sums of 2400*l.* and 1200*l.* which the said John Iveson agreed to do, and to give the plaintiff a mortgage on the estates in the mean time.

By indentures dated the 30th and 31st of March, 1778, the said John Iveson conveyed the manor and estates to the plaintiff, subject to redemption on payment of the said sums of 2400*l.* and 1200*l.* with interest. — And, by other indentures, of the 1st and 2d of April, 1778, he conveyed the manor and estates unto Thomas Cordley, upon trust, to sell, and out of the money arising thereby, in the first place, to pay off the 16,000*l.* secured by the mortgage to Harriet Amyand, with the interest; and, in the next place, to pay off the 500*l.* due to Thomas Taylor; and in the next place, to pay to the plaintiff the said two sums of 2400*l.* and 1200*l.* and the interest due thereon, and to pay the residue (if any) of the money to the said John Iveson, or as he should appoint. — The plaintiff afterwards lent John Iveson other sums, amounting together to 50*l.*, and he, by writing dated the 1st of January, 1779, charged the said estates with the payment thereof.

In Hilary term, 1779, the plaintiff filed his bill against Cordley, and others of the parties, to have the trusts of the indenture of the 2d of April, 1778, carried into execution: which bill was afterwards amended, by making the Ivesons parties. — The defendants, the Ivesons, by their answers in the said cause, stated the said first-mentioned deeds of the 14th and 15th of [*] June, 1772, whereby the said 3000*l.* was charged upon the said manor and estates for their benefit; and further stated, that John Iveson deceased, having agreed with the trustees for the purchase of the estates, articles of agreement were entered into by the said John Iveson, and the defendants, dated the 10th of February, 1773, whereby the defendants agreed to release unto the trustees all their right and interest in the estates; and John Iveson deceased agreed, that he would, immediately after the estates had been conveyed to him, secure the 3000*l.* by mortgage of the estates unto the defendants, in equal proportions, on the 10th of October, 1776, with interest for the same. That after the execution of the mortgage of the 18th of August, 1774, John Iveson deceased signed another agreement, dated the 24th of that month, whereby, after reciting that the said 3000*l.* had not been received by the respondents, he agreed to secure to each of the defendants the sum of 1000*l.* with interest, by mortgage of the estates, as soon as deeds could be prepared for that purpose: and, accordingly, each of the defendants claimed the sum of 1000*l.* part of the said 3000*l.*, and insisted that, notwithstanding the said John Iveson deceased had not executed a mortgage for for securing the same, yet they were intitled to be paid the same immediately after the said mortgage made to Harriet Amyand. — It did not appear in the cause that the plaintiff had any notice of this agreement (2) with George, Margaret, and Rosey Iveson, although he had of their release; and the estates proving insufficient to pay all the incumbrances, the question was, whether the equitable charge (3) arising from the agreement of John Iveson with the defendants should, or should not, be preferred to the plaintiff's mortgage.

[ *355 ]

The Lord Chancellor, 26th February, 1783, on hearing counsel for the plaintiff only, decreed the charge in favour of the younger children, to be prior to the securities of the plaintiff, and dismissed the bill. (4) The plaintiff presented his petition of re-hearing, from this part of the decree, to the late Lords Commissioners, before whom the cause was argued the 7th of December, 1783, but never determined by them: the great seal being restored to Lord Thurlow before they pronounced any decree.

[*] It came on before His Lordship this term, and was argued by Mr. Ambler, Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Scott, and Mr. Bicknel, for the plaintiffs; Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Hollist, Mr. King, and Mr. Shuter, for the defendants.

For the plaintiffs, it was contended that this was only a new security for the old debt, and that the defendants had held out to the plaintiff that they were satisfied: although it was acknowledged, that if this had been a new sum of 3000*l.* lent to the brother upon this equitable security, the younger children should have had a priority before Beckett, the subsequent incumbrancer; but that being for the old debt, they should not have priority, even though they had taken the legal estate, 2 Vern. 150. That it is a settled point that a person having a prior security, and knowing that another person is treating, ought to disclose his security, Mocatta v. Murgatroyd, 1 Wms. 393. Peter v. Russel, 1 Eq. Abr. 321. But here, the younger children having a right to the 3000*l.* join in the conveyance, and by the receipt, declare they are satisfied; and Beckett, seeing that receipt, lends the money upon confidence of it: so that they assist to draw in Beckett to lend the money upon a security he otherwise would not have done it upon, which is a fraud upon him. They cited also Hobbs v. Norton, 1 Vern. 136. Hungerford v. Earle, 2 Vern. 261. Ibbotson v. Rhodes, 2 Vern. 554. Berrisford v. Milward, 2 Atk. 49.

For the defendants it was argued, that the only parties they had any connection with were Miss Amyand and her agents; and the only consent they gave was to be postponed to her security, to which they were still ready to submit. That, among equitable securities, the only circumstance to give priority of payment, is priority of time, and as Iveson (the legal estate being in Miss Amyand) could only carry an equitable security to market, whoever dealt with him, must deal upon his honour. — That, in this case, the plaintiff did not deal upon the security of the estate. the first money he lent being upon bond only. — For Rosey, one of the defendants, it was particularly urged, that she was under age at the time of the transaction, and therefore could not be held to be bound further than by the consent in her answer put in since she was of age, which was, only, to be postponed to Miss Amyand.

(2) This circumstance seems to make the case rather a strong one.

(3) As to equitable mortgages, independently of other claims, see Russel v. Russel, antea, 269.

(4) The declaration was, that "the sum of 3000*l.* charged in favour of the younger children of G. I. and his wife, by the deed of the 14th of June, 1772, is to be considered as prior in point of date and right to the securities claimed by the plaintiff. The bill was not dismissed, as above stated, but consequential directions were given; accounts directed," &c. Reg. Lib.

1784.

BECKETT
against CORDLEY

[ *356 ]

1784.

BECKETT
against CORDLEY.

[ *357 ]

[*] It stood over till February the 10th, when Lord Chancellor gave judgment.

Lord Chancellor. — From the nature of the case I did not expect to hear so much argument, or so many authorities cited. (His Lordship here recapitulated the circumstances.) This case has been argued at large, and the authorities cited seem strong, till they are looked into. — That of the Thatched House (Peter v. Russel) which seemed the grossest, upon being examined, turns out the other way; for it appears, Eq. Abr. 321. that the bill was dismissed with costs. (5) — The other cases turn out the same. It does not appear how Hungerford v. Earle, 2 Vern. [261.] ended, but no fraud was there imputed. (6) In Ibbotson v. Rhodes, in 2 Vern. [554.] Rhodes denied he had any charge on the estate, when asked by Gargrave; but it appears Rhodes had been informed, that Shipley was in treaty to lend money upon the estate. (7) This Court never binds a third person, but when there is notice of a treaty. — As for the other cases, they are all upon the same ground. In 9 Mod. 36. the party stood by, and suffered a fraudulent treaty to go on. — Clare v. Earl of Bedford, was a case where an infant was bound, because he ingrossed the deed, — that was upon the principle, that he knew of the transaction. — Mocatta v. Murgatroyd, 1 Wms. 393. the first mortgagee was a witness to the second mortgage, and was therefore postponed. I do not leave this as a case, which I should determine in the same manner; for a witness, in practice, is not privy to the contents of the deed. — The book refers to a case where Lord King denied the law to be so: the property was there bound on the principle of notice. — In Berrisford v. Milward, 2 Atk. 49. the party stood by, whilst the estate was re-mortgaged, and had promised to take personal security. — There is no case in the books, but where the party to whom the fraud is imputed, was conusant of the treaty in which the fraud was practised; but, although there is no such case, yet, if it appeared that the parties were confederating together to cheat some one, although the particular person was not known, the case would fall within the same principle, and must receive the same determination. — Here the first 2400*l.* was advanced on a bond: — the 1200*l.* was not lent on the credit of the mortgaged premises, otherwise than that the estate should be sold to discharge the former incumbrances, and the 1200*l.* The plaintiff [*] had not examined the title, but lent the last money to better his security as to the former. The time when the money was advanced is that at which the notice is material. In order to postpone this charge, he insists that this was the old debt. It is compared to the case of a

[ *358 ]

(5) Peter v. Russel is also reported 2 Vern. 726. See Mr. Raithby's edition, note to p. 727., where an additional reason for the judgment is stated from R. L. thus: — "especially since the plaintiff lent his money without having or insisting to have the custody of the said original lease." The general principle, however, is, that the mere leaving of title/deeds in the possession of the mortgagor, will not postpone a party; and that for such purpose there must either be fraud, concealment, or such gross negligence, as of itself to amount to evidence of a fraudulent intention. Mr. J. Buller's position, therefore, in Goodtitle v. Morgan, 1 T. R. 762. is wrong. See per Lord Eldon C. in Evans v. Bicknell, 6 Ves. 183. 190, 191, 192., with the cases there referred to, and 1 Fonbl. T. E. 262. note (n).

It is remarkable that Lord Redesdale's notes, referring to some MSS. of Lord Talbot, state the decisions, in Peter v. Russel, and in Ibbotson v. Rhodes, to be there cited, as having been reversed.

(6) See the case of Hungerford v. Earle, from the Reg. Book in Mr. Raithby's 2 Vern. 261.

(7) See 2 Raithby's Vernon, 554, 555. and 1 Eq. Ca. Ab. 229, 230. pl. 13. And see the latter part of note (5) antea.

1784.

BECKETT
against CORDLEY.

person selling an estate, and not receiving the money (8); and that therefore there is a lien: but it is not like that case, because the purchaser paid the money, and the children consented to its being paid to the brother: this put an end to the lien, as to the estate in the hands of the purchaser. Here was no fraud in the intention of the parties; it was a provision for a probable event, as to which it would operate, as a discharge of the estate. It is allowed, that if it had been paid to the children, and afterwards lent by them to the brother upon this security, that it must preserve its priority; but there is no difference, whether it is advanced the next moment, or at another time. There is no difference, whether it is the old debt, or not, for the charge was gone, and the estate was only liable by virtue of the writing; for if there had been no such writing, it would only have been a simple contract debt. Then, as being prior in time, it must be prior in equity; the mortgagee had the security he trusted to, he knew he had not the legal estate, he trusted to the honour of the borrower. This puts an end to the case of the younger child, who was an infant at the time of the transaction: if there was a fraud, of which the infant was conscious, she would be bound as much as an adult. But I think there is no reason to attribute fraud to any of them.

His Lordship affirmed the former decree, by which the charge of 3000*l.* was to be considered as prior to the securities of the plaintiff. [And the deposit was ordered to be paid to the defendants.]

From this decree the plaintiff brought an appeal in Parliament, but did not prosecute it; in consequence, as the reporter has been informed, of its being discovered that the estates were insufficient to pay the prior incumbrances.

(8) If a purchaser pays the money, and is afterwards evicted through the fraud of the vendor, to which another person is no party, he has quite lost his lien. See Cator v. E. of Pembroke, antea, 301. and the notes. So where he takes any specific security for the money remaining due, wherefrom it can be implied he meant to rely upon it, see Blackburn v. Gregson, postea, 420. and Nairn v. Prowse, 6 Ves. 752. 759, &c. All, however, seems to turn upon the party's manifest intention to substitute any other security at any time for his right in respect of the estate itself. And Lord Eldon C. observed, in Austen v. Halsey, and Bedford v. Halsey, on the 20th July, 1801, that a vendor has a lien against an estate in the hands of a purchaser, unless securities have passed, from which it clearly appears that "the party intended to give up his lien." And Lord Eldon at the same time approved the case of Chapman v. Tanner, 1 Vern. 267. Editor's MS. note, taken in court, Austen v. Halsey, is reported, and the point which gave occasion for the above observations appears, 6 Ves. 475. 480, 481.; but those observations of the Lord Chancellor were made some months before, and are otherwise unreported. See, however, 6 Ves. 483. As to Chapman v. Tanner, see Mr. Raithby's extract of the decree from the Registrar's book, 1 Vern. 268. That a vendor's lien exists, if not clearly relinquished. See further Macreth v. Symmons, 15 Ves. 329. Grant v. Mills, 2 Ves. & B. 306. Ex parte Peake, 1 Madd. Rep. 346. and Hughes v. Kearney, 1 Scho. & Lefroy, 132. 135, 136. per Lord Redesdale C.

[*] NEWTON against BENNET. [26 April.]

[ *359 ]

(Reg. Lib. 1783. B. fol. 287. b.)

THIS was a branch of the cause reported before p. 135., and now came on for further directions, upon a reserved question, whether the
Where an executor keeps the money of his testator in his hands, without accounting for a long time, and employs it in his trade, he shall pay interest. (1)

(1) See also Perkins v. Bayntun, postea, 375. and Trevel v. Townshend, post. 384. As to the rate of interest with which an executor, assignee, &c. should be charged, it will not 1784:

NEWTON
against
BENNET.

the defendant, Bennet, should be charged interest for sums belonging to the estate of Moore, his testator, and remaining from time to time in his hands, which he used in common with his own money, in the way of his trade, under the following circumstances:—

Moore and Tryon had been partners. The partnership was dissolved in 1743, but Moore's name continued in the business, and Tryon gave Moore an assignment of scheduled debts, and also a further security, to indemnify him from all debts which should be incurred. In 1747, Tryon died. By his will, he appointed Moore executor. In 1754, Moore died, and, by his will, gave several legacies to the plaintiffs, and appointed Bennet and one Gibson (not now a party) executors; Bennet also took out administration de bonis non to Tryon.—Soon after the death of Moore, Bennet called in several bond-debts due from different persons to Moore's estate, and bearing interest, and, being himself indebted by bond or note bearing interest, in the sum of 1500*l.* to Moore, he gave credit to Moore's estate for that sum, and debited the estate for 1400*l.* and upwards, as so much paid to Tryon's estate, being the balance due from Moore, as executor to the estate of Tryon, Bennet's first testator. In Moore's life-time, Bisse, a creditor of Tryon, had brought an action, and filed a bill against Moore; and the suit having abated, was revived against the defendant and his co-executor, to Moore. Upon the hearing, the bill was ordered to be retained for six months, with liberty to the plaintiff to proceed at law, which he did, and in Michaelmas term, 1759, obtained a verdict, and recovered judgment for 7750*l.* which Bisse, the plaintiff, afterwards, 17th of December, 1763, upon a representation that Tryon and Moore's estates were both insolvent, assigned to Bennet for 3090*l.*

[ *360 ]

Subsequent to this several sums of money coming, from time to time, into Bennet's hands from Moore's estates, the plaintiffs filed the present bill in December, 1768, and the cause being heard the 4th of July, 1771,—the principal [*] question then made, was, whether Bennet was entitled to the advantage arising from the compromise with Bisse, or should be held to have made it for the benefit of Moore's estate, when the Court decreed that he should be allowed, upon the account, only the sum he actually paid to Bisse; and it being referred to a Master to take an account, and make a separate report of the estate of Moore, come to Bennet's hands, Master Hett, 14th of February, 1776, made his separate report, making rests every year, and stating a final balance of 1688*l.* 16*s.* 9*d.* to be due, which the defendant was ordered to pay, and did accordingly pay into the Bank.

And now the question was, whether he should pay interest for the sums from time to time in his hands, and whether he should be allowed, or should pay, costs.

Mr. Madocks (for the plaintiff) cited Ratcliffe v. Graves, 1 Vern. 196. that where an executor has made interest of the testator's assets, he shall pay interest.

Mr. Scott and Mr. Hollist (for the defendant) said, that the same case which Mr. Madocks had cited for the plaintiff, was also reported in 2 Ch. Cases, 152., and appeared there to be against all the former determinations, particularly against that of Gardner v. Cartwright; that it is true, it is laid down in Lee v. Lee, 2 Vern. 548. that where an executor makes interest, he shall be charged interest; but that is not be more than four per cent. (the ordinary interest of the Court,) unless in a special case. See per Lord Thurlow, in Treves v. Townshend, post. 386. Ex parte Strutt, 1 Cox, Ca. Ch. 439. Rocke v. Hart, 11 Ves. 58, 59, 60, 61. Mosley v. Ward, ibid. 581, 582, &c. The same principle which charges the party with any rate of interest, renders him subject to costs. See in Rocke v. Hart, 11 Ves. 61, 62., with the references, and Mosley v. Ward, ibid. 582, 583.

against against the modern adjudications. In Bromfield v. Wytherley, Pre. Ch. 505. the Lord Chancellor took a distinction, that where an executor was solvent, he should not pay interest; but if he was insolvent, and made interest, he should pay it, because he ran no risk. There are many modern authorities, that an executor using the testator's money in the way of his trade shall not be charged with interest. In Adams v. Gale, 2 Atkyns, 106., Lord Hardwicke would not allow interest, because the executor might use the money. — To apply the authorities to the present case:—when Bennet came into the double capacity of executor to Moore and administrator to Tryon, he applied Moore's effects to pay the debt due to Tryon's estate: and a suit having been brought against Moore in his life-time, Bennet got in debts due to the estate in order to answer the demand as far as they would go. In this he was right; for if the [*] bond-debts had continued outstanding, Bennet would have been answerable for them, Shelley's case, 1 Salkeld, 296.

1784.

NEWTON
against BENNET

[ *361 ]

Lord Chancellor. — Moore and Tryon had been in partnership, which ended in 1743, but Moore's name continued in the business, under an indemnity, till 1747, and there was an assignment of all debts to indemnify him from the consequences of his name being in the business. In 1747, Tryon died, and left Moore his executor. Moore died in 1754, and then his estate was indebted to Tryon's 1400*l.* There was one outstanding demand upon their partnership in Bisse. Upon Moore's death, Bennet took out administration to Tryon. Bennet was indebted to Moore in 1500*l.* Moore's estate was unengaged, except to Bisse. Bennet had, down to 1760, about 3000*l.* of the estate of Moore in his hands. He took no steps to clear Moore's estate: in order to do this, he should have cleared Tryon's. — There was a joint debt of Tryon's and Moore's outstanding; this Bennet knew, but he did not know whether Tryon's estate would be sufficient to pay it; if he had, then there would have been a manifest neglect in Bennet. If Tryon's estate was sufficient, Moore's was clear. — In 1760, that case was compromised; till then, it does not appear Bennet kept the money in his hands without a cause, there being an outstanding demand. From 1760, the question is, whether he shall pay interest, having applied the money in the course of his trade. There are many sayings in the books, to prevent it being laid down as a general rule, that an executor shall pay interest for money used in the course of his trade; but it does not follow, that he may keep the estate of the testator for a long course of time idle, from the persons entitled to it by the will. The doctrine I am desired to lay down is, that an executor may keep his testator's money, and apply it to the uses of his trade, without being liable to interest. It has been argued to this extent, that if the executor is solvent, he shall not pay interest; if he is not, he shall. I cannot see the reason of that case. It is impossible this should have been laid down as the law of the Court. I do not say, he shall pay interest on the ground of his having called in a debt which bore interest, because an executor has an honest discretion to call in money which he thinks in hazard; but when it is called in, and made profit of in the way of his trade, I think he should be charged with interest. The books say, he shall [*] not, because it might be lost, and, if it was, he must have answered it. This argument would apply equally to the case, where the executor makes actual interest; for the party to whom it is lent may become insolvent. When the executor did not apply the money to the uses of the will, or bring it hither, I must take it that he kept it for the purpose of making advantage of it in the way of his trade. From 1760, Bennet had not a colour of reason for not applying it. He could not be guilty of a devastavit, for there was no demand out. The whole ground of this defence

[ *362 ]

1784.

NEWTON
against
BENNET.

defence is, that he ought to have the advantage of the compromise which was made by imposing on Bisse, — he has not shewn any reasonable cause for keeping the money, but has done it merely for the sake of using it in his trade; he, therefore, must be charged interest. (2) As to the costs, it is a general rule that an executor has a claim to costs, as far as goes to the taking of the account, but a great part of the expence of this cause arises upon his claim to the advantage of the compromise; by this claim, and by his delay, he has caused all the expences except the taking the first account: but it is not possible to separate the expences, I shall therefore satisfy myself with not giving him costs.† (3)

† See Ekins v. E. I. Company, 1 Wms. 395. also Perkins v. Baynton, post. 375. Trees v. Townshend, post. 384. Foster v. Foster, post. vol. 2. p. 615. and the Earl of Lonsdale v. Church, Rolls, 17th December, 1789, where the receiver of the duties in the harbour of Whitehaven, having a yearly salary, was decreed to pay interest made of balances from time to time in his hands, and laid out by him on securities.

(2) The Master stated the several balances in the defendant's hands at the end of each year; and made annual rests accordingly. The defendant stated by his examination, that such several sums were blended and intermixed with his general cash at his banker's, and that no part was placed out at interest by him, or otherwise used to profit or advantage than by being paid in and drawn out by him with his own money, in the usual way of carrying on his business. But the cashier of the defendant's bankers stated that the defendant never left any money which he paid into their hands dead for any length of time, but generally soon drew it out again, and therefore was not esteemed a good customer; that the defendant was a grocer, and he believed the probable profits from the money employed therein was equal to 5 per cent. per annum.

The Master was ordered to compute interest at 4 per cent. per annum [A] upon the several rests in his report, stated from the respective times therein mentioned; and to state how much of such interest was due during the life of Sarah Newton, and how much thereof since her death, &c. &c.

(3) As to the costs, the entry, nevertheless, is thus: — “And the plaintiff's waiving their costs, his Lordship doth not give any directions as to such costs; and doth not think proper to give the defendant Bennet any costs.” R. L. See end of note (1).

[A] See the first note to this case.

[ *363 ]

[*] EASTER TERM,

24 Geo. 3. 1784.

EDWARD LORD THURLOW, Lord High Chancellor. Sir LLOYD KENYON, Bart. Master of the Rolls. RICHARD PEPPER ARDEN, Esq. Attorney General. ARCHIBALD MACDONALD, Esq. Solicitor General.

NELTHORPE WADE, Clerk, since deceased, and ELIZABETH his Widow, him surviving; which said ELIZABETH is the Sister of RICHARD SLADE the younger, Esq. who was the Father of ELIZABETH MOORE SLADE, by ANN his late Wife, both deceased; and which said ANN SLADE was one of the Daughters of JAMES MOORE, Esq. deceased; and MATTHEW MOSS, an Infant, by RICHARD SLADE, Esq. his next Friend; which said MATTHEW MOSS is the eldest Son, and Heir at Law of JOHN MOSS, Esq. by FRANCES his Wife, deceased, and which said FRANCES was another of

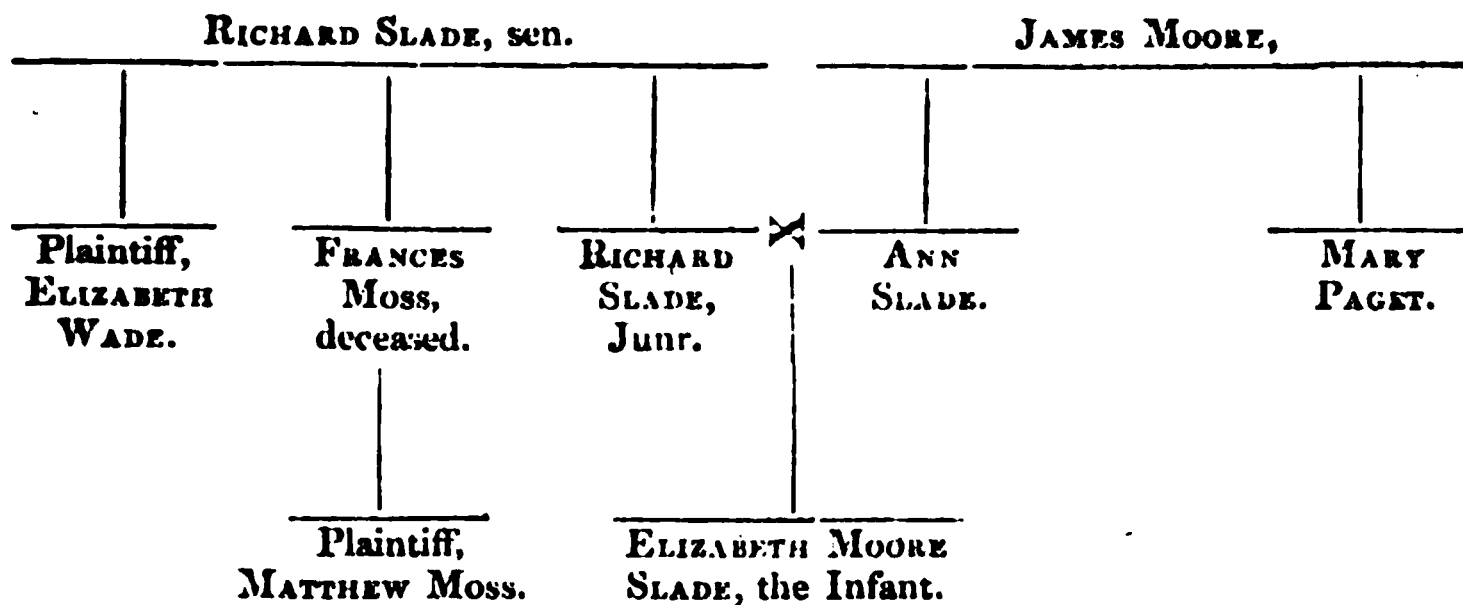

of the Sisters of the said RICHARD SLADE the younger; and which said ELIZABETH WADE and MATTHEW MOSS are the Co-heirs at Law of the said ELIZABETH MOORE SLADE the Daughter, and Heir at Law, of said RICHARD SLADE the younger, and ANN his Wife. Plaintiffs.

1784.

[*] RICHARD PAGET, and MARY his Wife, RICHARD SAVAGE, and ROBERT BATH. Defendants.

[ *364 ]

(Reg. Lib. 1783. B. fol. 640.)

[For the judgment, vide S. C. 1 Cox, Ch. Ca. 74.]

ROBERT HILL, seised in fee of lands in Pilton, and in tail of an estate in Weston-under-Penyard, in Somersetshire, by lease and release, dated the 17th and 18th October, 1745, the release being of three parts, and made between the said Robert Hill of the first part; Solomon Hughes of the second part, and James Moore of the third part; the said Robert Hill conveyed to the said Solomon Hughes and his heirs (amongst other things) the said messuage and lands situate at West Pennard, for the purpose of making the said Solomon Hughes a tenant to the præcipe for suffering a common recovery thereof; the uses of which recovery were declared to be to the use of the said Robert Hill, for life, without impeachment of waste, with remainder to the said James Moore in like manner, with remainder to such child, or children, of the body of the said James Moore, by Christian his late wife, (who was sister to the said Robert Hill,) for such estate and estates, term or terms, and interest, and in such shares, parts, and proportions, and chargeable with such sum or sums of money in gross, or otherwise, — and in such manner as the said James Moore should, by any deed or deeds, will in writing, or other writing or writings, duly signed and executed, in the presence of three or more credible witnesses, direct, nominate, will, or appoint; and in default therefore, to the use of all and every the child or children of the said James Moore, by the said Christian his wife that should be living at the death of the survivor of them, the said Robert Hill and James Moore, and the heirs of the body, or bodies of such children as should be then dead, equally between them, as tenants in common: — and a common recovery was suffered accordingly. — Upon the death of the said Robert Hill, the lands in Pilton descended to the defendant Mary Paget, Ann Moore hereinafter mentioned, and their sister Elizabeth, as his [*] nieces and heiresses at law, which Elizabeth died before the settlement of 1765, presently to be mentioned, and the defendant Mary, and Ann Moore, were her co-heiresses.

Where legal and equitable estates meet in the same person, the equitable merge in the legal. (1) A certain estate is covenanted to be conveyed, and is not so, the breach of the covenant is in damages. — Such damages are money, not land, in the hands of the party injured. Where a power is reserved to be executed by deed, in the presence of three witnesses. — It is by marriage settlement executed, but the deed is attested by only two, this shall be supplied.

[ *365 ]

In November, 1765, a treaty of marriage being on foot between Robert Slade the younger and Ann, afterwards his wife, and the said James

(1) See Brydges v. Brydges, &c. 3 Ves. 120. and Lord Eldon C.'s approbation of it, 18 Ves. 418. Vide also Selby v. Alston, 3 Ves. 339, 340, 341, 342. and Bottler v. Aldington, 12 Ves. 72, 73. and the notes.

1784.

WADE
against PAGEY.

[ *366 ]

Moore being really entitled only as above stated, (but whether his title was known to the Slades, does not appear,) proposed to Slade the elder and Slade the younger, that, if they would settle certain freehold lands and premises upon said marriage, the said James Moore would likewise settle the said premises of which he was seised, in manner hereafter mentioned: and the said Slade the elder, and Slade the younger having agreed thereto; by lease and release, dated respectively, the 6th and 7th of November, 1765, the release of four parts, and made between the said Slade the elder, of the first part; Slade the younger of the second part; James Moore and Ann his daughter of the third part; and William Savage and Robert Bath of the fourth part:— After reciting, among other things, that a marriage was then intended to be solemnized between the said Slade the younger and Ann Moore, and also reciting that the said James Moore stood seised in fee of the freehold messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, thereafter described, situate in the parishes of West Pennard and Pilton, and was also possessed of several leasehold lands and premises in West Pennard; and also reciting that it was agreed between the said Slade the elder, Slade the younger, and James Moore and Ann Moore, that the said freehold and leasehold lands and premises of the said James Moore, with the freehold and leasehold estates of Slade the elder, and Slade the younger, should be conveyed to trustees, upon the trusts and to the uses therein and hereinafter expressed:— The said Slade the elder, and Slade the younger, did convey the said freehold and leasehold estates accordingly, and the said James Moore, in consideration of the then intended marriage, and in pursuance of the said agreement on his part, and of 5*s.* paid by the said trustees, did, amongst other things, grant, &c. and confirm to the said trustees and their heirs and assigns, a messuage and lands in West Pennard aforesaid, and also divers lands at Pilton aforesaid, to hold the said estates released as well by the said Slade the younger, and by the said James Moore, unto the said trustees, to the use of each granting party, *his heirs and [*] assigns, until the marriage*, and, after the same, to the use of Slade the younger for life, remainder to the same trustees to preserve contingent estates, — remainder to Ann Moore for life, — remainder to the issue of the marriage, for such estates, and in such manner as Slade the younger and Ann, during their joint lives, should appoint, and for want of such appointment to the use of the first or only son of Slade the younger, on the body of the said Ann to be begotten, in fee, and in default of such issue, then to the use of the daughters of the said Slade the younger, on the body of the said Ann to be begotten, and of the heirs of their respective bodies, as tenants in common: and in case there should happen to be but one such daughter of said intended marriage, to the use of such only child in fee, and in default of such issue to the respective granting parties in fee, with covenants for quiet enjoyment and further assurances. — This deed was executed in the presence of two witnesses only. The marriage between the said Slade the younger and Ann Moore took place, and Slade the younger entered into possession of all the premises so conveyed by the said James Moore, and continued in possession and receipt of the rents and profits thereof to his death. — Ann Slade died in May, 1767, — leaving the said Slade the younger, and Elizabeth Moore Slade, her daughter and only child, and heir at law, by the said Slade the younger, her surviving. About August, 1768, Elizabeth Moore Slade, the daughter, died an infant, and without issue, and in Oct. 1774, Slade the younger, her father, died, without issue.

The plaintiffs filed this bill, insisting that the marriage-settlement of the 6th and 7th of November, 1765, was a good execution of the power given to James Moore, by the deeds of the 17th and 18th of October, 1745, 1745, or that if it was a defective execution, it ought to be supplied by the Court, being in consideration of marriage, or if the Court should be of opinion that the defect could not be supplied, that they were entitled to a satisfaction out of the assets of James Moore, come to the hands of the defendant Mary Paget, as his representative. The defendants in their answer, insisted that, no appointment having been made by James Moore, the estate in West Pennard became, on the death of James Moore, vested, in possession, in defendant Mary, either under the indentures of the 17th and 18th of October, 1745, as his only surviving child and heir at law, or as the heir at law ex parte maternâ, of Elizabeth Moore Slade; and that the moiety of the lands in Pilton, which Ann Slade was seised of at the time of [*] her marriage, descended upon her daughter Elizabeth Moore Slade, (subject to Slade the younger's estate by the curtesy,) and, upon her death, descended upon the defendant Mary as her heir upon the part of the mother, (subject to the said estate by the curtesy): and that, on the death of Slade the younger, the defendant Mary became entitled to the possession of that moiety, James Moore having had no title in him to the lands in Pilton: and they endeavoured, by circumstances, to affect the Slades with notice of the imperfect title of Moore in the West Pennard lands, and of his having no title to those in Pilton, but without making out that circumstance in evidence.

It was argued by Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Selwyn for the plaintiffs, Mr. Madocks, Mr. Morris, Mr. Scott, and Mr. Hollist for the defendants.

For the plaintiffs it was contended, — that although the deed of appointment, being executed in the presence of two witnesses only, might not be an execution of the power, yet, as Moore had a power to appoint, the Court would supply the defect, and to this purpose were cited Coventry v. Coventry, 1 Stra. 596. 604. 1 Ch. Ca. 263. 2 Wms. 489. Cotter v. Layer, 2 Wms. 623. and Godwin v. Fisher, before Lord Camden, in 1769, in which he spoke, with great approbation, of Cotter v. Layer. — But that, if this could not be supplied, they were at least entitled to a satisfaction out of Moore's assets, — 2dly, as to Pilton, Moore had agreed it should be settled; Ann Moore was a party to that deed, and concurred in the recital of his title — that will bind her moiety: and as to the other moiety, satisfaction must be made out of Moore's assets.

Upon the first question, it was argued for the defendants, that if the deed of 1765 was an execution of the power, the parties need not come here, but might recover at law: If it was not, it ought not to be supplied, because the person who claims is not an object of the settlement; which was only to provide for the husband and wife, and but partially for the issue. — They cited Goodright, lessee of Alston v. Wells, Dougl. 741., — where Lord Mansfield was of opinion, a Court of Equity would not interfere between the heir ex parte paternâ, and the heir ex parte maternâ.

The Lord Chancellor said (2), that during the twelvemonth the infant survived her mother, she had the legal estate in fee in [*] one moiety, as well as the equitable estate in fee, by the covenant; and that it is universally true, that where the estates unite, the equitable must merge in the legal: that the estate was executed without any act done, therefore, that moiety had descended to the defendant Mrs. Paget. With respect to the other moiety it was perfectly different. — Moore has contracted to convey it, and there is a breach of the contract which sounds in damages, and, therefore, there must be an issue directed to try what the 1784.

(2) For the judgment, see 1 Cox, Ch. Ca. 74. For the Decree, see the note at the end of the case.

WADE
against PAGET.

A power to be executed by writing in the presence of three witnesses, it is executed in consideration of marriage, in the presence of two witnesses only. This defective execution shall be supplied.

damages are. This is a contract to settle a particular estate, not to purchase lands. — If it were, I should decree lands to be purchased and settled; but being to settle a particular estate, it is only in damages. — With regard to the West Pennard lands, I am perfectly clear, from all the cases, that I must consider this as a case fit and proper to be supplied by this Court.

A question arose as to the sum to be taken as damages, whether it should be real or personal property; but the Lord Chancellor said, that the money must be in the same situation as if it had been recovered by the daughter in her lifetime. — In that case, if there had been contingent uses outstanding, the Court would have decreed the money to be laid out in land, subject to the contingencies; but, in this case, as she would have been entitled to the estate in fee-simple, the Court would have given it absolutely to her: and the father having survived the child, by which he became entitled as her representative, it must be paid to the plaintiff Elizabeth, as next of kin to him. — By consent, it was referred to the Master to settle the amount of the damages instead of going to an issue. (3)

(3) “ His Lordship doth declare, he is of opinion, as to one moiety of the Pilton estate, which descended to Elizabeth M. Slade Paget, and from her to the defendant Mary Paget, and as to the other moiety of the said Pilton estate, contracted to be settled by the said James Moore by the deed of the 7th day of November, 1765, and his breach of the said covenant is matter of damages; and that such damages are to be considered as personal estate, and will belong to the plaintiff E. Wade, as the next of kin of Richard Slade [the younger]; and, by consent, his Lordship doth order and decree, that it be referred to Mr. Pepys, &c. to settle what is the amount of such damages, and that what the said Master shall so settle be paid to the plaintiff E. W. the next of kin and personal representative of the said R. Slade the younger. And as to the other estate at West Pennard, it is further ordered, that the power in the indentures, dated the 18th October, 1745, be executed; and that the said Master do approve of conveyances for the purpose of settling the said estate according to the terms of the said power; and that all proper parties do join therein as the said Master shall direct; and that the injunction granted in this cause be dissolved; and upon payment to the plaintiff E. W. by the defendants R. P. and Mary his wife, of what the said Master shall settle for the damages occasioned by the said J. M.’s breach of covenant in the said indenture of the 7th day of November, 1765. It is ordered that the plaintiffs do deliver up the possession of the said Pilton estate to the said defendants R. P. and Mary his wife.” — The trustees were to be paid their costs: but as between the plaintiffs and the other defendants, no costs were to be paid on either side. Reg. Lib.

LOWE against MORGAN.

Mortgage
Parties.

[One mortgagee out of several interested, cannot sustain a bill to foreclose for his proportion alone, without making the others parties. (1)]

A SHARE of Covent Garden Playhouse having been mortgaged, the mortgagee assigned the mortgage to a trustee, in trust for three persons, who contributed equal proportions of the money. One of the three filed a bill to foreclose the equity of redemption. The cause was opened as a common bill of foreclosure, and the ordinary decree pronounced; but the Register, finding some difficulty in drawing up the decree, applied to the Lord Chancellor, who said it was a new case, in respect of their being joint-tenants, and that it would be impossible for one to foreclose without making the other two parties. The cause therefore stood over for that purpose.

(1) Montgomerie v. M. Bath, 3 Vesey, 560. was contra; but the Editor submits is evidently wrong; since it seems the principle upon which the above decision proceeds, is that the mortgagor might otherwise be harassed with as many different suits as there were parties interested.

1784.

[*] KINCHANT against KINCHANT.

(No Entry.)

[ *369 ]

*Lincoln's Inn
Hall, March
4th and 5th,
1784.*

In Court, 10th of May, 1784.

*Mr. Justice
Gould in absence of Lord
Thurlow.*

*Son tenant in tail of an estate,
upon the death of the mother (who was tenant for life) makes a settlement of it for the benefit of the family, in consequence of an agreement
so to do in the mother's life;
although the father derives some benefit under the settlement, it shall not be set aside, as entered into under undue influence. (1)*

THIS bill was brought by the plaintiff, John Charlton Kinchant, against John Kinchant, plaintiff's father, and Francis Kinchant, Richard Kinchant, Emma Gardener, and Elizabeth Brooke, plaintiff's brothers and sisters, to set aside certain deeds executed by the plaintiff upon his coming of age, as being obtained from him by undue influence and authority of the father. — The plaintiff's father, who did not appear to have had any fortune of his own, married the plaintiff's mother, who was entitled, under the marriage-settlement of her father, Sir Francis Charlton, and was then in possession of, an estate called Park Hall, of the yearly value of 500*l.* as tenant for life, with remainder to plaintiff in tail; and she was also tenant in tail, in possession, of an estate called Bishop's Castle, of the yearly value of 350*l.* — In the year 1767, during the coverture, the plaintiff's father and mother suffered a recovery of the Bishop's Castle estate, and limited the uses of it to the plaintiff's father for life, — remainder to trustees, to preserve, &c. remainder to the mother for life, — remainder to plaintiff for life, — remainder to his (plaintiff's) first and other sons in tail-male: remainder to defendant Francis Kinchant for life, and his first and other sons in tail-male, with like remainders to defendant, Richard Kinchant, and his first and other sons; with remainder to all the other sons of plaintiff's father and mother, and their first and other sons in tail-male; remainder to defendants, Emma and Elizabeth, as tenants in tail-general; remainder to plaintiff's mother in fee, — with power reserved to the plaintiff's father and mother jointly, to raise, by way of charge upon the estate, the sum of 3000*l.* for such purposes as they should think fit, — and also for the sons, when in possession, to charge the estate with jointures of 200*l.* per annum; and to charge it with 3000*l.* for younger children's portions. — Plaintiff's mother died 11th, and was buried 18th January, 1772, leaving the plaintiff, her eldest son, who thereupon became entitled, as tenant in tail in possession, to the Park Hall estate. — The plaintiff had attained his age of twenty-one years, in the year 1770; and thereupon he had joined with his father and mother in selling some part of the Park-Hall estate, which raised a sum of 5000*l.* and which [*] was intended to be applied in paying off the incumbrances, which affected the estates generally, and in repairs. And 3000*l.*, part thereof, was applied in paying off mortgages, which had been made of the Park Hall estate before the marriage; 1200*l.* other part thereof, was paid in discharge of a mortgage of the Bishop's Castle estate, which 1200*l.* had been raised to purchase a commission in the army for the plaintiff: and the remaining 800*l.* was applied in different expences attending the sale, and in repairs; but which were not specified by the defendant's answer. — On the 19th January, 1772 (the day after the mother's funeral) a memorandum was drawn up by a Mr. Ashby (since dead) who was an attorney, intimate in the family, in the following words: — “Instructions from John Charlton Kinchant, Esq. taken at Park, 19th January, 1772. — He is “entitled as tenant in tail, in possession, on the decease of his mother, [ *370 ]

(1) See Brown v. Carter, 5 Ves. 862, &c. to the same point; although there was delay and acquiescence until after the death of the father. It was said in that case that Lord Kenyon was always dissatisfied with Mr. Justice Gould's determination of the principal case; and the Master of the Rolls, (Sir P. Arden) adds, “with some reason.” See 5 Ves. 873. 877.

“ lately

1784.

KINCHANT
against KINCHANT.

[ *371 ]

“ lately deceased, to the Park estate near Oswestry, of the yearly value
 “ of 500*l.* About 60*l.* a-year, consists in houses, buildings, and gardens “ and yards in the town and liberties of Oswestry. — He will be “ entitled, on the death of his father, to an estate in and near Bishop's “ Castle, about 360*l.* a-year for his life, with remainder to his first and “ other sons in tail, with power to make a jointure and fortune for “ younger children. — Mr. Charlton Kinchant owes his father about “ 270*l.*, and it will take some hundreds of pounds more to complete the “ repairs of the tenements and buildings on the Park estate. — The “ houses, buildings, gardens, and yards in Oswestry are most fit to be “ sold, to answer the purpose of paying this money, and of repairing the “ Park estate, and of paying the young gentleman's debts, and of “ answering two occasions. He proposes to give each of his two sisters “ 1000*l.* a-piece, upon their attaining their respective ages of twenty-one “ years, with interest from that time at 4 per cent. — He proposes and “ and agrees that his father shall have the rents and profits of the Park “ estate, becoming due at Lady-day next, from which time the son is to “ have the growing rents; and the father to release to him all demands “ and claims which he has on that estate; the son then taking upon him “ all repairs agreed by the father to be done on the Park estate, — the “ father to be repaid, out of the money the commission produces, “ all debts he has paid for his son, being 54*l.* to Mr. Ashby, 20*l.* to “ Mr. Robinson, [*] and about 13*l.* for lodging. — He proposes to suffer
 “ a recovery of the Park estate, and to limit the premises in Oswestry, “ to such uses as he shall, by deed or deeds, direct or appoint; and in “ default of such appointment, and of such parts whereof no appoint“ ment shall be made, as also of all other parts of the Park estate, to the “ use of himself for life, without impeachment of waste, with remainder “ to his first and other sons in tail; with remainder to his father for life;
 “ with remainder to his brother Francis for life, and to his first and “ other sons in tail; with remainder to his brother Richard for life, and “ to his first and other sons in tail; with remainder to his sisters Emma “ and Elizabeth as tenants in common, and to their heirs, with remainder “ to himself in fee. — Power for making a jointure, by way of annuity, “ on any wife he marries, not exceeding 200*l.* chargeable on the Park “ estate. — Power for him to charge Park estate with any sum not ex“ ceeding 2000*l.* for younger children, with benefit of survivorship, and “ if only one younger child with the whole 2000*l.* — Power for his “ brothers respectively to charge the Park Hall estate with 1000*l.* for “ their younger children, after they respectively come into possession.
 “ — Usual powers for making leases. — Power for brothers Francis and “ Richard, respectively, when in possession, to grant a jointure, by way “ of annuity, of 100*l.* a-year to any wife. — There is an annuity of 9*l.*
 “ a-year charged on that part of the estate which was lately sold to John “ Mytton, Esq. for the life of Mr. Studley, late of Ellesmere, a very old “ man, about 80 years old, payable to Mr. Burlin, and which annuity “ the son agrees to pay from Lady-day next, and to indemnify the “ father from the payment of the said annuity.” — On which memorandum
 “ the plaintiff endorsed as follows: — “ I agree with the foregoing pro“ posal, and agree hereto and engage to carry the same into execution, “ and request Mr. Ashby to prepare deeds accordingly, and to suffer the “ recovery, to enable me to complete the same. Witness my hand the “ 19th of January, 1772., — J. C. Kinchant.” — Ashby prepared in“ dentures of lease and release, which were made to bear date the 18th “ and 19th of January, 1772, although the same were not executed until “ the first or second of February following, and thereby the Park Hall “ estate was limited to trustees for a term of five hundred years, for raising “ the 2000*l.* for the plaintiff's sisters Emma and Elizabeth, and then to the “ plaintiff

1784.

KINCHANT
against KINCHANT.
[ *372 ]

plaintiff for life; remainder to trustees to preserve, &c. remainder to the first [*] and other sons of the plaintiff, in tail-general; remainder to the father for life, without impeachment of waste; remainder to Francis for life, and his first and other sons in tail-general; remainder to Richard and his first and other sons in like manner; remainder to all and every the daughter and daughters of the plaintiff as tenants in common in tail-general; remainder to Emma and Elizabeth as tenants in common in tail-general; remainder to the daughters of Francis Kinchant in tail, in like manner; remainder to the daughters of Richard in like manner; remainder to Gertrude Brown, daughter of plaintiff's mother, by a former husband in tail-general; remainder to plaintiff in fee with such powers as mentioned in the memorandum. The plaintiff by the bill charged that these deeds were obtained from him by the improper influence of the father, and by taking advantage of his inexperience, and particularly that the proposal was first made to him the same day the memorandum was signed, the day after his mother's funeral, and at a time when he was under great affliction, and was easily imposed upon, and that he understood what he then signed was merely to make a provision for his two sisters of 1000*l.* a-piece, and that, subject to that charge, he was to have the absolute disposal of the estate. And the bill prayed that the deeds so executed by him (save as to the term of five hundred years, which the plaintiff was willing should remain,) might be set aside, and that the father might be charged with the 5000*l.* received by him on the sale of part of the Park estate, as aforesaid, and might discharge himself by shewing in what manner he had applied the same to the purposes for which it was raised. — The plaintiff examined no witnesses. — The defendant's case was, that the plaintiff had led a very dissolute and extravagant life, and that the defendant had been two or three times obliged to pay his debts, which facts were proved by letters written from time to time, from the plaintiff to the defendant, and the defendant's late wife. — The answer then stated, that by reason of the plaintiff's extravagance, it being necessary to sell his commission and quit the army, it was thereupon agreed between the plaintiff and defendant and defendant's wife (who was then alive,) that part of the Park estate should be sold to pay the plaintiff's debts, and the residue applied in repairs and improvements, and that the remainder of the said estate should be charged with an annuity of 200*l.* to the plaintiff during his mother's life, and that, if the defendant should survive his said wife, the plaintiff should allow the defendant the like sum of [*] 200*l.* per annum during his (defendant's) life to be charged on the said Park estate, and that the said estate should be, thereupon, settled upon the defendant's said late wife for life, charged with such annuity to the defendant, remainder to plaintiff's first and other sons in tail-male; remainder over to his brothers and sisters in strict settlement; and that instructions were given by the plaintiff and defendant, and defendant's wife, to Mr. Ashby, to prepare proper deeds for suffering a recovery of the said estate to the said uses. — That while the defendant was in town, in order to sell the plaintiff's commission, and pay off his debts, the defendant's wife died. That the defendant sent for Mr. Ashby, by the plaintiff's own desire, who took the instructions mentioned in the memorandum aforesaid, from the plaintiff's own mouth, which were read over to the plaintiff, and which he seemed to understand and approve of thoroughly, and therefore denies the circumstances of surprise and inexperience; as this transaction originated in the mother's lifetime, and the plaintiff was fully aware of the effect of it. And for the purpose of proving the agreement in the mother's lifetime, the defendant examined Thomas Morgan, who was executor of Mr. Ashby, who deposed, that after Mr. Ashby's death, he found a draft of an answer, appearing to be put in by Mr. Ashby as a defendant

[ *373 ]

1784.

KINCHANT
against
KINCHANT.

defendant in this cause; — And that, from such draft, the several circumstances of the defendant's case (which he mentions particularly) appear, and the deponent verily believes them to be true.

The case had been argued, during Lord Thurlow's illness, in Lincoln's-Inn-Hall, before Mr. Justice Gould, and this day (10th of May, 1784) he came into court and gave judgment. — Having stated the leading circumstances of the case, he went on to the following effect: — In a case of this kind, which tends to destroy the peace of families, I cannot be too careful how I proceed. The bill seeks to rescind the transaction, as proceeding from parental influence; the question is between the parties themselves, not between the creditors of either party. If the settlement was evidently unreasonable, I think it would afford evidence of improper conduct, and be a fraud apparent on the face of the deed: but, in this case, it being for the benefit of the estate, the Court ought not readily to rescind the transaction. In Doe, on demise of Watson v. Routledge, Cowp. 705. wherein Newstead v. Searles, 1 Atk. 265. is [*] referred to, a voluntary deed was supported against a purchaser for a valuable consideration: the present case has nothing to do with a purchaser, but is a very strong case of a voluntary settlement, by an elder brother, for the benefit of the family. Who would not applaud the advice to make such a settlement, if coming from a friend, to prevent the young man from ruining himself and his family? Still more it must be applauded, coming from a father. (2) In Cro. Eliz. 770, Glanville argued, that a father had an interest in all his children: he has a power of restraint and correction; then the question is, whether in this case there has been any abuse of that power. In the beginning, he consulted the son's wish as to his profession; the only use he made of his power, was to purchase the commission, and he allowed him an additional 50*l.* a-year; so that compared with the value of the estate, he had too large an allowance: after that, he paid the son's debts, and the son hinting an intention to sell his expectation, induced the former settlement, which gave him an annuity of 200*l.* per annum, and only gave the father an estate for life, to which he was already entitled by curtesy. — By the death of the mother, the son became tenant in tail in possession, of the Park Hall estate; then the settlement in question was entered into. No harsh language was used on the part of the father, and as it appears that the plaintiff had an affectionate regard for his sisters, there is no reason to suppose he had not the same for the brothers. It was therefore only advice from the father to a son who was independent of him. Suppose the father had exercised some paternal authority, it would not have been sufficient to set the transaction aside. (2) Cory v. Cory, 1 Ves. 19. Blunden v. Barker, 1 Wms. 639. If the father had exercised his authority in this case, it would seem to have been very happily applied. (2) There is no reason to suppose he abused his power. Then there is no ground to set the deed aside. — 2d. Then the second question is as to the account of the 2000*l.* raised by the mortgage: it falls under two heads; 1st. the 1200*l.* paid for the commission. — As to this it is a most unfavourable application, it was a use of the power for the son's benefit, and it would be unreasonable it should be paid out of the Bishop's Castle estate, which, upon the mother's death, was to be the only estate to support the family; therefore the money was properly applied to pay that incumbrance. — 2d. As to the remaining sum of 800*l.* the [*] answer of the father, which has been read in evidence,

(2) It is very probable that some of these expressions (coming from a Judge, unversed in the cases of undue influence, which frequently occur in a court of equity,) were the particular causes of the dissatisfaction excited in Lord Kenyon by the present determination as referred to by the preceding note.

evidence, says it was laid out in the payment of some debts, reimbursing himself sums paid, and in improving the estate: my mind revolts against there being a strict account taken of this sum.

As to this last point the cause stood over, in order to write to the plaintiff, who was abroad, and recommend a compromise upon the defendant's paying him 200*l.* which was proposed by Mr. Justice Gould, and assented to by the father.

The son rejecting this compromise, Mr. Justice Gould was of opinion, there was not sufficient ground for the Court to interfere, and dismissed the bill without costs; which order was inrolled, and upon an application, by the plaintiff, to discharge the inrolment, the Court did not incline so to do: but at length, to avoid an appeal, the parties came to a compromise. (3) (3) Lord Kenyon was much dissatisfied with the above decision. See in Brown v. Carter, 5 Ves. 873. 877.

1784.

KINCHANE
against KINCHANT.

PERKINS against BAYNT[U]N.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. B. fol. 336. b.)

UPON further directions the question was whether the defendant should pay any, and what, interest for a sum of 868*l.* which he had received as administrator to his brother, and kept for five years in his hands. — It had been referred to the Master to enquire whether he had made interest, who reported that he had mixed it with his own money, and, from time to time, had laid out the mixed fund in government securities, and had, therefore, made some interest, although the Master could not report what in particular. The cases cited were Ex parte Ellington, in the matter of Tidswell, 21st March, 1783, before the Lords Commissioners; Newton v. Bennet, ante, p. 359. and Treves v. Townshend, 17th November, 1783 (post. p. 384.) to shew, that executors and assignees had been so charged.

Lord Chancellor ordered, that interest should be paid upon the 868*l.* from 1778, when it came into Bayntun's hands, to March, 1783, when it was paid into court; and that such interest should be at the rate of four per cent. (1)

(1) The Court will not charge a party with more than 4 per cent. (the ordinary interest of the Court,) without a special case. See Newton v. Bennett, ante, 359. and the note, which refers to Treves v. Townshend, post. 384. 386. Ex parte Strutt, 1 Cox, Ca. Ch. 439. Rocke v. Hart, 11 Ves. 58, &c. Mosley v. Ward, ibid. 581, &c.

Administrator ordered to pay interest [at 4 per cent. (1)] for money in his hands, of which he made interest. (1)

DOVE against DOVE.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. A. fol. 325.)

APPLICATION having been made in behalf of a purchaser, for an order on the tenant in possession (who was a party in the cause) to deliver

[S. C. 2 Dick. 617. Quod vide.] Practice. Writ of assistance, [and the course of proceeding previously to applying for it. (1)]

(1) See Mr. Dickins' Report of this case, 2 vol. 617, &c., which states all the circumstances of it, and enters fully into the course of proceeding in such instances, and the reasons 1784.

Dove
against Dove.

[ *376 ] deliver possession to the purchaser; (the common order having been obtained) the party having been [*] served with a writ of execution of the order, and an attachment for non-obedience to it, and the tenant still refusing to deliver possession, the purchaser moved some time since for an injunction. That writ having been personally served: upon affidavit of that fact, and of disobedience to it, Mr. King moved this day for a writ of assistance, which was granted. (1) reasons for it. It appears that the practice to obtain possession of land decreed is as follows: —

First. Service of the writ of execution, of the decree; an affidavit of it, and of the party's refusal.

Secondly, An attachment issued thereon; but not to be executed. [Vide 2 Dick. 619.]

Thirdly. An injunction granted on such attachment, as of course.

Fourthly. A writ of assistance directed to the Sheriff to deliver the possession.

Lord Hardwicke states the origin of the Court of Chancery directing process to put a party into possession of land, to have been only in the reign of James the First. See in Penn v. Ld. Baltimore, 1 Vesey, 454.

For a modern instance, agreeably to the practice as above settled, vide Huguenin v. Baselcy, 15 Ves. 180.

ANON.

Ne exeat regno.

MR. Attorney moved for a writ of Ne exeat regno. The case appeared to be, that the contract was made in Carolina, that a bond was given, and was afterwards satisfied, by a payment in paper-money, at the value which it then legally bore in that state. The state of Carolina afterwards passed an ordinance, which made paper of that kind not a legal tender in transactions not complete. The parties being now here, the plaintiff applied for this writ, contending, that he had an equity here from the nature of the payment there. Lord Chancellor refused the writ, as no equity could arise here from a transaction legally satisfied in the country where it arose; he said a writ of ne exeat never could be granted, but upon a clear demand. If they had any legal claim, they might hold the defendant to bail.

[ *377 ]

[*] Countess Dowager of HOLDERNESSE,

Plaintiff.

Marquis of CARMARTHEN; JOHN BYRON, Esq. and Baroness CONYERS his Wife, since deceased; the Earl of DANBY, Lord FRANCIS GODOLPHIN OSBORN, Lady M. H. OSBORNE, (the Infant Children of the Marquis of CARMARTHEN, by said Baroness CONYERS, heretofore his Wife,) and A. M. BYRON, (the Infant Daughter of the said JOHN BYRON, and Baroness CONYERS, and ELBOROUGH WOODCOCK, Defendants.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. A. fol. 718.)

Lincoln's-Inn-Hall, 25th May.

An annuity of 4000*l.* charged upon the Post-office, (until a sum of 100,000*l.* should be paid, in order to be laid out in land,) continues to be a mere personal annuity, and as such to pass by grant or transfer. (1)

THE prayer of this bill was, that Elborough Woodcock (a trustee in Lord Holderness's will named) might be decreed to raise the sum

(1) See per M. R. on this case in Buckeridge v. Ingram, 2 Ves. jun. 662. 665.

See also sum of 8,000*l.* by sale or mortgage of a competent part of the after-mentioned annuity of 2,000*l.* to or for the use of the plaintiff, and in case any of the defendants, who claimed or derived any beneficial interest under or by virtue of the will of the late Lord Holdernes, should insist that the testator had no right or title to devise or dispose of the said Post-office annuity, or to make any charge thereon by his said will, and the Court should be of opinion that the said testator had not any such right of disposition; that then, such defendants might make their election, whether they will confirm such the disposition and direction made and given by the said testator's will concerning the said Post-office annuity, and the charge so made thereon, or whether they will relinquish and abandon all their several claims and interests, in and to all the real and personal estate of the said testator under or by virtue of his said will, and if they should elect to relinquish such their claims and interest under the said will, that the same, or a sufficient part thereof, might be applied under the direction of the Court, in, or for the purpose of raising and paying to the plaintiff, the said sum of 8000*l.* so due, or in trust for her as aforesaid.

By an act of parliament, 2 Geo. 1. reciting, that King William and Queen Mary, in consideration of the services of [*] Frederic, then Duke of Schomberg, determined to bestow on him 100,000*l.* out of the Exchequer, to be laid out in lands of inheritance, to be settled to trustees and their heirs: so that the profits thereof might be enjoyed by the said Frederic Duke of Schomberg, during his life, and after his death, by Charles, one of his sons, afterwards Duke of Schomberg, and the heirs-male of the body of the said Charles; and for default of such issue, then by Maynhart, afterwards Duke of Schomberg and Leinster, another son of the said Duke Frederic, and the heirs-male of his body; and in default of such issue, then by the heirs of the body of the said Duke Frederic; and in default of such issue then by the right heirs of the said Duke Frederic for ever. And that King William and Queen Mary had, by letters patent, granted unto the said Maynhart, Duke of Schomberg, the yearly sum of 4000*l.* payable to him or the heirs-male of his body, by quarterly payments out of the revenue of the post-office, being for the interest of the principal sum of 100,000*l.* until the same should be paid; and thereby declared, that when the state of affairs would permit the said principal sum to be paid, the same should be laid out in the purchase of lands, and settled in trust, so that the profits thereof might be enjoyed by the said Maynhart, Duke of Schomberg, and the heirs-male of his body; and in default of such issue, then by the heirs-male of the body of the said Duke Frederic for ever; It was enacted, that it should be lawful for his Majesty to grant unto the said Maynhart, Duke of Schomberg and Leinster, and the heirs-male of his body; and for default of such issue, to the right heirs of the said Maynhart, Duke of Schomberg and Leinster, until the said sum of 100,000*l.* should be paid an annuity of 4000*l.* to be issuing and payable, out of the revenue of the general post-office.— Letters patent of the said grant were, accordingly, passed 29th June, 2 Geo. 1. containing the like limitations, and this proviso, that so soon as the said principal sum of 100,000*l.* or any part thereof should be paid off, the whole interest for the same, or such part thereof, as should be proportional for a sum paid off, should sink and be abated.— By indenture of bargain and sale and assignment, 11th July, 1719, made between Robert, then Earl of Holdernes, and Frederica, then Countess of Holdernes, (who was one of the daughters and co-heiresses of the said Maynhart, Duke of Schomberg

1784.

HOLDERNESSE
against CARMARTHEN.

[ *378 ]

also E. Stafford v. Buckley, 2 Ves. 170., where a perpetual annuity granted by K. Ch. II. out of Barbadoes duties was held by Lord Hardwicke C. neither a rent nor realty; but a mere personal annuity. Et vide Priddy v. Rose, 3 Meriv. 86. 93. and the references.

1784.

HOLDERNESSE
against CARMARTHEN.
[ *379 ]

and Leinster) both deceased, of the first part; Count [*] Dengenfelt, and Mary, Countess Dengenfelt, his wife (who was the other daughter and co-heiress of Maynhurt, Duke of Schomberg and Leinster, who left no male-issue) of the second part; and certain persons appointed trustees, of the third part; the said Count and Countess Dengenfelt, in consideration of 42,500*l.* conveyed their moiety of the said annuity of 4000*l.* to the said trustees, and thereby covenanted to levy a fine, &c. subject to the trusts therein-mentioned, namely, as to part thereof, for the purpose of selling the same, to pay two sums of 18,000*l.* and 20,000*l.* part of the said purchase-money; and as to the residue of the said moiety, subject to the appointment of the Countess of Holderness. — The Countess of Holderness (then Countess Fitzwalter) by will, appointed that the trustees should stand seised and possessed of the said annuity of 2000*l.* remaining unsold, and the moiety of the 100,000*l.* upon payment whereof the same was redeemable, and all benefit thereof, upon trust, to pay the same to Earl Fitzwalter for life; and after his death, to pay thereout to Robert (the late) Earl Holderness, her son, for his life, the annual sum of 500*l.* and after his death, to pay the said annuity to the first, and all and every the son and sons of her said son, the said Earl of Holderness, and the heirs-male of their bodies successively; and in default of such issue to her said son and the heirs of his body, with such remainders over, or reversionary interests as therein were mentioned; and after the decease of the said Earl of Fitzwalter, to pay, out of the said annuity of 2000*l.* and of the interest of the said moiety of 100,000*l.* unto her daughter, the Countess of Ancram, for her life, the further annuity or yearly sum of 500*l.* for her separate use; and after the death of her said daughter, upon such trusts as were therein mentioned: and also in trust, to pay the residue of the said 2000*l.* and of the interest of the said moiety of 100,000*l.* to all and every the children of her the said Countess of Holderness (then Fitzwalter) by the said Earl of Fitzwalter; and in default of such issue, in trust for the said Robert Earl of Holderness, for his life; and upon his decease, to pay the same to the first, and all and every the son and sons of her said son, and the heirs-male of their bodies successively; and in default of such issue, to the said Earl of Holderness and the heirs of his body. — The testatrix died in 1751, leaving no issue by Earl Fitzwalter, but leaving issue by Lord Holderness her first husband, the late Earl of [*] Holderness, and the Countess of Ancram (afterwards Marchioness of Lothian) her two only children.

[ *380 ]

The plaintiff having become entitled to a separate fortune, subsequent to her marriage with the late Earl of Holderness, lent him the sum of 8000*l.* and, as a security for the repayment thereof to the Countess, he executed a bond to the said Elborough Woodcock. By indenture of assignment, dated in February, 1778, made between the said Earl of Holderness, and the said Elborough Woodcock, for the purpose of effectually barring and extinguishing all such estates, and interests in possession, reversion and remainder, limited by the said Countess Fitzwalter, in the said first-mentioned annuity of 500*l.* and in the residue of the said annuity of 2000*l.* and for vesting in the said Elborough Woodcock the absolute property therein, upon the trusts therein mentioned; he assigned the said annuity of 500*l.* part of the said annuity of 2000*l.* bequeathed to him for his life, by the said Countess of Fitzwalter's will, and the residue of the said annuity of 2000*l.* subject to the appointment of him the said Earl.

The said Earl of Holderness by will, 1778, charged his personal estate with the payment of his debts, except the debt of 8000*l.* secured by the said bond, and thereby directed that the said annuity payable from the Post-office, should be charged with the payment of the said debt of 8000*l.* and interest, in case and exoneration of all other his effects real and personal; 1784.

HOLDERNESSE
against CARMARTHEN.

personal; and he devised all the rest and residue of his freehold, copyhold, and leasehold estates to his daughter Baroness Conyers, (then Marchioness of Carmarthen, for life, without impeachment of waste; remainder to Elborough Woodcock, to preserve, &c. remainder to the Marquis of Carmarthen for life; remainder to Elborough Woodcock, to preserve, &c. remainder to Lord Danby (the Marquis's eldest son) for life; remainder to Elborough Woodcock, &c. with remainder to the first and all and every other the son and sons of the said Lord Danby successively in tail-male, with the like remainders to the two other children of the said marriage. And after reciting the said deed of assignment, 1778, he directed that Elborough Woodcock should stand possessed of the said annuity of 500*l.* and of the residue of the annuity of 2000*l.* and of all monies which should at any time arise from the redemption thereof, in trust in the first place, for the [*] raising of the said sum of 8000*l.* and subject thereto in trust for such person and persons, and for such and the same intents and purposes, as he had by his will devised his real estates; and he appointed the plaintiff residuary legatee and executrix, together with the Marquis of Carmarthen and Elborough Woodcock, executors of his said will. — The testator died 1778, without altering his said will, leaving the plaintiff, his widow and relict, and the said Baroness Conyers, his only child.

[ *381 ]

The object of the bill was to have this sum of 8000*l.* raised and paid out of the annuity.

The defendants insisted that the said 4000*l.* annuity, was only to be deemed an interest of the 100,000*l.* and that the said sum of 100,000*l.* being by the grant and letters patent, stipulated and directed to be laid out in the purchase of land, the same ought to be considered as land; and that the assignment of 1778, could not operate, so as to bar the entail directed by the letters patent; and that the same did not pass, nor was well charged by the testator's will, with the payment of the said debt of 8000*l.* and that the said annuity upon the death of the said Earl, descended and became vested in Baroness Conyers, as the heir of the body of the said Earl her father, or as one of the heirs of the body of the said Maynhart Duke of Schomberg and Leinster, free from any incumbrance whatever.

Mr. Attorney General and Mr. Batt (for the plaintiff) contended, that this property was to be considered as an annuity, and that the case of Stafford v. Buckley, 2 Vesey, 170. and the principles there laid down, were analogous to the present case. — That although it was granted as an annuity, payable till the sum of 100,000*l.* should be paid, &c. yet there was no time pointed out, or any means inserted in the grant for compelling the payment of the said principal sum. This is clearly an annuity according to Lord Coke's definition, Co. Lit. 20. a. and not within the statute de donis.

Mr. Price, Mr. Hardinge, and Mr. Stainsby (for defendants) insisted, that it was meant, as money to be laid out in land, and that this case differed from Stafford v. Buckley, for that here the object was land: that it was merely a temporary provision, till that object could take place, which was not the case in [*] realty: that this by no means savoured of the realty, as it was a mere annuity, payable out of the present fund, — and as to the compulsion of payment, that might be effected by petition to the King in council. An inheritable annuity is to be deemed as land, and equally entailable with it, as in Disher v. Disher, 1 Wms. 204.

[ *382 ]

Lord Chancellor. — My notion of the nature of this fund is, that it was the grant of an annuity, and must consequently be considered in all its views, as the mere grant of an annuity; for, though a right of redemption is reserved to the crown, and though in reserving that right of 1784.

Holdernesse
against Carmarthen.

[ *383 ] redemption, the crown hath shaped this grant of 100,000*l.* so as, when paid, it should be land and not money, yet it is such a power as the crown may or may not act upon, and consequently must be deemed a grant of an annuity, perpetual in its nature. — Notwithstanding such a power was reserved, at the pleasure of the crown, the parties had a right to treat it as an annuity: and this Court will not keep up the objection (of its being land) in contemplation from century to century, because of the possibility of substituting the money in the place of the annuity: an object which might not happen in centuries after this. The Court will not operate upon this property as money directed to be laid out in land. — My opinion is that the vendors of the moiety would be obliged to accept of the money, but it would be discharged from the incumbrances; because incumbrances cannot affect this property so as to render it unalienable. The first question raised has been, whether the family of Holdernesse have any interest in the moiety they purchased: and that question is founded upon a notion, that another family, which had an interest many years since, and had accepted of the sum of 42,500*l.* for it sixty-five years ago, have now a right to insist they shall avail themselves of that point, and insist upon the annuity: — an annuity that does not savour of lands, and being merely personal was capable of being conveyed with or without a fine; and the conveyance effectual. The main question is, whether the Earl of Holdernesse has sufficiently disposed of this property. — Consider what the limitations are: as to the 500*l.* part of the annuity, His Lordship was tenant in tail, remainder to a stranger, with remainder in fee to himself; as to the 1000*l.* the residue of the annuity, he was tenant in tail, with the immediate remainder, in fee, to himself: thus possessed of it, his Lordship [*] conveyed it to the defendant Woodcock. I do not consider what would be the nature of the assignment to Woodcock, if it were to be taken as money to be laid out in land, though I am clear, that in regard to the 1000*l.* his Lordship had the absolute dominion over it, having the immediate remainder in fee; but as to the 500*l.* I am equally clear, the other way, because of the intermediate remainder. To consider it merely as an annuity, the conveyance to Woodcock was proper: It is liable to the trust reposed upon it by the will of Lord Holdernesse, and the Master must be directed to raise, by sale or mortgage of the said annuity, or a sufficient part thereof, the said sum of 8000*l.* to be paid to the plaintiff with costs of suit. (2)

Ex relatione.

(2) “ The costs of all parties (when taxed) were ordered to be raised in like manner as the said sum of 8000*l.* was to be raised.”

1784.

[*] TRINITY TERM,

24 Geo. 3. 1784.

[ *384 ]

KITTEAR against RAYNES. [12 June.]

(Reg. Lib. 1783. A. fol. 467. entered KITTIER v. RAINES.)

[S. C. 1 Cox,
Ca. Ch. 105.
Quod vide.]

KITTEAR, the father, being seised for life of a real estate, with remainder to his son the plaintiff in fee, the father and son joined in a mortgage of the premises, to raise money, for the use of the father: the father afterwards became a bankrupt, and the mortgagee filed a bill (after the bankruptcy) and obtained a decree of foreclosure, and the estate was ordered to be sold. (2) — The question now was, whether the son was entitled to be admitted to prove the value of his remainder in the estate as a debt, under the commission against the father, either in his own name, or in that of the mortgagee.

Son having a remainder, joins his father in a mortgage, which is not paid off till after bankruptcy of the father. He cannot prove his interest under the commission. (1)

Lord Chancellor thought he was not entitled to prove it at all, as a debt under the commission; the mortgage not being paid off till after the bankruptcy.

(1) This point does not appear in R. L. See Mr. Cox's Report more particularly as to the circumstances.

(2) The estate was actually sold, and produced less than the amount of the principal and interest due. See Mr. Cox's Report and R. L.

TREVES against TOWNSHEND.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. B. fol. 389.)

[S. C. 1 Cox,
Ca. Ch. 50.]

BILL filed by creditors against the surviving assignee and the executor of the deceased assignee, of Beale and Jones, bankrupts, to account for a large sum of money belonging to the bankrupts, with interest: — The commission issued, 28th May, 1766: Townshend a Blackwell-hall factor, and Russel were elected assignees, and received the money. They made no dividend. Russel paid the expences of the commission, and died. A sum [*] of 1936*l.* remained in the hands of Townshend, which he admits by his answer, but says, he has always kept an equal sum at his banker's, ready to answer it.

Money having been kept by the assignee of a bankrupt in his hands for several years, and no dividend made, ordered to be paid with 5 per cent. interest, and all costs. (1)

This cause was heard before the Lords Commissioners, 17th November last.

[ *385 ]

Mr. Kenyon and Mr. Jones (for the plaintiff) stated the substance of the bill as above, and said, there was a case where the assignees

(1) In general cases 4 per cent. only will be directed on a detention of money by executors, administrators, or assignees, &c. ; and to have more, a special case must be made, as here. See also the Report in 1 Cox, 50, &c. ; likewise Ex parte Strutt, 1 Cox, 439. Rocke v. Hart, 11 Ves. 58, 59, 60, 61. Mosley v. Ward, ibid. 581, 582, &c. See also Newton v. Bennet, antea, 359. and Perkins v. Bayntun, 375. Costs follow of course in all such instances. See 11 Ves. 61, 62., with the references ; et ibid. 582, 583.

had 1784.

TREVES
against TOWNSHEND.

had been ordered to pay interest for money so remaining in their hands. †

Mr. Madocks and Mr. Scott (for the defendants) said, the management of the business had been intrusted to Carter, the solicitor to the commission, who died, and his papers were sold as waste-paper; and that here the assignees had not made interest of the money, and therefore ought not to account for it; that the money had always lain at the banker's, ready to make a dividend when called upon. — No part of the money was laid out in the funds, nor was it any part of the trust of the assignees so to do.

Lord Loughborough. — Russel paid the costs of the commission, and all he received was only two sums, being dividends under other commissions. The other has paid nothing. — It is the duty of the assignees to apply to the commissioners, to make a dividend. They are bound to make it within a certain time, but the precise time must rest with them. — The Court will set their eye against such a delay as this. — If this was to be allowed, the office of assignee will be canvassed for: it would counteract the whole intent of the bankrupt laws. — This is the grossest case possible; the assignee was so negligent, he never called upon the clerk of the commission (who lived nine years after the commission) for the papers, so that the proceedings are lost, and the expence of a suit incurred by his negligence: It is a fraudulent neglect of the duty he had undertaken as assignee. The money of a merchant at his banker's does not lie idle, it is part of his stock in trade. — This is the case as to Townshend: 1936*l.* is kept from 1766, under a trust that [*] he should not keep it. — Therefore he must account for that sum and interest at the rate of five per cent. and pay all the costs of this suit, and of the subsequent enquiry. ‡

[ *386 ]

The defendant thinking himself aggrieved by this decree, particularly by the rate of interest, petitioned for a re-hearing, which came on before the Lord Chancellor in this term.

Mr. Madocks, Mr. Scott, and Mr. Bicknell, for the petitioner, Mr. Attorney General and Mr. Jones for the plaintiffs.

Lord Chancellor. — The only doubt I have is, as to the rate of interest; four per cent. is the interest usually given by the Court, and it is never to be exceeded but in a special case. (2) I think the plaintiffs have established the fact, that this money was used by the defendant in his trade; and I want to know the fact whether in that trade five per cent. is made of the money employed, for I cannot give four per cent. interest for money of which five per cent. has been made. — Lord Chancellor offered the defendant's counsel a reference to the Master, to enquire whether five per cent. would be made of money employed in the trade of a Blackwell-hall factor, and, upon that being declined, affirmed the decree. (3)

† They did not name this case, but it was a petition, Ex parte Ellington in the matter of Tidswell, heard at the sittings after Trinity, 1783, cited ante, 375.

‡ Vide Forbes v. Ross, vol. 2. p. 430.

(2) See the references in note (1) at the beginning of this case,

(3) And the deposit ordered to be paid to the plaintiff. R. L.

1784.

The ATTORNEY GENERAL against CRISPIN. [CRISPIN.]

(Reg. Lib. 1783. A. fol. 488. b.)

THE testatrix having given by her will several annuities, then gave, after the decease of the annuitants (1), 50*l.* each to the children of D. Riviere:—D. Riviere had then seven children, six of whom died in the lifetime of the surviving annuitant. He had also a daughter born after the death of the testatrix, but in the lifetime of the surviving annuitant. Two questions were raised; 1st. Whether any interest vested in the six children who died in the lifetime of the annuitants. — Against this was cited Norris v. Huthwaite, (ante, 182. note.) 2d. Whether the child born after the will should take.

Vested legacies.

The Lord Chancellor decreed that they were vested legacies, and that the after-born child must be let in to take.

(1) The bequest is as follows in R. L. : — “ And after the death of the persons here-“ above named, I give and leave to each of the children of ——— Riviere, of Cork,
“ and of *B. his wife, 50*l.* sterling, which shall be paid to them when they shall be of age.”
And she gave 50*l.* sterling to her cousin M. of Cork. R. L.*

See Monkhouse v. Holme, ante, 298, 299, 300. 1 Roper on Legacies, 151. et seq.

[*] HUGHES against HUGHES. [30 July.]

[ *387 ]

(Reg. Lib. 1783. A. fol. 520. b.)

THOMAS Chamberlain, Esq. by will, dated the 22d of July, 1779, vested his estates in trustees, to pay certain annuities and subject thereto to pay the “ rest and residue of the rents and profits, dividends and Maintenance not allowed by the Court, where the parent is of ability, although directed by the will.

Where the parent is reported not of ability, the sums allowed shall be only from the time of the report, not of the decree. (1)

(1) Lord Thurlow continued of the same opinion on both these subjects for some time; see Andrews v. Partington, post. 3 vol. 60. and S. C. 2 Cox, Ca. Ch. 228., where the judgment is given much more fully. The precedents certainly supported Lord Thurlow, although there were two cases in 1776 and 1779, made under peculiar circumstances contra. See note to Greenwell v. Greenwell, 5 Ves. 195. 197. But he afterwards changed his opinion from a very particular instance; and the practice afterwards varied, and became settled to the contrary in both of the above respects. See particularly in Hoste v. Pratt, 3 Ves. 733. and Maberley v. Turton, 14 Ves. 501. per Lord Eldon C. Mundy v. E. Howe, post. 4 vol. 223. was one of the cases which first relaxed the antient practice. See also Sisson v. Shaw, 9 Ves. 285. 280. Collis v. Blackburn, ibid. 470, 471. Maberley v. Turton, 14 Ves. 499, &c., with the references in the several cases; and Ex parte Penleaze, postea in this note. It appears, therefore, on the whole, to be settled that each case must be viewed by the Court so as to meet its exigencies by a sound discretion, unfettered by any strict rule of mere technicality; and that it will not only now allow maintenance for the time past, where it should be allowed at all, but will, in a fit case, direct maintenance, although the author of the bounty may not have expressly prescribed it. The Court will also dispense with any reference as to the father's ability, where the circumstances are strong; as where the fortune of the child is very large and the father has other children, or will be much inconvenienced by the burthen of supporting the child adequately to a fortune in which he, the father, cannot participate. Vide ubi supra, particularly 3 Ves. 733. and Ex parte Penleaze, 10 July, 1805. It was decided by Sir W. Grant, M. R. and is as follows, from Reg. Lib. and the Editor's MS. note.

Ex parte

1784.

HUGHES
against HUGHES.

and interest, for and towards the maintenance and education of all and every the children of his three daughters, (excepting such of his grandsons as should be in possession of real estates before devised) share and share alike, until the youngest of his said grand-children should attain "his or her age of twenty-one years," — and in case of the death of any of his grand-children, (before the youngest should have attained the age of twenty-one years,) who should have married and have issue, that the child or children should be entitled to the share of the parent so dying.

Upon the hearing of the cause, the Lord Chancellor refused to direct the Master to consider of a proper allowance for the maintenance of the younger children of the testator's daughters; holding the residue of the rents, &c. to be an accumulating fund, for the benefit of the children, and to be paid to them when the estates became divisible; and that, until it appeared that the parents were incapable of maintaining the children, he could not order any part of the rents, &c. of the estates to be so applied.

Mr. Attorney General and Mr. Hollist, now moved, on the part of the defendants, that the minutes of the decree should be amended by inserting a reference to the Master to consider of a proper allowance to the parents for the maintenance of the children. — They stated that Dr. Kennedy, the husband of one of the daughters, had by her seven children, whom, though without an allowance, he might support agreeably to his own rank, he could not in proportion to the additional fortunes derived

Ex parte PENLEAZE. [10 July, 1805.]

(Reg. Lib. 1804. B. fols. 712. 863.)

The petition presented on behalf of the infant stated, that under the will of E. B. he was entitled to several freehold and copyhold estates of considerable annual value, the rents and profits of which were, by the testatrix's will, directed to be received by P. S. and W. J. the trustees, who were expressly required by the said will to lay out the same, after all deductions for repairs, or so much as should be sufficient for that purpose, in the maintenance, support, education, and bringing up of the petitioner: that the amount of the petitioner's then income from his estate and property was 730*l.* per annum; that in the event of his surviving his mother (aged 53), he would become entitled under the same will to other estates of 800*l.* per annum. That the petitioner's mother derived an income under the same will for her separate use, independently of the petitioner's father of about 2000*l.* per annum, which on her death did not go to the father, but was limited to other persons. That the petitioner had a brother wholly unprovided for: and that as upon the death of the mother the estates and property to which she was entitled for her life would not devolve to the petitioner's father, he, the father, refused to make the petitioner any allowance for his support, education, and advancement, and more especially as he had sent the petitioner at a considerable expence to the university of Aberdeen. That the petitioner was entered as a student at Lincoln's Inn, for the purpose of being called to the bar, and was also entered as a gentleman-commoner at Oxford; and that he was above the age of 19 years. That by the refusal of the trustees, &c. and his father, the petitioner was prevented from keeping his terms and prosecuting his studies with effect. The petitioner therefore prayed for a reference, as to what was proper to be allowed for his maintenance and education, since the death of his sister, (when he became entitled to the estates,) and for the time to come, for his advancement in life, according to his age and fortune; and that such allowance might be paid by the trustees out of the rents and profits of the estates, or the savings thereof, to the petitioner's father, to be by him applied accordingly, &c. Hoste v. Pratt, 3 Ves. 733. was cited.

Sir William Grant, M. R. ordered accordingly: The reference as to the allowance being as prayed "for the time past" from the death of the petitioner's sister, and for the time to come, and for his advancement in life, &c.

The Master having made his report accordingly, that report was confirmed on the 17th of August following. The sum of 1616*l.*, thereby reported, was ordered to be paid for the petitioner's maintenance and education for the time past, from the death of his sister to the 24th July then last, unto the petitioner's father.

And the sum of 400*l.* a year was also ordered to be paid for the petitioner's maintenance and education, to his father, for the time to come, till he attained 21. R. L.

from the testator. That the rule was, that wherever a maintenance was given by the will, the child should have it, and they cited a case where the direction was, that a sum for maintenance should be paid to the father; and the present Lord Chancellor ordered a future maintenance to be allowed, and upon further application ordered a sum to be paid for the maintenance of the children, prior to the first application.

[*] The Lord Chancellor said the practice was to refer it to the Master to enquire whether the parents were of ability (2) to maintain the children; if not, then to report what would be a proper maintenance, and this practice did not vary where a maintenance was directly given by the will, unless in cases where it was given to the father, under which circumstances it was a legacy to him. — His Lordship referred it to the Master to enquire into the ability of the parents to maintain the children: and afterwards upon petition, sums were ordered to be allowed for that purpose to Dr. Kennedy, who was reported not of ability to maintain his children; but although the Master made the allowance from the date of the decree, the Lord Chancellor confined it to the date of the report. (3)

(2) But this is now sometimes dispensed with. See the preceding note.

(3) It is now usual to allow it for the time past. See the references in note (1) antea.

1784.

HUGHES
against HUGHES.

[ *388 ]

SAWYER [SAURIER] against BOWYER. [BOWYEAR.] [30 July.]

(Reg. Lib. 1783. B. fol. 484.)

[S. C. 2 Dick.
639.]

MR. Price moved to suppress depositions, because they had been taken before the Master upon the same matter upon which the witness had been examined in chief, without a special order for the re-examination.

The Lord Chancellor. — A witness is not to be re-examined before a Master, upon the same interrogatory, upon which he has been examined in chief; yet, I should have thought upon a substantially different interrogatory he might: but I find it cannot be done without leave; this was laid down in Browning v. Barker (2) in 1774, by the Chancellor and Master of the Rolls. If the interrogatory mislead the witness out of the matter in issue, the interrogatory must be suppressed, and the deposition falls with it. As to other matters, you may except before the Master; but it appears, the examination, if to the same matter, must be by order, otherwise it is practising upon the witness. Pract. Reg. in Ch. 165. Motion granted. † (3)

Witness not to be re-examined before a Master to the same matter to which he has been examined in chief, but by order. (1)

† In Vaughan v. Lloyd, 1 February, 1787, it was held that witnesses examined before hearing, cannot be examined upon a commission afterwards without leave. [1 Cox, Ch. Ca. 312. S. C.]

(1) See Browning v. Barton, 2 Dick. 508. S. P. Dudds v. Billings, Bunb. 24. Et per Lord Hardwicke in Cowslade v. Cornish, 2 Ves. 270. See also Vaughan v. Lloyd, 1 Cox, Ch. Ca. 312; Sandford v. —, 1 Ves. jun. 398. Kirk v. Kirk, 13 Ves. 280. 285. Greenaway v. Adams, ibid. 360. Purcell v. M'Namara, 17 Ves. 434. Et vide 2 Merivale, 81, &c.

(2) Browning v. Barton, 2 Dick. 508.

(3) The matter was compromised; and it was "ordered, by consent, that upon F. S. paying to the said F. B. and M. his wife, 5*l.* for their costs, the depositions should stand." R. L. and 2 Dick. 640.

1784.

MAWER against MAWER.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. B. fol. 489. b.)

[S. G. 1 Cox, 104.]

Order for defendant to appear under 5 Geo. 2. c. 25. notwithstanding a subpoena had been served. (1)

[ *389 ]

THIS was a bill of foreclosure: The defendant had been served with a subpoena, but had never appeared, and the plaintiff had proceeded to attachment and sequestration. The defendant not being found on any of these processes, and the sequestrators having returned that he had no real or personal [*] estate; a motion was made that he might be ordered to appear upon a day certain, and the order inserted in the London Gazette, and otherwise published as directed by the 5 Geo. 2. c. 25. to the end that the bill might be taken pro confesso under that act, notwithstanding he had been served with a subpoena, and had absconded since. Motion granted. (1)

(1) The ordinary process of taking a bill pro confesso, independently of the statute, applies only where the party has appeared; the statute interferes to enable the plaintiff to obtain a decree without appearance; and this remedy attaches whether the party has been served or not; so that an affidavit is made in strict conformity to the act, that the defendant absconds to avoid the [subsequent] process of the Court. See Short v. Downer, 2 Cox, Ch. Ca. 84. (gilvie v. Herne, 13 Ves. 565. The observation, therefore, Wyatt, Pract. Reg. 405. is incorrect. Mr. Cox's report of the principal case is somewhat more full than the above. It is there stated that "some doubt had arisen whether this was a case within the statute 5 Geo. 2. on the idea that the act extended only to cases where defendant had never been served at all, whereas in this case he had been served with a subpoena, though not with the subsequent process. But the Lord Chancellor, looking into the act, was of opinion, that it extended to every case where the party had avoided any part of the process whatever, though he might have been served with subpoena, &c."

The order made was, that the defendant should appear to the plaintiff's bill on or before the first day of Michaelmas Term then next. R. L.

RIDGES against MORRISON and Others.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. B. fol. 489. b.)

Lincoln's Inn Hall, 8th July, 1784.

Two legacies, of equal sums, being given to the same person, the one by the will, the other by a codicil (2), the legatee shall take both.

[In this case, the rule in favour of the benefits being accumulative, as given by different instruments (2), was supported by particular expressions of kindness towards the legatee.]

NICHOLAS Toke, of Linton, in the county of Kent, made his will, dated the 16th of November, 1763, duly attested to pass real estate, and, thereby, ordered his real estates (consisting [partly] of gavel-kind lands,) to be sold by his executors, and the money applied in aid of his personal estate. He then gave several legacies, and among the rest to [Isaac and] Nicholas Layton, the children of his nephew Isaac Layton, 500*l.* each. (1) He made Morrison and Plumley, two of the defendants, his executors, and the plaintiffs and the other defendants are his heirs

(1) And he directed [by the will,] all his said legacies to be paid within 12 months after his decease, to such of the legatees as should be 21; and an investment of the legacies of those who should be under age. He also gave the above legatees shares in the residue of his estate and effects. R. L.

(2) See Baillie v. Butterfield, per Sir L. Kenyon, M. R. 1 Cox, Ch. 392. Hooley v. Hatton, cited supra, and in Mr. Brown's note, &c. Upon which, and upon the presumption, however slight, arising from the gifts being in different instruments, see per Lord Thurlow, post. 392, 393. and in Coote v. Boyd, post. 2 vol. 529. Per M. R. in Allen v. Callow, 3 Ves. jun. 292, 293, 294. Et in Barclay v. Wainwright, ibid. 465, 466. and Osborn v. D. Leeds, 5 Ves. 381. Vide also Foy v. Foy, 1 Cox, 165.

at

at law, next of kin, and residuary legatees.—By a codicil, written under his will, dated 1781, he gave to T. Ashby 20*l.* and to “Nicholas Layton, that I put apprentice to a grocer, near Cripplegate, 500*l.*” This Nicholas Layton, mentioned in the codicil, is the same Nicholas Layton to whom 500*l.* was given by the will. The bill prayed (among other things) that Nicholas should be decreed to be entitled to only one of the sums of 500*l.* and he by his answer claimed both the sums.

It was argued the 7th of May last, for the plaintiff, that the sums being equal, the legacy in the codicil was a mere repetition of the bequest in the will, and all the parties being in equal relationship to the testator, he meant them equal bounties: that the rule was, that when the same precise sum is given in the will and codicil, it is mere repetition not duplication, the Duke of St. Albans v. Beauclerk, 2 Atkyns, 636.—To this it was answered, on the part of Nicholas Layton the legatee, that the case of the Duke of St. Albans v. Beauclerk stood upon the particular circumstances; the will reserved the power to make a codicil, so that the will and the codicil became one act. [*] Swinburne, in the passage there cited, (part 7. c. 20. fol. edit. 526.) says that the will and codicil are distinct instruments, and that a legacy given in each is accumulative, and it was so determined in Hooley v. Hatton†, before Lord Bathurst, Hil. 1773.—The cause stood over from time to time, and this day the Lord Chancellor gave judgment. The reporter was absent, but has been favoured with the following note of what passed.

Lord Chancellor.—There is no occasion for any further argument as to the point in this cause, for I take the rule to be established: a doubt however has arisen, as to a distinction taken between this and the case reported.

The case of † Hooley v. Hatton (3) was examined with abundant care,

† As the present case was determined upon that of Hooley v. Hatton, and a particular reference made to it by the Lord Chancellor. and especially to the opinion of Mr. Justice Aston, it was thought proper to add the following note of it, taken by the present reporter, at large:

The Lady Isabella Finch by her will, bearing date the 30th of August, 1768, gave to Lydia Hooley her woman, the plaintiff, a legacy of 500*l.* The will was executed in the presence of two witnesses. By a codicil, she gave Lydia Hooley 60*l.* to be paid her; she afterwards made a second codicil, dated the 28th of Oct. 1769, in these words, “I add this codicil to my will, I give Lydia Hooley 1000*l.*”—this was in her own handwriting, but not executed before witnesses.

The plaintiff filed her bill for the said legacies. The question was, whether the last legacy alone passed, or the legatee should have both the 1000*l.* and the 500*l.* The Master of the Rolls had decreed both to the plaintiff, and defendant appealed to the Chancellor, who was assisted by the Lord Chief Baron Smythe, and Mr. Justice Aston.

This case, after having been argued very much at large, stood over till Hilary Term, when the court gave judgment.

Mr. Justice Aston

There is in this case no internal evidence, therefore we must refer to the general rule of law.

The counsel applied the rules laid down in the case of Beauclerk v. the Duke of St. Alban's. It is evident those rules are not general, but go on the particular circumstances of that case. It was contended there, that the fourth codicil was to stand in the room of the first.

There are four cases of double legacies:

First, where the same specific thing is given twice. — Cujacius takes a distinction between the same res and the same quantity. In the first case, it can take place but once, at eadem quantitas sæpius præstari potest — Digest L. 22. t. 3. l. 12. — Cuj. op. t. 4. 381, 382. — Secondly, where the like quantity is given twice. — Lord Hard- 1784.

RIDGES'
against MORRISON.

[ *390 ]

(3) S. C. 2 Dick. 491. See the observations on this case, 5 Ves. jun. 292, 293, 294. 465, 466. and 5 Ves. 381.

1784.

RIDGERS
against MORRISON.

care, and it is unnecessary to repeat the cases again, after reading the very able opinion of Mr. Justice Aston, which contains the whole doctrine wicks (in Beauclerk v. the Duke of St. Alban's) alluding to the particular circumstances of the case, laid down one only should be taken unless an intention appeared to the contrary. — Digest, 34. t. 4. l. 9. — but nothing can be collected from hence, as the title of the Digest must be attended to, which expressly says animo adimendi. — Godolphin's Orphan's Legacy, pt. 3. c. 26. § 46. — Swinburne, 526. 530. (ed. 1728) — where 100*l.* and 100*l.* legatee intitled to both. The doctrine from repetition of two equal sums, in one will, being bad, and, in a will and codicil, being good, attributing the former to forgetfulness, is strange. — The case of the Slaves, Dig. 34 t. 1. l. 18: and that in 2 D'Aguesseau, pleading the first, page 21. are upon entirely different principles. It would be strange to suppose Lord Hardwicke applied this as a general rule, which would be inconsistent with his recognizing (as he did expressly,) the authority of Swinburne, 526. 530. — but said, that the case before him was different, from the internal evidence.

In regard to the cases in the Roman law — first, where equal sums are given in two distinct writings, both shall pass by the Roman law, and the decisions of this Court are agreeable thereto. — Digest, 22. t. 3. l. 12. and Gothofred's note in diversis Scripturis. — Digest, 30. t. 1. l. 34. in eadem Scriptura — Cujacius, 4. 381. distinguishes between a corpus and quantity. — Voet on the 31 and 32 Digest, Godolphin, pt. 3. c. 26. § 46. — Swinburne, 526. — Ricard, Traite des donations. — Wallop v. Hewit. 2 Ch. R. 70. — Newport v. Kinnaston, Finch, 294. — Menochius de præsump. l. 4. — 2 Ch. Rep. 58.

3dly, As to a less sum in the latter deed, as 100*l.* by will, and 50*l.* by the codicil, the legatee shall take both, Godolph. pt. 3. c. 25. § 19. — Rydout v. Payne. — Ch. Ca. 301.

4thly, As to a larger sum after a less, Ricard, 421. folio edition, says, — where they are in the same instrument, the two sums are not blended, but the legatee has two legacies; and the heir must shew that the one was meant to be blended with the other, the presumption being in favour of what is written. Wyndham v. Wyndham; Pitt v. Pigeon; Masters v. Masters.

The law seems to be, and the authorities only go to prove the legacy not to be double, where it is given for the same cause in the same act, and tatidem verbis, or only with small difference; but where in different writings there is a bequest of equal, greater, or less sums, it is an augmentation, and therefore Lydia Hooley is entitled to both the sums of 500*l.* and 1000*l.*

Lord Chief Baron Smythe. — I am clearly of the same opinion, and therefore shall be very short.

The intention is the clearest rule; but it is admitted, on all hands, here is no internal evidence: we therefore must refer to the rule of law. The rule of law is different with respect to a corpus and to quantities.

On the other side was quoted the Mayor of London v. Russel, Finch, 290., where the words were satisfied by some goods. — In the Duke of St. Alban's v. Miss Beauclerk, the last codicil was evidently the same as the first.

Lord Chancellor. — It would be sufficient for me to say, I am of the same opinion, if Mr. Justice Aston had not referred to me with respect to some of the cases.

By the civil law, where two pecuniary legacies were given by the same will, the legatee must prove it was to be doubled; but where the two bequests are in different writings, there the presumption shall be in favour of the legatee.

No argument can be drawn, in the present case, from internal evidence, we must therefore refer to the rule of the civil law.

In the case of the Duke of St. Alban's v. Beauclerk, Lord Hardwicke laid down the rule as applicable to that case, and not as a general rule. — “ This question (said Lord Hardwicke) divides itself into different parts.” — “ I am of opinion, that upon the reason of the thing, and according to the best writers, these legacies being in different writings will make no difference, in this case.” — Neither was it put upon being one instrument; certainly they are different. — “ And as the will and codicil make but one will.” — Lord Hardwicke quoted Gothofred, inmo heres priorem probare inanem esse non tenetur; but did not speak of proving both will and codicil, as he is represented to do in the report. — Then, Lord Hardwicke considered the internal evidence, and added, “ by the power reserved in her will, she has shewn her intent to make them one instrument * ;” — which words are omitted in the report.

Lord Hardwicke probably thought that Sir Joseph Jekyll, in Masters v. Masters, gave two reasons, where he seems to give only one: I will hazard a conjecture upon the doctrine of the law upon the subject. The rule there [*] laid down seems to be this, that where a testator gives a legacy by a codicil as well as by a will, whether it be more, less, [*] or equal, to the same person who is a legatee in the will, speaking simpliciter, it is an accumulation (7); and it is incumbent upon the executor to produce evidence to the contrary, if he contests such accumulation: On the other hand; the rule of exclusion has gone [*] upon very slight grounds, according to former authorities. The common case where the legacies have not been held to be accumulative is where the same corpus (according to the Digest) is given twice to the same person, the second legacy nil operatur, because it cannot be given more than once. Where the same quantity has been given, and the same cause, or no additional reason assigned for a repetition of the gift, the Court has inferred the testator's intention to be the same, and rejected the accumulation: but where the same quantity is given, with any additional cause assigned for it, or any implication to shew that the testator meant that the same thing, prima facie, should accumulate, the Court has decided in favour of the accumulation. In the present case, it happens that an additional cause, or mark of favour, has been mentioned in the codicil, which proves that the testator meant and intended an accumulative legacy. Considering the slight inferences made in former cases, (and which, I must own, have tended to throw property into jeopardy and uncertainty,) such an inference as arises in this case is sufficient to turn it the other way, and to induce the Court to say, that it operates as an accumulation. In the will, the legacy of 500*l.* is given to Nicholas Layton (the testator enumerating him among the other children of Isaac Layton) upon the general consideration of favour which the testator bore towards the family: the other legacy of 500*l.* in the codicil is given with this additional mode of description adjoined to it. — “To Nicholas Layton the child, whom I have put out an apprentice,” which circumstance marks 1784.

* The Lord Chancellor read the words marked with inverted commas from Lord Hardwicke's original note.

Ridgers
against MORRISON.

[ *391 ]

[ *392 ]

[ *393 ]

pointing of the report, 1 P. Wms. 424. the semicolon in the passage “should not be taken as a satisfaction unless so expressed; that it was, &c.” was wrong placed, and should be after the words, — “that it was,” by which means the passage would stand, “should not be taken as a satisfaction, unless so expressed that it was; as if both legacies had been given by the same will, &c.” — This case, therefore, is an authority in point, because there are two distinct writings. (4)

So in Wallop v. Hewit, 2 Ch. Rep. 37. The Register's book shews that the case went upon the general doctrine of the civil law, and not on any internal evidence.

His Lordship further cited Wyndham v. Wyndham, — Master of Christ's Hospital (alias Mayor of London) against Rusel, — Newport v. Kinnaston, — Pit v. Pigeon, — 3 Huber Prælectiones Leg. Civ. 122. and Stirling's case, (in Scotland) 2 Fountainhall, 231. — and concluded with saying, I have therefore the satisfaction to think, we confirm Lord Hardwicke's opinion.

The decree of the Master of the Rolls affirmed.

This case of Hooley v. Hatton was also relied upon by the Master of the Rolls, (Sir Lloyd Kenyon,) in deciding the case of Foy v. Foy (5), 1st February, 1785, where Sidney Hollis Foy, by his will, 26th May, 1782, gave, among other legacies, to John Hopley Simpson, Esq. 100*l.* and to Newman Knowles, Esq. 100*l.* The testator afterwards, by a codicil, 10th December, 1783, gave to Mr. Simpson, 100*l.* and to Mr. Knowles, 50*l.* and his Honor decreed both sums to be paid to the legatees. (6)

In this case also, there were three legacies given in the will and codicils to Dr. John Jebb; and his Honor thought him entitled to them all; but he refused to take more than one.

(4) Moggridge v. Walker, 8th May, 1792.

(5) Lately reported, 1 Cox, Ca. Ch. 163.

(6) Saying, “he wished to be understood to be guided by the authority of “Hooley v. Hatton,” 1 Cox, 164. His Honor had lately before determined Baillie v. Butterfield, 1 Cox, 392. accordingly.

(7) See the references in note (2) antea.

1784.

Reads
against MORRISON.

the legatee as a peculiar object of favour, and, consequently, such an inference of the testator's intention as to induce the Court to say it is an additional legacy. †

† The doctrine of this case has been relied upon, and similar decisions made in Reay v. Hopper, Rolls, Mich. 1785, and Jackson v. Jackson, June 23. 1788. — The principles of it are also admitted in Campbell v. Earl of Radnor, ante, 271. and Cooté v. Boyd, vol. 2. p. 521. though, under the circumstances of those cases, the legacies were not held to be accumulative. (7) (7). See note (2), p. 389.

BILLINGS against SANDON.

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 20th July.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. A. fol. 732. entered BILLINGS v. SANDON.)

Bequest of 1000*l.* to testator's sister, and in case of her demise, 800*l.* to A. and [the remaining] 200*l.* to B. the sister entitled for life, then to go in the proportions. (1)

[ *394 ]

THE testator, being at Gibraltar, made his will, containing the following bequests: "I give to my sister Sarah Sandom the sum of "1000*l.* and, in case of her demise, I give [*] to James Billings (the "plaintiff) 800*l.* and to John Billings [the remaining sum of (1)] 200*l.*" He then gave several pecuniary legacies, and went on: "And I give "unto my sister, whom I leave my sole executrix, whatever goods and "chattels, or money, which may be due to me at the time of my death, to "be disposed of as she shall think proper." — The plaintiff filed this bill against the sister, to have his interest in the 800*l.* secured to him after her decease. — The question arose upon the words of the will, in case of her demise; whether they meant her death generally, or her dying in the life of the testator. (2) — For the plaintiff, the first construction was insisted upon, and supported by the residuary devise, which his counsel argued was inconsistent with the idea of her dying in the life-time of the testator. He therefore intended her to have the use of the 1000*l.* during her life, and then to divide it between the plaintiff and John Billings, in the proportions in the will. — For the defendants, it was insisted that the penning of the devise arose from a doubt in the mind of the testator, whether his sister was, or, was not alive: on the contingency that she might have died during his absence, he meant to divide the 1000*l.* between James and John

(1) The words between brackets appear in R. L. as from the will. Sir Wm. Grant observed on this case, that "the mode of giving the residue, contrasted with the mode "of giving the particular legacy, afforded evidence that the one was given absolutely, "and only a limited interest in the other." See in Cambridge v. Rous, 8 Ves. 12. His Honor also in another case observed on the reliance placed by Lord Thurlow on the above word "and." Vide in Turner v. Moor, 6 Ves. 559.

See also the observation of Sir P. Arden, in King v. Taylor, 5 Ves. 809.

See further Sir W. Grant's observations in Cambridge v. Rous, passim, 8 Ves. 21, 22, 23, 24, &c. His Honor thought that generally where such words, as "in case of A's death," &c. occur by themselves, and there is nothing to explain them, they import the contingency of dying before the testator. In Mendes v. Mendes, 1 Ves. 89, and in the principal case, and in Cambridge v. Rous, and many others, there was enough to make a different construction.

(2) The plaintiff submitted that the disposition which the testator had made of the residue, in terms so different from those in which he had bequeathed the 1000*l.*, and so expressive of his intent to give Sarah an absolute interest in the residue, clearly shewed that he had the distinction in contemplation between a qualified and an absolute interest in what he was then about to dispose of.

The defendants insisted, by their answer, that by the words, "and in case of her demise," the testator meant only the death of the defendant Sarah before him (the testator); in which event only it was to be divided and distributed as in the will was mentioned. R. L.

Billings,

Billings, but not if she was alive. The words were clearly contingent, and could not mean a general dying. — As to the argument from the residue, he did not know that, in case of her being dead, the legacy would lapse.

Lord Chancellor said, according to the best construction he could put, the testator meant to give a share of his bounty to his sister, and also to the others: the word and implied this; therefore, that she should have it for life, and then they should take it. As to the residuary devise, he meant, she should take that unfettered, at her own disposal, but the other, fettered by the gift over. (1) His Lordship decreed the money to be paid into the Bank, the sister to receive the dividends for life, and after her decease the principal to be divided, in the proportions directed in the will.

(1) See note (1) in the preceding page.

[*] Lord HINCHINBROKE against SEYMOUR.

BY settlement on the marriage of the plaintiff with Lady Elizabeth Montagu, daughter of the late Earl of Halifax, certain lands were settled in trust, for Lord Halifax for life, remainder to plaintiff for life, remainder to trustees for a term, with other usual remainders. The trusts of the term were, "that in case there should be any children of the plaintiff, by Lady Elizabeth, the trustees should, either in the lifetime of the plaintiff, if he should so direct, and the Earl of Halifax should be then dead, or else, after the decease of the survivor of them, the plaintiffs and the said Earl, by mortgage, sale, or other disposition of the lands, raise such sums of money for the portions of the child or children of the marriage (except an eldest son) as therein after mentioned; that is to say, if but one younger child, the sum of 10,000*l.* to be paid at such times (the said Earl being then dead) as the plaintiff should, by any deed attested as therein mentioned, or by will appoint."

The issue of the marriage were one son, and one daughter, Carolina Maria. Lord Halifax died in 1771, and Lady Hinchinbroke being also dead, in 1781, Lord Hinchinbroke, by deed duly executed under the power, directed the trustees to raise the 10,000*l.* immediately; the daughter being fourteen years old. — She died in 1782, and the plaintiff, as administrator to her, filed this bill against the trustees to have the 10,000*l.* raised for his own use.

Lord Chancellor. — The meaning of a charge for children is that it shall take place when it shall be wanted. (1) It is contrary to the nature of such a charge to have it raised before that time.

And although the power is, in this case, to raise it when the parent shall think proper, yet that is only to enable him to raise it in his own life, if it should be necessary. It would have been very proper so to do upon the daughter's marriage, or for several other purposes, but this is against the nature of the power.

Bill dismissed without costs.

(1) See Drum v. Drum, 2 Vern. 439. Proc. Ch. 195. and 1 Atk. 556. See also per Lord Hardwicke C. in Boyet v. Cotton, 1 Atk. 555, 556.

1784.

BILLINGS
against SANDOM.

[*395]

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 30th July.

A power in a settlement to raise a portion for a younger child at such time as the parent should direct; he directs it to be raised when she is fourteen; and she dying, files his bill for it as her administrator: the portion shall not be raised for the father. (1) 1784.

[ *996 ] [*] Sir JAMES LOWTHER, Bart. and another - Plaintiffs.

The Viscountess Dowager of ANDOVER, ——— BAGOT, Esq. and Lady FRANCES his Wife, late Lady FRANCES HOWARD, and others, - - - - - Defendants.

*Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 24th July.*

Bill for specific performance against vendor, the vendee being in possession, and an account being necessary of the vendee's personal estate, — referred to the Master to fix a short day for the payment of the purchase-money, otherwise the bill to be dismissed [as against those defendants] with costs.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. B. fol. 578. entered LOWTHER v. HOWARD.)

THE late Earl of Suffolk being seised, by virtue of marriage-settlements, of the premises which were the subject of this suit, for life; with remainder to Lady Andover for life; remainder to Lady Frances Howard in fee; and having no son, but having one daughter, the Lady Diana, since married to Sir Michael Le Fleming, Bart; and being desirous of purchasing the remainders expectant upon his own life, in order to settle the whole estate upon the marriage of his daughter, entered into a correspondence with Lady Andover and Lady Frances Howard for the purchase of their interests. In the meanwhile, the marriage being about to take place, Lord Suffolk covenanted with the plaintiff Sir James Lowther, and another of the plaintiffs, trustees in the marriage-settlement, to endeavour to purchase the interests of Lady Andover and Lady Frances Howard in the estates, and that, when purchased, they should be conveyed to the uses declared in that settlement. After the marriage of Sir Michael Le Fleming with Lady Diana, the terms of the purchase were settled by letter between Lord Suffolk and Lady Andover and Lady Frances, at the sum of 40,000*l.* But before that contract was carried into execution the Earl died. — The trustees in the marriage-settlement filed this bill against Lady Andover, Lady Frances Howard, and Mr. Bagot, to whom she was since married; the trustees of their marriage-settlement, Sir Michael Le Fleming and Lady Diana, praying, among other things, a specific performance of this agreement, for the purchase of the remainders under the former settlement; and that the estates, so purchased, might be conveyed to the uses declared in the present settlement.

The cause was heard before the late Lords Commissioners, 5th of August, 1783, who ordered an account to be taken of the [real and] personal estate of the late Earl; [and a sale of his real estates,] and that the contract between him and the defendants, Lady Andover and Lady Frances [*] Howard, should be specifically carried into execution, and the estates conveyed according to the prayer of the bill, but, specified no time for the conveyance of the estate and payment of the purchase-money. (1)

[ *997 ]

The

(1) The Master reported that there was due to the defendants, by virtue of the decree and the contract therein stated, the principal sum of 12,000*l.*, being the consideration money agreed by the late E. of Suffolk to be paid to the defendant Frances Howard, for the purchase of the reversion in fee of the estate at Ashstead, &c., and the sum of 91*l.* for interest. The defendants R. Howard and Frances his wife, Lord Aylesford and Lord Bagot, stated themselves aggrieved by the decree, forasmuch as the decree ought to have directed that what the Master should report to be due to the petitioners, for principal and interest on the said sum of 12,000*l.* and the costs of the suit, should be paid to the petitioners by the other defendant, Sir M. Le Fleming, and Lady Diana his wife, or by the plaintiffs, their trustees, by a short day, which should have been appointed for that purpose; and that in default of such payment at such day, to have directed that the said bill should stand dismissed with costs; and that all the letters written by the petitioner Frances Howard to the said late E. of Suffolk, touching the said purchase, should be delivered up to the petitioner to be destroyed, and the agreement for the purchase declared in that case to be void;

The defendants, Lady Andover and Lady Frances Howard, thinking themselves aggrieved by this omission in the decree, petitioned for a rehearing, which came on this day before the Lord Chancellor.

Mr. Ambler and Mr. Lloyd (for the defendants.) — In the old bills for specific performance, the practice was for the plaintiff to undertake to perform his part of the contract, although that practice is now discontinued. — The inconvenience, in this case, of no day being fixed for the payment of the money, is manifest. The defendants are bound to convey, the plaintiffs not bound to pay till after the account taken, which may be a very long time hence. In the mean while they pay no interest, and from the circumstance of Lord Suffolk's being tenant for life, they continue in possession without payment of rent, which cannot be enforced, as no ejectment will lie on account of the executory contract, which would be a sufficient defence, as appears by a † case in Cowper.

Mr. Mansfield (for the plaintiffs.) — The defendants complain that they have not had a decree of such a nature as never was pronounced in any cause whatever. — The only extraordinary circumstance is, that the purchasers are in possession; but the parties are in no sort of risk, the reference is going on, and has already advanced a considerable way.

Lord Chancellor observed, as to the old practice stated, that it was very proper there should be such an admission, but the filing the bill, in fact, amounted to it, and he did not remember an instance of a decree personally against a plaintiff to pay the money, founded upon such an undertaking. With respect to the executory contract being a defence to an ejectment to recover the possession, he said he doubted whether that was law; but he could not, on that ground, alter the practice of this court: — but his Lordship varied the decree in the [*] manner prayed, by ordering it to be referred to the Master to appoint a short day for the payment of the money, and to compute subsequent interest till that time; and if, upon tender of a sufficient conveyance, the principal money and interest should not be then paid, the plaintiff's bill to be dismissed [as against those defendants] with costs.

† Weakly, ex dimiss. Yea, Bart. v. Bucknell, Cowp. 473. — The point in this cause is now sub lite, in the Court of Exchequer Chamber. (2) void; and that the petitioners should not be compelled to wait for payment of the said principal sum of 12,000*l.* and interest and costs, until the several accounts directed by the said decree were taken of the real and personal estates of the said E. of Suffolk, and his estates sold; the petitioners being advised they were no ways concerned therein, &c.

Lord Thurlow, on this rehearing, varied the former decree accordingly, by directing the petitioners' costs to be taxed, and that the Master should appoint a time and place for payment of the principal, interest, and such costs, and that the same should be paid by the plaintiffs the trustees accordingly; and in default thereof, that the bill as against them should stand dismissed, with costs to be taxed. R. L.

(2) Vide 7 T. R. 51. note.

1784.

LOWTHER
against ANDOVER.

[ *398 ]

1784.

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 2d August.

[Vide S. C.
2 Dick. 640.]

Award.

WOODBIDGE against HILTON.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. B. fol. 448. b.)

LORD Chancellor was of opinion, that where a matter in a cause had gone to a reference, the party could not except to the award, but it must come on upon further directions. (1)

(1) The report here is very defective and inaccurate. — Mr. Dickins, in his report of this case, more correctly and fully states Lord Thurlow to have expressed himself thus: "If a matter is referred to arbitrators by a decree or order, merely ad computandum, I am clear an exception will lie to the award, as to a Master's report; the referee being substituted in the place of a Master. But if the reference, as in this case, is of all matters in difference, I am clear an exception will not lie; therefore, let the exception be overruled." See also Vernon v. Wells, 2 Dick. 452. Cressly v. Corrington, 1 Raithby's Vernon, 463. and the cases in the note. S. C. 2 Vern. 79, 80. and note. Also Hyde v. Cook, 2 Vern. 109.

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 11th
August.

Ex parte MITFORD. (1)

(Orders in Bankruptcy, 1784. fol. 211.)

Sums secured by covenant in marriage-settlements; those which are certain, though future, are proveable with a rebate of interest, and also of the value of the husband's claims against the trustees. (1)

IN the bankrupt's marriage-settlement, there was a covenant, that he should pay to the trustees, to the uses of the settlement, 6000*l.* by instalments, viz. 1000*l.* at the end of seven years, and 1000*l.* per annum, afterwards,

(1) See in Mitford v. Mitford, 9 Ves. 96. and in Ex parte Barker, ibid. 120. et seq. Sir W. Grant, M.R., citing the authority of the principal case in Priddy v. Rose, 3 Merivale, 105, says, "I have had a copy of the order in that case from the bankrupt's office, in order to see whether the case be correctly stated by Mr. Brown."

"Mr. Mitford, under the marriage-settlement was entitled to an annuity of 24*l.* per annum, and to the dividends of certain stock during his life. He had covenanted to pay 6000*l.* in the whole to the trustees, at different periods, and on different events. It became a question, whether the whole of this sum had become a debt at the time of the bankruptcy. The trustees in the settlement presented a petition, praying to be at liberty to prove the whole sum under the commission, and to be permitted to retain the interest the bankrupt took under the settlement, in part satisfaction of the debt. The order made was as follows. It was declared that the petitioners were, at the time of issuing the commission, creditors of the bankrupt for the sum of 3000*l.* only, which, by the settlement, was payable at the times and in the manner mentioned in the petition, free from any contingency; and that the petitioners were entitled to retain the value of the bankrupt's equitable interest under the settlement in an annuity of 24*l.* and a sum of 2074*l.* bank annuities towards satisfaction of the said 3000*l.* And it was referred to the commissioners to compute interest on the sum of 1000*l.* (part of the 3000*l.*) from the date of the commission to the 14th of October then next, when the said 1000*l.* would become payable under the settlement, and on the sum of 1000*l.* (other part of the 3000*l.*) from the same date to the 14th of October 1785, when the last-mentioned 1000*l.* would become payable under the settlement, and on 1000*l.* (residue of the 3000*l.*) from the same date to the 14th of October 1786, when the last-mentioned sum would become payable as aforesaid; what should be found the amount of such interest to be deducted from the 3000*l.* The commissioners to set a value on the bankrupt's interest under the settlement in the annuity of 24*l.* and sum of 2074*l.* bank annuities, and what should be found to be the value thereof to be deducted from what should remain due, in respect of the 3000*l.*, after such rebate of interest as aforesaid. The petitioners to be admitted creditors under the commission for what should be the then residue of the 3000*l.* And, in regard to the 24*l.* annuity during the joint lives of the bankrupt and his wife, and the interest to accrue on the 2074*l.* bank annuities during the life of the bankrupt, it was ordered that they be respectively retained by the petitioners towards satisfaction of the 3000*l.*

"and

afterwards, until the whole should be paid, so that the sum of 6000*l.* should be paid in twelve years, if the bankrupt should so long live; if he should not, then the whole was to be paid within one year after his decease, if the wife or any child of the marriage should be then living, if not, then 3000*l.* only was to be paid. The husband, under the settlement, took a life-interest in several annuities belonging to the wife; and also in some four per cent. annuities of the year 1780. The husband became bankrupt just before the end of the first seven years. This was a petition to be admitted to prove the 6000*l.* as a debt under the commission. For the petition it was argued, that this whole debt was sufficiently certain to be capable of being paid; or if the whole was not, at least the 1000*l.* payable at seven years was certain, and the contingency only affected the subsequent instalments; and also, that the 3000*l.* which was to be paid in all events, within a year after the husband's death, was certain, and capable of a value to be now set upon it. In a case before [*] Lord Bathurst, the trustees were permitted to prove, although there was a contingency as to the wife's surviving. So in the case of a bond to do several things, and a breach as to one, the court would let in the proof of the bond. — The counsel cited Pattison v. Bankes, Cowp. 540., and Ex parte Cottrel in the same book; 742, where the bankruptcy happened before any payment became due, and the proof was ordered. On the other hand, it was argued that in this case the whole was merely contingent; that it does not appear whether 6000*l.* or only 3000*l.* will be due. If it is merely a contingent debt, it cannot be proved.

1783.

Ex parte
Mrs. Webb.

[*399]

Lord Chancellor said, it was a question, whether these were not mutual demands, the husband having rights against the trustees, as to which the assignees must stand in his place. As to the 3000*l.*, that would certainly become due; the only contingency was, whether there would, or would not, be 3000*l.* more: therefore he ordered that the trustees should be admitted to prove the 3000*l.* and the assignees would have a right to claim whatever the bankrupt could claim against the trustees, so that there must be a rebate upon the value of those funds. (2)

“ and that the dividends from time to time to be made under the commission, upon the “ sum of money for which they should be so admitted creditors, should be laid out by “ them in the purchase of 3 per cent. bank annuities in their names; and the interest “ to accrue thereon during the life of the bankrupt, to be paid from time to time by the “ petitioners to the assignees under the commission, as part of the estate and effects of “ the bankrupt.”

(2) See the order verbatim stated in note (1) antea, from 3 Merivale, 105.

Ex parte ANGERSTEIN.

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 11th
August.

THIS was a petition, that the brokers who had insured ships with Calverly Bewick, who under-wrote separately, might prove their debts against his separate estate, and not against the partnership. It appeared that the account the brokers kept was always with the partnership. — Mr. Ford, in support of the petition, said, that the suffering the brokers to prove these debts against the partnership, would be in the teeth of the act of 6 Geo. 1. c. 18.

The Court ordered the proof of the debt to be under the separate commission against Calverly Bewick.

Proof of debts arising upon insurance of ships, must be against the separate, not joint estate.

1784.

*Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 11th
August.*

Same point.

[ *400 ]

*Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 1st seal before Michaelmas term, 1784.*

Motion to discharge an order to refer an answer for impertinence, obtained after notice of motion to dismiss, refused.

[*] Ex parte LEE.

THIS was a petition to be admitted to prove similar debts with the above, under the joint commission. Petition dismissed.

KINWORTHY against ALLEN.

THE answer was filed in July, 1783, and no further proceeding had in the cause. In July, 1784, a note was given in the office that the Court would be moved that the bill should be dismissed: on the day for which the notice was given, the plaintiffs moved to refer the answer for impertinence. Mr. Hollist now moved to discharge that rule, on account of the length of time the plaintiff had lain by after the answer came in, and cited the anonymous case, 2 Vesey, 631, where Lord Hardwicke discharged such a rule in a similar case, comparing it to the case of exceptions where they are not brought in within two terms:—but Lord Chancellor refused the present motion, because there is no established rule of the court within what time an answer may be referred for impertinence (1): and though Lord Hardwicke had compared it to the case of exceptions, he had not laid down a rule upon the subject.

(1) A reference, however, of an answer for impertinence is waved by a subsequent reference for insufficiency. Pellew v. ———, 6 Ves. 456. 458.

A defendant waives all right to refer a bill for impertinence, by an order for time to answer. Aliter, however, as to scandal. Anon. 5 Vesey, 656.

[ *401 ]

[*] MICHAELMAS TERM,

25 Geo. 3. 1784.

ARNALD against ARNALD.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 66. b.)

[8. C. 2 Dick.
645.]

E. M. by will, orders her estate to be sold, and the produce to be divided: She afterwards sells the estate, this is a revocation of the will.

THIS bill was filed by Catherine Arnald, niece and surviving residuary legatee of Elizabeth Milner, and administratrix of Catherine Arnald, her mother, another residuary legatee of Elizabeth Milner, against William Arnald, the executor of the will of Elizabeth Milner, (since become a lunatic,) and a devisee of one third part of the produce of the estate of Elizabeth Milner, Maria Catherine Arnald, a devisee of 200*l.* and Elizabeth Thompson, the devisee of another third part of the produce of the estate of Elizabeth Milner, on the following case:—Elizabeth Milner made her will the 3d of June, 1769, and thereby devised a messuage in Lancashire, to her sister Catherine, (the plaintiff's mother, since deceased,) for life, and after her decease she devised the the same to Charles Hanchman and William Arnald, to sell the same, and to apply the sum of 200*l.* to the use of Maria Catherine Arnald, then to apply one-third part of the residue of the money to arise from the sale, to the use of Catherine Arnald; one third thereof to the use of William Arnald, and the interest of the other third part to the use of [Hannah Sophia] Thompson, (mother of the defendant Elizabeth Thompson) for life; remainder to her children, and gave the residue (1) to her [sister, since deceased, and] niece Catherine, the plaintiff. After the making of the will, the testatrix sold the estate for 2500*l.* a part of the purchase-money was left upon mortgage on the estate, and the remainder was laid out in the purchase of 2100*l.* 3 per cent. consol. annuities.

[The plaintiff was administratrix to her mother, and co-residuary legatee.]

The 8th of July, 1779, the testatrix died without revoking the will: William Arnald proved the will in the ecclesiastical court. — The [*] plaintiff, by the bill, insisted (2) that the sale of the estate by the testatrix was a revocation of the will, and therefore that she is entitled to the purchase-money as part of the personal estate of the testatrix. The cause came on last Term, but the defendant William Arnald, having become a lunatic, and his committee not being a party, it stood over on that account. Brook Bridges the committee being now before the Court, the cause came on again.

Mr. Attorney General (for the plaintiff) insisted, that the sale of the estate was a revocation of the will, even if the parties who claimed under it could ascertain that the money in the funds was the very produce of the sale.

Mr. Madocks and Mr. Hardinge, for the defendant William Arnald; and Mr. Scott and Mr. Mitford, for Maria Catherine Arnald, the devisee of the 200*l.* out of the produce of the estate, — on the other hand, contended that this was not a revocation of the will, that the testatrix had only done the act herself, which at the time of making the will she intended should be done by the trustees; and although they will not take it in the form in which the testatrix then intended, they may have the substance, Savile v. Blacket, 1 Wms. 777. — The primary intention being that the third part of this estate intended to be sold should go to the children, it would be very hard to defeat that intention, and leave them unprovided for, as they must be in this case. They cited several cases where mortgages and dispositions for payment of debts had been held to be revocations only pro tanto, particularly Vernon v. Jones, 2 Vern. 241. also in Pre. in Ch. 32. where Sir Thomas Vernon had devised lands (with exceptions,) to be sold for payment of debts, and made a provision of 200*l.* per annum out of the excepted lands for his wife for life; afterwards he and his wife joined in a mortgage and levied a fine, and he executed a deed of trust to sell for payment of debts, the surplus to him and his heirs, and it was held not to revoke the provision for the wife. To the same purpose, also Rider v. Wager, 2 Wms. 328. where a mortgage by deed and fine was held a revocation pro tanto only, and Sparrow v. Hardcastle, 3 Atkyns, 798. where mortgages and conveyance for payment of debts are held not to be revocations; and although this case is not expressly within the exceptions, it may be held that these [*] devises are equivalent to legacies of the third parts, or, at least, the

(1) Of her goods, chattels, &c. bonds, mortgages, and her right and interest in the lands comprised in such mortgages, and all her personal estate and effects. R. L.

(2) That the proceeds from the sale were part of the testatrix's personal estate, and belonged to the plaintiff as surviving residuary legatee; and it prayed for the declaration of the Court agreeably to such claim, and for a transfer and payment, or assignment, of the mortgaged premises accordingly. R. L.

1784.

ARNALD
against ARNALD.

[ *402 ]

[ *403 ]

[1784.]

*Anseld
against Anseld*

counsel for Maria Catherine hoped her 200*l.* might be construed so to be.

Lord Chancellor said, it was a difficult thing to say when a legacy shall be so clearly specific that it shall continue to be so in all events; it would be much easier to construe it to be pecuniary for the purpose of supporting it. A specific legacy is the same at law and in equity, except in this circumstance; that at law any alteration is an ademption; but not so considered here; when it is merely for a partial purpose: but in this case there is an absolute disposition made by the will, and before that can take effect; another absolute disposition, inconsistent with it, is made by the testatrix herself. His Lordship therefore decreed for the plaintiff (3) that the will was revoked, and the plaintiff entitled as residuary legatee.

(3) The declaration of the Court was; "that the clear residue of the testatrix's personal estate belonged to the plaintiff, free and clear of any claims of the defendant; in respect of the money arising by the sale of the said real estates;" and the decree directed that such residue should be transferred, assigned, and paid to the plaintiff accordingly. R. L.

[S. C. 2 Dick.
646.]

Notwithstanding the common course of the Court is to give only 40*s.* costs upon dismissal of a suit heard on bill and answer; yet if the party be vexatious full costs may be given. (1)

MANSEL against BOWLES.

THE cause was brought on upon bill and answer, and appearing to be vexatious, and the plaintiff not to have replied to the answers merely to avoid costs. The question was, whether the Court could give full costs, or only 40*s.*

Lord Chancellor said Mr. Mansfield was accurate with respect to the order of the Court (1), and that, in such cases, the Court would not hold itself bound by the rule of 40*s.* costs, but would give the whole costs of the vexatious suit; and that it had been so done by Lord Hardwicke, 2 Atk. 288. and 3 Atk. 1. — His Lordship therefore directed the costs to be taxed upon the dismissal of this bill. (2)

(1) The order of Court is the 27th April, 1748, in respect of which, and the decisions referable to it, see Mr. Beames' Orders in Chancery, 450, 451. and the notes. They refer (inter alia) to Newsham v. Gray, 2 Atk. 286. 288. Attorney General v. Parker, 3 Atk. 578. Cowdell v. Tatlock, 3 Ves. and Beames, 19. and Pott v. Reynolds, 5 Atk. 565. 579., which is stated from the Registrar's Book, 5 Ves. and Beames, 20. note.

(2) As against the defendant Bowles. The other defendants were accounting parties. R. L.

Directions for enquiry as to sums wilfully omitted to be received.

The following directions, being a little out of the usual course, may be worth inserting: — "And in case the Master shall find any sums were omitted to be received, which the said defendants might have received, it is ordered that the said Master do enquire and state whether any of the said sums, so wilfully omitted to have been received, have been subsequently received, and in what manner, and to what amount." R. L. 109.

1784.

[*] WHITBREAD against BROCKHURST.

[ *404 ]

WHITBREAD against WAINRIGHT.WHITBREAD against PEARKEs.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. B. fol. 30.)

THESE were three pleas put into a bill filed by the plaintiff Whitbread, for a specific performance of an agreement for the sale of five-twelfth parts of an estate called the Putteridge estate, in Hertfordshire and Bedfordshire. — Upon the death of Sir Benjamin Rawlins, intestate, five-twelfth parts of the estate descended upon five sisters of the family of Arnold, to wit, Sarah married to the defendant Brockhurst; Rebecca Arnold, spinster; Ann married to Robert Wainwright; Susannah wife of Martin Pearkes; and Mary wife of John Pearkes. In order to sell the estate, they, by deed, dated 30th July, 1779, conveyed their shares to Miles Penfold, Richard Tristram, and William Wiltshire, in trust to sell, and levied fines, and authorized Robert Wainwright, and Martin Pearkes, to act in the sale as their general agents. Wainwright and Pearkes employed Thomas Skynner, an auctioneer, to sell the estate, on behalf of all parties, and the plaintiff entered into a treaty with him for the purchase, of which, a memorandum was made by Skynner, in the following terms: — “The proprietors of five-twelfths of the Putteridge estate agree to sell, after deducting land-tax, quit rent, and every other out-going for twenty-five years purchase, and out of that amount to be deducted the value of the tythes, which amount to about 140*l.* for each share, the timber to be valued by two persons or their umpire.” — This memorandum Mr. Skynner sent to the plaintiff, in-

Plea of the statute of frauda, averring, 1st. that there was no contract in writing: 2d. that there had been no acts done in part performance, over-ruled as double, and ordered to stand for an answer, with liberty to except. (1)

(1) The pleas in this case seem intrinsically bad, without reference to the point of their being a double defence. The very mode in which the statute was pleaded was inapt as to the bill in question, and the saving clauses as to the acts of part-performance seem to render the averment nugatory, if it would have been otherwise effectual. It is rather singular that Mr. Brown's Report scarcely notices these objections.

Though it would be presumptuous in the Editor to call in question the decision reported in this case, as above, on the abstract point of double pleading, from his own mere individual opinion; it seems to him it is incumbent to notice some doubts on the subject; since a gentleman, who has lately published a most systematic and valuable Treatise “On the Elements of Pleas in Equity,” has not only shewn that at least much contrariety has prevailed on such abstract question, but that Lord Redesdale (that great master of equity pleading,) has been under the necessity of much fluctuation on the point; and that his Lordship is even now, in the last edition of his invaluable work, at variance with the general positions he has so well deduced both in that edition and the preceding one. — The profession will find the whole of this subject well discussed in Mr. Beames' Elements of Pleas in Equity, from page 27 to 32. and from page 171 to 177. Waving all discussion, the Editor would merely observe, that if the doctrine be unimpeachable, which Lord Redesdale leaves undeniable even in the late edition of his work (p. 241.), then the principle must equally apply to a good plea of the statute of frauds with an averment of no act done in part-performance; where the bill itself sets the example of such double pleading by a charge of that nature. The sentence existing in the third edition of Lord Redesdale's work, last alluded to, is as follows: “If there is any charge in the bill, which is an equitable circumstance in favour of the plaintiff's case against the matter pleaded, as fraud, or notice of title, that charge must be denied by way of answer, as well as by averment in the plea.” That it is consonant to a passage in the second edition (p. 212. 214.); but which has been omitted in the late edition, is obvious: and without entering into the question further, it is allowable to say, the expunged passage seems more consistent with the existing passage, above quoted, than that which has been substituted. See also Roche v Morgell, 2 Scho. & Lefroy, 727. and the other authorities referred to by Mr. Beames.

closed

1784.

WHITBREAD
against BROCKHURST,
&c.

[ *405 ]

closed in the following note : “ Mr. Skynner’s compliments to Mr. Whitbread, informs him that Mr. Wainwright and Mr. Pearkes on behalf of themselves and the rest of the family of Arnold, have fixed on Mr. Maxwell of Grevely, to value the timber and tythes for them, and wishes Mr. Whitbread would appoint a time and person to do the same, which Mr. Skynner has promised Mr. Whitbread would fix in a few days. December 3d, 1782.” On the 2d of December, Wainwright, with the privity of the other parties, wrote a letter to Tristram and Wiltshire, two of the trustees, as follows : “ Mr. Skynner has agreed to purchase the five shares of the Putteridge estate [*] belonging to the Arnold family, and desires an abstract of the title may be sent him, and also to have an exact account of the outgoings to which the estate is subject, except tythes, and to be informed of the names of all the tenants, and what rent each pays, I have therefore herewith sent you the old abstract found among Sir Benjamin Rawlins’s writings, together with a copy of the deed of the 30th July, 1779, and must beg you to perfect the abstract, and to send a copy with the account and information mentioned above, to Mr. Skynner, as speedily as possible, and to take the conduct of the business as attornies for the vendors, with whose concurrence this letter is wrote, by your’s, &c. ROBERT WAINWRIGHT.” — The trustees sent the abstract to the plaintiff, the surveyors met to value the timber, and appointed an umpire, who made a valuation thereof. — The plaintiff’s bill stated these facts, and insisted upon the several acts done as being a part-performance of the agreement, and further stated that he had, since the beginning of the treaty, kept a sum equivalent to the purchase-money, 8 or 9000*l.* dead in a banker’s hands, in order to complete the purchase. — The defendants put in three several pleas ; the first was put in by defendants Wainwright, Martin Pearkes, and Susannah his wife, by which they, as to so much of the bill as sought from them a discovery of any contract or agreement for the purchase of the five shares, &c. not in writing signed by defendants, or any person by them lawfully authorised, and as to so much of the bill as prayed such contract might be specifically performed, pleaded the statute of the 29 Charles II. for preventing of frauds and perjuries, reciting the clause whereby no action is to be brought, “ upon any contract or sale of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or any interest in or concerning them, — unless the agreement upon which such action shall be brought, or some memorandum or note thereof shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorized.” The defendants averred, “ that no contract or agreement for the sale of the said shares of the said estate, or of any share or interest therein, to or for the benefit of the plaintiff or any other person, nor any memorandum or note of any such agreement was in writing, signed by the defendants, or any other person by defendants thereunto lawfully authorized, within the [*] meaning of the statute.” — They also averred, that no matter or thing whatsoever had been done toward performance of such agreement, as by plaintiff pretended to have been made, unless the acts after mentioned, can be construed as a part-performance of such agreement.” (2) They there admit the appointment of surveyors, and that they met ; the abstract of the title being sent ; and the letter of Wainwright : “ which acts, defendants are advised, and submit to the judgment of the Court, are not acts which ought to be deemed a part-performance of the agreement alledged by the bill to have been made.” (2) The defendants, by their answer, denied any authority given to them by the other parties, or by them to Skynner to sell or dispose of their interests in the said shares. — The pleas of the other defendants were the same, except that in the averment of no acts having been done in part-performance; they did not except the acts specified in the plea of Wainwright.

[ *406 ]

(2) See the preceding note.

Mr. Ambler, in support of the pleas, stated the prayer of the bill, and the several transactions, and said there were two defects in the agreement, which rendered it null under the statute. 1st. There was no memorandum signed by the party. 2d. Skynner had no authority from them, and, even if he had, he has not signed the agreement. If there has been no such memorandum in writing as the statute requires, the plea is proper as to the discovery; for an agreement not within the statute, cannot be enforced. It is true, that if by his answer the defendant admits the agreement, that admission takes it out of the statute; for there is no longer any danger of perjury, so that the court may then carry the agreement into execution. — Therefore a plea of the statute to a bill for the discovery of an agreement, not in writing, is proper. — Then as to the plea to relief. — The agreement, or memorandum, drawn up by Skynner, is not within the statute; there is no agreement signed, or put in writing by a person having sufficient authority. — Then, if the plea be such as to destroy the agreement, are the facts stated as part-performance sufficient to support it? Mr. Wainwright's plea excepts three acts, the valuation of the timber, the sending the abstract and his letter to the trustees. — These are acts very proper to be met by a plea, for your Lordship can judge as well of them in this manner, as at the hearing of the cause. — These acts cannot amount to a [*] part-performance: acts for that purpose must be such as will be prejudicial to the party doing them, if the agreement is not carried into execution. This was laid down in Gunter v. Horsely, in Trinity term, 17[39, since reported, Ambler, 586]. — They must be acts also with the manifest intention of being in part-performance. Foxcraft v. Lister cited 2 Vern. 456: they must be acts, like those in that case, which could not be done with any other intent; part of the house was pulled down, and a new part built: but the mere delivering of an abstract, the meeting of parties, or valuing timber, which are acts merely preparatory to a sale, cannot be such acts. This appears from Hawkins v. Holmes, 1 Wms. 770, citing that of Ithel v. Potter. — It appears the act must be a material act. — The acts done here would not be prejudicial to the plaintiff, if the agreement was not carried into execution.

Mr. Selwyn (on the same side.) — It is taken for granted in the bill, that Parkes and Wainwright, who had themselves only two-fifth parts, were authorized by the other parties, and that Skynner had a proper authority: but neither of these appears upon the whole case, and if they did, still it would be necessary under the statute that the person having authority should sign the agreement. The objection to the plea is, that they do not meet the case made by the bill, that charging an agreement in writing, though not signed, yet drawn up by a person having proper authority, and the pleas being to the discovery of an agreement, not in writing. But this method of pleading the statute must be right, otherwise the plaintiff would in all cases be sure of a decree; for by charging in his bill a case out of the statute, the defendant would be obliged to answer, and the admission in the answer would bring the case within the authority of Croyston v. Banes, Pre. Ch. 208. and Symondson v. Tweed, Pre. Ch. 374. (3) — But this plea has been held to be good, even when

(3) It is, however, now settled, that a party who admits a parol agreement by answer, may, nevertheless, have the benefit of the statute, if he, by his answer, prays the benefit of it. If he does not thus insist on the benefit of the statute, he must be taken to renounce it. See per Lord Eldon C. in Cooth v. Jackson. 6 Ves. 37. 39.

there

1784.

WHITBREAD
against BROCKHURST,
&c.

[ *407 ]

1784.

WHITBREAD
against BROCKHURST,
&c.

[ *408 ]

there has been a part-performance. Hollis v. Whiteing, 1 Vern. 151,—Samson v. Butler. And if these cases should not be allowed to be law, yet the plaintiff here has failed in a very material point: he has stated no one act which could be a part-performance. — Acts carried much farther than these, have been held insufficient, Seagood v. Meale and Leonard, Pre. Ch. 560.

[*] Mr. Mitford (on the same side.) — It is necessary to consider the statute with accuracy: it has several clauses, and confusion arises from not distinguishing the cases, as they fall under the different clauses. The 1st clause relates to the creation of estates; the 3d, to the surrender, assignment, or grant of existing estates: the 4th, (on which the present question arises,) takes away the right of action upon a contract for lands, unless it shall be reduced into writing in the manner therein required. — The 17th clause relates to the sale of goods. The cases on the statute have referred to five different clauses: the 1st makes the estates therein mentioned only estates at will. The first case upon it is Hollis v. Whiteing, 1 Vern. 151. that was upon the creation of an estate by the grant of a lease. There, possession was a necessary ingredient in the case, for otherwise the estate could not have been created by parol. This distinguishes the cases upon this clause from the others. The difficulty there was, whether the agreement was void, the estate being so. In Hollis v. Edwards, 1 Vern. 159. the agreement was, that the contract should be reduced into writing, and it was sent to law, to obtain damages for not having reduced it into writing. On the 3d clause no doubt has arisen, and there is no case. On the 4th, the principal questions have arisen. There is a difference between it and the 1st. The 1st requires the agent to be authorised by writing, which this clause doth not. We are to contend there is no agreement in this case properly entered into, under the statute. Skynner is sworn by the answer to be the agent of the plaintiff, not of the defendants; if he was the agent of the defendants, here is no agreement signed by him. In the letter to the trustees, Wainwright says, “Mr. Skynner has agreed;” this seems to imply, that Skynner was the agent of the plaintiff, rather than of the Arnold family, and the whole shews that no precise contract was then made; but that all was preparatory to a subsequent treaty. The case, therefore, cannot be supported, unless Mr. Whitbread can shew subsequent acts to have been done, amounting to a part-performance of the agreement. Courts of Equity have in some cases decreed a specific performance of parol-agreements, but the only ground upon which they have so decreed, has been upon fraud. [Vide 7 Vesey, 346.] The first case was before Lord Nottingham: it was an agreement for the execution of an absolute conveyance and a defeasance, the conveyance being

[ *409 ]

[*] executed, the other party refused to execute the defeasance. There, one thing was obtained where another was intended, and, that being a species of fraud, the Court relieved. Some other cases followed on the same ground; among the rest, Sir George Maxwell's case. So where the execution of the agreement is prevented by fraud, as was the case in Foxcraft v. Lister, in Gilbert's Reports. That was followed by several cases, all of the same nature, that there is some circumstance which makes the refusal to execute the agreement fraudulent. The case 2 Ch. Ca. 135. is taken to shew that payment of money is a part-performance; but that case applies to the 17th clause of the statute, not to the 4th. But, in this case, none of the acts amount to a part-performance; there is no one of them so material as to be prejudicial to the plaintiff if the agreement is not performed. Even in cases where possession has been delivered, it must appear to have been so unequivocally, and as a part-performance, otherwise it is is not sufficient. Where the intention of the act has been equivocal, it has never been held as part-performance; this appears from Hollis v. Whiteing, and in several of the other cases in 1 Vernon, and more particularly from that of Cole v. White, before Lord Camden, in 1767, where there was an agreement for a lease for four years, and the bill charged that possession was given; defendant pleaded the statute, and by his answer denied that possession was delivered in part-performance, and swore that the plaintiff obtained it wrongfully. The plea was allowed, and Lord Camden said, that the giving instructions for a lease, could not make part of the case as a part-performance. Upon the whole, I contend that the acts here stated cannot be sufficient as a part-performance.

Lord Chancellor. — The plea in this case is very peculiar (4); perhaps it would have been better to have demurred; for, though the course of the Court has been to admit these pleas of the statute, I do not see the reason of it, as it is a public statute. (5) As to the averment, I doubt whether the plea can traverse the facts in the bill. The other question is new; I doubt whether the two facts of there being no agreement in writing, and of there being no act done in part-performance, can be joined in the same plea, without making it multifarious; and if it is so, it cannot be pleaded. But, in the first place, I have great doubt whether you can put a negative on the bill, or your averments must not be collateral to the bill.

[*] Mr. Selwyn. — In pleas of the statute of limitations, that is frequently done; if the bill states that the cause of suit arose in that or the former year, the plea of the statute with an averment that it did not arise within six years, contradicts the allegation of the bill.

Lord Chancellor. — I doubt that case to have ever been determined, and I am not satisfied with the principle of it.

Mr. Mansfield (for the plaintiff.) — The only question now before the Court is, whether the plea as pleaded can be supported. The merits are, for the present, out of the case; all the pleas go to a parol agreement, though no parol agreement was stated in the bill. Then the question is, whether the agreement was reduced into writing by a person authorised so to do. Skynner was authorised by Wainwright and Pearkes, whose wives were entitled to two of the twelfth-parts, and the agreement is in the terms of "The proprietors of five-twelfths," &c. Then it is said, this is not an agreement signed. Why not? It could not be disputed, that if a man wrote an agreement himself, "A. B. agrees to sell," it would be sufficient. This is decided in the case of a will, that the testator putting his own name at the commencement, is equivalent to his signing it; yet the statutes there expressly require signing. Then, instead of the parties themselves writing the agreement, it is written by Skynner as their agent; he calls them "the proprietors," &c., which is just as well as if he had enumerated their names. Seagood v. Meale, is a very different case from this; there the note did not specify the price, or other circumstances of the bargain. Here it is to sell, after certain deductions, at 25 years' purchase; so that, in this case, there is no uncertainty. Then the valuation of the timber is certainly a very material act, and attended with a considerable expence to the plaintiff. Wainwright's

1784.

WHITBREAD
against BROCKHURST,
&c.

[ *410 ]

(4). See the observations in note (1) antea.

(5). Notwithstanding the former doubts that the statute must be pleaded, to be effectual to a defendant, it is settled that a defendant may have the benefit of it, if insisted upon by his answer. Vide note (2) antea, referring to 6 Ves. 37. 39. Lord Thurlow's observation, as to a demurrer, seems equally applicable; and demurrers are now common in respect of other public acts, such as the ship registry act, &c. See Battersby v. Smith, 3 Madd. Rep. 110, &c.

letter,

1784.

WHITBREAD
against BROCKHURST
&c.

[ *411 ]

letter, though perhaps not strictly a part-performance, affords strong evidence that he had entered into an agreement; the language is that of a man who has made a contract. These are the material circumstances on which the bill is founded; and the only question at present is, whether the plea is well pleaded, and, upon that head, it appears to be perfectly anomalous, it does not meet any allegation of the bill. It is properly a plea of no agreement in writing, for it cannot be a plea of a public law. [*] But the bill did not go upon a parol-agreement, but expressly on the ground that the contract had been reduced into writing. The plea of Wainwright and Pearkes is partly a plea, and partly a demurrer, for it admits facts, and submits the effect of them to the Court; it denies facts alleged, and then goes on to say that no acts were done, save such and such. A plea, in order to be good, must be capable of being replied to, and of going to issue, but it is impossible to reply to, or take an issue upon, the facts stated in this plea; but they desire your Lordship's opinion upon these facts.— This is more like a demurrer than a plea. The other pleas, though not open to this objection, are also exceptionable on other grounds.— They are double pleas. 1st. That there was no agreement in writing; 2dly. That no act was done in part-performance: whereas the office of a plea is to state some single fact by which the plaintiff is estopped from going into the enquiry made by his bill. This is of itself a sufficient objection to the pleas. I remember a plea overruled by your Lordship on that ground alone. The plea therefore ought to be over-ruled, which will be no injustice to the parties; the defendants will be obliged to discover the letters, and the merits will be easily decided.

[ *412 ]

Mr. Madocks (on the same side.)— Wainwright's plea seems to be open to this objection, That it does not tend to put an end to the suit; for, the averment being that no act has been done in part-performance, if the plea be replied to and put in issue, it remains to be decided what the effect of those acts will be: with respect to the others, the question is, whether they are not matters of answer rather than plea. If a man states in his bill a contract generally, and the defendant pleads the statute, and no contract in writing; this plea is consistent with the bill, which only stated a contract generally. The office of a plea is to confess and avoid; it therefore must take the facts in the bill to be true: but if the bill states the contract to be in writing, and the bill is false in so stating it, that is not matter of plea, but of answer; and if he by answer denies generally, that there was an agreement in writing, it is no matter of exception that he has not denied a parol-agreement. Now in this case, it is expressly stated in the bill, 1st. That there was a contract in writing; 2dly. That acts were done in part-performance of that agreement. The plea is, that there was no contract in [*] writing, and that no acts were done in part-performance. This is an answer, not a plea: it is a direct denial of the case made by the bill. The bill states, that Pearkes and Wainwright were authorised by the other proprietors to act for them, and that Stymer was appointed by them to treat for the sale, and that he committed the agreement to writing, and insists that these acts put together amount to an agreement in writing signed by a person duly authorised. This fact the plea denies, which denial is certainly matter of answer, not of plea. The other point arises upon the part-performance, the bill states the employment of the surveyors to value the timber, which is certainly a very material act, as by it the plaintiff incurred a considerable expence.

Lord Chancellor.— I do not recollect any case where an act merely intro-introductory or ancillary to the agreement, though attended with expence, has been held a part-performance.

Mr. Madocks. — I believe there is not any such case, but it strongly fortifies the fact of there having been an agreement. Here the plea, being to an agreement not signed, is contrary to the very position of the bill. It brings no new fact in issue. — A plea cannot bring the law in issue. — The question to be decided is, whether Wainwright's letter amounts to an agreement in point of law, this is the office of an answer, from whence the question will arise at the hearing of the cause. — The forms of the statute have in many cases not been insisted upon; so as the substance has been complied with. So if a person sign a writing referring to another writing, which contains the explicit terms of the agreement, this has been held to be equally good as if the whole were in one paper and signed. And the question in this case will be, whether, there being an agreement in writing, the statute has not been substantially complied with. On the whole, I argue that these pleas contain matter of answer, not of plea, and ought to stand for an answer.

Mr. Scott (on the same side.) — When once the Court laid it down that a part-performance shall take the case out of the statute, it seems to have been impossible to plead the statute to a bill which charged facts of part-performance. For, supposing issue to be taken upon such a plea, and every fact in the [*] plea found to be untrue, still no parol-agreement would be found, upon which the whole case must be grounded, and your Lordship, though you should think the facts sufficient to take the case out of the statute, could not give the relief. — This is inconsistent with the nature of a plea, which must be conclusive upon the matter in controversy. — But I deny it to be a general rule, that the defendant's admission of a parol-agreement shall take the case out of the statute; for though he admits the agreement, yet, by pleading the statute, he avoids it; and by his insisting in his answer on the statute, he shall have the same advantage as upon a plea. (6) This appears from 1 Eq. Abt. 19, pl. 3. Croyston v. Banes, Pre. Ch. 208. and Lord Camden's opinion in Cole v. White; though I admit in one case, Symondson v. Tured, Pre. Ch. 374. and Gillb. 35. the distinction of insisting or not upon the statute, is not taken.

Mr. Woodleton, (on the same side) cited 2 Freeman 268—281: 5 Viner, 522, 523. 9 Mod. 37. as cases contradicting the authority of Hollis v. Whitting.

Lord Chancellor. — Before Mr. Ambler replies, I wish him to consider what will be the effect of a judgment upon these pleas; they point at the relief, and at the discovery; but, to this last, only as leading to the relief, and they apply only to a parol agreement, which the bill does not state; the judgment, therefore, could only be a declaration that it is either a written agreement or not. — Then it must be considered how far the Court can entertain a double plea, saying, both that there was no agreement in writing, and that there was no part-performance; and how you would introduce such a plea to a bill, which rests upon the part-execution. — It has been suggested with great clearness by Mr. Misford, that the Court has decided cases of part-performance on the ground of a fraud upon the person performing, not that the agreement was not originally within the contemplation of the statute. (7) — But yet, on the other side of the hall, they have decided, on great argument, that an agreement partly performed was not within the original

(6) See accordingly 6 Ves. 37. 39. and note (2) ante.

(7) Vide 6 Ves. 39. et per Lord Redesdale C. in O'Herlihy v. Hedges, 1 Scho. & Le-roy, 130.

1784.

Wainwright
against Brocktonst,
&c.

[ *413 ]

1784.

WHITREAD
against BROCKHURST
&c.

[ *414 ]

conception of the statute. (8)—The argument will be, that the plea must meet both the original agreement and the part-performance. — I do not mean to declare immediately that such a plea cannot be, but it strikes me as a new plea. In the next [*] place it will be necessary to consider what part of the bill you have not answered to, for, if the whole is answered, that is a waiver of the plea; and upon looking into the answer, it seems as if the whole was answered. There are several other matters, also, to be considered: 1st, whether the use of a plea and an answer, under the statute 29 Ch. 2. be to deny the transaction, and whether, if the party admits the transaction, he can, nevertheless, be permitted to take the benefit of the statute. If he only admits the circumstances of the case, and not a direct agreement, I see no reason why he should not bind the Court as much as by refusing to answer. It is in reference to the application of the plea in other cases, that I say these questions should be discussed, not for the sake of the present case, in which I must go so far as to say, I am sorry the merits are not before me.

Mr. Ambler, (in reply.)—I conceive a plea in bar to be, where the defendant makes an averment of a fact not appearing upon the face of the plaintiff's bill, which, if true, puts an end to the plaintiff's claim: and in this it differs from a demurrer, which shews, from matter upon the face of the bill, that the plaintiff is not entitled to the relief prayed. All matters which will make a defence, it is true, cannot be pleaded, for a plea must not be crowded with a variety of matters; if it is, it puts an end to the plea, because it no longer answers the end of a plea, which is to save time, expence, and vexation, by bringing the cause to a short conclusion. But where it comes to a short fact, then it is proper in the shape of a plea, such as the plea of a deed, by which the plaintiff appears to be only tenant for life to a bill grounded on his being tenant-in-tail. So a plea of the statute of limitations, which puts an end to the demand. And it is not necessary that it should be one simple fact, for if it consists of two or three facts tending to one effect, it is equally good, as in the case of Harrison v. Southcote, 1 Atk. 528. It is sufficient that the facts pleaded are consistent. — In this case the pleas go both to the discovery, and to the relief. With regard to the discovery, two objections are taken to the pleas; 1st. on the merits, that there ought to be a discovery; 2dly. on the form, that they are ill-pleaded. — With respect to the discovery it was proper to plead; for if a discovery was obtained, though of an agreement not warranted by the statute, the [*] Court would have decreed a performance. This is established by the cases cited before of Croyston v. Banes, and Symondson v. Tweed, in Pre. Ch. and also by that of Wanley v. Sawbridge, in the Exchequer, in Easter term, 4 Geo. 2. — Then as to the form of the plea, one objection taken is that it is pleaded to the discovery of an agreement not in writing, whereas the bill states a contract in writing. But upon looking into the bill, it appears the defendants are interrogated to the contract in writing, and to any other contract entered into by them, which justifies the plea. — Then as to the objection to the plea to the relief; It is argued two ways: 1st. that the statute could not be pleaded to this bill; 2d. that the averments are wrongly made. The case of Hawkins v. Holmes, in 1 Wms. seems much in point, and it is observable, that the 4th clause of the statute bars the remedy only, it does not nullify the contract; therefore, unless the defendant pleads the statute, the Court will decree performance, and then, I think, they were proper in pleading it. — Then, as to what has been said as to the

[ *415 ]

(8) But Mr. J. Buller afterwards abandoned that position, and it was found altogether untenable. See per Lord Redesdale C. in O'Herlihy v. Hodges, 1 Scho. & Lefroy, 120 facts facts alleged in the bill to have been done in part-performance; where a defendant pleads this act, he must shew his plea to be good, by clearing the case of any fact which would take it out of the statute. This makes the averments a necessary part of the plea, the facts must either be pleaded to, or denied, and this is done here. They have stated in the bill three particular acts done in part-performance. The defendants have admitted the facts, and avoided them, and said that they are not acts amounting to a part-performance. Suppose the pleas to be overruled, and the cause to come to a hearing, the plaintiff could go into no proof, they would read the admission from the plea; the question therefore is ripe for the Court's opinion, which is strictly the office of a plea. — They, then, object, that this is a double plea: I admit a double plea is bad, but this is no double plea; a double plea is not where different matters, but inconsistent matters are pleaded: for instance, a man cannot plead that he is a purchaser without notice, and go on to say, that if he is not a purchaser, he is a mortgagee with twenty years possession; but in these pleas there is no inconsistency. This brings me to consider the acts alleged to be done in part-performance. Hawkins v. Holmes, and Seagood v. Meale, both shew, that the acts done must be material acts: payment of a sum [*] of money, or the mere delivery of possession are not sufficient acts. All the cases shew that the act must be a material act, done in pursuance of the contract, and such as will be detrimental to the party doing it, if the contract be not carried into execution. Here the acts are not so strong as in the cases, and are in fact merely preparatory matters. If the facts alleged to be done in part-performance of an agreement are denied, it is immaterial whether such denial be by a plea or by an answer. — 3 Wms. 244. (in the note) denial of notice, may be either by the plea or by answer.

Lord Chancellor. (9) — A very serious difficulty seems to me to arise from the different cases upon this 4th clause of the statute, which declares that no action shall be sustained upon any contract or sale of lands, unless the agreement shall be in writing, and attended with

(9) The following is a cotemporary note of Lord Thurlow's judgment, taken by the late Sir Samuel Romilly, and appears in a note to the second vol. of Ves. & Beames' Reports, 153. : —

Lord Thurlow. — “ The question now before me is merely a question to direct the pleadings of the Court in future; and is nothing more than this, whether it be possible to plead in one plea all the matters contained in this plea.

“ I cannot agree with the defendant's counsel, that any two facts, which are not inconsistent, may be pleaded in one plea. I think that various facts can never be pleaded in one plea, unless they are all conducive to a single point, on which the defendant rests his defence. Thus many deeds may be stated in a plea, if they all tend to establish the single point of title; so in the case of papacy (Harrison v. Southcote, 1 Atk. 528.) In the present case, the different matters pleaded do not conduce to one object. The plea of the statute is in itself a bar; but the plea, that the agreement was not performed, is quite distinct; because, whether a part-performance takes the agreement out of the statute, or be considered merely as a fraud, the point of equity is quite distinct from the agreement. It is a plea of two matters, perfectly and clearly distinct; of two things which furnish two different pleas to the points made in the bill. The reason why a defendant is not permitted to plead two different pleas in equity, though he is permitted to plead them at law, is plain; it is, because at law the defendant has no opportunity, as he has here, of answering every different matter stated in the bill. The reason of pleading in equity is, that it tends to the forwarding of justice, and saves great expence that the matter should be taken up shortly upon a single point: but that end is so far from being attained, if the plea puts as much in issue as the answer could do, that on the contrary it increases the delay and expence. But why, it may be asked, should not the defendants be permitted to bring two points, on which the cause depends, to issue by his plea? The answer is, because, if two, he may as well bring three points to issue; and so on till all the matters in the bill are brought into issue upon the plea; which would be productive of all the delay and inconvenience which pleading was intended to remedy. Let the plea stand for an answer, saving the benefit of it to the hearing, and with liberty to except.”

1784.

WHITBREAD
against BROCKHURST,
&c

[ *416 ]

Two inconsistent facts cannot be joined in one plea.

Various facts cannot be pleaded in one plea, unless all conducive to a single point of defence; as several deeds tending to establish the single point of title: so in the case of papacy.

1784.

WHITBREAD
against BROCKHURST,
&c.

[ *417 ]

the forms therein required. This Court has adopted the provision of the statute, so far as to admit it to be pleaded to bills for the specific performance of such agreements; yet, in fact, the Court has, in one case, admitted this plea, and, in another, has said that if the defendant will admit the agreement by answer, the action shall be sustained, and this tends to a more palpable consequence when the plaintiff by his bill charges the ulterior circumstances as part execution of the contract; for I do not at present see any means of delivering the defendant from answering; and, then, to say that the action shall be sustained, at the same time that the statute expressly says it shall not be sustained, seems to imply a manifest contradiction. It should rather seem, that if the defendant confesses the agreement in his answer, but insists upon the statute, it would be more simple and conformable to reason, to say that the statute should be a bar to the plaintiff's claim. (10) If, on the other hand, it is roundly asserted that the statute does not apply to an agreement which the defendant is ready to admit, the length of that principle will be, that the defendant shall be obliged to declare, whether there was such an agreement, and it will be like all other cases, the defendant must assist the Court with the discovery. — This point seems, from Lord Camden's opinion in Cole and White, to have struck him much in the same manner; but, as the matter appears upon the case, I take it if the defendant confesses an agreement short of the whole, and any thing is left to proof, the [*] Court would say, that so far as it is left to proof, the plaintiff shall not proceed. — Another considerable difficulty has arisen, with respect to the effect of a part execution. There certainly are cases which have considered an agreement which has been partly executed as never having been within the original view of the statute; and this has been a ground to induce the Court of King's Bench, as I am told, to determine this case to be entirely out of the statute. (11) I acknowledge, I always thought the Court considered it as fraudulent in the party to make the contract, and to lead on the other party to lay out his money in the melioration of the estate, and then to withdraw from the performance of the contract. Indeed, whether the money has been well or ill laid out is indifferent, the fraud is the same. At the same time, it must be acknowledged, that this case is treated in the books as being out of the statute. These points deserve a great deal of consideration, as applying to other cases, but they do not seem to apply particularly to this case (12): nor do I think I can go into the merits of the case in determining upon the form of a plea. The question before me is, whether it is possible to put together, in one plea, all (12) that is put together in this case. — Mr. Ambler argues it on this ground, that although it is necessary the plea should bring the matter to a single point, yet it is not necessary it should be to a single fact, so as the facts are consistent. This is not my idea, I think no facts can be averred, unless they conduce to the one single point, when forty conveyances may conduce to one title. So in the Papist's case before Lord Hardwicke, every point which went to the incapacity might be pleaded. But here are two points; 1st. that there is no agreement in writing, and this, by itself, is an admitted bar; but 2dly, it goes on, that no act has been done in part execution, which is a totally distinct fact. (13) Whether you consider it, as the Court of King's Bench have done, as an agreement totally out of the statute (11), (10) It is now settled accordingly. See Cooth v. Jackson, 6 Ves. 37. 39. and note (2) antea.

(11) That position, however, was afterwards abandoned. Vide note (8) antea.

(12) Vide note (1) antea.

(13) But see Mr. Beames' Elements of Pleadings in Equity, 27. 31. 173. &c. et ante note (1).

er, with the Court of Equity, as matter of fraud. they are two pleas applying to cases of different natures; distinct, not only in the form of the plea, but in the justice to be applied to them. I determine it, therefore, on the ground of its containing two different and distinct points, and the reason why the Court does not admit such pleas is, that you may put all the different circumstances together in your answer, which you cannot do at common law (14); therefore there is not the same reason for pleading double; but the use of a plea here is to save [*] time, expence, and vexation; therefore, if one point will put an end to the whole cause, it is important to the administration of justice that it should be pleaded; but if you are to state many matters, the answer is the more commodious form to do it in. If it is asked, why you may not bring two facts into a plea, the answer is, that convenience does not require it; and the argument must go to three, or to twenty facts. (15) In fact, it would tend to the very delay the policy of justice has meant to prevent, by admitting of a plea. — The plea therefore must stand for an answer, with liberty to except. † 1784.

WHITBREAD
against BROCKHURST,
&c.

[ *418 ]

† See Whitchurch v. Bevis, post. vol. 2. p. 559.

(14) See also per Lord Eldon C. in Cooth v. Jackson, 6 Ves. 39, &c.

(15) It certainly is the safest way, and often the only practicable way to meet a case at all complicated by answer. It has been observed that the complex nature of bills in equity, for many years past, superseding, as they have done, the use of special replications, &c has, of course, occasioned as multifarious a defence, and as great a departure from the original simplicity of single pleading. See Lord Redesdale's 3d edition, 199. (note) and Mr. Beames on Pleas in Equity, p. 4. 175, &c. The Editor has only to observe upon this, that as such a system is essentially different from the course of pleading at law, the specific mode in which each sort of defence is framed must vary from that practised in the other court, more and more, in proportion to the number of points comprised in the plaintiff's case; the consequence of which must be, that a defence by plea must be less and less frequent in the courts of equity. The existing fact, therefore, seems thus accounted for.

SLOMAN against WALTER. [14 Nov.]

(Reg. Lib. 1784. B. fol. 14.)

UPON shewing cause why an injunction should not be dissolved (1), the case appeared to be thus: That the plaintiff and defendant were partners in the Chapter coffee-house, and upon entering into the partnership it had been agreed that the business should be conducted entirely by the plaintiff, but that the defendant should have the use of a particular room in the house whenever he thought proper. And in order to enforce this agreement, a bond was entered into by the plaintiff to the defendant in the penalty of 500*l*. After some time, the defendant demanded the use of the room, and, being refused, brought an action for the penalty of the bond. (2) Plaintiff filed this bill, praying in issue to try quantum damnificatus, and an injunction in the mean

Where the penalty of a bond is only to secure the enjoyment of a collateral object, equity will grant an injunction against a suit for the recovery, and an issue quantum damnificatus, to try the real damage.

(1) It was an original application for an injunction by Mr. Madocks. R. L.

(2) A verdict had been obtained in that action in the full penalty of the bond. The bill was filed upon the ground of those damages being excessive, alleging that the refusal had been made by the plaintiff in equity in the heat of temper, of which irritation the defendant insidiously took advantage to drive the plaintiff to a breach of the obligation. It therefore prayed "for an issue quantum damnificatus, to ascertain the real amount of the damages sustained by the aforesaid breach of the condition of the said bond; and that upon the plaintiff's paying such amount, the defendant might be restrained from all further proceedings on the said bond." R. L.

1784.

SLOMAN
against
WALTER.

[ *419 ]

while.—He obtained an injunction till answer or further order: and, the answer being now come in, the only question, in respect to continuing the injunction till the hearing, was, whether the penalty of the bond was merely intended as a security for the enjoyment of the room, or in the nature of assessed damages between the parties.

Mr. Scott and Mr. Harvey (for the defendant) contended the injunction ought to be dissolved, and the defendant permitted to have his remedy upon the bond. It was impossible a jury, upon an issue of quantum damnificatus, could assess any other damages than those already assessed by the parties themselves.—They referred to the case in the House of Lords, where 5*l.* per acre penalty for plowing up meadow land [*] was reserved in a lease, and the Court of Chancery having relieved against the penalty, and directed an issue to try the actual damage, the decree was reversed (Rolfe v. Peterson, 6 Brown's Parl. Cases, 470) and also cited 2 Atk. 190. Roy v. the Duke of Beaufort, and Ch. Ca. 183.

Lord Chancellor said the only question was, whether this was to be considered as a penalty, or as assessed damages. The rule, that where a penalty is inserted merely to secure the enjoyment of a collateral object, the enjoyment of the object is considered as the principal intent of the deed, and the penalty only as accessional, and, therefore, only to secure the damage really incurred, is too strongly established in equity to be shaken. This case is to be considered in that light.—The injunction must be continued till the hearing. †

† The same had been done by the late Lords Commissioners, in a case of Hardy v. Martin (3), 7th of May 1783, where plaintiff and defendant had been partners as brandy-merchants; on plaintiff's quitting the business, and selling the lease and goodwill of the shop to defendant for 300*l.* he entered into bond in 600*l.* penalty not to sell, for 19 years, any quantity of brandy less than six gallons, within the cities of London and Westminster, or five miles thereof, or to permit any person so to do in his name, &c. Upon a breach, action brought, and a verdict for the penalty (3), plaintiff filed this bill, praying that an account might be taken of the actual damage sustained by defendant, and an issue directed for that purpose; and that, on payment of the damages, defendant might be restrained from taking out execution for the penalty of the bond.—Upon motion to dissolve the injunction, and cause shewn, the injunction was continued, and an issue directed, when the jury gave a verdict for the plaintiffs at law, (defendants in this court) with 1*s.* damages.

(3) As to Hardy v. Martin, see per Lord Eldon C. Justice, 2 Bos. & Pull. 346. Sir S. Romilly cited it from his own note in Cock v. Richards, 10 Ves. 455 436.

It is apprehended that the principle upon which that case was argued, was exactly similar to that in the principal case, viz. that the whole penalty of the bond would be excessive: that the circumstances of the case there did not warrant such a position; and such a decision, is quite another consideration.—EDITOR.

Earl VERNEY against MACNAMARA.

An answer shall not be amended after an indictment for perjury preferred, or threatened in order to avoid the indictment. (1)

UPON a motion to amend a schedule to the defendant's answer, an indictment for perjury having been preferred, or at least threatened, Lord Chancellor refused to interfere, although he took it to be clear that

(1) The practice in cases of mistake, &c. was afterwards much improved, with safety to all parties; and Lord Eldon C. says it was introduced by Lord Thurlow. Instead of amending or adding to the record of the original answer, the Court permits a supplemental answer to be filed in proper cases. To obtain such a privilege, however, the affidavit must be particular and satisfactory. See Jennings v. Merton Coll. 3 Ven. 70 in Dodder v. B. of England, 10 Ves. 285. and Wells v. Wood, ibid. 401.

the

the defendant did not intend to perjure himself, as he had no interest in so doing. That question would be proper before the grand jury, who, if they thought the defendant did not intend to perjure himself, would throw out the indictment; on the other hand, if there were ground for the indictment, it would be wrong for him to interpose.

Motion denied. †

† The reporter has been informed a similar application had been rejected, a few days before, in the case of Vaux v. Lord Waltham, where, however, the Lord Chancellor seemed inclined to grant the motion, if the affidavit had clearly shewn it to be a mistake. (2)

(2) See Alpha v. Payman, in 1719, 1 Dick. 33. and Patterson v. Slaughter, ibid. 285. The practice was, however, improved afterwards. See the preceding note.

1784.

VERNEY
against MACNAMARA.

[*] HILARY TERM,

25 Geo. 3. 1785.

BLACKBURN and another, Assignees of SARAH CLAYTON, a Bankrupt, against GREGSON and another, Assignees of THOMAS CASE, a Bankrupt.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 301.)

SARAH CLAYTON, being seised in fee (subject to mortgages to a great amount) of large coal-estates, and being much embarrassed in her circumstances, determined to sell the estates, and entered into contracts with Thomas Case for that purpose, and the purchase-money was settled at 30,000*l.* The 23d May, 1774, she conveyed the estates, in consideration of his paying off mortgages to the amount of 12,000*l.* and the clear sum of 17,800*l.* to her at instalments, for which three bonds, one for 12,000*l.*, one for 4000*l.*, and one for 1000*l.* were given. — Case had been an agent on the estate; he entered into possession, did acts of ownership, and paid a considerable part of the mortgages, and also so much of the purchase-money, secured by the bonds, as to reduce the debt to 1400*l.* He made a grant of an annuity of 1000*l.* per annum to — Morrice. Afterwards, both he and Mrs. Clayton became bankrupts; and this bill was filed by Mrs. Clayton's assignees against those of Case, to set aside the purchase as fraudulent, or contending, at least, that, the bonds not having been paid, they, as representing Mrs. Clayton, had a lien upon the estates to the amount of the purchase-money.

[*420]

In Court, East. 1783, before Lord Loughborough, Ashurst, and Hotham, Lords Commissioners, 15th May, 1784, — 29th January, 1785, before Lord Thurlow. [S. C. 1 Cox, 90. Quod vide.] Where, upon a sale of lands, bonds are taken for the purchase-money, which are not paid, quere, whether the vendor has a lien upon the lands. (1)

(1) See particularly the full report of this case, 1 Cox, 90, &c. Upon the point of the vendor's lien, see in Cator v. Bottingbroke, antea, 302, 303. and the notes. So also the notes in Becket v. Cordley, antea, 355. 358. Per Lord Eldon C. in Maoreth v. Symmons, 15 Ves. 337. 346, 347., who expressly refers to the principal case. Grant v. Mills, 2 Ves. & Beames, 306. Hughes v. Kearney, 1 Scho. & Lefroy, 132. and Ex parte Penke, 1 Madd. Rep. 346. From all which, it appears, the vendor's lien will subsist unless it has been most expressly or manifestly waived.

1785.

BLACKBURN
against GREGSON.

[*421]

Mr. Kenyon (for the plaintiffs.)—The vendor not having received the money for the purchase, has an equitable lien upon the estate as against the vendee; though not against a purchaser under him without notice. Chapman v. Tanner (2) 1 Vern. 267. [*] where the land was held to stand charged as against the assignees of a bankrupt. Pollexfen v. Moore, 3 Atk. 273. a lien for the unpaid residue of purchase-money. Walker v. Preswick, 2 Vesey, 622. where, though the principal case was of a ship, in arguing, it was said that in case of a conveyance of land that might be resorted to.—If Lord Hardwicke's doctrine be right, the conclusion will be with the assignees, that they will have a lien on the estate for the remainder of the purchase-money.—There is no question with the mortgagees, but who is entitled subject to their claims; but, upon the rent-charge to Morrice, there is a question, whether Case was not a bankrupt. The conveyance was in 1777, Case became bankrupt in 1778; but if the conveyance was fraudulent, it was an act of bankruptcy.

Lord Loughborough.—I have a decided remembrance of a case, where it was held a lien continued although a bond was given.

Mr. Mansfield (for the defendants.)—When the vendor takes a personal security, the lien does not remain, because the vendee appears to all the world as owner of the estate. Where indeed no personal security is given, some of the cases seem to shew that there is a lien, but it is not determined in Chapman and Tanner. (3) It has been said, in a subsequent case, the vendor had not parted with the deeds. Pollexfen v. Moore (4) makes Lord Hardwicke speak strange language, and make as strange a decree. (4) In Bond v. Kent, 2 Vern. 281. it was held, the seller had no lien for the sum for which a note was taken. In † Fawel v. Heelis (5), 14th of June, 1773, where the vendor [*] had given up the deeds, and had taken bonds, it was held she had no lien.

[*422]

Mr. Spranger (on the same side.)—It is not in the power of the [S. C. Ambl.

724. and
2 Dick. 485.]

† Fawel v. Heelis (5) was as follows:—Plaintiff and her son were joint-tenants of the manor of Great Ormside and other lands. By lease and release, dated the July, 1768, between plaintiff of the first part, and James Fawel (the son) of the second part, plaintiff, in consideration of 1000*l.* and natural love and affection, released all her moiety of the estate to her son in fee. Plaintiff accepted two bonds for the consideration-money, one conditioned to pay 800*l.* the other to pay an annuity of 20*l.* a year to Joseph Fawel, for the use of the plaintiff for her life.—James Fawel, in 1770, being considerably indebted, conveyed this estate to Thomas Heelis and others (the defendants) in trust to sell, and pay the money to his creditors. Plaintiff received only 280*l.* in part of her consideration-money secured by the bonds.—The bill prayed against the trustees that they might, out of the purchase-money, pay the plaintiff her consideration-money.—The defendants insisted she should only come in with the other creditors, for her proportional dividend.

Lord Chancellor took time to consider, and gave judgment, that the Court could not assist her any more than the vendor of goods to a bankrupt; and dismissed the bill. (6)

(2) The decision in Chapman v. Tanner was perfectly right, the agreement having been that the vendor should keep the deeds. Per Lord Eldon C. 20th July, 1801. Editor's MS. note. And see Raithby's Vernon, 1 vol. 268. note (2). Et vide 6 Ves. 756. and 15 Ves. 343. Vide 6 Ves. 756.

(3) See the preceding note on this case. Lord Eldon C., after observing that it was a right decision, said, “a vendor has a lien against the estate in the hands of a purchaser, unless securities have passed, whereby it is manifest the party intended to give up his lien.”—In Austen v. Halscy, 20th July, 1801. To the same effect, also, are the cases referred to by note (1) antea.

(4) Vide 15 Ves. 339. note, &c.

(5) Lord Eldon C. says,—“The settled doctrine, notwithstanding the case of Fawel v. Heelis, is, that a lien shall prevail, unless there are circumstances of a clear waiver: and that such was the settled doctrine at the time of the decision of the principal case; which much shook Fawel v. Heelis. See 15 Ves. 336, 337.

(6) See the report of the judgment, Ambler, 726. and 2 Dick. 485, 486.

Court

Court now to vary the contract. If Mrs. Clayton was now alive, and filed her bill, the Court could not relieve her, as she knew she was taking a personal security.

Mr. Kenyon (in reply.)—There was a case of this kind before Lord Camden, from Westmoreland.

Lord Loughborough. — It was Powell v. Brockway. I think it was the estate of the wife who conveyed to the husband, and he gave a bond. The estate descended to the son, who became a bankrupt.

Mr. Kenyon. — In this case, if a mortgage had been executed by Case to Mrs. Clayton, it would have been a lien: in point of secrecy, that would have been just the same as the money being unpaid. Here the vendee desires to hold the estate, although the money is not paid for it: can such a doctrine hold in a court of conscience, or in the mind of any moral man? There are three cases one way, that this is a lien.

Mr. Scott (who had not been heard before,) on the same side, said, if no money had been paid, or security taken, the vendee would have been a trustee for the vendor, and there seems no great difference where a part only is paid. In one case there is a great difference between part of the money being paid, and the whole secured, that in a bill filed for a discovery, the party cannot protect himself by a plea of being a purchaser for valuable consideration from only having secured the money, but he must actually have paid it.

The next day Mr. Madocks (who was counsel for Morrice, who had a grant of a rent-charge from Case) cited Tardiffe and [*] his wife against Scrughan (7), 8th December, 1769, before Lord Camden.

It stood over till the 26th, when Mr. Mansfield stated that case. (7). Hewitson and his wife seized of a farm in Northumberland, of the value of 55*l.* per annum, being advanced in age and desirous of advancing their two daughters, plaintiff Elizabeth and Mary (deceased), proposed to convey it to them, in consideration of an annuity of 20*l.* per annum, for the joint lives of Hewitson and his wife, and the payment of Hewitson's debts. — By indentures of lease and release, Hewitson and his wife, in consideration of natural love and affection, and of 5*s.* conveyed to plaintiff Elizabeth and her sister, as joint-tenants, and plaintiff Elizabeth and her sister, gave bond, in 500*l.* penalty, for payment of the annuity; but Hewitson and his wife did not deliver up the deeds until the vendees had promised before witnesses to pay the father's debts, amounting to 190*l.* — Defendant married Mary; previous to her marriage the annuity was regularly paid, and defendant was apprized of the bond before the marriage, and after the marriage, paid one half-year's annuity, but upon his wife's death (although the moiety of the estate was conveyed to him for life) he refused to pay any further. — Per Curiam, — it was declared that the annuity of 20*l.* was part of the purchase-money, and to be borne, in equal moieties by plaintiff and defendant, who had an estate for life in one of the moieties; he was therefore decreed to pay a moiety of the arrears of the annuity, and to keep down a moiety of the growing payments.

Lord Loughborough. — In that case the Court carried the lien to a consequence not necessary as between vendor and vendee. — The daughter, Scrughan, was a joint-tenant. They severed the joint-tenancy. She died, and the other sister was her heir: the bond was a good lien on that sister, then the husband says, I was bound only during the coverture; but it was determined that the vendor had an equita-

(7) See it cited 1 Dick, 95, 96., observed upon arguendo 6 Ves. 757. and per Lord Eldon C. in his elaborate judgment in Macreth v. Symmons, 15 Ves. 346.

1785..

BLACKBURN
against GREGSON.

[ *423 ] ble

1784.

BLACKBURN
against GREGSON.

[ *424 ]

ble lien, which affected the defendant's estate for life. — There could not be a stronger case of a lien, because the vendor was secure.

[*] Mr. Mansfield. — The question, there, was only between the daughters, the vendees.

Lord Loughborough. — It would have been unjust against the husband, had it not been the case of a lien; for it was the wife's debt, for which he was bound only during the coverture, and the sister was her representative. — Lord Camden stated the case of Chapman v. Tanner, and said it was decreed there, that the vendor had a natural equity, he having some of the deeds in his hands, and the money being unpaid. (8) — Pollexfen v. Moore (9) is not correctly reported in Atkyns, but in substance right; there being in that case purchase-money unpaid. From a note of Lord Hardwicke's, I find he says, "I delivered my opinion, that the remainder of the estate purchased was to be liable, by virtue of the equitable lien." — The case of Fawel v. Heelis remains: (10) there Lord Bathurst doubted whether there was such an equitable lien; it becomes therefore of great consequence that it should be spoken to. — It struck me always that there was such a lien, and that it was so from the foundation of the Court. A bargain and sale must be for money paid, otherwise it is in trust for the bargainor. — If an estate is sold, and no part of the money paid, the vendee is a trustee: then, if part be paid, is it not the same as to that which is unpaid?

The cause was ordered to stand over upon this point, and, in the mean time, an issue directed to try whether Case was a bankrupt before the grant of the rent-charge to Morrice. — Upon the trial of the issue, the jury found Case a bankrupt before the conveyance to Morrice, which put an end to that part of the cause, and it came on 15th May, 1784, before Lord Thurlow on this question of the lien, when the arguments offered by the Counsel on both sides, were little more than a repetition of those before the Lords Commissioners. — Two issues were then directed, 1st. whether the conveyance from Mrs. Clayton to Case, was intended to defeat her creditors, within the act of 13 Eliz. c. 5. — 2d. Whether the conveyance was an act of bankruptcy, under the stat. [1] Ja. 1. [ch. 15] the assignees of Mrs. Clayton to be plaintiffs at law, and the assignees of Case defendants. The cause was tried, and the jury found, 1st. that the conveyance was made in order to defeat the creditors; 2d. that it was not an act of bankruptcy.

[ *425 ]

* The cause came on upon the equity reserved, 29th January, 1785, when Lord Chancellor decreed the purchase to be set aside, and that it should be referred to the Master, to take an account of the rents and profits received by Case [or his assignees, in which the Master was to make rests as he might see occasion], and of the sums of money which had been paid by him [or his assignees] on account of the purchase, an allowance for which, [with interest at 4 per cent.] and all other just allowances were to be made to his assignees. (11) — A short contest

(8) Mr. Raithby states the decree from Reg. Lib. as follows: — "As to the demand of the said defendant Samuel Trotman, (the vendor) being 100*l.* due upon bond, before he deliver up the writings in his custody, his Lordship declared that a natural equity did arise for him, he having the writings in his custody, and not being paid his purchase-money, and thereupon doth order and decree that the said defendant Samuel Trotman be paid the said 100*l.*, with interest and costs at law, out of the said bankrupt's estate, and that upon payment thereof he deliver up upon oath to the commissioners all deeds, &c." Vide Raithby's Vernon, 1 vol. 268. et 6 Ves. 756, 757.

(9) See the note to 15 Ves. 339.

(10) Vide note (5) antea.

(11) The conveyance was set aside, — Morrice to pay so much of the costs of suit as related to it, and also the costs of the first issue at law, to be taxed. The assignees to pay to the plaintiffs the costs of the second last issues at law, to be taxed by the Master. Reg. Lib.

arose as to the costs at law, one issue only, having been found for the plaintiffs, but Lord Chancellor said, that wherever the material issue is found for the party who sets the cause down for further directions (12) he must have the costs at law; and therefore directed costs to be allowed to the assignees of Mrs. Clayton.

1784.

BLACKBURN
against GREGSON.

(12) "The Lord Chancellor said no such thing. — And see to the contrary, Clifton v. Orchard, 1 Atk. 609." Lord Redesdale's MS. notes.

GRAVE against The Earl of SALISBURY.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 189.)

THE late Earl of Salisbury, by will dated 30th August, 1776, left legacies to several persons, suggested but not proved to be his natural children by a Mrs. Grave; and among the rest, the sum of 10,000*l.* to James Cecil Grave. The bill was filed to establish the will, and for an account of the personal estate; but the defendant's answer, stating that the testator had, in his life time, advanced several sums of money to the legatees, and especially to James Cecil Grave, which it was insisted ought to be taken in satisfaction pro tanto of their legacies, the Lord Chancellor referred it to the Master to enquire into the circumstances of such advancements, and to report them to the Court. The Master found that the testator had granted to James Cecil Grave a lease for ninety-nine years of a farm called Tothalbury-farm, at the rent of 40*l.* a year, which farm he found had before been let at 142*l.* and reported to be worth to be let at 180*l. per annum*. He calculated the difference between the reserved rent and the real value, at twenty years purchase, to be 2800*l.* and also found that the testator had paid the former tenant of the premises 1200*l.* for a standing crop, dead stock, and farming utensils, and also 400*l.* for repairs, making together the sum of 4400*l.*

The value of a beneficial lease granted to a natural son, held not to be a satisfaction pro tanto of a legacy to the son in the father's will. (1)

Court refused a reference to the Master to enquire whether plaintiffs were natural children.

When the cause came on for further directions, the question was, whether this sum of 4400*l.* should be considered as a [*] satisfaction for so much of the legacy of 10,000*l.* Lord Chancellor was of opinion that it was not to be so considered, and ordered the legacy to be paid. — Upon this the defendants applied for a re-hearing, which now coming on, Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Madocks, and Mr. Scott, argued for the defendants, That this was a provision made by a parent for a child, and in that case, the general principle of the Court was, that any sum of money advanced was a satisfaction for so much of the legacy, that the case of a putative father was in this respect, the same with the father of a legitimate child; the rule extended even to a distant relation, if he stood loco parentis. If this had been a purchase, it would have been an advancement; the gift, and the expence of stocking the farm, is equivalent to that. Besides there is, in this case, a strong circumstance to shew Lord Salisbury's intention; for with respect to one of the other sons, William Cecil Grave, to whom he had given the living of Hatfield, he had considered that circumstance, and had given him a legacy of 4000*l.* only. — The principle is fully laid down in the cases of Jesson v. Jesson, 2 Vern. 255. Pusey v. Desbouverie, 3 Wms. 315. Hoskins v. Hoskins, Pre. Ch. 263. Hartop v. Whitmore, 1 Wms. 681. Shudal v.

[ *426 ]

(1) See per Lord Eldon C. on this case in Perry v. Whitehead, 6 Ves. 547. The two provisions, besides, in this case were so totally different, that it was impossible to bring the latter within the rule of presumption. See per Lord Thurlow, post. 427. and a similar point in Jeacock v. Falkener, ante, 206. note (4) from Mr. Cox's notes.

Jekyll,

1785.

GRAVE
against SALISBURY.

Jekyll, 2 Atk. 516. If there be any doubt, whether Lord Salisbury stood in the relation of father to the legatees, that is proper matter of reference to the Master.

Lord Chancellor. — The reference which has already gone to the Master, was sufficiently large to have admitted that circumstance to have been stated: It is not so, but no exception has been taken to the report on that account. It would not be proper now to make a further reference to the Master. It might lead to the discovery of the very circumstance which Lord Salisbury wished to conceal. If new references were to take place whenever parties wished to bring forward fresh facts, it would lead to inconvenience, and would be doing, upon a re-hearing, what would be the proper subject of a bill of review, where the parties must swear the fact was not in their knowledge at the filing of the former bill. As to the merits, — all these cases have been treated as falling within the range of those decisions that where a person indebted gives a legacy, it shall be considered as being a payment of the debt. I am sorry the courts have taken it up on that idea, for when parents are making provisions for children, they certainly do not consider it in that [*] light, no law obliges them to make the provision in the extent they do. — The principle has been supposed to be founded in the civil law, I wish the cases in that law had been, originally, looked into with more accuracy. I question whether it is there taken up on the idea of a debt, or is not rather considered as a presumption repellable by evidence. — The Court has however certainly presumed against double portions, and although it has encouraged that conjecture, with a degree of sharpness I cannot quite reconcile myself to, wherever a provision is made directly, or as a portion by a parent or person loco parentis, I will not displace the rule (2) laid down by wiser men, that it shall be a satisfaction; however reluctant I may be to follow it: but I shall expect the case to be brought up to that point. In the present case, it would be presuming that Lord Salisbury had the idea of a portion in his mind, when he was giving a thing not ejusdem generis.†

Decree affirmed.(3)

† The question of satisfaction has been several times since before the Court; especially in the cases of Powel v. Cleaver, post. v. 2. p. 499. and Rickman v. Morgan, post. v. 2. p. 394.

(2) This amounts to absolute demonstration that Lord Thurlow could not, so shortly before, have denied the existence of such a rule as Mr. Brown represents him to have done in Warren v. Warren, ante, 308. See note (1) to that case, ante, 305.

(3) And the deposit paid to the plaintiff. R. L 1785.

WILSON BRAD[D]YLL, Executor of the late WILSON BRADYLL, Esq.
Plaintiff.

JOHN BALL, (a Bankrupt) and, RICHARD JONES, Assignees of BRADBURY, (a Bankrupt) and THOMAS HEATHFIELD and MATTHEW JEFFERIES, Assignees of JOHN BALL.
Defendants.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 173. b.)

In Court, East.
1783, before
Lords Commissioners Ash-
hurst and Ho-
tham, also Trin.
1783, before all the Lords Commissioners. —
29th Jan. 1785,
before Lord
Thurlow.

BRADBURY owing a year and a quarter's rent to the plaintiff's testator, at Midsummer, 1780; he, on the 28th of June in that year, caused a distress to be made on his goods for the same, and the costs.
Bradbury replevied the goods, and entered into a replevin bond to the sheriff, with two sureties who have since become bankrupts. The cause in replevin was removed into the Common Pleas, but before any proceedings were had, Bradbury became a bankrupt, and the defendants Jones and Ball were chosen assignees, and possessed themselves of the effects of Bradbury, (and among them of the goods so distrained) and sold them. After the bankruptcy, the plaintiff [*] obtained judgment in the cause in replevin, and sued out a writ de retorno habendo, and filed this bill, insisting that he has an equitable lien upon the goods taken in distress, for a return of the goods or payment of the value of them by the assignees

Goods taken in distress for rent,
and replevied,
the distrainer
has no lien on the goods, but is left to his remedy on the replevin-bond.

[ *428 ]

Mr. Kenyon and Mr. Lloyd (for the plaintiff) contended, that he had a right to follow the goods. — That, by the distress, he had obtained a lien upon the goods; and that it was a clear rule in equity, that where a lien is once obtained, it will continue against the party and all volunteers claiming under him. — The assignees cannot be in a better situation than the bankrupt himself. — If this was not so, the taking the bond, which is an auxiliary security, would take away the primary one, and that too by an act of law, and it would be easy for tenants to cheat their landlords by replevying the goods and giving bad sureties. The different rule under bankruptcy, and in case of executions, is well known:
under the 8th of Anne the landlord can only have one year's rent; but under a bankruptcy he may take the whole rent due. — The retorno habendo not issuing till after the bankruptcy, is material in equity; for the first lien is carried through the whole transaction.

Mr. Madocks (for Heathfield and Jefferys, assignees of Ball, who had become bankrupt.) — It is not necessary to come into a court of equity for relief in this case. Upon the retorno habendo issuing, if the return was that the goods were eloigned, a withernam went at law against other goods of the tenant. If he had no other goods, a scire facias went against the sheriff. — The act of the 11 Geo. 2. enables the sheriff to take a bond with sureties, which he may assign to the landlord, that he may sue the sureties; so that the remedy is complete, without the interference of a Court of equity. — Mr. Lloyd says, there is a lien, — if so, it must be an equitable lien. — There is no authority which says that he has a lien here, having none at law. The landlord distrains the tenant's goods, they are delivered, in due course of law, out of his hands on the security of the sureties and of the sheriff. — There is no necessity for a lien.

Mr. Arden (for Jones, the other assignee.) — This is a case which must have happened over and over again, but it is the first time it has 1785.

BRADYLL
against BALL.

[ *429 ]

[*] has been brought before the Court. — The question is, whether the landlord cannot recover the goods from the assignee of the distrainee. — Trover never has been brought. — Mr. Kenyon must contend, that he might have brought trover against the assignee; but if the assignee has sold them, the lien is gone. — At common law the distrainor could not sell the distress, but the statute has converted distresses into executions. — If the sheriff upon the retorno habendo, returns elongata, the party has his remedy; 1st. against the sureties; 2dly. against the general goods of the tenant; but by the bankruptcy, the remedy against the general goods is gone. — It is allowed, that if Bradbury had sold them, an action could not be brought against the purchaser; could an action for money had and received lie in that case against Bradbury? — The auxiliary remedy is substituted. There is no rule, that where there is a substitution, that instead of which it is substituted should remain liable.

Mr. Hollist (on the same side.) — Before the statute of Westminster, 2. the tenant had a right, upon the distress made, to replevy the goods, and the landlord had no security; he had only the writ of retorno habendo; and if the goods were sold, he could do no more. — The statute of Westminster, 2. gave pledges, the consequence of which was, that if the plaintiff got judgment for a retorno habendo, and the goods had been sold, the sheriff returned them elongata, then the landlord was intitled to a capias in withernam; but if the distrainee had no goods, or the distrainor did not chuse this remedy, he had a scire facias against the pledges. If the sheriff made his return scire feci, the landlord had his action for the value of the goods. If the pledges had no goods, the landlord had his action against the sheriff himself for taking insufficient pledges; but if the goods were eloigned, and became the property of another person, he could not follow them. — The statute 17 Car. 2. c. 7. gave a new remedy; that where the plaintiff in replevin became nonsuit, or there was a non-pross, or judgment on demurrer for the landlord, it was to go to a jury to assess the value, for which the landlord might have execution against the tenant. — But in this case the landlord has sued out the retorno habendo. — The statute 2 W. & M. sess. 1. c. 5. gave a sale of the distress. — Before that statute the goods must have remained in the sheriff's hands. — By that act, at the end of five [*] days the distress may be sold, but the purchaser would be in by the tenant. — The statute 11 Geo. 2. c. 19. gave the additional remedy of the replevin bond, which the landlord may sue, or may have his action against the sheriff. — In all this course, the landlord had no title to the goods, he had only a right to call upon the sheriff to take them into his possession. — The writ carries the idea of the right of the tenant to sell the goods, the landlord has no interest or property in them, he cannot prevent the replevin. King v. Cotton, Parker, 112. the five days had elapsed, but the goods were not sold; an extent issued from the Crown tested after the writ was out: The result of that case was, the extent prevailed against the distress, because the goods, not being sold, were still the property of the tenant; it would have been the same in case an execution had come, prior to the sale of the distress. — Here the landlord has taken the return that the goods are eloigned, and they are eloigned by the act of law. — What the plaintiffs aim at here, would put them in a better situation than the crown. — If the extent had been tested the day after the assignment, the Crown could not have touched these goods. The bargain and sale by the Commissioners, took away all the right of the landlord. — The assignees themselves sold the goods before the landlord was entitled to the retorno habendo. — Then, if Bradbury himself had sold the goods after the replevin, the result must have been the same, — his other goods would have been liable, and if he

[ *430 ]

1785:

BRADYLL
against BALL.

he had none, the pledges would. — In many cases the assignees are in a better situation than the bankrupt. — In the case of bankruptcy, if the landlord does not distrain whilst the goods are upon the premises, he must come in as a creditor. — As to his prior and auxiliary security: — it is merely the hardship of the case: a man taking what he thinks a better security, frequently gets a worse. If the obligee in a bond sues the obligor, and obtains judgment, the obligor dies intestate; the obligee has lost the benefit of his bond, and must take only half the land by elegit. — The replevin bond was not forfeited before the bankruptcy, so that Bradbury is not discharged: he and the sureties may be sued; for, till the return awarded, there was no forfeiture of the bond; and the landlord still has his remedy against the sheriff by scire facias, or by action, for taking insufficient sureties. — The gentlemen on the other side have not cited a single case to shew that the landlord has a lien, [*] nor any thing even analogous to it, — only a mere ipse dixit, that he had a lien. — Upon the whole, the landlord is not entitled to any relief in a court of equity.

[ *431 ]

Mr. Kenyon (in reply.) — The gentlemen on the other side producing no precedent, there is no great need for a precedent on ours. By the writ, the landlord is to be put in perfect security. — All the remedies are accumulative for his benefit. If the course of the law will give a remedy, Mr. Madocks says he cannot come here; but this is the case where the tenant is a bankrupt and has no goods, the pledges are also insolvent, and the sheriff is not liable for taking insufficient pledges, because, when taken, they were solvent. The judgment of the Court is, that the sheriff cause the goods distrained to be restored in specie. The only argument which is made use of arises from the case of the King v. Cotton. Your Lordships will consider that was between the King and the subject. The King has a right, in preference to the subject distraining; but in the case of goods distrained, they could not be taken under an execution. Here we are contending on the same ground as if it were with the tenant himself. If the goods remained in specie, they must be returned; if not, the money for which they sold, must be paid over. — The assignees are liable to all the equity to which the bankrupt would be liable. The money is a deposit in their hands for the person who would have had a right to the goods, if they continued in specie. As to the goods being eloigned by act of law, the law stands indifferent between the parties. — I do not find myself bound to contradict the King v. Cotton: that case went on the prerogative process.

Next day, Lord Commissioner Ashhurst ordered the case to be spoken to again when the Court was full, and particularly, whether after the retorno habendo, and the goods returned, they could be sold under the statute; at common law (he said) the sheriff could only keep, not sell them. A distrainer has no property in the goods, they are only in the custody of the law for his security.

[*] This cause came on again in Trinity term, before all the Lords Commissioners, according to order.

[ *432 ]

Mr. Kenyon (for the plaintiff.) — The goods have gotten into other hands by the replevin, but are subject to Mr. Bradyll's right. If they had remained in the hands of the bankrupt, they would have been subject to the retorno habendo, — and, being in the hands of the assignees, they are clothed with the same equity as before, and the money produced by the sale is subject to the plaintiff's claim. A question was thrown out as to the right of the parties after the retorno habendo, and whether the sheriff could sell. As the law which gave the return is a remedial law, the fair exposition is, that when there is judgment for a return 1785.

BRADYLL
against
BALL.

return, it shall be considered as subject to all the rights which operated before, and must stand in the same situation as before the replevin.

Mr. Madocks and Mr. Arden (for the defendants) contended, that the plaintiff's lien only continued till the goods were delivered by the replevin; and the statute only giving a sale if the goods are not replevied, the sheriff cannot sell in any other case:—that upon elongata returned, the statute gave a remedy against the other effects of the tenant, and that, notwithstanding the acts were remedial, and favourable to landlords, they did not vary the nature of his property. The King v. Cotton, they observed, proceeded on other grounds, than merely that of prerogative. There being in this case, no contract, there could be no quitable lien arising from contract; and the legal lien being gone by the replevin, the plaintiffs had no lien on the goods, but must seek the other remedies.

Lord Loughborough, Lord Commissioner. — This is an application to a court of equity, on the ground of a lien upon these goods in the hands of the assignees. The difficulty of deciding this case is increased by that of the King v. Cotton. When the goods are replevied, they are delivered over to abide the event of the suit. If they came afterwards into the hands of persons in privity with the tenant, they would be liable upon the return, &c. If sold, an action for money had and received. [*] would lie for the money. If this were not the case, the law would be very defective:—but the persons who had received money for them, would certainly be liable in an action for money had and received. — If the assignees are liable in equity, the value being settled, they must be so at law, the ground will be the same to recover there.

Therefore ordered the bill to be retained, and an action to be brought for money had and received to plaintiff's use, against the assignees, the defendants to admit that they sold the goods taken in distress to an amount exceeding the rent.

An action was accordingly brought by the plaintiff against Jones the original assignee of Bradbury, and Heathfield and Jefferies the assignees of Ball, the other assignee of Bradbury, and tried the ensuing sittings in the King's Bench, when a verdict was found for the plaintiff, subject to a case reserved for the opinion of the Court. — The case was argued in Trinity term, when, the reporter is informed, Lord Mansfield, Mr. Justice Willes, and Mr. Justice Buller, threw out an opinion against the plaintiff's claim; but Mr. Justice Ashhurst seeming doubtful, Mr. Justice Buller said that there must be a nonsuit, as the action was brought against the parties jointly, who had not received at the same time. A nonsuit was accordingly entered. — Upon an attachment being taken out for the costs of the nonsuit, the plaintiff petitioned the Lord Chancellor, that the defendants might be restrained from calling upon him for them, the action having been brought under the authority, and by direction of this Court. Lord Chancellor ordered the money to be brought into court, to abide the event of the cause. — Another action was brought, and being tried at the sittings after Trinity term, a verdict for the plaintiff was again found, subject to a case reserved for the opinion of the Court. That case was argued last term, and the Court of King's Bench were unanimously of opinion, that the plaintiff had no lien upon the goods, and ordered another nonsuit.

The cause came on now, 29th January, on the equity reserved. The counsel for the plaintiff made a slight application to have it re-heard; but this not being insisted upon, the bill was ordered to be dismissed; which drew on a question as to costs, particularly the costs of the nonsuit, which were at length ordered to be [*] paid out of the money paid into court for the purpose. So that finally, the bill was Dismissed with costs at law; but without costs in equity.

[ *433 ]

[ *434 ]

1785.

In the Matter of HASSENCLEVER, a Bankrupt.

PERS had been delivered out several years ago, for the purpose of being examined; and some time since an order had been obtained that they should be restored. Application had been made for return and refused. The order had been served personally, but no execution of the order had been served or sued out.—Mr. Cator moved the last day of the term, for a sequestration nisi, and the same was granted as of course.

Sequestration nisi granted for not returning papers according to order.

CATOR against BURKE, and others. [9 March.]

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 211.)

DEFENDANTS Edmund and Richard Burke, had entered into a bond of 500*l.* to the other defendant Hargrave, for securing 250*l.* on the 5th September, 1777, (together with other bonds, amounting to 1050*l.*) and had taken from him a counter-bond, for securing the said Hargrave 100*l.* on his own promissory note, and deposited defendant Burke's bond with plaintiff, as a security. The 100*l.* not being paid, the plaintiff filed this bill, praying the defendants Burkes might pay to the plaintiff, what should be found due on account of the 100*l.* interest, out of the money secured by their bond. The bond appeared to be given for the purpose of satisfying creditors of William Burke, a relation of the defendants Burkes, between whom and Hargrave, there was matter of account, on which William Burke was indebted; and that there was also a matter of account outstanding between Edmund Burke, and the defendant Hargrave.

Mr. Madocks and Mr. Hollist, for the plaintiff, argued (upon Lord Loughborough's expressing a doubt what remedy the plaintiff could obtain in equity,) That the relief was by preventing the [*] defendants from setting up the counter-bond, as a defence against any action which might be brought against them at law, in the name of Hargrave. That the bond here, being lent for the purpose of raising money, and a counter-bond taken, was a fraud, and the holder of the counter-bond ought to be protected against the counter-bond so taken being set up as a defence.

Mr. Hollist cited the case of Lord Shelburne v. Tierney †, in the Exchequer, Before Lords Commissioners Loughborough, Ashurst, and Hotham, 27th June, 1783.

Before Lord Thurlow, Lincoln's Inn Hall, 9th March, 1785.

B. entered into bonds to H. and took a counter-bond. H. deposits B.'s bond with C. as a security. Bill filed by C. against B. and H. that B. might pay him out of the debt to H. dismissed.

[ *435 ]

The plaintiff 12th May, 1769, executed to Laughlin Maclean, three bonds for 5000*l.* payable with interest three months after date; Maclean assigned these to the Panchauds at Paris, and they to defendant Tierney. In Hilary Term, 1771, he brought his action against plaintiff, in the name of Maclean. In Easter following plaintiff filed his bill against Tierney, Maclean, and the Panchauds, for an injunction to stay the proceedings in the action, and therein stated, that the bonds were executed by plaintiff, as caution bonds, to enable Maclean to raise money for himself, and that counter-bonds of indemnity were executed by Maclean to the plaintiff. That Maclean had sold them without consideration to the Panchauds, and they to Tierney, who now at law, pretending that money was paid for the bonds, or that they were taken in payment of debts; whereas the bill charged, if there were any such debts, that they were illegal stock-jobbing transactions—that the assignments were antedated with a fraudulent view, they having been made after the Panchauds failed, and therefore invalid. An injunction was obtained, and in May, 1772, Tierney put in his answer, admitting the same.

1785.

CATOR
against BURKE, &c.

chequer, where, in the action at law, Lord Shelburne pleaded the counter-bond, and the plaintiff filed a bill to restrain him from setting it up: Lord Shelburne submitted.

Lord Loughborough. — Then the Court did not decree that he should not set up the counter-bond.

Mr. Kenyon, (for defendants Burkes). — Whoever takes a security, which, at law, is unassignable, must take it subject to every defence which can be made against it.

[ *436 ]

Mr. Arden, (for defendant Hargrave). — The question for your Lordships to decide is, whether the holder of the bond, using it with the consent of the obligor, the obligor can contend at [*] law, to set off against it, as an unassignable security. — An unassignable security at law, if assigned by the consent of the obligor will be held, in equity, to be the same as an assignable security.

Lord Loughborough. — Suppose the bond had been paid off, but had continued in Cator's hands, the argument will go to this, that Burke could not set off the payment, unless indorsed upon the bond. It is turning an unassignable into an assignable security. It is a very different case from a bond given to be deposited with Cator. The whole question is between the co-defendants. The bond can never be considered in any other light, than as an unassignable security; to consider it otherwise, would bring all the causes on bonds in Westminster-hall, into this Court. The plaintiff has mistaken both the law and equity; for first, he has supposed that the holder of a bond might, where there was no discovery to be made, come hither, and have a different relief from what he could have at law; and secondly, that if there was fraud in giving the counter-bond, it could not be made use of at law. When this bill is dismissed with costs, you may bring your action in the name of Hargrave. If this bill would lie by the simple act of assigning the bond, a suit in equity might be brought on every bond that is given.

Ordered the bill to be dismissed with costs.

Mr. Hollist prayed that the bond, assignment, and other evidence, might be entered as read.

Lord Loughborough. — If you had brought your bill on a bond, and there had been no demurrer, the bill must nevertheless have been dismissed. I see no reason therefore for the evidence being entered as read. — But Mr. Hollist pressing the matter, that in case of an appeal, no evidence could be read above, which was not read here, and desiring that the evidence might either be entered as read, or the request, and refusal by the Court be taken notice of. It was entered as read. — It came on now before Lord Thurlow, upon a re-hearing when his Lordship was of opinion that a special purpose appearing for the bond to Hargrave, and that it was not to give a general credit, the plaintiff was not entitled to the remedy prayed, and therefore affirmed the Lord Commissioner's order of dismissal.

the bonds and counter-bonds and the assignment to the Panchauds, but denying any knowledge of the consideration, admitting also the assignment to himself, and stating it to be in consideration of a debt due to him from the Panchauds, and that they were delivered to him previous to their failure, though formally assigned afterwards: denying the stock-jobbing transactions, and giving a schedule of the account between the Panchauds and himself. The Panchauds also put in their answers, agreeing in the facts with that of Tierney, and stating the assignment from Maclean to them to be for a fair debt. On the 26th of May, defendant Tierney obtained an order to dissolve the injunction upon the coming in of the answers, unless cause; and exceptions having been taken to the answer, and over-ruled, the injunction 23d June, 1772, was dissolved on the merits.

1785.

[*] HUX[s]TEP against BROOMAN. [9th March.]

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 305.)

[ *437. ]

Lincoln's Inn
Hall.Devise of "all
I am worth," will pass real estate. (1)

THIS was a bill for an account of the real and personal estate of the testator, under a most singular will. "Feversham, November, 1783, "This being my last will and testament, I give and bequeath to Mary, "daughter of Mary Huxtep, and likewise to the son and daughter of " Susan Topley, all the overplus of my money; and likewise beg of my "executor, that he will pay into the hands to the above children's "friends, all the money that is due to me on settling my father's account — Friday — I give and bequeath to them all I am worth, except 20*l.* which I give to my executor Mr. Thomas Brooman: signed. " Edward Brooman, Witness William Dean, Elizabeth Roots, (and underneath, about the middle of the paper,) Sarah Coslon." — The word worth, was nearly obliterated, and the whole will, bore manifest proof of the testator's being very illiterate. — The testator was entitled to a share, with his brothers, in a gavel-kind estate, which had lately descended by the death of his father; and the only question was, whether this will passed the real estate.

Mr. Mansfield (for the plaintiff,) barely said, all he is worth, must pass the real as well as personal estate.

Mr. Madocks and Mr. Harvey, (for the defendants), insisted that here being no expression, in the will, which pointed at the real estate, only the personalty could pass; no determined case has come up to the present. They are mostly accompanied with the circumstance of there being introductory words in the will, which shew that the testator intended to dispose of his whole property. — In Bowman v. Milbank, 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 208. All to my mother, was held not to pass lands. [1 Lev. 130. S. C. cited 2 Ventr. 286.]

Lord Chancellor observed, that that was the case of a nuncupative will, and thinking it clear, that the terms all I am worth, without other words to controll them, must pass real as well as personal estate, decreed for the plaintiff. (2)

(1) See per Lord Chancellor in Thurston v. Attorney General, 1 Vernon, 341. Cliffe v. Gibbons, 2 Ld. Raym. 1324. Barnes v. Patch, 8 Ves. 604. 607. Woollam v. Kenworthy, 9 Ves. 137, &c. et cit.

(2) The Decree directed an account of the rents and profits, and that the same should be paid into the Bank to the account of the plaintiffs, the infants; and on the 28th November 1786, upon the suggestion that the real estate would be exhausted by creditors, and that therefore the plaintiffs could derive no benefit from prosecuting their claim, it was ordered, that the Master should make a separate report of the personal estate, debts, and the costs. — Reg. Lib. 1786. A. fol. 30.

[*] HALL against SMITH.

(No Entry.)

[ *438 ]

[S. C. 2 Dick.
649.]Lincoln's Inn
Hall.

THIS was a plea to a bill of revivor, in a case where nothing remained but the matter of costs, which had been ordered to be paid into the Bank, [which had been taxed (1), and] ordered to be paid into the bank, overruled. (1)

(1) See White v. Hayward, 2 Ves. 461. and 1 Dick. 173. Kemp v. Mackrell, 2 Ves. 579, 580. and Mr. Beames' Elem. Pleas in Equity, 297. with the references: to which add Jenour v. Jenour, 10 Ves. 572., taken in connection with what Sir W. Grant, M. R., says in Lowten v. Mayor of Colchester, 2 Merivale, 116, &c. And note that Thome v. Pitt, remarked upon by Mr. Beames (in his note) as being contrd, was overruled by White v. Hayward, supra cit. Vide 2 Meriv. 115, 116.

1785.

HALL
against
SMITH.

Bank, and being unpaid at the time of the death of the party, the question was, whether a bill of revivor would lie against the representative. — In support of the plea, it was argued that where the party who is to pay costs dies, it is a personal debt, and dies with him, unless the costs are ordered to come out of a particular fund: although, where the party who is to receive the costs dies, his representative shall have his remedy against the party decreed to pay. — For the plaintiff it was objected, that this doctrine only held where the costs were not taxed, but that as soon as the costs were liquidated, the debt was become certain, and it was proper matter for a bill of revivor and supplement, as this in truth was, it praying an account and payment out of assets. — The cases cited at the bar, were White v. Hayward, 2 Vesey, 461. Johnson v. Peck, 2 Vesey, 465. Kemp v. Mackrel, 2 Vesey, 579; and 3 Atk. 812. Blower v. Morrets, 3 Atk. 772. — To these the register added, from a manuscript book, the case of Edgill v. Brown, (2) to the same effect.

Lord Chancellor thought the costs having been taxed, (3) this case was not within the general rule, and made it certainly matter of revivor: if they had not been taxed he might have laid hold of the circumstance of their having been ordered to be paid into the Bank as taking the case out of the rule: and therefore overruled the plea.

(2) Edgill v. Brown, 1 Dick. 62. Quod vide.

(3) See note (1) in the preceding page.

[*] EASTER TERM,

[ *439 ]

25 Geo. 3. 1785.

ATTORNEY GENERAL against COWPER.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 793. b.)

Trustees were directed to be inhabitants of B. An information to remove them, because not inhabitants, must shew there were proper persons in B. to be trustees.

THIS was an information for the purpose of removing trustees of a charity-school at Blencowe, in the county of Nottingham. — The founder had devised lands, after the decease of his wife, to trustees, for the purpose of supporting the school, and had directed that so often as his said trustees should be reduced to two, such two survivors should nominate a certain number of persons, being inhabitants of Great or Little Blencowe. The objection taken to the trustees was, that they were not inhabitants of either of the Blencowes.

Mr. Attorney General, in support of the information, cited a case of the Attorney General v. France, before Mr. Baron Eyre, sitting for Lord Chancellor, 1780, where there was a similar devise, and said that Mr. Baron Eyre thought the circumstance of inhabitancy so material, that he removed the trustees on that ground only.

Lord Chancellor said, he could not but doubt that case to have been determined upon this ground. He conceived there must have been some special ground which did not now appear: but in this case there should have been evidence to shew that there were proper persons in Blencowe to be trustees, and the trustees neglected to elect them.

Information dismissed, with 40s. costs. (1)

(1) "The cause having been heard on bill and answer." R. L.

[*] SHIRLEY (2) against STRATTON.

1785.

[ *440 ]

THIS was a bill for the specific performance of an agreement for the purchase of an estate in marsh-land, at Barking, in Essex, and for payment of a sum of 1000*l.* the purchase-money. The defence was, that the estate was represented to the defendant as clearing a neat value of 90*l.* per annum, and no notice was taken to him of the necessary repair of a wall to protect the estate from the river Thames, which would be an outgoing of 50*l.* per annum. And it appearing, upon evidence, that there had been an industrious concealment of the circumstance of the wall, during the treaty, Lord Chancellor dismissed the bill (2), but without costs.

(1) The Editor could not find any entry of this case in Reg. Lib. A very common mistake has prevailed that this is the same cause which is entered as Shirley v. E. Ferrers, R. L. 1784. B. fol. 415. See (inter alia) Josiah Brown's Abr. Ca. Eq. 181. That suit is of a totally different nature.

(2) The owner of the estate (the same plaintiff) afterwards sold the estate again to another gentleman of the name of Davis, under a like concealment of the expences of the wall. That gentleman's known object was to be a freeholder of Essex, and the plaintiff represented the estate to be in that county. Some time after the purchase, Mr. Davis ascertained it was in the county of Kent, by his having been chosen churchwarden of Greenwich. He had therefore to cross the Thames on all parochial occasions, besides the deprivation of the main inducement to his purchase. — Note particularly that Lord Redesdale's MSS. expressly state that "the Court refused to confirm the contract," stating the suit as a cause and cross cause, "Shirley v. Davis," and "Davis v. Shirley." The suit was in the Exchequer, and Lord Eldon C. seems to have been always under an impression, contrary to Lord Redesdale's note, that the Court compelled the purchaser to take the estate. See in Drewe v. Hanson, 6 Ves. 678, &c. &c. The Court of Exchequer, however, seems relieved by Lord Redesdale's note from the opprobrium, and Lord Eldon will be gratified if he has been under a mistake as to the fact. (A)

Many of the determinations certainly have obliged purchasers to take up with subjects quite contrary to their main object; having a decree for what has been called a compensation. The principles of justice and good sense cannot be obscured for ever, by any technicalities. See in Drewe v. Hanson, 6 Ves. 675, &c. &c. where Lord Eldon most ably comments on almost all the previous cases. See also Halsey v. Grant, 13 Ves. 73, &c. (before Lord Erskine C.) and the cases there cited.

The profession will find this subject, and the main decisions to the present time, most clearly stated in Mr. Sugden's very valuable and perspicuous work, from p. 243. (5th ed.) onwards; more especially 261, et seq.

The case mentioned by Mr. Sugden, p. 262., as decided by Lord Talbot, who dismissed the bill of a vendor, where otherwise the purchaser would have been obliged to take a house quite unsuitable to his known object, was a sound determination; which can never be said of those mentioned with due reprehension by Lord Eldon C., 6 Ves. 678., of the decree that the wharfinger should take the house without his wharf; or that Lord Stanhope should take an estate subject to tithes, where his contract was to have it tithe free.

(A) The Editor searched the various entries in the Court of Exchequer, for the actual result of the causes of Shirley v. Davis, &c. for a period of 12 years. There is no entry whatever of them in the Kalendar of Decrees (kept at the office in the Temple); but from the Minute Book (kept at Westminster), it appears that this cause came on to be heard on the 24th and 28th January, 1788, when much evidence was read on each side; and that at length the Court directed the following issue to be tried by a special jury of the county of Middlesex: "Whether the lands in question, purchased by the defendant of the plaintiff for the sum of 2000*l.* on the 4th of October, 1786, were, at the time of the sale thereof, worth the said sum of 2000*l.* with liberty to the jury to inquire on the postea any other value, or any special matter which they shall find? The issue" to be settled by the D. R. if the parties differ, &c. and costs and further directions reserved. The Editor then carefully investigated the Minute Book for above a period of 10 years after this decree, without finding a single further trace of the cause; so that it is probable the purchaser was not held to such a contract. It appears from the Minute Book that both Lord Eldon and Lord Redesdale were of counsel for Mr. Davis the defendant, and that Lord Redesdale proposed to read, at the hearing, the depositions in the principal cause of Shirley v. Stratton, which was objected to by Mr. Burton for the plaintiff; and that the objection was allowed.

Specific performance not decreed where there is a concealment on the part of the vendor. (2) 1785.

NIGHTINGALE against LAWSON. [4 May.]

(Reg. Lib. 1784. B. fol. 763.)

Tenant for life renews and pays fines, — what proportion he shall bear with the remainder-man, &c. (1)
Compound interest allowed by the Court on sums paid by the tenant for life on re-novels.

[ *441 ]

THIS bill was filed against the defendant, Isabella Lawson, as executrix of Elizabeth Barnard, who was also executrix of her late husband Ernest Barnard, for an account of the personal estate of Ernest Barnard. The defendant in her answer insisted on being allowed sums of money, paid by Mrs. Barnard during her widowhood to the city of London, for fines and expences of the renewals of leases of the Brawn's Head Tavern, and another house in Bond-street, which had been made the subject of a settlement on her marriage with her late husband, and also of the will of the said Ernest Barnard, of the 19th May, 1750, by which he gave to his said wife, all the residue of his estate (in which these houses were included) during her widowhood, but after her decease, or marriage, gave the same to the plaintiffs, who were her brothers.

The cause had been heard before the late Sir Thomas Sewel, and by him referred to the Master, who had reported a certain sum. Exceptions had been taken, and it had come on upon a re-hearing, the 8th of May, 1784, when the Lord Chancellor referred it to the Master, to state the circumstances, [*] and expence of the several renewals.— These appeared upon the Master's report to be as follows:—The original lease was for the term of ninety-nine years, which would expire in 1766. At the death of Ernest Barnard, fifteen years were unexpired. On the 10th of December, 1754, Mrs. Barnard agreed with the committee of city-lands for a lease for twenty-eight years, from Lady-day, 1766, in order to make up her term forty years, from Lady-day, 1754. For this renewal, she paid 210*l.* for the Brawn's Head (being three years' rent, deducting a ground-rent) with interest upon that sum for three years, at the rate of 5*l. per cent.* and also 2*s.* yearly, till the commencement of the term of twenty-eight years, as an acknowledgment of the right of the City, also a ground-rent of 10*s. per annum*, during the term of twenty-eight years; and for the other house she was to pay a fine of 131*l.* 5*s.* being also three years' improved rent, after deducting a ground-rent, with the like interest, and a like rent of 2*s.* and the leases were to be renewable every fourteen years, for ever, upon payment of a fine of one year's improved rent.— Accordingly, on the 30th of April, 1755, Mrs. Barnard paid into the chamber of London the following sums:

	l.	s.	d.
For the Brawn's Head ,	210	0	0
Three years' interest,	31	10	0
Fine for the other house,	131	5	0
For three years' interest,	19	13	9
For expences of the leases,	26	2	0
	418	10	9

(1) See the note to Pickering v. Fowles, ante, 198, 199. The Court has for a great length of time superseded the old mode of contribution, which made the tenant for life indiscriminately pay one-third of the expences, without reference to his actual enjoyment. The latter alone is now the criterion. See in the judgment, postea, Stone v. Threl. 2 vol. 248. White v. White, 9 Vcs. 554. 556, 557. 559. Allan v. Backhouse, 2 Vcs. & Beames, 65. and Lord Montfort v. Cadogan, 17 Vcs. 495.

On the 12th of March, 1768, she again renewed the leases for a further term of fourteen years, in order to complete her term of forty years. — She then paid

1785 NIGHTINGALE
against LAWSON.

	l.	s.	d.
For the Brawn's Head ,	70	0	0
For the other house,	48	15	0
For expences,	25	10	0
	139	5	0

[*] Eleanor Barnard died the 2d of February, 1775, which was nine years after the commencement of the renewed term, and by her will gave all her personal estate to the defendant, and appointed her sole executrix. — The Master in his report proceeded to value the advanced payments, and stated that twelve years of the original term being to come, and Mrs. Barnard having renewed for a term of twenty-eight years, to commence at the expiration of the first term, at the expence of 418*l.* 10*s.* 9*d.* and also incurred an increased rent of 2*s.* a-year, and the said sum having been paid twelve years before the commencement of the renewed lease: he had calculated that that sum, with interest upon it, at the rate of 5*l.* per cent. would have amounted to 669*l.* 12*s.* 9*d.* and the increased rent of 2*s.* per annum, would have amounted to 2*l.* 8*s.* 0*d.* But as Eleanor Barnard enjoyed the benefit of the renewed lease near nine years, he had apportioned the same between her, as tenant for life, and the plaintiff, as remainder-man; and found the plaintiff's proportion of the 669*l.* 12*s.* 9*d.* to be 457*l.* 7*s.* 9*d.* and of the 2*l.* 8*s.* 0*d.* to be 1*l.* 12*s.* 10*d.* which he conceived ought to be allowed, with simple interest, at least, at the rate of 5*l.* per cent. from the time of the commencement of the renewed term, but submitted to the Court, whether she should not be allowed compound interest. And with respect to the renewal in 1768; from which Eleanor Barnard never received any benefit, he conceived she ought to be allowed the whole thereof, with simple interest, at least; and submitted, whether compound interest ought not likewise to be allowed upon that — The cause now came on for further directions upon the Master's report.

[ *442 ]

Mr. Madocks and Mr. Ainge (for the plaintiffs) contended, that only simple interest could in any case be allowed; that the clearest way would be to calculate the whole expence as a charge, and then the tenant for life must keep down the interest. The Master has calculated the whole, upon the ground of making the tenant for life pay one third, and the remainder-man two, and he has given five per cent. interest, which is contrary to the common rule of the court. — They referred to the cases of Lock and Lock, 2 Vern. 666. Verney and Verney (2), 1 Vesey, 428.

[*] Mr. Scott (on the other side) contended, she was entitled to compound interest; she was every year another year's interest out of pocket, upon a bargain which she was not obliged to make. It would be difficult to prove, that she was compellable to make any renewal; of course what proportion she ought to pay of any when made. — But she certainly should be allowed compound interest, for all public bodies, such as that with which she treated, calculate their fines so as to pay compound interest.

[ *443 ]

Lord Chancellor. — The cases in which the nature of the estate, or

(2) The supposed rule, derived from Verney v. Verney, has been long superseded. Vide note (1) antea, and 9 Ves. 555, 556. 559, &c.

1785.

NIGHTINGALE
against LAWSON.

the will of the testator compels a renewal, appear to me not to apply to the present. Where there is no such custom or direction, it is in the discretion of the tenant for life to renew or not; but if he renews, the law will not permit him to renew for his own use, but will make him a trustee for the remainder-man: then upon what terms shall the remainder-man be entitled to it (3)? As to the idea that it is to be upon the payment of two-thirds, or any other proportion, that cannot be the rule; for if there were twenty or thirty years of the existing lease to run, it cannot be thought for the benefit of the tenant for life to renew. (4) — In this case, in 1754, when twelve years were to come, she renewed for twenty-eight. She enjoyed it nine years after the expiration of the twelve; leaving nineteen years of the twenty-eight. The Master ought to take the sum paid by her for the renewal of the lease, as the value of the term purchased, that is (5) of the term of twenty-eight years, to commence at the expiration of twelve years. He should then consider the value of the term of nine years after the existing term, and what the term of nineteen years after the existing term, and the nine years was worth, and the latter is the proportion to be paid by the remainder-man. — Then as to the kind of interest to be allowed. — Simple interest will not be a satisfaction, as she laid out her money totally; and the value of the lease was calculated upon the ground of compound interest. — Compound interest must therefore be computed upon the proportional value of the nineteen years' term to the whole expence of renewal. Then as to the rate of interest; in computing compound interest, you go upon the idea that the interest is paid upon the exact day, and immediately laid out; but as this is impossible, it will be sufficient to compute [*] compound interest at 4 per cent. — But this is only to be paid till her death, for after that, her executors had the demand upon the remainder-man; and it becomes a common debt, and must carry simple interest only. — With respect to the second renewal, her executors are entitled to the whole of the expences, and the rule of interest must be the same. (6) This seems to be the justice of the case: for as, on the one hand, the tenant for life cannot renew for his own benefit; so on the other, the remainder-man shall not have the renewal at her expence. †

[ *444 ]

† In Maxwell v. Ashe (7), Nov. 6, 1752. An annuity for life was given out of leasehold, and the annuitant was held not to be bound to contribute to the expence of the renewal. — See also the case of Stone v. Theed, v. 2. p. 245.

(3) See Pickering v. Vowles, antea, 197, 198, 199, and the several notes.

(4) See note (1) antea.

(5) See 1 Cox, Rep. 181.; but the erratum was only in the first edition.

(6) " His Lordship doth order that the said Master do enquire what the said 19 years of such term was worth, at the rate she paid for the same on the 30th day of April, 1755; and on the sum so found, it is ordered, that the said Master do compute compound interest, after the rate of 4l. per cent. per annum, till the death of the said Eleanor Barnard. And upon the sum thereby produced, it is further ordered, that the said Master do compute simple interest after the like rate. And it is ordered that the said Master do compute [A] interest, after the rate of 4l. per cent. per annum, on the said sum of 139l. 5s. paid for the second renewed term of 14 years, from the 12th day of March, 1768, the time the same was paid, to the 2d day of February, 1775. And on the sum so produced, it is further ordered, that the said Master do compute simple interest after the like rate." R. L.

(7) See this case of Maxwell v. Ashe fully stated by Sir W. Grant, M. R., from the Registrar's Book, in Moode v. Matthews, 7 Ves. 184, 185. and see Moody v. Matthews, S. P. 7 Ves. 174 to 186

[A] The word [compound] is omitted in R. L., but it seems through a mere clerical mistake. The Lord Chancellor says above, "the rule of interest must be the same as to this second sum;" and the context of the order shews the omission to be casual.

1785.

ATTORNEY GENERAL against the Bishop of CHESTER. [7 May.]

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 388. b.)

THE late Archbishop Secker, among many charitable legacies, gave 1000*l.* 3 per cent. Bank annuities, to his trustees, the defendant, and the late Dr. Stinton, for the purpose of establishing a Bishop in His Majesty's dominions in America; he also gave 1000*l.* to be laid out upon repairing parsonage houses, [to be chosen by the defendant and Dr. Stinton] and ordered, that if any charity to which he had given a legacy should no longer subsist (1), such legacy should fall into the residue.

Mr. Attorney General insisted, that a gift of money to be laid out in building upon land already in mortmain, is good in law; and cited for that purpose, the cases of † Brodie v. the Duke of Chandos, and the ‡ Attorney General v. Hutchinson.

Mr. Mans-

Legacy towards establishing a Bishop in America, not void, though none as yet appointed.

Legacy to repair parsonage houses is good, and the selection of objects to be in the Master, upon proposals laid before him. (2)

† Brodie v. Duke of Chandos, 14th December, 1773. — Ann Thistlethwaite being possessed of a considerable personal estate, by will dated 23d September, 1740, gave to trustees all her ready money, &c. (subject to her debts) to lay out and expend the same in the erecting and new building of a neat parsonage-house, which her will was, should be erected at the upper end of the garden belonging to the said parsonage house, to be from time to time, had, occupied, and enjoyed, by the then present and other future incumbents; and made Robert Thistlethwaite her nephew, sole executor. The testatrix died without revoking the will, leaving the said Robert Thistlethwaite and his brother next of kin. The Honourable Stephen Fox becoming seised of the perpetual advowson of the living, and having presented the plaintiff thereto, he filed a bill against the defendants the representatives of the said Robert Thistlethwaite, and the then next of kin, (Robert and his brother being both dead) to recover 600*l.*, or the residue of the personal estate of Ann Thistlethwaite, for the purpose of building the house. — The cause was heard before Lord Bathurst, 14th December, 1773, and the question being whether this was within the meaning of the statute of Mortmain. — Lord Chancellor, 25th January, 1774, pronounced his decree in favour of the charity, no land being to be purchased. The account of the personal estate being waived, he ordered the 600*l.* to be paid with interest for that purpose, and all the parties to have their costs out of the fund.

‡ Attorney General v. Hutchinson [24th May, 1775]. — Mary Glover, by will dated 24th September, 1761, directed that 1500*l.* should be forthwith paid and laid out, under the direction of the Minister and Churchwardens of Royston for the time being, for the purpose of erecting and building a free-school at Royston, for 12 poor boys and 12 poor girls of the said parish; and she directed, that as soon as the school should be built, 2000*l.* should be placed out at interest, and the dividends from time to time paid to the Minister and Churchwardens, for ever, for the purposes following, i. e. 30*l.* per annum, part thereof, she directed should be paid for a schoolmaster, for teaching the said boys to read and write, and 30*l.* per annum to a school-mistress, to teach and instruct the said girls, in reading, writing, and plain-work; to continue until they should be of proper age to be put out apprentices; and the surplus of the interest of the 2000*l.* she willed and directed should be applied in and about the repairs of the said free-school, &c. and appointed the defendants executors. Upon a bill being filed, the defendants contended, that the testatrix having given the 1500*l.* to be laid out in building a school, and the 2000*l.* being dependent upon it, the whole was void; and the Lord Chancellor (Bathurst)

[Ambler, 751.]

(1) The words in B. L. are, "should no longer subsist at the time of his decease, or should have been so grossly perverted that they should think giving any thing, or so much, to it improper, then they should give what he had appointed for it, or such part of what they should approve, or such as they should please, to any other charity." Reg. Lib.

(2) See also Attorney General v. Parsons, 8 Ves. 186. Lord Eldon C. approved of the principal case, ibid. 191. And see there his Lordship's observations that, as to a bequest to erect or to build a school, &c. imply non primâ facie, that land is to be bought for the purpose. See also 3 Ves. 645, 646. and 4 Ves. 431.

1785.

ATTORNEY GENERAL
against
The BISHOP of CHESTER.

Mr. Mansfield, for the Bishop of Chester, did not controvert this, but contended, the selection of the objects belonged, since the death of Doctor Stinton, to the bishop of Chester alone. As to the other legacy, there being no bishop in America, or the least likelihood of there ever being one, that is a void legacy, and falls into the residue.

But Lord Chancellor said, the money must remain in Court, till it shall be seen whether any such appointment shall take place. With re-26th May, 1775, dismissed the information as to the 1500*l.* for building the school: The testatrix not having pointed by the will to the land which the parish had, and the Chancellor thinking there was no ground to presume she meant it; and if the school which there was already, was given by the lord of the manor, it was not to be converted to other purposes.

With respect to the point in the cases cited, some other cases have been decided which may be worthy the reader's notice.

[Ambl. p. 614.
Reversed on appeal by Lord
C. Northington,
2 Eden, 207.]

Attorney General v. Tyndall, 6th March, 1764. — Mary Parker, by will taking notice that she stood possessed of leasehold premises, devised all and singular her lands and tenements to trustees, to sell the same, and willed that part of the money should be laid out in the purchase of a competent piece of ground for building an alms-house, and directed that not more than 1400*l.* be laid out therein, and ordered the residue of her personal property should be laid out in the purchase of lands, &c. and the rents to be paid to twenty persons, who should be admitted into the alms-houses.

10th December, 1759, Sir Thomas Clarke declared the devise of the freehold and leasehold estate void.

24th June, 1761, On further directions, his Honor declared, in case the trustees could obtain a gift of a competent piece of ground, the charity would be entitled to have the leasehold and personal estate so marshalled as to throw the debts and legacies on the leasehold, in order to have the mere personal estate applied to the charity.

But on appeal, this decree was reversed by Lord Henley (3), 11th June, 1763, and the personal estate ordered to be distributed among the next of kin.

Pelham v. Anderson (4), 11th December, 1764. — Testator directed his executors should build and erect an hospital, for which purpose he charged his personal estate with 2000*l.* Residue to same uses as real estate. — The bequest of 2000*l.* was declared void by the statute of Mortmain.

Attorney General v. Bishop of Oxford (5), and others, 13th July, 1786. — Thomas Sims, the testator, by his will, after devising his freehold and leasehold estates therein-mentioned, and charging the same with the payment of certain annuities in manner therein-mentioned, bequeathed and disposed of his personal estate in the words following, (that is to say,) "I give and bequeath to my executors the sum of 100*l.* each, for their trouble in executing my will; and all the rest and residue of my personal estate, I give and bequeath to them, in trust, to apply the same to build a church at Wheatley where the chapel now is, in such manner as I shall hereafter direct, or for want of such direction, as my executors shall think best."

The information prayed a general account and directions touching the plan and execution of the charitable bequest given by the testator.

The Bishop of Oxford, as patron and parson of Cuddesdon, by his answer, opposed the erection of a new church unless the surplus of the residue could be applied towards an augmentation of the endowment of the chapelry annexed: The chaplain and chapel-warden answered to the same effect, and proposed repairing the old chapel, and, with the surplus, augmenting the salary of the chaplain, &c.

The next of kin insisted, that a new church or chapel must be built, and the surplus, if any, divided among them. — As to the repairing, or augmenting the salary of the chaplain, &c. they opposed that plan, insisting, that the intention of the testator must be implicitly followed; in case the bishop did not allow of a new chapel, that the bequest should be void, and the money divided.

Sir Lloyd Kenyon, Master of the Rolls, sitting for Lord Chancellor, observed, that if the bishop objected, he could not interfere in the matter: As to repairing, &c. he could not do that. — The intention must be implicitly followed, or nothing could be done.

However, he referred it to the Master to take an account, &c., and to make a special report as to the plan of erecting a new chapel, and the expences attending it; and also with respect to the bishop's assent for that purpose.

(3) Vide 2 Eden, Ca. Ch. 207. And see 6 Ves. 408. and 8 Ves. 191.

(4) 2 Eden, Ca. Ch. 296. S. C. and see 8 Ves. 191.

(5) See it stated from Reg. Lib. in Corbyn v. French, 4 Ves. 431, 432.

spect to the selection of objects for the other legacy, it must be referred to the Master, and proposals of proper objects must be laid before him. (6) 1785.

(6) No such directions, however, appear in R. L. Vide folio 390.

[*] BOYNTON against BOYNTON. [30th April.]

[ *445 ]

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 540. b.)

SIR Griffith Boynton, Bart. by his will, 27th April, 1771, gave to his wife dame Mary Boynton, his mansion-house, &c. at Burton Agnes, for life, remainder to the plaintiff in fee. He also gave to his said wife, an annuity of 1000*l.* charged on all his real estates (except the estates so devised) in lieu of her dower and thirds. He also gave to her the use of her jewels, and of his household goods, plate, carriages, &c. for life, and a legacy of 200*l.* to be paid immediately after his decease. Then came the clause in the will upon which the question arose. " Provided that if my said wife shall happen to marry again, that then, and from thenceforth, all and every the devise, annuity, powers, authorities, and bequests by me herein-before, or herein-after given and bequeathed to my said wife, (except the annuity of 100*l.* a-year herein-after mentioned) shall cease and be void: and in such case I give and bequeath to my said wife, during her natural life, one annuity, or yearly rent-charge of 100*l.* charged upon all my real estates, to be paid, &c. the said annuity of 100*l.* to be in full for every benefit and advantage, which I mean shall arise out of any my real or personal estates, in case she shall happen to marry again." And made his said wife executrix, and residuary legatee of his said will, and guardian to the plaintiff his eldest son, and his other children. On the 6th February, 1778, the testator died, without revoking his said will, and Lady Boynton proved the will. In July, 1781, Sir Griffith Boynton, the eldest son of the deceased, filed his bill, praying among other things, that the defendant Lady Boynton might make her election, either to accept the benefits under the will, or to claim her dower; and that in case she should elect her dower, the same should be settled, and the residue of the real estate should be taken care of for the benefit of the plaintiff, and a guardian appointed. At the same time a bill was filed by the creditors of the testator Sir Griffith Boynton. To these bills the defendants put in their answers, and particularly the defendant Lady Boynton, by her answer, elected to take her dower, instead of the benefits given to her by her said husband's will. The two causes came on 15th May, 1782, to be heard, at the Rolls, before his Honor Sir Thomas Sewel, who declared [*] that as no account of the testator's personal estate, and of his debts, &c. had been taken, the defendant Lady Boynton, was not obliged to make any election, until the account should be taken, and it should appear out of what real estates she was dowable, at the time of testator's decease: — and it was referred to the Master to take an account of the personal estate, and also to state out of which estates the defendant was dowable. On the 16th December, 1783, the Master made his separate report, as to the defendant's dower. On the 29th January, 1784, dame Mary, the defendant, intermarried with George Parkhurst, Esq. and 7th April, 1784, the plaintiff filed a supplemental bill making him a party, stating the marriage, and that, in consequence thereof, the benefits arising to the defendant dame Mary, under the will, had become void, and praying that possession of the house, Testator by will gave his wife 1000*l.* a-year in lieu of dower, but if she married again, he gave her 100*l.* a-year in lieu of all benefits from his estate. She married, and elected her dower. She shall not have the 100*l.* annuity.

[ *446 ]

1785.

BOYNTON
against
BOYNTON.

house, &c. might be given up. In her answer to this bill, dame Mary, claimed her dower, and submitted to the Court, whether she was not also entitled to the annuity of 100*l.* a-year given by the testator's will, and also insisted she had a right to her jewels, as being part of her paraphernalia. — On the 14th June, 1784, the cause came on before the Lord Chancellor, when his Lordship was pleased to declare, that Lady Boynton, having elected to take her dower, was not entitled to have the legacy, annuity, and provision made by the will, and ordered proper accounts to be taken. Upon this decretal order, the defendants Parkhurst and Lady Boynton presented their petition of re-hearing, in regard to the annuity of 100*l.* which they contended Lady Boynton was entitled to for life over and above her dower. The cause now came on upon the re-hearing.

Mr. Madocks, Mr. Scott, and Mr. Waller for the defendants. There must be an express intention in order to prevent a wife taking dower as well as a legacy. Lawrence v. Lawrence, 1 Eq. Abr. 218, 219. Inclendon v. Northcote, 3 Atk. 430. Hitchin v. Hitchin, Pre. Ch. 133. Lemon v. Lemon, 8 Viner, 366. This annuity given out of his estate is consistent with her dower. — A mere gift of an annuity of 100*l.* would not bar her of the dower. It was meant that if she married, the annuity of 1000*l.* should cease, but this annuity of 100*l.* was anxiously excepted out of the clause. — Suppose she had made her election immediately after the decease, she might have kept every provision made for her, except the 1000*l.* a-year: [*] the 100*l.* a year was to be in lieu of the provisions forfeited by marriage, it had nothing to do with her dower, he could not mean it in lieu of the dower, which would be so much larger.

Mr. Price and Mr. Mitford for the plaintiff. — This is not a question of forfeiture, but of election. In all cases where other benefits are not given in addition to the dower, the lady electing to take dower, gives up every thing else. — If the 100*l.* annuity had been given to her simply, she must have elected between it and dower. — When Sir Griffith gave her the annuity of 1000*l.* in lieu of dower, he had no idea she would elect the dower. — The 100*l.* was not to take place at all, if she accepted the other gifts. It was to stand in lieu of the provision during widowhood. — Lawrence v. Lawrence, and Hitchin v. Hitchin, are neither of them cases where the doweress had made an election. The question in those cases was, whether taking under the will would preclude dower. The terms of the clause relative to her marriage, shew he did not mean her to take this with her dower. It was to be in full for every benefit which should arise to her out of his real or personal estate. These words must include dower, as well as any other provision. She must therefore elect between the annuity of 100*l.* and her dower.

Lord Chancellor a few days after the hearing gave judgment. — The question is, whether the testator has declared by express words, or any thing tantamount, that Lady Boynton shall have both her dower and this annuity. The question turns upon the clause, whereby he gives her in the event of her marrying again 100*l.* a year, as the full benefit she was to derive from his estate. By these expressions, I rather think he intended this estate should be quite clear of her. On the other hand, it is said, this could not be his intent, as he knew this was not equal to her dower; but the cases do not seem to have gone upon any calculation of value between the legacy and the dower. — The natural construction of the words seems to be, that if she married again, she should have only 1000*l.* a year. In this the testator's intention is defeated; but she cannot take her dower and the annuity.

Affirmed the decree. (1)
The judgment ex relatione.

(1) But the deposit to be returned. R. L.

[ *447 ]

1785:

COOTE against COOTE.

[ *448 ]

(No Entry.)

*Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 13th May.*

MR. Mansfield, supported by Mr. Scott, and Mr. Mitford, moved, that the plaintiff might be at liberty to sue out a commission for the examination of witnesses in the East Indies, on the following case. Sir Eyre Coote, K. B. deceased, late husband of the plaintiff, made his will, 9th May, 1778, by which he gave the plaintiff an annuity of 1000*l.* and other advantages, and gave the residue of his personal estate, after payment of debts and legacies, to trustees to lay out the same in real estate, to the uses therein declared. On the 9th October, 1780, the testator made a codicil to his will, by which he confirmed the same, and thereby gave to the plaintiff 10,000*l.* to be paid within twelve months after his death. — He also gave several other pecuniary legacies, and appointed the defendant, the Rev. Charles Coote, Dean of Kilfenora in Ireland, “ residuary legatee to the sums of money which should remain after the payment of his debts and legacies.” On the 14th December, 1780, he made another codicil, by which he gave the plaintiff 10,000*l.* repeated all the other legacies given by the former codicil in nearly the same words, added a legacy to his god-daughter Ann Monkton of 5000*l.* and appointed Dean Coote residuary legatee. Lady Coote filed the present bill to have both legacies paid to her, and for this purpose, stated circumstances to shew that the former codicil was in Sir Eyre’s contemplation when he made the second, and that the second was intended by him in addition to, and in augmentation of, the former, and, among others, a considerable encrease of his fortune, (which was however contested by the answers.) The executors contended from the similarity of terms, and repetition of the same legacies, that the second codicil was a substitution of the former, and only made for the purpose of introducing Miss Monkton’s legacy. And, now, the plaintiff moved for a commission to examine witnesses, in order to introduce-parol evidence to prove the testator’s intention to augment the legacies given by the first codicil, by those given in the second. The affidavit upon which the application was grounded was, that Mr. Graham and Major Hay, the subscribing witnesses to the codicils, were in India, and that the plaintiff was advised that their testimony as to what passed between the testator and them at the time of his executing the second codicil, would be material to her at the hearing.

[*] The Counsel for the plaintiff pressed it upon two points. First, that the presumption, from the legacies being in two different instruments, was, that the second legacy was augmentative, and for this they cited Hooley v. Hatton, (ante 390. n.) and said that in Greenwood v. Greenwood, (ante 30 n.) Lord Bathurst would not lay it down absolutely, that being in the same instrument made it a mere repetition. Secondly, that this was a proper case for the admission of parol-evidence, to explain whether both the codicils were to take place. That the intention might be shewn by other means than merely by what appeared upon the face of the instrument, and that in the case of Beauchlerc and the Duke of St. Alban’s, Lord Hardwicke said, if there had been any considerable addition to the Dutchess’s fortune, it would have been material, and, as that must have been introduced by parol-evidence, of course he was of opinion such evidence would be admissible.

Lord Chancellor said, he did not chuse to decide questions of such importance upon a motion. If the second codicil had only given the wife a legacy of the same sum, he should have thought it not an ademption

In an application for a commission to examine evidence to shew that the legacies, given in two codicils, were both intended for the legatee, the legatee ought to swear she believes that to have been the intention.

[ *449 ]

1785.

COOTE
against COOTE.

ademption of the former, but accumulative; but where all the legacies are repeated, it made it seem only to be a substitution. If her's is doubled, all the rest must be so likewise.† But he thought, in order to have a commission to introduce the parol-evidence, Lady Coote ought to swear, that she believed the legacy, in the second codicil, was meant to be augmentative, which she had not done: and without it, the issuing the commission would appear only to be for delay.

The plaintiff's counsel therefore took nothing by their motion.

† Vide post. vol. 2. p. 521.

[ 450 ]

[*] TRINITY TERM.

25 Geo. 3. 1785.

POCKLINGTON against BAYNE. [30th May.]

(Reg. Lib. 1784. B. fol. 584.)

Power to appoint in such shares, &c. as J. P. should think proper, not exceeding estates tail: he appoints to two of his children, one acre, for life, then to fall into the residue of the estate, which he gave to his 2d son for life, with remainders over. This execution of the power is illusory and bad. (1)

BY marriage settlement, dated 25th and 26th May, 1769, the manor of Wanborough, and other lands were conveyed to trustees, in trust, for Samuel Sharpe, for life, remainder to Samuel Pocklington, the husband, for life, remainder to the wife for life, "remainder to the use of all and every the child and children of the body of the said Samuel Pocklington, on the body of Pleasance his wife begotten, or to be begotten, in such parts, shares and proportions, and for such estate and estates, not exceeding an estate or estates in tail, with or without power of revocation, and by, with, and under such powers, provisoes, remainders or limitations over to some or one of the said children as the said Samuel Pocklington should by any deed or writing, executed as therein mentioned, or by will, direct and appoint, and for default of such appointment, then to all and every the children, to be divided share and share alike, &c." Samuel Pocklington, by will duly attested, and reciting the power, did, in pursuance thereof, limit one acre of the premises to his eldest son William, and his daughter Ann, for their lives, and the life of the survivor, with remainder to such person or persons as should be entitled to the residue of the said premises, and then limited the residue to his second son Henry for life, remainder to

(1) "Without going through all the cases upon this subject, it will be sufficient to name the later cases, in which the whole subject is exhausted; all the contradictions, both of dicta and decision, are noticed; and all the cases referred to; with particular citations, collected from the most authentic accounts of them. Pocklington v. Bayne. (ubi supra) before Lord Thurlow, who decided in a very short way, which was not his habit, that an appointment of one acre for life was illusory. Bristowe v. Warde, 3 Ves. jun. 336. Vanderzee v. Aclam, 4 Ves. 771. Kemp v. Kemp, 5 Ves. 849. Mocatta v. Lonsada, 12 Ves. 123. Dyke v. Sylvester, ibid. 126. and Bar v. Whitbread, 10 Ves. 31. and 16 Ves. 15." Per Lord Eldon C. in Butcher v. Butcher, 1 Ves. & Beames, 99. See also that case of Butcher v. Butcher, 9 Ves. 382, &c. &c. and 1 Ves. & Beames, 79. et sequent.

Lord Eldon C. made also a few more observations on the principal case in Bar v. Whitbread, 16 Ves. 26.; noticing an observation which had been made, that the execution of the power would not have been good at law; but stating that Lord Thurlow thought otherwise.

trustees

trustees to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, with remainders over. The bill was filed to carry this will into execution.

[*] Mr. Selwyn and Mr. Madocks contended, that the power was not well executed. — In the 1st place, Samuel Pocklington had no power to limit estates to his children for life only, for if he could limit them for life, with remainders over, it would tie up the property longer than the rules of law would allow. It is exactly the case of Spencer v. the Duke of Marlborough, 5 Brown's Parlt. Cases 592. — 2dly. The giving two of the children one acre alone of the estate for their lives, and the life of the survivor is merely illusory, and not within the intention of the person who created the power. — 3dly. That he had extended the appointment to grand-children, whereas his power was only to appoint to his own children; this is determined to be bad in the case of Alexander v. Alexander, 2 Vesey, 640.

Lord Chancellor was clearly of opinion that the execution of the power intended by the testator was totally illusory, and contrary to the nature of the power; that therefore the estate must go among all the children, agreeably to the direction in default of execution of the power.† (2)

† This point has been since more amply discussed in the case of Robinson v. Hardcastle, post. vol. 2. p. 22.—544. also 2 Durnford and East's Term. Rep. p. 241—781. [But see more particularly the references in the Editor's first note.]

(2) The Court made no declaration, except as next mentioned. The Master was to approve of a proper maintenance for the children; "and in making of such allowance, it is ordered, that the said Master do consider the said testator's children as entitled to the funds before-mentioned, and the real estates lying in the county of Wills, in equal third parts." A receiver was appointed of those estates, and any of the children were to be at liberty to bring an ejectment for the recovery of the possession of those estates, as they should be advised. R. L.

BELL against WALKER and DEBRET. [15th June.]

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 411.)

MR. Pigot moved for an injunction to restrain the defendants from publishing a book, entitled, "Memoirs of the life of Mrs. Bellamy:" which the bill stated, to be pirated from a book called, "An Apology for the life of George-Ann Bellamy." Affidavits were produced, of Mrs. Bellamy being the author of this latter work, and that she had sold the property of the copy to the plaintiff, who had printed it in five volumes, which sold for 15s. The book against which the injunction was prayed was in one volume, and sold for 2s. 6d. Passages were read from each, to shew that the facts, and even the terms in which they were related in this, were taken frequently verbatim from the original work. — His Honour said, if this was a fair bonâ fide abridgement of the larger work, several cases, in this Court, had decided that an injunction should not be granted. It had been so determined with respect to Dr. Hawkesworth's Voyages. He should not at present decide [*] whether it was such, or a piracy from the former;

1785.

POCKLINGTON
against BAYNE.
[ *451 ]

Master of the Rolls for Lord
Chancellor.

Injunction shall be against a publication pi-ratically taken from another, but not against a fair abridgment. (1)

[ *452 ]

(1) See also Butterworth v. Robinson, 5 Ves. 709, &c.

but 1785.

BELL
against WALKER, &c.

but he had heard sufficient read, to entitle the plaintiff to an injunction, until answer and further order.

Motion granted. (2)

(2) On the 15th of July following, upon a motion by Mr. Scott and Mr. Mitford to dissolve the injunction, the Lord Chancellor directed a reference to the Master "to look into the book or work in the pleadings mentioned and published by the defendant, called 'Memoirs of G. A. Bellamy,' &c. &c.; and to see whether such book or work is the same, or in any and what respect different from the book or work in the pleadings mentioned, published by the plaintiff, called, 'An Apology for the Life of G. A. Bellamy, late of Covent Garden Theatre, written by herself,' &c. &c." R. L.

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 1 seal
after Trinity, 22d June.

[Where a defendant has obtained a verdict at law, and an injunction bill is filed against him whilst he is out of the kingdom, the plaintiff in equity shall be put upon terms of paying the money in question into Court, or otherwise his injunction be dissolved. (1)]

SHERWOOD against WHITE.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. B. fol. 511.)

WHITE, who is a half-pay lieutenant and resides in North America, by a letter of attorney, empowered Sherwood to receive his half-pay. — Sherwood received several sums upon that account. — White was under the necessity of suing Sherwood for those sums. He obtained judgment, and was upon the point of suing out execution, when Sherwood filed his bill in this Court, stating, that he had deposited the sums received on account of White, in the hands of Brown and Collinson, bankers, for safe custody; that Brown and Collinson had become bankrupts; that they had only paid two dividends, one of 5s. and another of 2s. in the pound. Sherwood by his bill admitted the receipt of these sums, and prayed that White might be compelled to accept them, together with an assignment of Sherwood's interest in Brown and Collinson's estate, in full of the debt owing to him by Sherwood; and that in the mean time an injunction might go, to prevent White from suing execution. — An injunction was obtained for want of an answer. — Before the answer, the Court was moved, on the part of the defendant, that the plaintiff might pay the money into Court, otherwise that the injunction should be dissolved. — And the Court ordered that the plaintiff should pay the amount of the two dividends into Court, otherwise that the injunction should stand dissolved. †

† Vide post. Acton v. Market, vol. 2. p. 14. Culling v. Hickling, vol. 2. p. 182., and the cases there cited, by which the rule seems to be completely settled as here determined.

(1) See and note particularly Potts v. Butler, and another, 1 Cox, 330, 331, 532. and the cases therein stated. See also the cases referred to in Mr. Brown's note supra.

[ *453 ]

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 23d June.

Ex parte BATE.

Bankrupt partners paying different proportions towards the debts, shall have but one allowance, which shall be divided between them in the proportions their respective estates have paid.

BATE the petitioner and Henckel were partners, a joint commission of bankruptcy issued against them. The joint debts, amounted to 22,796*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* the joint effects were [*] about 5000*l.* Bate's separate effects amounted to above 30,000*l.* The debts proved upon his separate estate were 15,894*l.* of which 15,362*l.* were joint debts due from the partnership. The joint creditors were paid 16*s.* in the pound, of which the petitioner (supposing the joint debts to be divided in moieties) had contributed 12s. 6d. and Henckel 3s. 6d. — Bate now petitioned that the assignees might pay him the allowance of 10*l.* per cent. (not exceeding 300*l.*) in respect of his separate estate, according to the statute of 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. and also for an allowance in respect of the joint estate. — The first question made, was whether the petitioner could have two allowances, the one in respect of the separate, the other of the joint estate; but Lord Chancellor was clearly of opinion this could not be. — The next and principal question was, whether Henckel was entitled to any allowance, and, if so, whether the same should be part of the 300*l.* to which the petitioner would be entitled.

Lord Chancellor thought the proper way of considering the question would be, taking the debts as well as the effects in moieties. Bate therefore having paid in fact above 20s. on the moiety of the debts, although not quite 15s. on the whole, was entitled to the full allowance; but Henckel, who had not paid 10s. upon his moiety, was entitled to nothing. — But this opinion his Lordship afterwards changed; for a few days after, he declared, that the bankrupts were entitled under the act of parliament to the sum of 300*l.* being an allowance of ten per cent. in respect of their joint and separate effects, and that the same ought to be divided between them, according to the proportions which the surplus of each of their separate estates, after payment of their respective separate debts, and the respective moieties of their joint estate, have contributed to the payment of their joint debts.

1785.

Ex parte
BATE.[*] Ex parte HAYDEN.

UPON a separate commission of bankrupt against one partner, the joint creditors petitioned, and were allowed to prove their debts, and to receive a dividend pari passu with the separate creditors, there being no joint estate.†

Ex relatione.

[ *454 ]

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 24th
June.Joint creditors
admitted to prove on a separate commission. (1)

† Vide Cooke's Bankrupt Laws, 292. S. C. also the case Ex parte Hodgson, post. vol. 2. p. 5. Ex parte Martin, post. vol. 2. p. 14. Ex parte Page, post. vol. 2. p. 119. Ex parte Flintum, vol. 2. p. 120. Ex parte Copeland, Cooke's Bankrupt Laws, 295. and other cases cited by him in his section of joint debts.

(1) See Ex parte Cobham, post. 576., and the notes.

Duke of ANCASTER against MAYER and others.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 713.)

CHARLES Bertie made his will, dated the 9th of November, 1759, and thereby devised as follows: "I give and devise to " Thomas

Before the Lords Commissioners, Ash-
hurst, and Hotham, 26th
June, 1783.
Before Lord
Thurlow, June
16th, 1784.
July 5th, 1785.Notwithstanding a charge upon a term for payment of debts, a lease-hold estate purchased by the testator, subject to a mortgage, shall bear the burthen of that mortgage, it not being properly the debt of the testator. (1)

[Personal estate primarily liable to a testator's debts, however strongly the real estate is charged for the purpose, unless a clear intention is manifest to exempt it. (2)]

(1) S. P. Lawson v. Hudson, antea, 58. with the Editor's note.(2) Lord Thurlow's decision of this case, and the principles laid down by his Lordship, as here reported, have always been approved, notwithstanding, as Lord Eldon C.

VOL. I.

A a observes,

1785.

ANCASTER
against MAYER.

[ *455 ]

“ Thomas Noel and John Mayer, their executors, administrators, and assigns, all those my manors, lands, &c. in Lincolnshire, to have and to hold to them, from the time of my decease, for the term of ninety-nine years, upon the trusts herein-after mentioned.” He then gave the real estate, subject to the term, and in default of issue of his own body, to Montague Bertie for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail-male, remainder to the plaintiff for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail-male, with remainders over, and afterwards declared as follows: “ I do hereby declare that the term and estate, so as aforesaid limited to them the said Thomas Noel and John Mayer, their executors, administrators, and assigns, for ninety-nine years, is upon the special trust and confidence, and to the intents and purposes following; that is to say, upon trust and confidence, that they the said Thomas Noel and John Mayer, their executors, &c. shall, out of the rents and profits, or by mortgage, assignment, or demise of all, or any part of my before-mentioned manors, &c. or any of them, for all, or any part of the said term of ninety-nine years, or otherwise as to their discretion shall seem meet, levy and raise so much lawful money of Great Britain as will be sufficient to pay and satisfy all the debts I shall owe at the time of my decease, my funeral-charges, and all the legacies and sums of money given by me in and by this my will, and pay and apply the same accordingly. And my will and mind is, that after so much money shall be raised as shall [*] answer the purposes aforesaid, together with all costs and charges in or about levying or raising thereof, the said term shall cease and determine.” He then devised as follows: “ I give and devise to my brother Montague Bertie, his executors and administrators, all that the manor of East and West Deeping, holden by lease from the Crown, subject to the observes, in Bootle v. Blundell, 1 Merivale, 210. the decision was upon Lord Thurlow's own opinion against the opinions of three other judges. It should, however, be noticed here, that Lord Thurlow has been represented as having made use of an expression in this cause, which has been much disapproved, viz. that the meaning of “ implication plain,” and “ manifest intention,” is “ an irresistible conclusion.” Vide 1 Eden's Cases. Lord Northington, 46. note, and 1 Merivale, 216. See per M. R. in Brummel v. Prothero, 3 Ves. 113. and per Lord Eldon C. in Bootle v. Blundell, 1 Meriv. 219, 220. &c. &c. 230. 239. As to the approval of this case by subsequent judges, see in Burton v. Knowlton, 3 Ves. 108, 109. 111. and in Brummel v. Prothero, ib. 113, 114. Tait v. Lord Northwick, 4 Ves. 823, 824. Hartley v. Hurle, 5 Ves. 546. Watson v. Brichwood, 9 Ves. 453. Hancox v. Abbey, 11 Ves. 188., &c. See also Webb v. Jones, 1 Cox, 245, 246. Gray v. Minnethorpe, 3 Ves. 103. 106.; per Lord Eldon C. in Bootle v. Blundell, 1 Merivale, 227, 228, 229. It appears, from all the cases, that the old law on the subject, that the personal estate could not be exempted without express words, has given place to a vague and indefinite collection of a party's presumed intention, which may frequently vary with the change of the judge, who is to decide on precisely the same facts. The only sound principle to guide the Court under so loose a rule (if rule it can be called) as that of “ implication plain,” and “ manifest intention,” is that which Lord Eldon C. mentions as first established by that great judge, Sir William Grant, viz. That to collect a testator's intention, every part of his will should be attentively considered. See the judgment in Bootle v. Blundell, 1 Merivale, 215. et seq.; and in Gutins v. Steele, 1 Swanston, 28. &c. Nothing, surely, can be a greater proof of the danger resulting from such a departure from the old law, than that the very circumstance which induced Lord Hardwicke to decide one way, in Walker v. Jackson, (2 Atk. 624.; 1 Wils. 24.; Bunb. 302.) has been relied upon by other judges, “ in twenty cases,” as affording the contrary conclusion. See per Lord Eldon C. in Bootle v. Blundell, 1 Merivale, 222, 223, 224. See also Stephenson v. Heathcote, there referred to, which is now reported 1 Eden's Cases of Lord Northington, 38., &c. The last-mentioned observation originated with Lord Thurlow in the course of his judgment on the principal case, though it is unreported by Mr. Brown, and is from Lord Eldon's MSS. See 1 Merivale, 122, 123, and notes. Lord Redesdale's notes refer to the case of Lord Shipbrooke v. Hinchinbrook, in Chancery, 15th July, 1772; 18th December, 1778; and 20th December, 1780. The will, decree, and subsequent proceedings in that suit, are shortly stated, 13 Ves. 387. 388, &c.

“ yearly

1785.

ANCASTER
against
MAYER.

“ yearly rent and covenants reserved in the said lease, and also subject “ to the mortgage thereon, to Mrs. Millicent Neate, of London, for “ 6500*l.* but in case my said brother shall not be living at the time of “ my decease, then I give the said estate and premises, with the ap“ purtenances (subject as aforesaid) to such person as shall be entitled “ to the freehold of my real estate at the time of my decease, by “ virtue of the aforesaid limitations in this my will.” And towards the end of his will he devised as follows: “ Item, I also give all my “ household goods, and all other my goods, chattels, effects, and per“ sonal estate whatsoever, and wheresoever, unto my said brother “ Montague Bertie, if he shall be living at the time of my death; but “ in case he shall be then dead, I give and devise the same to such “ person as shall be entitled to the freehold of my real estate, under,
“ and by virtue of the limitations in this my will: Provided always, and “ I do hereby declare my mind and will to be, that in case I shall, at “ the time of my death, leave issue of my own body, that then, and in “ such case, as well all and every the before-mentioned uses, devises, “ and limitations, to my said brother Montague Bertie, the Duke of “ Ancaster, and their respective heirs, and also the devise of the residue “ of my personal estate (3), shall be utterly void; and in such case I do “ hereby will, and my mind is, that all my real estate, subject to the “ said term of ninety-nine years, shall descend, according to the rules “ of law, and that the residue of my personal estate shall go and be “ distributed in such manner, and to and among such persons as if I “ had died intestate. And I do hereby nominate and appoint the said “ Thomas Noel and John Mayer, executors of this my last will; and I “ do hereby will, order, direct, and appoint, that my said executors, “ and the survivor of them, shall, and do pay, satisfy, and discharge “ my funeral charges, and all my debts and legacies as soon as they “ shall become due and payable, by such methods, ways, and means,
“ and in such manner as he or they, or their counsel learned in the law, “ shall in that behalf advise and think meet; and it shall [*] and may “ be lawful to my said executors, or either of them, to deduct, and “ satisfy to him or themselves out of my personal estate, or out of the “ monies to be raised out of the said term of ninety-nine years before “ to them devised, all such disbursements, expences and charges, “ which they, or either of them shall be put to in proving this my will,
“ or by any other ways or means whatsoever, in or about the execution “ of this my will, &c.” — Montague Bertie died in the life-time of the testator, and the plaintiff became entitled, under the limitations in the will, to the real estate. — The leasehold estate had been several years before mortgaged, by the testator’s father, for 6500*l.* to Mrs. Neate, and in 1765, the mortgage was assigned by the desire of the testator, to Sir Thomas Palmer, who advanced the testator a further sum of 100*l.* on it, and the testator conveyed other estates as an additional security for the 6600*l.*

[ *456 ]

This cause was first heard before the late Lords Commissioners.

Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Madocks, and Mr. Kenyon, for the plaintiffs. —
There are three questions in this case. 1st. Whether the personal estate is exonerated of the debts. 2dly. Whether the mortgaged estate is liable to the mortgage. 3dly. What interest the Duke takes in the personal estate. As to the 1st. although the personal estate be the original fund for the payment of debts, yet the testator may discharge it against the devisee of his real estate (4); and if his intent, so to discharge it, appear upon the face of his will, that intention shall govern.

(3) See Lord Eldon C.’s observations on these clauses, 1 Merivale, 227, 228.

(4) See Whaley v. Cor, 2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 549. pl. 29.

1785.

ANCASTER
against MAYER.

[ *457 ]

Here he has created a term for the payment of his debts, which sufficiently points out his intention. The cases shew that an intention so demonstrated is sufficient. — Bampffield v. Wyndham, Pre. Ch. 101. the testator providing a real fund for the payment of his debts, and giving his personalty to his wife, it was held she should take it exonerated from the debts. Wainwright v. Bendlowes, 2 Vern. 718. devise for payment of debts, and the personalty held exempt. In Walker v. Jackson, 2 Atkyns, 624. the personal estate was held to be a specific legacy, and of course exonerated. Anderton v. Cook, 4th June, 1775, Thomas Calendar gave several specific parts of his personal estate, he then gave part of his real estate in strict settlement, and devised the remainder of his real estate to trustees in trust, to sell for the payment of [*] debts, and in case that should not be sufficient to discharge the debts, he charged the deficiency on the devised real estates. He then gave the residue of his personal estate, not before bequeathed, to his wife. The Court held she took it wholly exempt from the debts. — In Stapleton v. Colvile, Cases Temp. Talbot, 202. in Holliday v. Bowman, before Lord Bathurst (ante 145) Kynaston v. Kynaston†, and Glede v. Glede, the same doctrine has been held. — 2dly. The 2d point is, whether the mortgage shall also be discharged by the real estate. This point is determined by the case of Searle v. St. Eloy, 2 Wms. 386. which is recognised in Galton v. Hancock, 2 Atk. 437. 3dly. The last question is, what interest the Duke shall take. He claims under the description of the person who should come into possession, and must take the same interest that Montague Bertie would have taken, that is, the absolute interest.

[ *458 ]

Mr. Selwyn, Mr. Arden, and Mr. Ainge, for the defendants. — As to the last question, we contend the Duke can take a limited interest for life only, there being no addition of executors or administrators in the will. 2dly. With respect to the second, that the mortgaged premises must bear their own burthen. — As to the other, which is the principal question, it depends on the several clauses in the will. The 1st clause creates the term. — The next which is material, is that by which he gives the personal estate. — The 3d that appointing the executors, and directing them to pay the debts by such means as they should think meet. In this case there is no specific bequest of the personal estate. If he had meant the executors should pay the debts out of the term, he would not have left it in their option how they should pay them. In order to exonerate personal estates from the payment of debts, there must be an express direction that they shall be paid out of some other fund, or something tantamount to such express direction; but here is no necessary implication that the fund should be exempt. In Bampffield v. Wyndham, the debts were more than the amount of the personal estate. In Wainwright v. Bendlowes, the [*] estate was ordered to be sold out and out. In Bromhall v. Wilbraham, at the Rolls, Nov. 1734, the testator gave all his personal estate to his sister, whom he made executrix, he gave his real estate to his brother, charged with his debts, but the personal estate was held to be first liable. In the case of Lord Inchiquin v. O'Brien (5), 8th Feb. 1744, before Lord Hardwicke; the Earl of Thomond

† The testator by his will charged his whole estates with payment of all his debts, legacies, and funeral expences, and, for that purpose, he devised particular lands to trustees in trust to sell the same, and pay his debts, legacies, and funeral expences, and he gave to his wife all his personal estate whatsoever, and constituted her sole executrix. The debts exceeded the personal estate. Lord Bathurst determined the personal estate to be exempt.

(5) Ambler, 40., but lately reported much more fully, 1 Cox, Ch. Ca. quod sit; and see 1 Merivale, 221.

1785.

ANCASTER
against
MAYER.

by his will directed, that all his debts should be paid: he devised his real estate to Lord Inchiquin and another, in trust, that they should make sale of a sufficient part of the estate, and out of the money arising therefrom, together with the rents and profits, should, in the first place, pay all the debts which he should owe at the time of his death, and his legacies, and, subject thereto, he limited his real estate over: he gave Sir William Wyndham 20,000*l.* and some other legacies; then followed these words, "and his further will was, that the whole money to be raised by such sale, should be taken as part of his personal estate:" lastly, he gave the rest and residue of his personal estate whatsoever, after payment of his debts, to the defendant. The personal estate was first applied. — In Fereges v. Robinson, Bunb. 301. the same doctrine was laid down, because, as the Court observed, there were no negative words to exonerate the personal estate. In Stephenson v. Heathcote (6), Harper devised lands to trustees in trust, by sale or mortgage, to raise so much money as would pay all his debts, and funeral expences: he then gave a silver tobacco-box to A. B. and gave all the residue of his personal estate to his wife, and made her executrix. Lord Northington ordered the personal estate to be first applied.

Lord Commissioner Ashhurst delivered the opinion of himself and Lord Commissioner Hotham. — The first question is, whether, under the will of Charles Bertie, the plaintiff is entitled to the personal estate discharged of the debts. — 2dly. Whether the personal estate is the fund out of which the mortgages are to be paid. — 3dly. What estate the plaintiff takes in the freehold and personal estate. — The main question is, whether the plaintiff is entitled to the personal estate discharged of the debts: — The cases are determined on different grounds. — Adams v. Meyrick, Eq. Abr. 271. which is in favour of the plaintiff, made the ground, that the testator said that the trustees do and shall, by mortgage, &c. pay. — This is a very [*] loose ground, and has been since abandoned. — Fereges v. Robinson, in Bunb. 301. is the most sensible case. — In Walker v. Jackson, 2 Atk. 624. Lord Hardwicke says, the general rule is, that the personal estate shall be first applied; but that, against his devisee, the testator may charge his real estate, instead of his personal. — The personal estate must be first applied, unless there are express words, or a plain intent to the contrary. — The only question, in every case of this kind, is, whether you can satisfactorily find out whether the testator meant to exempt the personal estate from the debts; for there are no technical words by which it is to be done. — In this case, if it depended on the two clauses in the will, the intent could not be doubted, the trustees are to raise sufficient to pay all the debts. — The next thing to be considered is, whether there is any thing in the latter part of the will to overturn this apparent intent. — It seems highly probable the word "residue" was thrown in without any meaning, or to give an option to the trustees, out of which fund to take their expences, and that they might not be in advance. — At all events it excludes the idea, that the charge was to fall upon the personalty. — The more modern authorities have gone in exclusion of the personalty upon much less reason, Anderton v. Cooke, Holliday v. Bowman, (ante 145). — We think the Duke of Ancaster is entitled to the personal estate, exempt from payment of debts. (7) — The next question is, whether it should be charged with the mortgages, and as to this point we are

[ *459 ]

(6) 1 Eden's Ca. Ch. 38, &c. Et vide p. 43. See also per Lord Eldon C. on it, 1 Mc-rivale, 224, 225, 226.

(7) This reversed by Lord Thurlow. Et vide antea, note (1).

1785.

ANCASTER
against
MAYER.

bound by the cases of Searle v. St Eloy, 2 Wms. 386., and Galton and Hancock, 2 Atk. 424., to decree, that the mortgage must be paid out of the devised estate. — The 3d. question is, what interest the Duke takes in the personalty. — He took an absolute one, there is no need of express words for this purpose; it is beyond a doubt Montague Bertie would have taken absolutely; then, where the testator gives it by the description of the person entitled to the freehold, he does not state the interest so given to be a less interest than that of Montague Bertie.

A petition was presented for a re-hearing, which came on before Lord Thurlow the 16th of June, 1784, the arguments used, and the cases cited, were a recapitulation of those before the Lords Commissioners.

[ *460 ]

[*] Lord Chancellor. (8) — It would be highly advantageous to property, if there were a settled rule, where the personalty shall be applied to the payment of debts, and where it shall be exempted from them. (8) One step has been taken toward such a rule, by its being laid down, that charging the estate in any way, is not, of itself, an exemption of the personal estate; that the personal estate, being the fund first liable, where it is to be aided by either a legal or an equitable fund, it must be itself in the first place applied. The question that next arises is, whether, a real estate being charged, and the personal given away, a presumption arises that this shall be exempted from the debts. I never heard, till the arguments in this case, that such a rule had been extracted from the authorities on the subject: on the contrary, I have always understood, that in order to exempt the personal estate, the testator must express an intention so to do; although no particular form of words was necessary for the purpose. I therefore take the rule in primum to be, that neither the charge of the debts upon the real estate, or the gift of the personal, is sufficient, of itself, to exempt it. But it is indubitably true, that express words are not necessary to exempt the personal estate; the question therefore is, whether a presumption can be drawn of the testator's intention to exonerate the personal estate. It is impossible to express, in definition, what circumstances shall be sufficient to raise this presumption; it must arise from the context of the will (9); but, with great deference to the opinion which has been given, I think there is not sufficient in this will. After devising his real estate, the testator takes up the term, he places it before any of his other estates, and before his issue, so that he meant it to be a subsisting term for the payment of his debts. He gives his leasehold estate to Montague Bertie, but without any predilection, for he gives it to whoever should be entitled to the possession of his freehold estate. He then proceeds to declare the trusts of the term, which are to raise money to pay his debts and legacies, and after raising them the term is to cease. He then disposes the rest of his personal estate. He afterwards determines what shall be done with the personal estates, in case he should have issue. (10) In the provision which he super-adds, he takes notice of the devise of the personalty, and calls it a residue, by which he means the devise of the personal estate after the specific bequest. He provides then, that if he should [*] die leaving issue, the dispositions he had made should fail: this was not essentially necessary, though apparently so. He then makes a general provision for

[ *461 ]

(8) See note (2), antea.

(9) See Lord Eldon C.'s observations on this case, &c. in Bootle v. Blundell, 1 Merivale, 210. 215, 216, &c.; 222, 223, 224. 226, 227, 228, and note (2), antea.

(10) See per M. R. as to this, in Burton v. Knowlton, 3 Ves. 109. ; and per Lord Eldon C. in Bootle v. Blundell, 1 Merivale, 227, 228.

1785.

ANCASTER
against
MAYER.

the discharge of the executors, who are also trustees; so that it is given them in the character of executors. It is also material to observe, that in the special and general disposition of the personal estate, to the same person who shall be entitled to the possession of the real, the personal is made to accrue to the real, which is settled with the utmost strictness. The question then is, whether any inference is to be drawn, that he meant it should go with the burthen the law throws upon it, or it is to be presumed that it should be exonerated for the purpose of throwing that burthen upon the freehold estate, which he has given in the strictest manner. The inference rather seems to me to be, that he meant to protect the real estate, and therefore that the personal should bear its natural burthen. By chance he has gone farther; for where he has given directions for the indemnity of his executors, he has directed the expences to be taken out of either the personal or real estate. He has, in that clause, arranged the estates as the law would arrange them; which affords an inference, that he meant the real estate only to be in aid of the personal: I should therefore think, if the rule were, that the gift of the personal estate to a stranger was sufficient to raise a presumption that it was to be exempt from the debts, he had sufficiently here expressed his intention that it should not be so: but I take the general rule to be the other way. I should have no doubt on the intention of the testator in this respect, if there were not another point which I think ought to undergo a further enquiry: I mean the mortgage of the leasehold estate. The case of Searle v. St. Eloy (11), went upon the idea of the charge, upon the real estate, being the debt of the testator. If that case were recent, and had not been followed, I should have thought, upon the face of it, it was very open to argument. The difference between the cases is, that, if it had been real estate mortgaged by the father, it would have been liable only as a charge; but in the present case, the debt of the father falls upon the estate in two ways, partly as being a charge, and partly as a debt upon the personal estate. It must be referred to the Master, to consider the circumstances of the debt of 6000*l.* and the estate on which it was secured; and, as that point must stand [*] over, I shall think it no impediment to the justice of the Court, to defer the decree upon the other point also.

[ *462 ]

The Master having made his report, that the 6000*l.* was a charge upon the leasehold estate, prior to the testator's having any interest in it, and that he had only covenanted for the payment of the money upon the transfer of the mortgage from Mrs. Neate to Sir Thomas Palmer; the cause was again set down for argument the 4th July, 1785, and then stood for judgment till the next day, when the Lord Chancellor pronounced his decree.

Lord Chancellor. — Whether the personal estate should be liable, in the first instance, in exoneration of the real estate, to the payment of debts, in wills of this kind, upon looking into the cases, I find to be a point so slender and fine, that I cannot collect any certainty upon the question; but so much uncertainty abounds, that could the will of a testator be referred to a number of lawyers, they would probably entertain a diversity of opinions upon it. (12) The point ought to be fixed; and in order to make it so, I take it the rules have been these, and should be adhered to: In the first place, that the personal estate is liable in the first instance to the payment of the debts, but (in exception to this,) it is agreed, that the testator may, if he pleases, give his personal estate, as against his heir, or any other representative, clear of

(11) See note (10) in the preceding page.

(12) See the observations and references in note (2), antea.

1785.

ANCASTER
against MAYER.

[ *463 ]

the payment of his debts; and then it becomes a question, what is the mode of expression to give the personal estate exempt from such payment, when the rule of law is, that such estate is first liable. Perhaps it might have been not unwise to have adopted the rule laid down in Fereges v. Robinson, that the testator must use express words for that purpose, but it is impossible to abide by the opinion given in that case, consistently with the rules in other cases. (13) The 2d rule is, that where there is a declaration plain that shall stand in lieu of express words (13); this rule has been laid down so long, and acted upon so constantly, that if other judges were to put the construction of wills upon other grounds, how wise soever it might have been originally to have done so, it would be very unwise to make the administration of justice take a course contrary to former rules. Therefore, if there be a declaration plain, or manifestation clear, so that it is apparent, upon the face of the will, that there is such a plain intention (14), the rule then is, not to [*] disappoint, but to carry such intention into execution. But should not such intention manifestly appear, there is not a single case, which does not take it for granted that the personal estate is, by law, the first fund for the payment of debts. In regard then to the general intention of the will of Charles Bertie; the testator was seised of a real estate, which he had in his contemplation, (exclusive of the idea of his own children,) and wished to leave it to other lines of the family of Bertie, and consequently devised it to Montague Bertie, with remainder over to Peregrine Bertie for life, &c. so far in respect of the real estate, his intention was to fix it in the name and blood of the family. The next object he had in view, was a leasehold estate which he held under the Crown; that estate was a chattel interest; and with regard to that, he does not shew such a wish to fix and continue that estate in the line of Bertie: his apparent wish was not so strong as in respect to the disposal of his real estate; for had it been so, though he could not have created an entail of this leasehold estate with limitations over, yet he might have prevented the first taker of it from alienating it. Had the testator been asked the question, whether he meant that this part of his estate should be subject to the mortgage, or to give it entire to the first taker of the real estate, or to charge the term of 99 years in exoneration of the other estate, this might have been a very doubtful question, and merely conjectural, though perhaps he might have answered, that that estate should pay the debts: but whatever his intention was, he has positively given it subject to the payment of the debt; therefore, if another estate had been appropriated to payment of his debts, and this had been his debt upon the estate, I should have concurred with the Lords Commissioners: but in following them in that course, in which they considered it; as being the clear intention, in the mind of the testator, that the real estate should be so appropriated, I rather think otherwise; for it appears to me, as if the testator wished it should not, and that he chose that the leasehold estate should be so appropriated, rather than to have burthened the real estate. For the mode of limiting the estate to Montague Bertie for life, implies the intention of giving him a personal bounty, but in case of failure of issue, he gives it to the next heir who should come into possession, &c. Had the real estate been expressly charged with payment of the debts, or the testator shewn an anxious [*] intention to have sacrificed his real estate, in

[ *464 ]

(13) See note (2) especially, 1 Merivale, 209, 210, 215, et seq.; and Gutins v. Stole, 1 Swanston, 28.

(14) After all, it can only be said with propriety, that it is apparent to the judge who decides it. See per Lord Alvanley, when M. R., 3 Vca. 113.; and per Lord Eldon C. 1 Merivale, 216, 219., &c.; and 239.

1785.

ANCASTER
against
MAYER.

preference to the leasehold or his other estate, for that purpose, by the mode of disposing of his estates, such a circumstance might have been sufficient to have turned the rule of law, and it must have been appropriated to the payment of debts, let him have charged it in any manner he pleased. When the testator purchased this leasehold estate, he purchased the equity of redemption; and the mortgage was to be considered merely as a real incumbrance upon the estate itself, and not a personal debt, as against the purchaser, according to the rules of this court, and cases decided. For if a man purchases an equity of redemption, subject to incumbrances, that shall be a real incumbrance following the land, and not a personal one. The question is, whether, by purchasing this estate, and assigning the mortgage from Mrs. Neate to Hoare, and covenanting for payment of debts, he did not make it his own debt. Had Evelyn v. Evelyn (2 Wms. 659.) never been decided, a fair argument might have arisen upon that head; because where a man transfers a mortgage, and covenants for the payment of the debt according to the rule of law, he makes it his own debt, and makes himself liable to be sued upon that covenant, and such a debt has priority before other simple contract debts. Now I do not know, in what court, or by what rule, the debt would have followed the purchaser personally; but Evelyn v. Evelyn has decided, that though he might be, at law, liable, yet while there are real assets sufficient for the payment of the incumbrance, they shall be applied for that purpose: and it is to be understood, with respect to such transaction, that the party did it by way of accommodating the charge, and not of making the debt his own. The difference between the estate descended and purchased is nothing, unless the circumstance of purchasing creates the difference; but that affords no argument. The next question is, whether, when he mortgages an estate of his own as an ulterior security, that circumstance would create a difference, as, if, in Evelyn v. Evelyn, an additional real fund had been secured for making the debt good, that would have turned the judgment; it would not: for nothing makes it his debt so effectually, as the covenant to pay, for it does not create the debt, but only operates as collateral to the debt: a man mortgages his estate without covenant, yet, because the money was borrowed, the mortgagee becomes a simple contract creditor, and, in that case, the [*] mortgage is a collateral security, and if there is a bond or a covenant, then there is a collateral security of a higher species, but no higher by means of the mortgage merely; therefore having such security amounts to nothing; and I have no doubt, but that if the case had been stated to the Lords Commissioners, namely, that this incumbrance was not one of the testator's debts, and did not fall upon the personal estate, that they would have considered it as inherent to the leasehold estate. The argument of its not falling upon the testator, answers his real intention better. But as to the real intention, I should have agreed with the Lords Commissioners, could that intention have been made clear; but the intention does not amount to a declaration plain, in any sense in which these words have been properly applied. For the purpose of securing property, and the due administration of justice in a free country, judges ought to abide constantly by real principles, and by such beneficial rules as may afford some reasonable judgment without applying to a superior tribunal. — It is a fixed rule, that the personal estate must be first liable, unless another fund is provided; the testator must express his intention to discharge that estate from the payment of debts. With regard to the intention apparent upon this will, it is said, such intention is most anxiously limited to the raising of the term of ninety-nine years; whether the expression be more or less, it is but subjecting the estate to the payment of debts; and it cannot extend so far as to suppose he burthened

[ *465 ]

1785.

ANCASTER
against MAYER.

[ *466 ]

burthened his real estate, in exoneration of the personal estate. If there had been, in the gift of the personal estate, words of a sufficient force, according to my notion of a declaration plain, I should not have changed the force of those words; but the intent of these words, as they stand, naturally leans to subject the personal estate to the debts. With respect to the 2d clause, had that stood alone, I confess that would have been liable to a degree of inference; but constructions thus picked up, and collected from more circumstances than are necessary for the purpose, are not good ways of finding out the intention of the testator; and it is better to rest upon settled rules, unless you can collect more favourable and forcible observations. With regard to the next clause, that carries more weight, because the trustees are directed to pay, not only the expence of the probate of the will, which is expressly mentioned; but to pay all the charges and expences that should arise by proving the will, or by any other [*] means, &c. How are these to be paid? out of the personal estate? or the means to be raised out of the term of ninety-nine years? they have authority to pay the whole out of the personal estate: an optional clause, and empowering the executors to pay out of this fund, before the other fund is ready for the purpose. He has precisely arranged the estates in the same order that the law would have done; he has made his personal estate first liable, and then the term. — The true ground upon which I proceed, is not upon any of these criticisms, but simply upon the rule of law, the testator not having declared by express words, or any other declaration, which would tend in law, to the purpose of preserving the personal estate for any given purpose whatever. As to Adams v. Meyrick, that depended upon the circumstance of the personal estate being a provision for the wife; and, therefore, the Court forced a construction upon the will, and it is, as Lord Hardwicke termed it, in Walker v. Jackson (15), 3 Atk. 624. a weak case: in the latter case, the re-publication of the will was an argument much relied upon. As to the cases determined upon the words, “rest and residue (16),” I could have wished his Lordship had decided upon them all, so as to have left a particular note upon each of them; for such determinations as those cases afford, have occasioned great perplexity upon the rule of law. As to Stapleton v. Colville, in that case the wife was executrix, and, exclusive of the context of the will, with regard to the option given to her to charge either fund, there never was a stronger case against charging the real estate; for he gives the whole real estate to the wife, and to be charged with debts; he wishes the continuance in his name and family, and yet charges it with the payment of the debts. Lord Talbot observed, much might arise from the examination, as to the quantum of the debts, and the amount of the personal estate. Lord Talbot took it as clear, that such an examination could be gone into. In Stephenson v. Heathcote (17), it is said expressly, no examination can be had. In that case, Lord Keeper Henley relied much upon the wife being executrix (17): the case was this, that the testator gave all his real estate to R. and his wife for ever, with a charge thereon for payment of debts; and after disposing of other property, he gives a silver tobacco-box to his uncle, and all the residue he gives to his wife for ever, whom he appointed sole executrix. Lord Keeper’s observation upon this case was that the intent of the [*] testator was to be collected from the words of the will, and from no circumstances out of it, and

[ *467 ]

(15) Lord Thurlow commented very fully on this case of Walker v. Jackson, and disapproved of the ground there relied on by Lord Hardwicke; since, the very same circumstance there relied on, has induced twenty other cases to be decided in direct contradiction to it. From Lord Eldon C.’s notes, 1 Merivale, 222, 223, 224.

(16) See 3 Ves. 109.

(17) See 1 Eden, 38. 44.

upon general principles and rules established in the cases, that the Court could not go into the testator's circumstances, as it would establish a rule not to be adhered to. The testator intended to charge his personal estate with payment of his debts, and only made his real estate an auxiliary fund; according to the rule of law, where the intent of the testator is plain, or words tantamount to express words, that is sufficient to take it out of the rule: and that it could not be the intention; for the last clause, of giving the silver tobacco-box, and then the residue to his wife, is not sufficient to shew his intention to give the residue free from debts, but that the primary fund should be liable.

In the present case I am obliged to differ from the Lords Commissioners, and consider the whole personal estate as liable to the payment of the debts, and with respect to the leasehold estate, that the charge under which it came to the testator was prior to his purchasing it, and inchoent in the estate, and the estate itself left liable to answer it, and that neither the personal estate, nor real estate, ought to be charged with that debt. (18)

The Judgment, Ex relatione. †

† See, on this subject, the cases of Parsons v. Freeman, [Ambler, 115.] — Lewis v. Nangle, — Forrester v. Leigh, — Perkins v. Baynton, — Wilson v. Earl of Darlington, — Shafto v. Shafto, — Basset v. Percival, — all cited and stated by Mr. Cox in his note on 1 Wms. 664. also the cases of the Earl of Tankerville v. Fawcett, post. vol. 2. p. 57. — and Tweddel v. Tweddel, post. vol. 2. p. 101. — 152.

(18) After the usual accounts directed, and the application of the personal estate, his Lordship "as to the leasehold estate devised to the plaintiff, declared that the same was "subject to the mortgage thereon, and was not exempted from the payment thereof. "But in case the personal estate not specifically bequeathed should not be sufficient for "the purposes, his Lordship declared the deficiency was to be made good out of the "term of 99 years created by the will of the said testator." It was to be raised by sale or mortgage, as the Master should approve. — If by mortgage, his Lordship declared, that the tenants for life of the estates, as they should respectively come into possession, were out of the rents and profits of the estate comprized in the said mortgage, to keep down the interest of the said mortgage. R. L.

CAVENDISH against CAVENDISH.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 641.)

ELIZABETH Cavendish by her will, dated the 26th January, 1778, devised her house in Piccadilly to Lord George Cavendish, and, in the same will, was the following bequest: I give all my collection of gems, medals, and curiosities, together with the cabinet in which the same are usually kept, except such parts thereof as I shall hereinafter, or by any codicil afterwards dispose of, to Lord Charles Cavendish, his executors, administrators, and assigns, upon trust to permit and suffer the same to be held and enjoyed by the person who shall be entitled to my said house in Piccadilly. She then gives to the Duchess of Portland an oval box, a snuff-box with a portrait, and several rings and seals; afterwards, by a codicil, dated the 31st of January, 1779, she devised the house to [*] Dudley Long, Esq. and gives her cabinet, by the following description: "My collection, or cabinet of curiosities, consisting of coins, medals, gems, and Oriental stones, and other valuable things (except as before excepted) hanging shelves, snuff-boxes, bust on the stair-case of Cardinal Richelieu, my Florentine cabinet of Oriental stones in the second rooms, and the japan cabinet in the bed-chamber, 1785.

ANCASTER,
against
MAYOR.

In Court, 7th
May, 1784.

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 8th July,
1785.

Ornaments of the person do not pass by a bequest of a cabinet of curiosities, even though occasionally shewn with it.

[*468]

1785.

CAVENDISH
against
CAVENDISH

“chamber, formerly belonging to Lady Elizabeth Wentworth, my late aunt, unto Lord Charles Cavendish and Lord Cambden, upon the same trusts as before.” — She gave the residue to Lord Charles Cavendish, and made him and Lord Cambden executors.

The question was, whether certain ornaments of her person, (viz.) a diamond solitaire, a pair of ear-rings, a bow-knot, and some pearls, were, or were not, within the bequest. — To shew that they were, they gave evidence that those personal ornaments were shewn as part of her cabinet upon various occasions, that they were included in a book kept by herself, and called an inventory of her cabinet, and insisted they were of the same kind with the things disposed of under the exception. — On the other hand, they read the evidence of persons in the trade as to the different sense of gems and jewels, that the latter meant stones set and prepared for wear, the former when kept for curiosity only.

Lord Chancellor said, he took it, things to pass under the will must be ejusdem generis with those expressly devised, that ear-rings and other ornaments of the person are part of the personal estate, not specimens of natural curiosities. Had Mr. Pitt's diamond been in the cabinet, in the light of a specimen of natural curiosities, it must have passed to the devisee, and therefore he thought the proper line of distinction was, their being prepared for wear, if not worn; and directed an enquiry to be made with respect to the jewels being worn.

On the Master's report that they were occasionally worn, the cause came on before his Honor, sitting for Lord Chancellor, who was of opinion that that circumstance made the difference.

Dismissed the Bill.

[ *469 ]

Master of the Rolls for Lord
Chancellor.

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, July 8th.

[S. C. 2 Dick.
652.]

[A demurrer will not lie to a bill merely for a discovery to enable the plaintiff to go to law, on the ground that the plaintiff had not brought his action.]

Demurrer to a bill against the East India Company and their secretary, praying a commission to examine witnesses in India, and that the defendants might discover by what authority plaintiff was dispossessed of a lease for supplying Madras with tobacco, (the plaintiffs intending to bring an action.) overruled.

[*] MOODALAY against MORTON.

The same against The EAST INDIA COMPANY.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. B. fol. 712.)

THIS bill was filed against the East India Company, and against Morton their secretary. — It stated that a cowl, or lease, of the permission to supply the inhabitants of Madras with tobacco for ten years, had been granted to the plaintiffs, and signed by John Smith (a person properly authorized by the Company) that the plaintiffs, as lessees, covenanted to provide the settlement at a reasonable price, and that tobacco being considered in the East Indies as a necessary of life, had been, for time immemorial, supplied to the settlements of the East India Company, in this method. The bill further stated, that in 1782, (before the expiration of the ten years,) the Company, by their servants in India, dispossessed the plaintiffs, and granted another cowl to other persons for the supplying of tobacco; and that the plaintiffs intend to bring an action against the East India Company, but cannot support the same without the evidence of persons resident in the East Indies; the bill, therefore, prayed a commission for the examination of witnesses; and that the Company and their secretary might discover by whom, and under what authority, the second cowl was granted, and, for that purpose, might set forth letters, &c. of their servants in India, &c. — To this bill the defendants put in a general demurrer.

Mr. Madocks, Mr. Hardinge, Mr. Nedham, and Mr. Lloyd, for the plaintiffs.

1785.

MOODALAY
against MORTON.

plaintiffs. — The court will retain a bill in aid of a legal title; the only objection which can be brought to the prayer of this bill, for a commission to examine witnesses, is, that the action at law is not yet brought, but that objection has been over-ruled. It is sufficient that a foundation for an action has been laid, by the plaintiffs being dispossessed by the Company's servants. The bill is for the discovery, whether the persons who have done the act, are servants of the Company; if they are not, they will be liable in their own persons: but it is impossible to learn, whether they acted by the Company's authority, except in this way. — In a case before Lord Bathurst, a bill was filed for a commission to examine witnesses [*] in India, to prove an assault committed by Mr. Verelst. The action was not commenced, and the defendant demurred; but it was then held, that the circumstance of the action not being actually brought was immaterial, and the reason that the demurrer was allowed, was because the court would not compel a discovery of criminal matter. In Wyck v. Meal, 3 Wms. 310, it was held that the servant of a public Company should not demur to a bill of discovery of papers and orders, as the Company cannot be indicted for perjury, if their answer is false.

[ *470 ]

His Honor mentioned the case of Egerton v. Mostyn, where it was held, that before an action brought, a bill for perpetuating the testimony of witnesses could not be supported.

Mr. Hardinge replied to this, that in the case of Egerton v. Mostyn the trespass had been committed by a known defendant, here the bill was to discover by whom the trespass was committed. In Heathcote v. Fleete, 2 Vern. 422, such a bill was held to be well brought.

Mr. Attorney-General, Mr. Solicitor-General, and Mr. Mitford for the defendants. — There is no instance of a court of equity granting a commission to examine witnesses in a suit not existing, it is matter of discretion, not of right; a bill to perpetuate the testimony of witnesses cannot be brought until after the action is commenced, unless in cases where an action will not lie, as where it is apprehended that, after all the witnesses are dead, new claims will be made. — Then as to the discovery prayed, it is not a discovery of the parties who have done the injury. The plaintiffs state, that Smith and others granted them the lease to supply the settlement with tobacco, and that they have been dispossessed, but they do not pretend that they cannot bring an action against the new lessees, which, as they are in possession of the old lease, they certainly might do. But, by suggesting that the Company have papers in their possession, by which it will appear the dispossession was by their authority, they call upon the secretary to produce those papers. — In the case cited from Williams, it was admitted that the Company, if natural persons, would be obliged to make the discovery, and therefore the party could call upon their servant; but, in this case, it does not appear that the principals had any thing to do with the matter. In another view, this is a matter of great importance to the Company; for the grant of the lease, and the removal of the lessees [*] are incident to their character as a Sovereign Power. It was an exercise of their dominion as such, and no act of sovereignty can be questioned in a bill here, or in a suit at law.

[ *471 ]

Master of the Rolls. (1) — At the outset I thought the cases of a corporation, and of an individual were different; but I am glad to have the authority of Lord Talbot, that they are not. — In ordinary cases, when an action has been brought, the Court, as auxiliary to the remedy, will grant the commission. — This is constantly done in the Exchequer in Insurance cases. — I admit that no suit will lie in this Court against a (1) See also the report of the judgment, 2 Dickens, 653.

1785.

MOODALAY
against MORTON.

Sovereign Power, for any thing done in that capacity; but I do not think the East India Company is within that rule. — They have rights as a Sovereign Power, they have also duties as individuals: if they enter into bonds in India, the sums secured may be recovered here. So in this case, as a private Company, they have entered into a private contract, to which they must be liable. — If the discovery prayed were of a matter which would be felo de se, it would be improper to suffer any delay or expence; but here is a prima facie ground of action, the Company has put other persons in the way of doing the plaintiffs an injury. — But it is said that no action has been brought. — In addition to the cases cited on this part of the question, I remember one in point, that the commission may be before any action is brought. The discovery may be necessary, before the declaration can be drawn, if the suit be by original (which I believe it must against a corporation); I think, therefore, the plaintiffs are entitled both to the discovery and commission. — Mr. Solicitor says it would be perilous that the secretary should discover matters prejudicial to the Company; if any part of the letters called for are so, he need not discover those parts. In a case of Walpole and Ellison v. White, it was so ordered, that the discovery should be only of the parts of the letters, which were necessary. (2)

Demurrer over-ruled.

(2) The practice is, that the party may seal up such parts of the documents, as he shall judge himself, by affidavits, do not relate to any of the matters in question. See Wilson's Ca. Ch. 222.

[ *472 ]

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 14th July,
1785.

[*] FONNEREAU against POYNTZ. [25 July.]

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 406. b.)

Testatrix gave 500*l.* stock in long annuities — to A. — the same to B. — 200*l.* long annuities to C. the interest thereof to accumulate, an enquiry admitted into the state of her property, to shew she meant such sums of money, not annuities of this amount. (1)

THE testatrix, Jane Malcher, by will dated 8th of March 1783, gave the following bequests: “ I give to Mary Poyntz the sum of 500*l.* stock in long annuities, I give to Mary Hays the sum of 500*l.* stock in long annuities; I also give unto Miss J. L. Barbauld the sum of 200*l.* stock in long annuities, the interest thereof to accumulate until she shall attain twenty-one, and then the whole to be transferred to her by my executors; also I give unto Miss H. Dawson the sum of 100*l.* stock in long annuities, the interest thereof to accumulate until she attains twenty-one, and then the whole to be transferred to her by my executors. — And all the rest and residue of my estate, and effects, both real and personal, whatsoever and wheresoever, I give, devise, and bequeath the same, and all and every part thereof, unto my said two nephews Martin Fonnereau and Thomas Fonnereau, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns for ever.” — The bill was filed by the residuary legatees, that they might be paid the residue of the testatrix's estate, after payment out of it, of the several sums of 500*l.* 500*l.* 200*l.* and 100*l.* to the legatees; and upon the hearing in Easter term, 1784, it being then stated that the testatrix had only 120*l.* a-year, long annuities, the question was, whether the legatees should have the respective sums given to them, raised by sale of so much of the stock as would produce the same, or they were entitled, under the will, to annuities of the sums respectively given them, and of course must divide the whole of the testatrix's property rateably, leaving nothing to the residuary legatees.

(1) See upon the point in question, and several observations upon the principal case, Selwood v. Mildmay, 3 Ves. 306. 310. Per Lord Eldon C. in Druce v. Dennison, 6 Ves. 401. Et per Sir William Grant M. R. in Page v. Leapingwell, 18 Ves. 466. Vide also Putney v. Lord Darlington, antea, 223: 228. 230, 231, &c., with the references; and particularly the observations of Lord Eldon C. thereon, 6 Ves. 399, 400, 401. Et vide note (2) to Jeacock v. Falkener, antea, 296.

Mr. Scott for the defendants, argued, that these bequests to the legatees, must be bequests of annuities, the subject given not being stock, but an annuity. In Stafford v. Horton, a few days ago (post. p. 482. upon the re-hearing) it was determined that where the first legacy was to one of 100*l.* a-year, long annuities, then a legacy to another of 50*l.* long annuities, and 50*l.* in long annuities to a third person, that the two latter took 50*l.* a-year each.

[*] Lord Chancellor. — The case is, there is no such fund as is described by the will. Where the words used by a testator are sensible, they must be taken as they stand; if not, the construction must be taken aliunde. The question here is whether, the description being inapplicable, the legatee is to take 500*l.* a-year, or 500*l.* is to be laid out for her in that fund. I am perfectly conscious the testatrix meant only to give 500*l.* it appears, by the terms, she could not mean to give 500*l.* a-year. But I doubt whether evidence can be admitted to explain the words, which are very nearly those used in the receipt. If she had expressly given 25*l.* interest, or share in long annuities, (the very terms of the receipt) it would have been very clear the legatee must have taken 25*l.* a-year, and the description, here, of stock, is the annuity itself, nothing else; and the sense of the words is describing the quantity of the annuity. But let it be referred to the Master to take an account of the personal estate of the testatrix, and, in particular, how much of it was in the long annuities, and reserve further directions till after the Master's report.

On the 8th June 1785, the cause came on for further directions, the Master having reported that the testatrix, at the time of making her will, had only 120*l.* long annuities.

Mr. Madocks argued for the plaintiffs, upon the manifest intention of the testatrix. Mr. Scott, for the defendants, upon the construction of the words.

Lord Chancellor. — It is perfectly clear, from the data, that the testatrix did not mean to give so much per annum to the several legatees, for she clearly meant a reserve of part of her fortune for the residuary legatees, to whose family she was under obligations: whereas, by the construction contended for, she has given away ten times as much as she had to give. Had her fortune been sufficient to have satisfied all the legacies, they must have taken place according to the words; but not being so, the difficulty is to lay down any rule for admitting evidence of the state of her property at the time, in order to construe the will against the direct and natural meaning of the words; although the intention of the testatrix appears perfectly clear, from other circumstances which amount to [*] demonstration, that she did not mean them in that sense. If I could find out such a degree of ambiguity as the law has suffered to be explained by evidence, I should be very glad to do it. If it had been doubtful out of what fund the legacy was to arise, that would have been matter to explain by evidence; but, upon examining the receipt, she has used words so near the technical description, and so apposite to dispose of so much per annum, that I do not know what I can do, without going too far in point of precedent. It is a very hard case, but the words are too near those a man of business would make use of to dispose of so much per annum. I must therefore declare the legatees entitled, respectively, to their 500*l.* 200*l.* and 100*l.* per annum, and they must abate in proportion.

The manifest reluctance with which this judgment was given induced an 1785.

FONNEREAU
against POYNTE.

[ *473 ]

[ *474 ]

1785.

FONNEREAU
against POYNTZ.

an immediate application, on the part of the plaintiffs, for a re-hearing. The cause accordingly came on again, when Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Maddock and Mr. King, argued for the plaintiffs. And Mr. Scott, Mr. Mitford, and Mr. Grimwood, for the defendants.

For the plaintiffs, it was argued. 1st. That this is a case in which parol-evidence ought to be admitted. It is true the Court will not admit parol-evidence to raise a title or gift; but where the title or gift is raised, and there is a doubt as to the person, or other circumstances, then parol-evidence shall be admitted. In this case, there is a latent ambiguity, not arising from the words themselves, for they are clear, but with respect to their application. In the case where there are two persons of the same name, the doubt is with respect to the application. So, where there is nothing answering to the words, parol-evidence is admitted. This is a case of that sort; there is no subject to which the terms of the will apply. Then it is precisely within the meaning of the several cases. In Hodgson v. Hodgson, 2 Vern. 593. Lord Chancellor said he saw no hurt in admitting collateral proof to make certain the person or thing described. In Cuthbert v. Peacock, in the same book, p. 594. he admitted the same, to explain the testator's intention that a legacy should not go in satisfaction. In 2 Vern. 252. to prove that the widow should have the personal estate free from debts — So in Harris v. the Bishop of Lincoln, 2 Wms. 135. [*] In Ulrich v. Litchfield, 2 Atk. 372. Lord Hardwicke laid down the cases in which courts of law or equity will admit parol-evidence. 1st. To ascertain the person, where there are two of the same name, or where there has been a mistake in the Christian or surname; and this upon absolute necessity, as in Lord Cheyney's case, 5 Co. 68. where there were two sons of the name of John, and if the Court had not let in the evidence, it would have made the will void. — The 2d is with respect to resulting trusts relating to personal estate, where a person makes an executor with a small legacy, and the next of kin claims the residue; in order to rebut the resulting trust, parol-proof is admitted. In the present case, the testatrix had only 120*l.* a-year, which she had purchased at different times. According to the construction contended for, she will have disposed of 1300*l.* a-year. — The surplus is given to the nephews, she clearly meant they should have something. This circumstance will let in the parol-evidence of the value of the estate, according to the case of Dyose v. Dyose, 1 Wms. 305. In King v. Philips, 1 Vesey, 232. Lord Hardwicke said, the legacy being so near the value of the estate, he would do what Lord Jefferies and Lord Cowper had done before, and accordingly directed an account of the value of the personal estate. (2) So in Cole v. Rawlinson, 2 Lord Raymond, 831. In 3 Burrow, 1896, before Lord Mansfield, the value of the estate was taken into consideration. In Milner v. Milner, 1 Vesey, 106. the intention being plain, the Court made up the whole sum. There are several cases of the same kind in Swinburne. — The error, here, was in respect to the quantity. She did not mean 500*l.* a-year, but 500*l.* to be laid out in that stock. 2dly. This construction is supported by the direction that the interest of the stock given to the infant legatees should accumulate. — The construction certainly must be interest of a gross sum, or of the original subscription, not of an annuity, which can produce no interest. There is no more a capital answering to the 3 per cent. than to these annuities. They were instituted at the same time, only one was redeemable, the other extinguishable. The receipt (which has been relied upon) is the same in both cases. It is called joint stock of 3 per cent. annuities: so that, according to the reasoning on the other side, if she had given 500*l.* 3 per cent. annuities, it would have been 500*l.* a year; which nobody ever imagined.

[ *475 ]

(2) See also in Masters v. Masters, 1 P. W. 425.

[*] For the defendants, it was argued, That admitting the parol-evidence in this case would overturn all the authorities from Cheyney's case down to the present time. If it could be at all admitted, it could not be to the purpose contended for; but if, upon the face of the will, there was a latent ambiguity, to explain that, the evidence might be admitted. The fund itself, there being but one fund of long annuities, cannot raise an ambiguity. If there were two such funds they might, and there are cases, of that sort, where an election seems to have been given to the legatees, Lord Bacon's Maxims, rule 23. and 25.; but, in that case, when you had explained by parol-evidence which was the fund, you could go no farther; the words of the will alone must explain the quantum of the fund given. All the cases are either, where it was necessary to ascertain the thing given, or the object to take; neither of which can apply here, the words having accurately explained the stock. Another head of those cases is, where the evidence is to rebut a resulting trust, where the instrument has not explained the thing, but that cannot apply where the thing is accurately described, and, being so, cannot be explained by any thing out of the will. In Green v. Howard, (ante 31.) your Lordship held the word relations had been generally determined to be relations within the statute of distributions, and that you could not go out of the will. In Kelly v. Paulet, at the Rolls, Trin. 1763 (3), where the late Duchess of Bolton bequeathed household furniture, and a question arose, whether plate passed, the person who drew the will said it was not intended, but the Master of the Rolls would not admit the parol-evidence. There is no case where the Court has admitted evidence of the property, unless where the will refers to specific property and mis-conceives it, or where there is an ambiguity on the face of the will. In 1 Vesey, 232., the evidence was not to prove the extent of the disposition. Dyose v. Dyose is quite distinct from this case; the will itself furnished the argument. It is a case by itself, and would not probably be so determined now. Parol evidence cannot affect this case, for if her property was not sufficient, it is only the common case of a party giving more of the case, the stock receipts are almost in the very terms used by the testatrix. And with respect to the interest being ordered to accumulate, the argument does not apply, the thing [*] given being an annual sum, the word interest is inapplicable. — The words can receive no construction, but that of 500*l.* a year.

Previous to Lord Chancellor's pronouncing his decree, Mr. Scott added to the cases he had cited, that of Doe, on the demise of Hanson v. Fyldes, Cowp. 833., where evidence of the value of the estate being offered and rejected at the trial, Lord Mansfield, on a motion for a new trial, held the evidence to be irrelevant.

Lord Chancellor. — So many cases, and the doctrines resulting from them, of so many various sorts, have been cited, — that it would be rash for me to give an opinion upon what is here reported, being too much engaged at present, to afford leisure to examine the matter so thoroughly as I could wish. However, from what I can collect from the cases, as they have been cited at the bar, and according to my own recollection of them, I do not apprehend, that the ground of reasoning, respecting the law upon this point, is extremely difficult. With respect to the case now before me upon the Master's report, it is impossible to doubt, that she did not mean what the plaintiffs contend for; the construing this will in such direct opposition to what every body must observe the testa-1785.

FONNEREAU
against POYNTE.

[ *476 ]

[ *477 ]

1785.

FORNBERG against POYNTE.

[ *478 ]

trix had in view, is what I must do with great reluctance; and the only question is, how to preserve the law, and yet to decide according to the intention of the testatrix. When it was first mentioned to me, I thought it totally impossible to admit evidence of her intention; and, upon maturer recollection, I may be biassed by what the testatrix meant, and may break into the principle of the law, which, for the wisest reasons, will not admit of an instrument being construed aliunde. — What shall we say then? for I lay out of the case (4) all declarations of the testatrix of what she really meant to give, at the time of making her will, and all statement of her property, from whence it might be inferred what she meant. (4) But, upon the other side of the question, it is a clear proposition, which Mr. Mansfield argued very amply, that every evidence, as to the description of the subject the testatrix has described, must be admitted. As in the case of a specific legacy, you must *hear evidence concerning the subject to which the will applies, in order to see whether the description [*] applies aptly or not*. It is impossible to deny that the statement of her fortune is external evidence. As to the case of Dyos v. Dyos, there was no ambiguity, either latent or patent: there was a legacy of 3000*l.* a-piece given to the younger sons, the residue to the eldest; and the question was, whether the residuary legatee should have any thing or nothing, which, if not mixed with the affair of the executrix having wasted the assets of the testator, is a simple question, whether a testator giving a larger legacy than he is worth, and then the residue to another, there could be a residue. I cannot agree to the law of that case; — for, in such a case, if the testatrix did not leave a residue beyond the value of the legacies, the residuary legatee takes nothing; so where the pecuniary legacies abate inter se, the residuary legatee takes nothing. And the law of the court is, that the intention of the testatrix's making a specific bequest, or pecuniary legacy, cannot be controuled by the statement of her fortune. — It has been much argued, that if she had given 500*l.* in this way, "I give 25*l.* stock in long annuities to A., 30*l.* in long annuities to B., and so on," having a fortune amply sufficient to supply a residue, not only in the general way, but for the particular fund of long annuities; that, in this case, the legacy should be only 20*l.* or 30*l.* But the annuities should answer the sum she really meant to give; therefore, if the construction of the will stood unembarrassed, it must go according to the idea of the stock, and mean 20*l.* per annum. But the great difficulty occurs where the criticisms in these cases have let in evidence, which, if let in, shews the intention of the testatrix, beyond doubt, concerning the thing which the testatrix meant to dispose of, which is a certain portion of a joint-interest in the annuities of 1761. The manner in which she has done it, has been by giving M. Poyntz the sum of 500*l.* stock in long annuities; and, upon enquiry, there appears to be no other stock of the kind; and therefore it must have been in her contemplation to give this particular kind of annuities. It cannot be contended, but that it was necessary to have laid before the court the condition of that fund, of which she meant to give certain proportions, to see whether the description would apply to it; and, if it is a specific legacy, whether it does, or does not, amount to the description

(4) Lord Eldon C., said Lord Thurlow's memory was disgraced by Mr. Brown's report of this part of the judgment (Editor's MS. note): and his Lordship, at the same time, properly asked, after referring to this passage, "Upon what ground, then, did Lord Thurlow admit the evidence?" continuing thus, — "As I have always understood, and now understand it from this report, upon this ground, viz. that the testatrix having given as a species of stock that, which was of no known denomination of stock, the will shewed she meant to give something, but did not ascertain the subject she meant to give, &c. &c. That was not contradicting any description in the will, &c." Vide 6 Ves. 401, 402. See also note (2) to Jeacock v. Faltener, antea, 296.

1785.

FONNEREAU
against POYNTE.

[ *479 ]

specific legacy; and although, not in all points, a [*] specific legacy, to gain a preference; yet in point of description it is so, being a certain sum of money. But it is said, on the other side, that it is a joint interest in a certain fund; and, therefore, it is necessary to ascertain the fund claimed by the legatee under the words of the will. I should have thought, had it stood clear of all other criticisms, although not an accurate description of 500*l.* joint interest in the funds, yet it was a sufficient one of 500*l.* stock in long annuities; at the same time, it is impossible not to observe that the expression, "*the sum of 500*l." is going out of the way. (5) But one does not call for the phrases, and, if the words are found to express the intention of the testatrix, that is sufficient, and if it had stood by itself, it is sufficient to show what the words meant, (*an annual sum of 500*l.) "I do give and bequeath, &c." (repeating the clauses.) The difficulty occurring is that she has been speaking of *a sum of 500*l. which expression, if standing alone, ought not to be interpreted by any other context, but must be taken in its whole complexion for the word stock: but if it stood with the power to admit of any other construction upon it, I must consider what the testatrix meant by the whole of the words, "*the sum of 500*l.* &c.*" and the additional words, "the interest thereof to accumulate." According to the natural sense of the words, "*sum of 500*l.* given to A. at one time, and the interest thereof to accumulate,*" I must suppose the sum to be the principal sum, and the second the interest of that principal sum. It has been contended, that the word "stock" in the will, would not mean the annuity, because it would extend to the rents, which are annuities; but, there, the stock is denominative of the total sum; otherwise, as to the long annuities, they are denominated by the annuity, and the circumstance of their being both annuities makes it very probable, that if a person were to speak of it, as a gross sum, he would speak of the stock, and not of the annuity merely. So the practice may warrant, that if the words had ended merely with annuities without speaking of interest, there would have been no necessity of the clause to have controuled them, but the second part of the sentence "and the interest thereof to accumulate," raises a doubt whether it means a sum, as producing interest, or the stock itself. The term is not a proper phrase; but this is not a grosser [*] inaccuracy as is used in the rest of the will. The word "transferred" is relied on as a technical phrase; but it weighs nothing, because the thing to be bequeathed, was not the stock, but the produce of stock, together with the stock itself. The interest, which is the growing produce of the stock, she meant to give, is to be laid out in order to accumulate: she never meant by the word annuity something. There is no doubt, if the word stock had been left out, but the meaning would be, that the *500*l.* was to be disposed of in long annuities, and to make a provision for that produce to accumulate, until the legatee should attain to one.* This being the doubtful interpretation, upon the face of the question arises, whether the state of the testatrix's fortune is not consistent with the construction of the will. It appears, by some other part of the will, that she was extremely anxious to make an ample provision for the family of the Fonnereaus; considering then the situation of her fortune, it is perfectly inconsistent to say that she could mean to give times more than she was worth in legacies. My opinion therefore

[ *480 ]

The description was imperfect, if she meant 500*l.* a year; '*the sum of 500*l.' tantamount to 500*l.* a year: by the subsequent addition of 'stock in long annuities,' 'interest thereof' was properly the interest of the sum of 500*l.* and not the sum of 500*l.* itself." Lord Redesdale's MSS. note in addition to the judgment as in the case.

1785.

FONNEREAU against POYNTZ.

is, that the judgment must be reversed; and that I can let in the evidence of the value of the estate, not to controul the bequests which the testatrix has made in words themselves distinct, nor to controul a bequest which she had made of a subject which she had accurately described; *but because the words she has used in the description are, upon the whole of the context, uncertain, whether she intended it as the interest of a gross sum to accumulate, or 500*l.* per annum: The peculiarity of this will furnishes sufficient doubt to warrant the admission of collateral evidence to explain it; and, if so, the statement of the testatrix's fortune is applicable to the purpose of such an explanation.* The judgment ex relatione.

[ *481 ] [*] MACNAMARA against JONES. [On further Directions, July 22.]

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 18th July.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. B. fol. 431. b.)

Testator devised to trustees to uses under which his daughter was tenant for life; and directed that annuitants, under his will, should take in satisfaction of all claims upon him. (1) The daughter had a claim of 10,000*l.* under the marriage-settlement, she must elect between the two.

An equity of redemption in copyholds passes by will without surrender.

THE plaintiff, Mrs. Macnamara, daughter of the late Arthur Jones, Esq. was entitled, under his marriage-settlement, to a sum of 10,000*l.* — He, by his will, [gave a great many annuities, and] devised all his real estates to trustees to the use of his daughter the plaintiff, for life, with remainders over, and ordered his personal estate to be laid out to the same uses. And the testator declared, that all the annuities, &c. therein given should be in full satisfaction for all demands the respective takers had upon him, except servants' wages. (1) Some copyhold lands (in which he had only an equity of redemption), devised by the will to the same uses, had not been surrendered by the testator to the uses of his will, and therefore descended to the plaintiff as his heir at law; and the question was, whether she could take the 10,000*l.* under the settlement, and the copyholds in fee, as heir at law, consistently with the devise, or must elect between them and the benefits given to her under the will.

Lord Chancellor. — The question is, whether the money under the covenant is a demand she must release. Every thing bequeathed in a will, is, in general, termed a legacy. Then the question is, whether the testator intended, by the general words, to provide for the 10,000*l.* secured by the marriage-settlement. It is argued that he did not mean this; for that a legacy is not an annuity, but a solid sum. If the general fund had been given to her absolutely, it would have been a vain question: but he has so given his whole fortune, that, as to her, it operates as an annuity, with remainder to her children, and upon failure of them, to other branches of his own family. Therefore, in every sense of the words, they extend to the daughter, as well as to any other annuitant under the will. It was argued that, if he had only devised the real estate to her, it would not have been a satisfaction for the sum secured by the covenant: but I know of no case that has decided that the rule does not extend to a devise as well as to a legacy. But here was a legacy of the personal fund to be laid out to uses, as to which she was a legatee; and it is impossible to [*] distinguish her demand of the 10,000*l.* under the covenant, from any other demand which would be barred. With respect to the copyholds, where the legal estate is not in the devisor he has no need to surrender them.† In this case he had

[ *482 ]

† The cases on this subject are collected in Mr. Cox's note, in his edition of P. Wms. vol. 3. p. 360.

(1) This does not appear in R. L.

only an equity, so that they pass by the will. She must therefore convey them to the uses of the will, and the 10,000*l.* being within the compass of the will, she cannot take the benefits given to her under the will, but upon the terms of extinguishing her claim under the settlement. She must elect to take under the will, or against the will. (2) 1785.

MACNAMARA
against
JONES.

(2) It appears that even under the decree made on the original hearing, so far back as the 16th July, 1781, the Master had been directed to enquire whether it would be for the benefit of the plaintiff to take under the will or not, &c. Upon the cause now coming on for further directions, upon several reports of the Master, the decree, after declaring (inter alia) that the plaintiff was entitled to have the 10,000*l.* laid out for her benefit, &c. proceeded thus: — “ But the said plaintiff is bound to surrender and convey the copyhold estate mentioned in the report, to be holden of the manors of F. &c. to the uses provided in the will, of and concerning the freehold estate therein devised. And his Lordship doth declare, that the legacies of 300*l.* and 500*l.* given by the said will to the plaintiff Mary M., and the interest and proceed of the residue of the said testator’s personal estate, given her during her life, and the life-estate given to her in the lands to be purchased with such residue, and also in the freehold and copyhold [estates] devised by the testator’s will, were so given on the terms of her releasing all demands on the estate of the said testator, which comprehend the several claims above-mentioned. Wherefore the plaintiff must elect, either to take the benefit of the several bequests above mentioned, under and according to the will, discharging and relieving the several claims above-mentioned, or to insist on the said claims; in which case, all which she might claim under the said will, and which she hath received or might hereafter receive by virtue thereof, must be accounted for, and applied to make good to the other residuary devisees the expence of satisfying the said claims. And the said plaintiff Mary M. electing, by her counsel, to take under the said will, his Lordship doth declare, that the said sum of 10,000*l.*, and the sum of 1126*l.* 2*s.* 2*d.* in the sixth schedule to the Master’s report mentioned, are to be considered as satisfied and discharged. And the said copyhold estates, held of the before-mentioned manors, are to go according to the uses of the said will. And it is ordered that all proper parties, as the said Master shall direct, do join in a conveyance and surrender, &c. And upon such conveyance and surrender being made, his Lordship doth declare, that the plaintiff Mary M. is entitled to hold the 5700*l.* New S. S. A. &c. &c.”
Reg. Lib.

STAFFORD against HORTON, [On further Directions.]

AND

HORTON against STAFFORD.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. B. fol. 533. b.)

In Court, 3d
April, 1784.
Lincoln’s Inn
Hall, 27th
July, 1785.

HORTON, possessed of considerable personal estate, and particularly of 200*l.* per annum, Bank long annuities, made his will, and, among other things, devised as follows: — “ I give to my daughter Priscilla Horton, 100*l.* a-year, [in the] long annuities. Item, I give Dr. Stafford, (one of the plaintiffs) 50*l.* long annuities. Item, I give to J. Blythe, 50*l.* long annuities, to be laid out in charity at his discretion.” He also gave 20*l.* to a servant, and then gave the residue to his wife, whom he appointed executrix. — The wife died before the testator. Upon his death, Priscilla the daughter, the defendant, took out administration, with the will annexed. Blythe died, and Stafford and his wife, the plaintiffs, are his executors, who by this bill claimed 50*l.* per annum, long annuities, as given to their testator Blythe; and Dr. Stafford, in his own right, also claimed 50*l.* per annum, long annuities, as given to him.

Testator made his will and gave to his daughter 100*l.* a-year long annuities, he then gave to the plaintiff 50*l.* long annuities, and to J. B. 50*l.* long annuities. These legacies shall be 50*l.* a-year annuities. (1)

The defendant, in her answer, swore that the testator was old and infirm, and gave instances of extreme weakness of intellect; and insisted that he intended to give to Stafford and Blythe only 50*l.* each, to be paid

(1) See Fonnercau v. Poyntz, antea, 472. Et vide Finch v. Inglis, post. 3 vol. 420.

1785.

STAFFORD
against HORTON.

[ *483 ]

out of the annuities. She stated, that after the making of the will, she was shewn it, and asked whether she was satisfied; that upon answering in the affirmative, her mother told her she might; that her father had left very little from her, and explained to her the difference, that the annuities left to her were 100*l.* a-year, but the others [*] only 50*l.* each. And she further swore, that the father at the time he made this will, destroyed a former one, in which he had given Blythe 100*l.* in money to dispose of in charity, and gave as his reason for it, that he thought it too much to give away from his family. — He also said he had given the servant 20*l.*, that her legacy might not be subject to the fluctuation of the funds. — The defendant filed a cross bill against the plaintiffs, to discover whether they did not know, by conversation with the testator, that he meant to give them only 50*l.* each. To this bill they demurred, and the demurrer having been over-ruled, they by their answers said, they did not know from any of his conversation, whether he meant to give them only 50*l.* each, but that he had told Dr. Stafford, he meant to leave a legacy to the poor of the congregation of dissenters in Broad-street, of which, he (Dr. Stafford) then was, and still is pastor.

Mr. Mansfield for the plaintiffs.

Mr. Attorney-General and Mr. Price, for the defendants.

Lord Chancellor, conceiving the legacies to be specific legacies, said they must be transferred as annuities; but reserved the consideration as to Dr. Stafford's legacy (2), whether it should be personally to him, or in trust to be distributed, till the Master should enquire into the matter, by examining him upon interrogatories, and till after the Master's report (2): and ordered the cross bill to be dismissed, but without costs.

A re-hearing was afterwards applied for in this cause, which came on this day (3), when the former decree was affirmed.

(2) No such thing was done either at the original hearing, or on the present occasion. The legacy to Dr. Stafford “ of 50*l.* a year long annuities was, on this occasion, ordered “ to be paid to him, together with the payments which had been made upon it, subsequent to one year after the death of the testator.” R. L.

The reference to the Master, made on the hearing of the cause, was merely as to the legacy given to Mr. Blythe. As to that, the Master had been ordered by the decree, to enquire whether it was intended as a charity on behalf of the poor, or for any and what other charity: and the Master was to approve of a scheme for the appropriation of it. He certified that the legacy to Mr. Blythe was intended for the poor of the congregation of the N. Broad-street Protestant Dissenters, one church belonging to whom was in N. Broad Street, of which Dr. Stafford was minister; and another church belonging to which was at Islington, of which Nathaniel Jennings was pastor: and that the testator attended each of such churches. The Master also certified, there was an intention that the Orphan School in the City Road, and another school, should have shares respectively; and that he approved of a certain scheme for effectuating such intention, as stated in his report. On the present occasion, the Court (inter alia) directed him to review his report; and ordered the other legacy to be paid to Dr. Stafford, as above-mentioned. R. L.

(3) This seems quite a mistake. The cause only came forward (as above) on further directions, and there is not the least intimation of any rehearing in the Reg. Book.

1785.

[*] STEPHEN WALL, and other Persons beneficially interested under the Will of JOHN WALL, of Wirksworth, - Plaintiffs.

[ *484 ]

JOSEPH BUSHBY, and MARY his Wife, late MARY WALL, Widow and Executrix of JOHN WALL, junior, deceased, (who was Residuary Legatee, and only acting Executor and Trustee in the Will of the said JOHN WALL, of Wirksworth,) and also Administratrix de bonis non of the said JOHN WALL, of Wirksworth; GEORGE GOODWIN, and others, - - - Defendants.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. B. fol. 746. b.)

*Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 1st
August.*

JOHN Wall, of Wirksworth, 22d October 1768, made his will, by which he gave a legacy and an annuity to Stephen Wall his brother, one of the plaintiffs, and also other annuities and interests to others of the plaintiffs, and gave the residue to the late John Wall the younger, and appointed his cousin John Wall the elder, and the said John Wall the younger, executors. The testator died 8th August, 1769. John Wall the elder renounced the executorship, and the said John Wall the younger proved the will, and took possession of the property, a considerable part of which consisted of mortgages, and other securities taken by the testator, several of which were of small amount; and determining to keep those which were best secured upon the present securities, and to call in others, he employed Goodwin, one of the present defendants, for the latter purpose. John Wall junior died 30th May, 1773, having by his will appointed the plaintiff Mary executrix of his will. — She proved his will, and took out letters of administration de bonis non, and with the will annexed, of John Wall, of Wirksworth. — Goodwin continued to call in the securities of the first testator, and some monies arising from his estate were laid out upon fresh securities. About August, 1774, some of the annuitants under the will of John Wall of Wirksworth, filed their bill against the defendant Mary and John Wall the elder, the co-executor with John Wall junior, of John [*] Wall of Wirksworth, praying to have their annuities under the will. And in June, 1775, the present bill was filed by the plaintiffs against the defendant Bushby, (who in the interim had married the defendant Mary,) his wife, and Goodwin, who was no party to the former bill, praying an account of the original testator's estate and effects, and application of them to the purposes of his will, according to their respective interests therein, and also praying an injunction against the defendants to prevent their receiving any more of the personal estate, and that a receiver should be appointed. — To this bill, Goodwin put in his answer and annexed schedules, containing an account of the securities in his hands, and the monies paid by him, and the defendants Bushby and his wife admitted assets, and said they were ready to come to such account, and apply the trust money as the Court should direct. On the 9th of May, a motion was made on the part of the plaintiffs, and it was ordered (by consent of the defendants) that it should be referred to the Master to take an account of the personal estate of the original testator, come to the hands of John Wall, or the defendants;

An admission of assets, by the executor's answer, is waived by the plaintiffs going on to an account of assets, and procuring a receiver to be appointed.

Infants are bound by a decree taken by consent (1), although no reference to a Master to enquire whether it was for their benefit.

[ *485 ]

(1) That a decree taken by consent cannot be set aside, see Downing v. Cage, 1 Eq. Ca. Ab. 165. Bradish v. Gee, Ambler, 229. Harrison v. Rumsey, 2 Ves. 488. Norcot v. Norcot, in Dom. Proc. February, 1702. MS. Tab. and 7 Vin. Abr. 398. The Editor finds, however, that in one case such a decree has been reversed. Butterfield v. Butterfield, 1 Ves. 133. 154. and from the Reg. Book, Supplement, 81.

1785.

WALL
against BUSHBY.

and that what should be found due should be answered by them, and that they should be enjoined from receiving further sums, and a receiver appointed for that purpose. In consequence of this order, Goodwin paid the balance in his hands into the Bank. Several motions were afterwards made, and the plaintiffs went on (notwithstanding the admission of assets) to take an account of the effects of the original testator, and the Master made a general report of the sums received by the defendants, and afterwards by the receiver, which report was afterwards ordered to be reviewed, and a number of applications made to the Court, by which the cause was greatly protracted. In the mean while, several of the securities taken originally by the testator, and by the defendants, upon placing out sums in their hands, proved bad, by which the assets of the testator became insufficient to answer the purposes of his will. And the cause now came on upon the Master's report for further directions, upon the question whether the estate of the testator turning out to be insufficient, the defendants, Bushby and his wife, were bound by their admission of assets, to make good that deficiency, or the same was waived by the plaintiffs having gone on to an account before the Master.

[ *486 ]

[*] Mr. Madocks and Mr. Hollist (for the defendants). — Although the admission of assets would have made the executrix, in the first instance personally liable, the conduct of the plaintiff, in proceeding to an account before the Master, and obtaining a receiver to be appointed, has waived that remedy. By this mean, they have taken the management of the assets into their own hands; and it is impossible that they can take the conduct of the assets, and make the defendants liable for them, on account of their prior admission. — The appointment of the receiver was a flat contradiction to the admission of assets, and is a discharge of the executrix from her office. The assets, at the time, appeared to be more than sufficient to pay the debts, by above 1000*l.*: during the conduct of them in other hands, some of the securities have proved deficient, and the costs of the suit have amounted to 630*l.* It would be unjust with respect to the defendants, to suffer the plaintiffs, after this long delay, to have recourse to the original admission of assets. There are cases, that the admission of assets does not bind the party admitting them to every extent; and, on the other hand, that it will not preclude the other party from an account, as otherwise the admission of an insolvent executor might defeat all attempts of the creditor or legatee, to obtain the assets. In Norton v. Turvill, 2 Wms. 145., the admission of one executor did not preclude the account against the others. In Holt v. Holt, 1 Ch. Ca. 190. — 1 Eq. Abr. 85., the executors had entered into a recognizance, and losses happening, which diminished the fund, it was held the recognizance was only a security for the assets remaining after the losses. In Horsely v. Chalonier, 2 Vesey, 85., it is said, that on certain circumstances, the Court will not pin down an executor by the admission of assets, as in the case of the money being in a banker's hands. The best bank in England may fail, and that undoubtedly will not bind him. The conduct of the assets would certainly be a waiver of the admission, if all the parties were adults; here some of them are adults, and some are infants; but the infants are also bound by the act of the Court, by which the account (on the consent of the parties) was ordered to be taken. (2)

[ *487 ]

Mr. Price (for the plaintiffs). — This is the case of a direct admission of assets; but it is said the plaintiffs have waived the admission by their mode of proceeding: but why should the [*] application that an executor who has received part of the fund, and seems likely to prove insolvent, should be restrained from receiving more, be a waiver of the admission of what he has already received? The application for a receiver is for the purpose of preserving the assets, which is equally beneficial to the defendant as universal heir, as it is to the plaintiffs or legatees. The case of Holt v. Holt, that a party entering into a recognition upon an idea of a sufficient fund, shall not be answerable if the fund prove deficient, seems to be doubtful law, and to be contradicted by Keyling's case, 1 Eq. Abr. 239.; there the testator's estate consisted of East India stock, which he ordered to be converted into money, and the executor, conceiving it to be amply sufficient to pay, gave bonds to the legatees, but kept the stock until it fell so low as to be insufficient; he then brought his bill, that the legatees to whom he had given bonds might abate, but the Lord Keeper refused to give him any relief as to those who had bonds, and as to the other legatees, he was to answer for the stock at the price it bore at the end of twelve months from the testator's decease. This case is an answer also to that of money in a banker's hands. So in the case of Roberts v. Roberts, before the late Master of the Rolls. The bill was filed by a single legatee against the executors for his legacy, the executors admitted assets, the bill was afterwards dismissed for want of prosecution; the legatee filed a second bill; in the answer the executor took notice, that in his first answer he had admitted assets, but stated, that by losses which had happened since, the fund had become insufficient: His Honour held him to be bound by his first admission of assets, and, upon an appeal to the present Lord Chancellor, he affirmed the decree, observing, that the executor, in his second answer, only stated, generally, a deficiency having taken place since his first answer, without mentioning the particulars; he added, at the same time, that a case might be made out, which would enable the Court to relieve the executor from his admission of assets, but it must be a very strong case.

(2) See note (1), antea.

Lord Chancellor. — The single question remaining in this cause, is what shall be the effect of this kind of decree made without any regular form of hearing. The bill is filed by the legatees of John Wall against Bushby and his wife, as executrix of John Wall the younger, and administratrix de nobis non, of [*] John Wall the elder; and also against Goodwin, who was neither executor nor administrator, but had received some part of the effects. It was admitted, by the answer, that there were assets to pay the legacies: several adults, and several infants are concerned in the claim. A motion was made for an injunction, to restrain the defendants from receiving any part of the effects then outstanding, and that a receiver might be appointed to get in the further effects, and the mortgages be delivered into his custody for that purpose. — Upon the coming in of the defendant's answers, the plaintiffs might have set down the cause upon the bill and answer, and might have taken a personal decree against the defendants for their demands; but the plaintiffs thought proper to make the motion, and the decree was taken by the consent of Bushby and his wife, and of Goodwin, who was bound only in consequence of the effects he had received. I will not say but a case might be made, when the fund appeared to be in danger in the hands of the executors, that the Court will take the assets out of their hands, notwithstanding they had admitted assets: but, in the present instance, it was proposed and agreed, that the decree should be taken in the form it was. — Mr. Madocks considers the case as if all the parties were adults: then the question is, what difference arises from some of them being infants. The Court does not usually make any decree by consent, where infants are concerned, without referring it to a Master, to enquire whether it will be for their benefit; but when once the decree is pronounced, without that 1785.

WALL
against BUSHBY.

[ *488 ]

1785.

WALL
against BUSHY.

[ *489 ]

that previous step, the authority is the same as if it had been referred to a Master, and he had made a report that it would be for their benefit. So an order for maintenance, though usually made upon a reference to a Master, if made without would be equally binding. — This circumstance is therefore out of the case ; in the case of adults, the effect of this decree is not merely to restrain the defendants intermeddling with the outstanding effects, but it stands as if no such motion had been made, and as if the application for the decree had been upon the record. The plaintiffs might be afraid if they took a decree upon the admission of assets, that the personal fund of the executors might not be sufficient (3), especially as no decree could have been made against Goodwin, who was only the agent of the executors : it probably would have been unwise to have done so. — They took a decree therefore, as if there had been no [*] admission of assets, and as if Goodwin had been a principal accountant ; it proceeds to direct a full and general account from all parties, and requires the executrix and Goodwin to pay what they and Wall had received. It turns out that a part of the receipts had lain in the hands of John Wall the younger unemployed ; and the consequence of this, was one of the sharpest modes of procedure that can be against an executor, that of making him liable for the interest or produce, which accordingly has been paid to a great amount. The Court having taken upon itself the management of the fund ; and the fund having then been sufficient, but, by means of the ulterior demand arising from the length of this process, become deficient, brings it to the single question, whether a plaintiff who is entitled to a personal decree, but who chuses to take an account, shall afterwards recur to the admission of assets, to found a personal decree. I thought at first that the admission of assets would bind the executor in every stage of the cause ; but I now think the decree they have taken perfectly inconsistent with the personal decree they might have had, and that they have made an election by which they are bound ; and that the circumstance of there being infants concerned will make no difference, but that they are bound by the act of court, which proceeded on the idea that it would be for their benefit : the plaintiffs must therefore stand upon the decree of 1776, the legatees who are unpaid, must abate in proportion, and the executors must stand in the place of those who have already been paid, and abide the loss upon such abatement.

(3) See accordingly in Norton v. Turvill, 2 P. W. 145, 146.

NOWLAN against NELLIGAN, his Wife, and Others.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. B. fol. 789.)

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 5th
August.

Testator gave his whole property to his wife, making no express provision for his daughter, — “ but in case of death happening (1) to his wife, desired his executors to “ take care of the whole for his daughter.” The wife shall have the whole for life only, with remainder absolutely to the daughter.

NOWLAN, the father of the plaintiff, (who was an infant) being about to sail for the East Indies, made a testamentary paper in the following words : — “ I give and devise to my beloved wife Harriot Now-

(1) Vide Billings v. Sandom, antea, 393. and the notes. Trotter v. Williams, Prec. Ch. 78. Douglas v. Chalmers, 2 Ves. jun. 501. 507, 508. King v. Taylor, 5 Ves. 809, 810. and Cambridge v. Rous, 8 Ves. 12. 17. 19. 21, 22, 23. and note (3) to p. 491. postea.

“ lan,

"lan, all my real and personal estate; I make no provision expressly for my dear daughter (the plaintiff), knowing that it is my dear wife's happiness, as well [*] as mine, to see her comfortably provided for; but in case of death happening (2) to my said wife, in that case, I hereby request my friends Stables and Hunter, to take care of, and manage to the best advantage, for my lovely daughter Harriot Nowlan, all and whatsoever I may die possessed of." The testator died in his passage to India. The executors proved the testamentary paper, and got in his personal estate, to the amount of 7947*l.* 10*s.* with which they purchased 11,000*l.* 4 per cent. annuities. The mother afterwards married the defendant Nelligan, and, by a settlement previous to that marriage, 5000*l.* part of the 11,000*l.* 4 per cent. annuities were settled to the use of the plaintiff, at 21, or marriage, and the remaining 6,000*l.* upon the defendants, and the children of that marriage, and there was a covenant to secure the outstanding property of the former husband, one-third thereof to be to the use of the plaintiff, and the other two-thirds to the use of the defendants and their children.

The present bill was filed by the plaintiff, praying that the 5000*l.* and 6000*l.* 4 per cent. annuities, might be transferred, and the rest of the testator's property secured, to the use of the plaintiff, subject to the life-estate of her mother, and be declared, subject to such life-interest, to belong to the plaintiff. — The defendants, by their answers, insisted that the whole property vested absolutely by the testator's will in the wife, and that the settlement made by them in favour of the daughter was a mere voluntary settlement.

The cause came on to be heard in Easter term, 1782, when,

Mr. Morris and Mr. Scott, for the plaintiff argued, that the words of this testamentary paper were sufficient to raise a trust for the daughter in the whole of the testator's property, subject to the wife's life-interest. That this was a similar case to those where the words hoping, desiring, confiding, had been made use of. The words I make no provision meant only during the wife's life, the testator trusting to her care and affection; but now that she was married again, it was peculiarly incumbent upon the Court to protect this property for the child by the former marriage. — They cited Harding v. Glyn, 1 Atk. 469. [to shew that the words "desiring," &c. raised a trust (3).]

[*] Mr. Attorney General and Mr. Mansfield for the defendants, admitted that a party may, as in the case of Harding v. Glyn, leave his property, with such a direction as should controul the discretion of the devisee, but contended that the words here I make no express provision, shewed it was not the intention of the testator so to do, but to intrust the whole to the care of his wife. They cited Harland v. Trigg, (ante. 142.) as a case where such direction had been over-ruled.

Lord Chancellor said, that he determined the case of Harland v. Trigg, upon the ground of its being impossible to distinguish the object for whom the testator intended his estate; not from the words being insufficient to raise a trust, had the object been certain.

The counsel for the defendants then contended, that the words in case of death happening to my said wife, meant in case of her decease in the testator's life-time, or before he had made any other disposition of his property, in all other events he trusted his wife would provide properly for the daughter, and in this expectation he had not been disappointed, since she had made a provision of 5000*l.* for her at 21 or mar-1785.

Nowlan
against Nelligan.

[ *490 ]

[ *491 ]

(2) See the preceding note.

(3) See Harland v. Trigg, ante, 142. and Wynne v. Hawkins, ante, 179. with the notes.

riage,

1785.

Nowlan
against Nelligan.

riage, instead of making her wait till her own death for any part of the fortune.

Lord Chancellor observed, that in the case upon the Duchess of Buckingham's will, the argument was, that although the words were those of civility and confidence, yet they bound the property as much as if they had been more obviously obligatory. — But he said, that, in this case, the prior words expressly controlled the subsequent ones. — It being necessary that some accounts should be taken before the Master, Lord Chancellor did not determine the point, but reserved it till the Master should have made his report.

The cause came on again before his Lordship this day for further directions, when, after a very short argument, in which it was suggested, by the counsel for the plaintiff, that it might be proper not only to secure the property, but to give her an allowance for maintenance during the wife's life-time :

[ *492 ]

Lord Chancellor said that it was impossible to tell, with precision, what was the testator's meaning, but he thought it [*] too much to determine that in case of death happening, meant dying in the husband's life-time, that therefore the meaning must be supposed to be in the event of her death, whenever it should happen. (4) His Lordship therefore directed the whole fund to be transferred to the accountant-general, the whole annual produce to be paid to the defendants, so long as they should continue to maintain the plaintiff, [in a suitable manner] with liberty to her to apply, if they should discontinue such maintenance.†

† Vide Pearson v. Garnet, post. vol. 2. p. 38—226.

(4) In this case “ it was evident that some benefit was intended for the daughter ; but “ it was doubtful, as the interest was not clearly expressed, whether it could be made “ effectual by imposing a trust upon the will. Some benefit, however, was evidently in- “ tended for the daughter ; and none could be assured to her, except by limiting her “ mother to an interest for life. The construction was, therefore, agreeably to that in- “ tention, that the words meant ‘ upon ’ or ‘ at . ’ ” — Per Sir W. Grant, M. R., on the principal case, in Cambridge v. Rous, 8 Ves. 22.

READ against CROP.

(1)

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 8th
August.

Testator devised all his estates in different places (which he had surrendered) to his wife for life, with remainders over. In some of the places he had no estates but in right of his wife. These did not pass by the will, and do not put the wife to an election.

WILLIAM Balchen by his will, 24th June, 1765, devised “ All his “ freehold and copyhold estates, situate at Roydon, Thorley, Epping, and Witham, in the counties of Essex and Herts, (which copy- “ holds he had surrendered to the use of his will,) and all other his “ freehold and copyhold estates” to Crop and Tapp, in trust for his wife for her life, and after her death, in trust to sell the same and divide the produce among his children in the manner directed. The testator, at the time of his death, was seised in fee of a copyhold estate at Witham, and also of a moiety of an estate at Thorley, to the other moiety of which his wife was entitled in her own right. She was also seised in fee of two copyhold estates in Roydon and Epping, but in these places the testator had no property whatsoever. — He had no other real estates.

(1) Though there are entries of other matters in this cause, there is no entry in R. L. of the decision on the present occasion. It is probable that if entered, it would have been a mere dismissal of the bill.

For

For the plaintiffs, it was contended, that the testator having taken upon himself to devise his wife's estate, although the devise could not be maintained against her, yet, if she disputed it, she must forfeit every devise in the will, in her favour. She must therefore make her election either to abide entirely by the will, or to take nothing by it.

On the other hand, it was said it did not appear that he meant to devise his wife's estate, that although he had surrendered his own estate, and knew that was necessary to its passing, he had not attempted to surrender the other estates, and therefore certainly had no intention of devising them. He had not recollected, at the time of making his will, the respective rights to the different estates of which he was in possession; and, therefore, had used words of sufficient extent to pass all.

Lord Chancellor.—In Thorley, the testator had a moiety of the estate, together with his wife. He did not intend to devise her moiety, for he describes what he meant to devise, by the words his estate which he had surrendered. He had not surrendered any of his wife's estates, so that they could not pass by the devise. The words are too loose to raise the construction contended for. It is not like any of the cases which I remember of election.

1785.-

READ against CROP.

[ *493 ]

APPENDIX

OF ### CONTEMPORARY CASES.

NOTE.

Mr. Brown copied the cases from hence to page 550. from the notes of Lord Redesdale (then Mr. Mitford), including Akeroyd v. Smithson, which was a note of Lord Eldon's, Gartside v. Isherwood, p. 560., the Lord Chancellor's judgment to p. 564., and some of the subsequent cases, particularly Sowden v. Sowden, and Highway v. Banner, both incorrectly. From Lord Redesdale's MSS. notes.

[*] FLETCHER against ASHBURNER.

(Reg. Lib. 1778. A. fol. 447.)

[*497]

Rolls, June
1779.

JOHN Fletcher, by his will, devised his burgage houses and free rents, in Kendall, and all his personal estate to trustees and the survivor, and the heirs, executors, and administrators of such survivor, in trust to sell

Where a real estate is ordered to be sold [absolutely], and is blended with personal property, it becomes personalty, and shall go accordingly. (1)

(1) See the observations of the Master of the Rolls in this case (page 499.) cited and approved, in Wheldale v. Partridge, 5 Ves. 396, 397. No rule can be more satisfactorily laid down, and no result of cases can be more clearly stated, than Mr. Cox's most valuable note to Cruze v. Barley, 3 P. W. 22. (5th edition,) which the Editor has already cited in his note to Hewitt v. Wright, antea, 86. Since, however, the doctrine is so manifestly appropriate to the present case, and so strongly marks the distinction between it and Ackroyd v. Smithson, postea 503. (the next case but one), the Editor thinks it will be satisfactory to have the passages here in one connected view. Mr. Cox there referring to various authorities (amongst which are Ackroyd v. Smithson, post. 503, &c.); says, "The several cases on this subject seem to depend upon this question, whether the testator meant to give to the produce of the real estate the quality of personalty, to all intents, or only so far as respected the particular purposes of the will; for unless the testator has sufficiently declared his intention, not only that the realty shall be converted into personalty for the purposes of the will, but further, that the produce of the real estate shall be taken as personalty, whether such purposes take effect or not, so much of the real estate, or the produce thereof, as is not effectually disposed of by the will at the time of the testator's death (whether from the silence or inefficacy of the will itself, or from subsequent lapse), will result to the heir. In the case of Mallabar v. Mallabar, Ca. Temp. Talb. 79. and Durour v. Motteux, 1 Ves. 320. the question was between the heir at law and the residuary legatee of the personal estate (and not the next of kin); and in those cases the Court was of opinion, that upon the construction of the will, the real estate was converted into personalty for all the purposes of the will including the residuary bequests. These cases, consequently, do not decide the question which would have arisen, if there had been no residuary disposition, or if such " residuary

APPENDIX:

1779.

FLETCHER
against ASHBURNER.

[ *498 ]

sell so much as should be sufficient to pay his debts, and then to permit his wife Agnes to enjoy the residue during her life; if she so long continued his chaste widow; and after her decease, to sell and dispose thereof, and the money arising thereby, after deducting charges, and half a guinea each to the trustees for their trouble, to pay to, and between his son William and daughter Mary, share and share alike, provided that if his wife should happen to marry again, the trustees should, immediately after the marriage, sell all the estate and effects given to her for her life, and, after such deductions as aforesaid, should pay the remainder of the money to and amongst his wife, his son William, and daughter Mary, share and share alike, equally; and in case either his son William, or his daughter Mary should die before his or their legacy should become due, that the share or legacy of him or her so dying should go to the survivor of them: The testator died leaving Agnes his widow, William his only son and heir at law, and Mary his daughter; Agnes, by the custom of burgage tenure, was entitled to hold the burgage houses in Kendall during her chaste widowhood, against the disposition of her husband by will; Mary attained 21, but died unmarried in the life of her mother and brother. William was 21 at the death of the testator, and died without issue in the life of his mother; the mother died the widow of the testator: upon her death a bill was filed by the heir at law of William and John the testator, against the trustees and the personal representatives of the testator and of the widow, to have a conveyance of the real estates devised by the will, to the plaintiff(*), the heir at law. The representative of the widow, who was the sole next of kin of William the son, by answer, claimed the property as personal; alleging that by the direction to the trustees to sell the real estates, they become as personal property, and as such, were to go to the personal representative of William the son, who survived his sister.

The cause was heard the 11th December, 1778, where the first objection taken was that the personal representative of William was not before the Court.

But the Master of the Rolls was of opinion there were sufficient parties to sustain the question; that the personal representative was a mere formal party, and that, if he thought proper to make a decree, a personal representative might be brought before the Master.

Mr. Madocks and Mr. Wilson further argued, with respect to the principal question, that the real estates devised by the will were still to be considered as real estates, and to go to the real, not the personal representative: that it was clearly the intention of the testator that the estate should remain, and, whilst it did so, was to be enjoyed by one person; that he directed it to be sold merely for the purpose of a division; that in consequence of the death of the daughter no division was to be made, and therefore the reason for the directions ceased; and from thenceforth, the son alone becoming entitled, upon the death of his mother, it was to be considered as land; they relied upon the case of “residuary disposition had been confined to what was personalty at the testator's death;

“but notwithstanding that such interest results to the heir, as being a part of the property “of the real estate undisposed of, it may yet be personal estate of the heir, and pass
“as such by a residuary bequest [for which position Mr. Cox refers to Heath v. Wright, “as to which, see per Lord C. antes, p. 90.] Another branch of cases (Mr. C.
“continues) are those in which the question has arisen between the real and personal “representatives of devisees under wills of the nature above-mentioned. See more v. Scudamore, “more v. Scudamore, Prec. Ch. 543.; Flanagan v. Flanagan, (cited) 1 Bro. 513; “Fletcher v. Ashburner, 1 Bro. 497.”

Flanagan

1779.

FLETCHER
against ASHBURNER.

Flanagan v. Flanagan (2), 8th June, 1768, before Lord Camden, which was a devise of real and personal estate to trustees, in trust, out of the personal estate, and by sale of a sufficient part of the real, to pay debts, the surplus, after payment of debts, to A. A suit was instituted for payment of the debts, and the real estates decreed to be sold: part was sold; and afterwards A. died, leaving a son and daughter, the cause was revived against the son, and it being apprehended that sufficient was not sold to pay the debts, a further part of the real estate was sold under the order of the Court. It afterwards proved that the money produced by the first sale was sufficient to pay the debts; the question was, whether the heir, or the personal representative was entitled to this money; it was alleged by Mr. Wilson, who cited the case, that Lord Camden's determination was [*] that whatever quality the fund then had, such it should retain; and he decreed for the personal representative: the other cases mentioned were Cruse v. Barley and Banson, 3 P. Wms. 20. Digby v. Legard, before Lord Bathurst. [3 P. Wms. 22. note.]

[ *499 ]

Mr. Kenyon and Mr. Chambre (on behalf of the defendants, the executors of the widow) contended that the testator had by his will directed his real estate, after the death of his widow, to be sold and blended with his personal estate, and the whole to be divided between his children, or in case either of them should die in the life of his wife, to the survivor. Upon the case of Flanagan v. Flanagan, it was observed that the Court determined the produce of the real estate to be considered as personal, because the Court had itself directed the sale to be made and the property to be changed for payment of debts; the cases of Digby v. Legard, and Cruse v. Barley and Banson, were treated as inapplicable to the present case, being cases of lapsed devises; Durour v. Motteux, Vesey, 320. and Mallabar v. Mallabar, Forrester, 79. were cited as decisive of the question in favour of the defendants.

In June, his Honor [Sir Thomas Sewell] gave his opinion; he observed that nothing was better established than this principle, that money directed to be employed in the purchase of land, and land directed to be sold and turned into money, are to be considered as that species of property into which they are directed to be converted; and this in whatever manner the direction is given: whether by will, by way of contract, marriage articles, settlement, or otherwise, and whether the money is actually deposited or only covenanted to be paid, whether the land is actually conveyed or only agreed to be conveyed. The owner of the fund or the contracting parties may make land money, or money land. (3) The cases established this rule universally. If any difficulty has arisen, it has arisen from special circumstances. In the case of Meetapple v. Bindon, 2 Vern. 536. it was determined that a husband was entitled to money to be laid out in land as tenant by the courtesy, and though it is held that a wife is not entitled to dower in a similar case, yet it is allowed that it is so held because cases have been determined, and not from any principle. The cases of land to be turned into money are fewer than those of money to be employed in the purchase of land. The principal cases [*] have been where real estates have been directed to be sold, and some part of the disposition has failed (4), so that something has resulted to the heir at law, as in the case of Emblyn v. Freeman, 1 Ves. 541. and Cruse v. Barley and Banson, 3 P. Wms. 20. These are all cases where a devise has failed, and the thing devised has not accrued to the representative or devisee, but to the heir at law of the testator. The case of Durour v. Motteux, 1 Ves. 320. is a strong

[ *500 ]

(2) Vide postea, 500. 513. 2 Vesey, jun. 77. and 176.

(3) See this approved by the late Lord Alvanley, M. R., in Wheldale v. Partridge, Ves. 396, 397.

(4) See Actroyd v. Smithson, postea, 503.

APPENDIX.

1779.

*Flanagan
against Assurance.*

[ *501 ] case to the point now before the Court; and if any thing could strengthen the general rule, the circumstances of the present case would do so. The testator has blended the real and personal estate together, and disposed of them, without distinction, for the benefit of his wife and children. Both real and personal estate are made one fund. In the case of Durour v. Motteux, Lord Hardwicke made this a principal ground for considering the whole fund as personal estate; In the present case, it might be uncertain, till the death of the widow, whether the estates must not be absolutely sold: both the children, indeed, died before her; but she might have married before the death of one or both. The interests of both the children were vested, subject, as to one of them, to be defeated in case either of them died before the mother. There could be no election to take the fund as land or money; for where an estate is directed to be sold, and the money divided amongst several persons, none has a right to say that any part shall not be sold; the question therefore is merely between the real and personal representatives of the son, whether the personal representative shall take the fund as personal property, according to the will, or the heir at law, shall take it, as if no will had been made. The case of Flanagan v. Flanagan (5) is a strong authority that it shall be taken as personal estate, according to the will. In that case the testatrix, Sarah Wooley, by will, dated 28th March, 1749, gave and devised all her real and personal estates to Francis Plumtree, in trust, in the first place, out of her personal estate, as far as it would extend, and, in the next place, by sale of her real estate, or a sufficient part thereof, to raise so much money as should be sufficient to pay her debts and legacies; and after payment thereof, in trust to convey the residue of the real estate, which should remain unsold; and pay the produce of such part as should be sold, and all other the residue of her real estates, between her father James Flanagan, and her brother James Flanagan, their heirs, executors, and administrators, equally. A bill was brought, by the creditors, for sale of the real estate, to supply the deficiency of the personal [*] estate for payment of debts; and a decree was made for a sale; and if any of the money to arise by the sale should remain, after payment of the debts and legacies, it was directed to be paid to James Flanagan the father, and James Flanagan the son, equally; and if any estate should remain unsold, the trustees were directed to convey it to them and their heirs equally: after the decree, James Flanagan the son died, leaving a daughter, and a son born after his death; part of the estate was sold, and afterwards James Flanagan the grandfather died, leaving his grandson his heir, and his grandson and grand-daughter his sole next of kin: after the death of the grandfather, a further part of the estate was sold, under an apprehension that the produce of the first sale was insufficient to pay the debts and legacies: it appeared, however, that the produce of the first sale was sufficient. A bill was afterwards, brought by the son of James Flanagan the son, claiming moiety of the surplus, as the real estate of James Flanagan his grandfather, to whom he was become heir against the personal representative of his grandfather, and against the daughter of James Flanagan the son, who claimed a moiety as one of the next of kin of her grandfather. It was objected, that the second sale, after the death of the grandfather, was improper. The Court determined, that the second sale, actually made under the decree of the Court, before the Master, could not be considered as improperly made: that there was no fraud, no collusion, and that the money ought to go to the personal representative of (5) See per Lord Loughborough C. also on this case in Osborne v. Lord Capot 2 Ves. jun. 77, and in Walker v. Denne, ibid. 176.

the grandfather; (6) The case of Digby v. Legard [9 Cox, P. W. 22. note.] is a different question. There the testatrix (Elizabeth Byerley) directed her real estates to be sold to pay debts and legacies, and gave the residue to five persons, to be equally divided between them, one of whom (Lady Cayley) died in her life-time. It was resolved that the devise, so far, failed totally, and should accrue to the heir at law. (7) The language of the decree is such, that the benefit of the devise to Lady Cayley should accrue to the testatrix's heir at law, Mr. Jerroice, who was a lunatic, and should be paid to his committee, as real estate descended to him. The case of Scudamore v. Scudamore, Pre. in Cha. 543. shews that, in all cases where the dispute is between representatives, the heir, or executor, shall have the fund according to the will or contract of the persons who gave or created it. There was a case of Ogle v. Cook (8), heard 19th February, 1748, which was this: Mr. Ogle made his will in 1744, and gave his real estate to trustees to sell, and to vest the money in stock, and pay the interest to his wife during her widowhood, and after her [*] death, or marriage, to his two daughters equally, except that the eldest was to have 1000*l.* more than the other: he gave the residue of his personal estate in the same way: he afterwards conveyed the real estate to one of the trustees named in his will, to whom he was considerably indebted, in trust to sell so much as should be necessary to pay the debt, and as to the residue in trust for Mrs. Ogle: part of the estate was sold, and then Mr. Ogle died. His youngest daughter died in his life-time. The bill was brought by the widow and the eldest daughter, against the son, who was the heir, and the trustees, to have the residue of the estate sold, and claiming the share of the youngest daughter, as personal estate of Mr. Ogle, to be divided between them and the son, as his next of kin. The son insisted the conveyance to the trustee was a revocation of the will; and, if not, that the share of the dead daughter was to be considered as real estate of Mr. Ogle, and descended to him as heir. It was determined that the conveyance was a revocation only pro tanto, to let in the debt; and that so much of the estate as remained unsold should be sold, and that the money raised, or to be raised by sale of the estate, made part of the personal estate of Mr. Ogle (9) There was another case about the same time, which is in 1 Ves. 174. Cunningham v. Moody, where, by marriage articles, 500*l.* was agreed to be laid out in purchase of lands, to be settled to the use of the husband for life, with remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, with remainder to the wife for life, with remainder to the children of the marriage, as the husband and wife should appoint; and in default of a joint appointment, as the survivor should appoint; and in default of any appointment to the children, to be equally divided among them, if more than one, as tenants in common, in tail general, with cross remainders; and if but one, to that child in tail general, and no appointment was made. The father and mother being dead, and the daughter being married, the trustees paid the 500*l.* to her and her husband, and they received it as money, and executed a release. The daughter had a child, which died, and she afterwards died without issue. A daughter of the settlor by a second

(6) See also Ornduff v. Lord Compton, 2 Ves. jun. 69. &c.

(7) So also McCreedy v. Smithers, post. 503.

(8) Ogle v. Cook was long thought to be at variance with the cases and the rule as above stated, note (1): and Mr. Scott (now Lord Eldon C.), in his famous argument in McCreedy v. Smithers, postea, 513, 514., takes notice that, at all events, it was overruled by Digby v. Legard, a later authority. Lord Loughborough, however, upon examining the Reg. Book, found that it by no means contradicted the authorities. See in Collins v. Pakenham, 2 Ves. jun. 686, 687.

(9) See, however, 2 Ves. jun. 686, 687. referred to by the preceding note.

APPENDIX.

1779.

Fletcher
against Ashburner.

[*503]

marriage filed a bill against the husband, representative of his wife, the daughter by the first marriage, for the 500*l.* considering it as land; and it was observed that she was entitled to the money, but that the husband of her deceased sister was entitled to the interest, during his life, as tenant by the courtesy. In the present case, William Fletcher, the son, had the whole beneficial title vested in [*] him as money, subject to his mother's interest for life or widowhood. She was his sole next of kin, and her personal representatives are now entitled to the estate as money; the bill must therefore be dismissed without costs.

30th November, 1779.

HEPBURN against DURAND.

Where sums are specifically charged in the bill to have been received by the defendant, he must answer specifically to them; and it is not enough to refer to a schedule of all sums received.

ON exceptions to a Master's report disallowing exceptions to an answer, one exception was, that the defendant had not set forth whether he had received particular sums of money specified in the bill, with many circumstances respecting the times when received, and of whom, and on what account. The answer referred to a schedule, as containing an account of all sums received by the defendant. Lord Chancellor was of opinion, that the defendant was bound to answer specifically to the specific charges in the bill; and that it was not sufficient for the defendant to say, generally, that he had in a schedule set forth an account of all sums received by him.

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 4th
March, 1780.[S. C. shortly
3 Cox, P. W.
22. note.]

Testator gave several legacies, and ordered his real and personal estate to be sold, his debts and legacies paid, and the residue to certain legatees, in the proportion of their legacies. Two of the residuary legatees died, living the testator. These shares are lapsed, and so far as they are constituted by personal estate, shall go to the person next of kin, and so far as they are constituted of real estate, to the heir at law. (2)

ACKROYD against SMITHSON, and others. (1)

(Reg. Lib. 1779. A. fol. 668.)

CHRISTOPHER Holdsworth, by his will, gave (int. al.) to the defendants, Smithson and Ibbetson, their executors and administrators, 200*l.* in trust to put the same out at interest, and to apply the interest in bringing up the defendant, Mary Brackelbank, then an infant, till 21, the principal to be paid to her at 21, and if she died before 21, then to be paid to her representative; and bequeathed to the Rev. Thomas Whitaker 100*l.* to James Roberts and William Roberts 100*l.*

(1) This Report was copied by Mr. Brown from the notes of Mr. Scott, now Lord Eldon, Chancellor.—From Lord Redesdale's MSS.

(2) S. P. Digby v. Legard, 3 P. W. 22. note, and Williams v. Conde, 10 Ves. 300, &c. See also Robinson v. Taylor, post. 2 vol. 588. and 1 Ves. jun. 44. Spink v. Lewis, post. 3 vol. 355. Per M. R. in W'heldale v. Partridge, 5 Ves. jun. 396. Et vide King v. Dutton, 1 Ves. & Beames, 260. and Fletcher v. Ashburner, antea, 497. and the note. Mr. Cox, after referring (inter alia) to the principal case, in his elaborate and most able note to Cruse v. Barley, 3 P. W. 22. (5th edition), which is stated rather more at length, antea, 497., says, "The several cases on this subject seem to depend upon this question:—whether the testator meant to give to the produce of the real estate the quality of personality to all intents, or only so far as respected the particular purposes of the will; for unless the testator has sufficiently declared his intention, not only that the realty shall be converted into personality for the purposes of the will, but further that the produce of the real estate shall be taken as personality, whether such purposes take effect or not, so much of the real estate, or the produce thereof, as is not effectually disposed of by the will at the time of the testator's death (whether from the silence or inefficacy of the will itself, or from subsequent lapse), will revert to the heir." See further ubi supra, and note (1) to Fletcher v. Ashburner, antea, 497.

each,

APPENDIX.

1780:

ACKROYD
against SMITHSON.

[ * 504 ]

each, to Grace Ogle 200*l.*, to George, Ann, and Phæbe Ogle, her children, 100*l.* each, to Joseph Scurr 200*l.*, to Benjamin Wright 200*l.*, to Mrs. Molyneux 400*l.*, to Hannah Close 150*l.*, to William Hawkeswell 100*l.*, to Mary Ross 200*l.*, to Joseph Marshall 200*l.* all which legacies, together with other legacies given by his will, he directed to be paid at the end of six months after his decease; and the said testator, thereby, gave all his messuages, cottages, lands, [*] tenements and hereditaments, situate at the Bank, in the township of Leeds, with their appurtenances, and all his real estate, not therein before devised, and all his household goods and furniture, plate, linen, stock in trade, and all his personal estate whatsoever, unto the defendants Smithson and Ibbetson, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, to hold the same to them, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns for ever, in trust that they should, as soon as convenient after his decease, sell all his said messuages, &c. for such price or prices as could be got for the same, and thereby to convert such real and personal estate, so to them devised, and every part thereof, into ready money, and by and out of the money arising by such sale, to pay all his debts, legacies, and funeral expences, and charges of proving his will; and after payment thereof, and retaining to themselves 50*l.* each, which he thereby gave them for their trouble, in trust out of such monies to arise as aforesaid, to pay all legacies and annuities thereby bequeathed, at the time and in the manner thereby directed; and if, after all such payments made, and putting out of the funds as thereby directed, for raising the annuities thereby given, and indemnifying his trustees from all charges, expences, and loss which might attend the carrying the trusts of his will into execution, there should remain an overplus in the hands of the trustees, which he apprehended there would be to a considerable amount, he directed that they, and the survivors of them, should, within six months after the same should be ascertained, pay the same unto his said legatees, Thomas Whitaker, James Roberts, William Roberts, Grace Ogle, George Ogle, Ann and Phæbe Ogle, Joseph Scurr, Benjamin Wright, Mrs. Molyneux, H. Close, William Hawkeswell, Mary Brackelbank, Mary Ross, and Joseph Marshall, in proportion to their several and respective legacies therein to them bequeathed; and the testator thereby willed and devised that two several sums of 250*l.* each, which he had therein directed to be put out on securities in the names of his trustees, and the interest arising therefrom to be respectively paid to M. Thackeray and R. Gaunt, during their respective lives, should upon the several deaths of them the said M. Thackeray and R. Gaunt, be paid in the like proportions unto them his said several and respective legatees.

Benjamin Wright and Mrs. Molyneux died in the life-time of the testator.

[*] The bill was filed by the next of kin of the testator, against the surviving legatees, and the heir at law; claiming the legacies given to the deceased legatees, their shares in the overplus, and in the two sums of 250*l.* as lapsed, and become part of the personal estate of the testator.

The cause came on at the Rolls, 10th July, 1778, when, his Honor (Sir Thomas Sewell) being of opinion that the surviving legatees took the whole residue, in proportion to their several legacies, dismissed the bill without costs.

From this decree, the plaintiffs appealed to Lord Chancellor; and the cause coming on to be heard before his Lordship, —

Mt. Kenyon attempted to support the decree;

But Lord Chancellor, being clear, without hearing much argument) that this was a tenancy in common in the residue, and that therefore the shares of the legatees who died in the testator's life-time, were undisposed

[ * 505 ]

APPENDIX.

1780.

ACKROYD
against BURNSON.

disposed of; said the only question was, whether such shares belonged wholly to the next of kin, or to the heir at law.

The Attorney General, Mr. Madocks, and Mr. Scheyn (for the plaintiffs, the next of kin) contended, that the testator had converted his real estate into money, out and out, that he had mixed two funds, and made all personal estate (3); that the cases therefore of Mallabar v. Mallabar, For. 79., and Durour v. Motteux, 1 Ves. 320., must govern the decision here, and that the blending the funds distinguished this case from that of Digby v. Legard (cited ante, 501.) Mr. Scheyn mentioned the cases of Flanagan v. Flanagan (cited ante, p. 500. Fletcher v. Ashburner (ante, p. 497.) and Ogle v. Cook, cited ante, 501.

Lord Chancellor thought the two former cases did not apply; but being, in general, of opinion with the counsel for the next of kin, asked the counsel for the heir at law, upon what grounds they could support his claim.

Mr. Scott (4) for the heir at law, said they claimed on his behalf such interest in the monies produced by the sale of the testator's real estate as the deceased residuary legatees would have been intitled to [*]; if they had survived the testator; or so much of their shares of the overplus, now in the events which have happened, undisposed of, as is constituted by the produce of the testator's real estate. That the heir at law is intitled to every interest in land, not disposed of by his ancestor, is so much of a truism that it calls for no reasoning to support it. It is not necessary for the heir at law to deny that the intention of the testator has designed him nothing; his intention has certainly been equally unpropitious to his next of kin; but it is not enough that the testator did not intend that his heir should take, he must make a disposition in favour of another: if he has not actually disposed of all his real estate, if he has not made an universal heir, the law will give such part of his real estate as he has not actually and eventually disposed of, even against his intention, and a fortiori in a case where he has expressed no intention, to the heires natus. If the interest of the deceased legatee had been an interest in the produce of mere real estate, not blended with the produce of personal estate, it has been admitted, upon both hearings, that the benefit of the lapsed devise would, according to the case of Digby and Legard, [3 Cox, P. W. 22 note.] and the principle of the case of Emblyn and Freeman, Pre. Chan. 541. and of many others, have accrued to the heir at law. It is admitted, and cannot be denied, that where a testator directs real estate to be sold for special purposes, if any of those purposes become incapable of taking effect, the heir at law shall take; because there is an end of the disposition, when there is an end of the purposes for which it was made:—but it is contended here the testator had not a special intention, but that he meant the produce of his real estate should be considered as personal estate, that he intended to convert it out and out; that he has not kept the funds distinct, but that he has blended them so as to be incapable of being distinguished, and that the cases therefore of Durour v. Motteux, and Mallabar v. Mallabar, are authorities in point that the whole fund is personal. — We admit that a person may decide what shall be the nature of his property after his death, so as to preclude all question between real and personal representatives. (5) — But we insist that if he has not actually and eventually so decided, they upon what the

(3) See Fletcher v. Ashburner, ante, 497.

(4) This most able argument confirmed the increasing reputation of Mr. Scott, and quickly led him, under the well-merited high estimation of Lord Thurlow and his contemporaries, through successive honours, to the most elevated station in his country. It should again be noticed that this argument is from his Lordship's notes.

(5) See in Fletcher v. Ashburner, ante, 499.

[ *506 ]

blaw chas the title to personal estate can no more claim in a court of equity, money arising from the sale of land, than the heir can claim property admitted to be of a personal nature. — As to the question of fact, whether the testator meant that in some event only, or that in all events the produce of his real estates should be considered as personalty, we admit [*] that, in favour of his residuary legatees, he meant to convert the whole into personalty in case all his residuary legatees should, eventually, take the whole; but we contend, that he has intimated no intention as to that part of the produce, as to which his disposition, in the event which has happened, has failed of effect. He converts it out and out, indeed, if you speak of his intention as to the qualities of the property which his legatees were to take; but, as to such part of the property as, in the event, they have not taken, he has not determined upon its nature; he never meant to determine upon its nature, as between his heir-at-law and his personal representative, or next of kin, because he appears not to have adverted to the possibility of any events taking place which would give the one or the other an interest in his property, and he has designated no part of his property for either. In the event, the one or other must take some part of it; but to say he has made it all personal property, and that therefore the law must give it to the next of kin, is to apply an argument deduced from what was the testator's intention in case events had taken place which have not occurred, for the sake of proving a similar intention, if circumstances happened directly contrary to those with relation to which only the testator framed his intention. To argue from what the testator intended with respect to residuary legatees, by way of proving that he intended the same in favour of his next of kin, is to reason from a case in which intention is expressed, to prove a like intention in a case which supposes the absence of intention: although, the testator therefore intended, that his legatees, if they had lived, should take their respective shares of such part of the general surplus as was produced by the sale of the real estates as money, he has not declared any intention relative to its nature in case that particular event of his should be disappointed. In the event, therefore, which has happened, it is so much undisposed of, arising from the sale of lands. Such money in this Court is land; and, as such, the heir claims it. — Suppose all the fifteen legatees had died in the life-time of the testator, would it not have been competent to the heir-at-law to have insisted, in equity, that no sale should be made of the real estate? Would it have been possible to contend that, because the testator had blended the funds, in order to make a disposition which never took effect, and without a view to any other given circumstances, that he had therefore blended them, if, in the event, he had made no disposition; that because he had made the [*] real estate personal to give it to his residuary legatees, and to disappoint his heir, he meant also to disappoint his heir, whether his residuary legatees did or did not, in the event, take the benefit of that disposition? The fact of his having blended the funds proves not a mere inattention, not mere indifference to the interests both of his next of kin, and his heir at law, — but it proves a purpose hostile to both: from that fact then be a ground, from whence to infer that, in a change of circumstances, he had a purpose of kindness and bounty to the next of kin, and adverse to the interest of the heir only. The reason of the intention ceasing, the intention should be taken to have ceased. The testator meant to change the legal qualities of his property, when he meant to alter the disposition which the law would make of his property: but if, in the event, the law was to make the disposition of any part of the property, — he meant, for ought that appears to the contrary, (and something must appear to the contrary to defeat the claim of the heir,) that the law which made the disposition, should decide on the qualities 1780.

Ackroyd
against Barnard.
[ *507 ]

[ *508 ]

APPENDIX.

1780.

ACKARD against SMITHSON.

[ *509 ] of the property of which it was to dispose. If then, in case all the residuary legatees had died, the heir could have prevented a sale, — is it to be said, that because a sale must be made, he shall not have that part of its produce which the objects of the testator's bounty cannot take? It is not true, that where it is necessary that a sale should be made to effectuate the testator's purposes, which are capable of taking effect, that such sale will convert the nature of that part of its produce which cannot be applied according to the testator's intention. In the case of Emblin and Freeman, Pre. Chan. 541. the heir was held intitled to 200*l.* arising from the sale of real estate, which the testator had made liable to an appointment by note, concerning which he made no appointment; and there a sale was necessary. In the case of Digby v. Legard, [3 P. W. 22. note] where the heir was held entitled to the benefit of the devise lapsed by the death of one of five tenants in common of money, to be raised by sale of real estates in the life-time of the testator, the heir could not possibly prevent a sale: As to the cases of Mallabar and Mallabar, and Darour v. Mottoux, they can be considered as authorities only by those who do not attend to the distinction submitted above: they are so far from deciding the case, that they establish no principle which applies to it. — In Mallabar and Mallabar, the real and personal estate are not blended by the terms of the devise in the beginning of the will, which is a devise of real estate only, upon [*] trust to sell: and that out of the moneys arising therefrom, the testator's debts should be paid, and after payment thereof, he devised, out of the remainder of the money, 500*l.* to his sister Mary Bainbridge, 500*l.* to his sister's two children, that should be living at the time of his decease, equally to be divided between them; 500*l.* to his nephew Nicholas, who was his heir-at-law; 500*l.* to be divided amongst the children of his late brother, James Mallabar, living at his decease; then follows the clause which was held to blend the funds. — “Item, after all my debts and legacies paid, I give and bequeath all the rest and residue of my personal estate unto my sister Esther Mallabar,” — and appoint her executrix. The question was, whether there was a resulting trust for the heir, as to the money arising from the sale of the real estate, after payment of the debts, and the several sums of 500*l.* The Court held that the testator had made all his property personal, or rather it inferred from the purpose of the testator, as far as that could be collected from the will, that the testator meant by the residuary clause to describe not only money strictly personal estate, but the money claimed by the heir likewise; the Court inferred this from the circumstance of the heir's having a legacy of 500*l.* out of that very money, and because, if a different construction was made, the sister his executrix, to whom the testator clearly intended to give a beneficial interest, would have taken nothing but a troublesome office: for, if the words, “the residue of the personal estate” did not include this money, the personal estate must have been first applied, to pay the debts and legacies; in exoneration of the real estates charged therewith by the will, and the executrix would have had an office of trouble without the benefit intended her: but though the Court considered the surplus of the money as personalty, as between her, whom it held to be a residuary legatee, and the heir, to effectuate the testator's intention, does it follow, that if the testator had died intestate as to the surplus, as the testator here did as to a part of it, that the Court would have determined against the heir in favour of the next of kin, in whose favour no such argument as to intention could have been urged? If the residuary legatee had died in the testator's life-time, the will must have had the same construction as if the residuary clause had not been inserted; for where the residuary clause has no operation to any substantial purpose, it cannot be considered as a part of the will: if it had not been inserted, the devise of the real estate would have [*] been a devise to pay debts and legacies merely; in such case, then, it is clear that, as to the surplus, there would have been a resulting trust for the heir. The debts and the sum of 300*l.* being paid, the testator's intention would have been satisfied, to the extent in which it could take effect; there would then have been an end of the disposition. There is no difference between such a case, and the present case, except that in that case there is no residuary legatee as to any part of the surplus; here there is none as to some part of it; there, then, is a general intestacy, as to the surplus, here a partial intestacy: but the effect of a partial intestacy must be the same, as to the part, as the effect of a general intestacy is to the whole. The napier of Durour and Mottoux is also a case between residuary legatees (8) and the heir-at-law; there, the testator gave all his real estates to sell and dispose of the whole with his personal estate, blending them, for payment of his debts, legacies and funeral expenses and performance of his will; he gave several legacies, and among the rest, 1200*l.* or thereabouts, whereof part was to be laid out in the purchase of freehold lands for charitable uses, some of which were, confessedly, within the Mortmain Act, and the rest determined to be so; the question was, whether the 1200*l.* should go to the heir-at-law, or to the residuary legatees. Lord Hardwicke said, that he was of opinion, that the money which should arise by the sale of the real estate was turned into personal, and so intended by the testator, it plainly appearing, that by the description of all his personal estate, he meant to include the whole in the residue; so that it is to be considered now as personal estate; then it comes to this, — a will is made, in which there are several legacies, and the residue of the personal estate is given away; one of the personal legacies is void by law; the Court cannot say, for that reason, that he intended to disintestate, for giving the residue over includes every thing, let it fall in by reason of the legacies being void, or lapsing in the life of the testator. Now, here, the reasoning of the Court is grounded upon the testator's intention to give his residuary legatees every thing which was not otherwise effectually disposed of. And the testator was held to have converted his real estate out and out into personal estate, to effectuate that intention; for the residuary legatees could not otherwise take the 1200*l.* But if the residuary legatees had died in the life-time of the testator, and the next of kin had been called upon to [*] sustain the question against the heir, the reasoning of the Court would not apply: arguments from intention, in their favour, could not be resorted to, and the Court might have said, and must have said, that the testator meant to disintestate as to the surplus, if there was no residuary legatee named in his will living at his death. It could not, in that case, have been said, that the testator meant, by the description of all his personal estate, to include the whole in the residue, and therefore the void legacy of 1200*l.* among the rest; because the will, in that case, must be considered as if nothing concerning the residue had been inserted in it. Here he meant to make one fund of the whole, to effectuate his intended disposition of the whole; but if subsequent events defeated that disposition, his intention, in case it took effect, is no proof that he had the same intention in case it did not take effect. If there had been no residuary clause, and if the residuary legatees had been dead, it could have no effect, and therefore could not have been attended to. In Durour v. Mottoux, it would have been nothing more than a devise of real and personal estate for payment of debts, valid legacies, and funeral expenses; it would have been then a disposition with a special intention; that intention being frustrated, and 1780.

of

APPENDIX

Accounts
against Partitions.

[*510]

[*511]

(8) See Mr. Cox's note to Curtis v. Curtis, 4, 5, 22. decisions, and in Robinson v. Robinson, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100. would

APPENDIX.

1780.

Adams v. Ladd [ 815 ]

[ *512 ]

would have been a resulting trust as to the surplus. It is said, if this way of reasoning was good, it would have entitled the heir to the 200*l.* in the case of Darow v. Motteux, for it was the testator's intention there, that the same sum should be considered as money only; in case the charity took it; that the testator never adverted to the event which happened, viz. the residuary legatee's taking it, an event, which he as little thought of as he did of the next of kin's taking the residue. The answer is, the rule of law would not suffer in that case what no rule forbids in this; the law says, where there is a residuary legatee, the testator shall be presumed to mean that he should take whatever lapses, either by the death of the legatees, or whatever is not given according to law. (7) So long as there is any person to take, who is declared by the testator to be preferred by him to those whom the law appoints to succeed him, the heir can have no claim. If the testator spoke for himself, he would say, if my special intention of kindness to the charity fails, my general intention of bounty to my residuary legatee shall take place: but where the residuary legatee is removed, there is nothing like a declaration, by the testator, in favour of the next of kin, to entitle them to succeed the residuary legatees, as there is [*] where there is a general residuary clause in a will in favour of the persons named in it to succeed the particular legatees; and to money arising by the sale of land, there can be no claim, in the next of his kin, but what arises from the declaration of the testator; for unless he directs, or expresses, that it shall be considered as personalty, the heir must take it. We admit the heir then to be excluded whilst there are any persons who can take the produce of the real estate under the will, the declaration of the testator's intention: we deny that he is excluded by any who make their claim not under the will; but in defect of the will; or that the intention in the will can affect those who claim, upon the ground that there is no will which relates to the subject. The case of Cruse v. Barley and Hanson, before Sir Jo. Jekyll, 3 Wms. 20. seems to establish those principles; for it shews, that where any part of the produce of the real estate is so given, as to prove that it was not the testator's intention, in case that part should lapse, that it should go to the residuary legatees, but that he has given them the residue exclusive of that part, it shall not go as undisposed personalty to the next of kin. Why should the next of kin take in preference to the heir what the residuary legatees cannot take for another reason, namely, removal by death? The case was, William Hanson, seized in fee of freehold and copyhold lands, which he had surrendered to the use of his will, and being much indebted by mortgages, and having a wife and five children, devised all his freehold and copyhold lands to the defendant Barley and his heirs, in trust to sell for the best price, and in the first place to pay off all his incumbrances and his debts. He also devised his personal estate to the same trustee, in trust to sell, and after the testator's debts paid, to apply the money arising by sale of the personal estate, and also the money to be produced by sale of the real estate, among his five children, in manner therein after mentioned: To his eldest son 200*l.* at his age of 21; all the rest and residue thereof among his four younger children at 21, and with benefit of survivorship; the eldest son died under 21: the question was, what was to become of the 200*l.* The Master of the Rolls thought it would not go to the younger children, who were only to have the residue, but to the heir. It was objected

(7) See per Lord Eldon C. in Cambridge v. Rous, 8 Ves. 25. Et vide 1 Ves. 141, and 2 Roper on Legacies, 487. &c. For such purpose, however, the residuary legatee must be a general, and not a partial one; for if the will give a legatee what remains after payment of legacies, &c. he will not be entitled to any benefit from lapses. Vide 2 Roper on Legacies, 490, &c.

objected, that all is made personal estate; the surplus of the money arising from the sale of the real and personal estate, is to go to the beneficiaries, facti. There could be no doubt, it was urged, if the eldest son had died in the testator's life, it would have been a lapsed [*] residuum. But his Honor, after looking into precedents, declared for the heir, that it was the same as if so much land, as was of the value of 200*l.* had not been to be sold, but suffered to descend. As to the case of Flanagan v. Flanagan (8), it is perfectly different from this: That was a question between the real and personal representative of a person entitled under the will of the testator. The land was sold under a decree of the Court, in a cause in which the person, through whom both claimed, was party; and the decree had ordered the surplus, if there should be any, to be paid to James Flanagan the father, and James Flanagan the son equally. The sale was made under the decree; and the question arising between the real and personal representative of Flanagan the father, the Court determined the surplus should have the same nature, with respect to them, as the decree had given it with respect to Flanagan the father. In that case, too, the testator had, foreseeing that a sale could not be made, which would produce the exact sum, and no more, directed his trustees to convey the residue of the real estate, which should remain unsold, or pay the produce of such part as should be sold, and all other the residue of his real estates, between the father and the son. Scudamore v. Scudamore, Pre. Ch. 513. is not to this point: it determines that the representatives of a person entitled under a will, shall take money, as money or as land, according as the person whose representatives they are would have taken it; but it decides nothing between the heir and personal representative of the testator himself. There is no case in which the next of kin have been considered as entitled against the heir, in the event of a lapse of the whole, or a part of the residue, except the case of Ogle v. Cook (9), heard 19th February, 1748, which, so far as it relates to this subject, was thus: Mr. Ogle made his will in 1744, and gave his real estate to trustees to sell, and vest the money in stock, and pay the interest to his wife during her widowhood, and after her death, or marriage, the principal to his two daughters equally, except that the eldest was to have 1,000*l.* more than the other: he gave the residue of his personal estate in the same way. He afterwards executed a conveyance in trust to sell, for payment of his debts, which was held a revocation pro tanto only, and part was sold. One of the daughters died in Mr. Ogle's life. The bill was brought by the widow, and the eldest daughter, against the son, the heir, and the trustees, to have the residue of the estate sold, and claiming the share of the deceased daughter, as personal estate of Mr. Ogle, to [*] be divided between them and the son. The son insisted, that her share was to be considered as real estate: the Court decreed the residue of the estate to be sold, and that the produce should be considered as Mr. Ogle's personal estate. Here, it cannot be denied that the intention of the testator to convert this estate into money, for the sake of his daughters, was taken to be a sufficient ground for the Court's considering the moiety, which in the event was undisposed, as personal estate: But the case of Digby v. Legend, is a later authority, and contradicts the doctrine of that case. (10). The cases are not in any respect different, except in the 1780.

APPENDIX.

Acquiesce
against Scudamore.

[ *513 ]

[ *514 ]

(8) Vide antea, 498. 500. 2 Ves. jun. 77. and 176.

(9) Ogle v. Cook, when examined from the Reg. Book, proved not to militate against Mr. Scott's argument, or the authorities which supported it, as was supposed. See per Lord Loughborough C. in Collins v. Watson, 2 Ves. jun. 686, 687.

(10) Ogle v. Cook, however, was found, on examination, not to controvert the other cases. Vide 2 Ves. jun. 686, 687.

APPENDIX

1780.

Aggroyd
Sargent
Sargent

number of the persons interested in the produce. The daughters, in the case of Ogle v. Cook, indeed had an interest in the personal, as well as real estate, which was not given in that of Digby v. Legard; but the funds are kept separate, and not blended in Ogle v. Cook. The determination in the latter case, we submit, is neither justified by principle nor by authority. The case of Ogle v. Cook, admits the deceased daughter's moiety (10), in both the real and personal funds, to be undisposed, but it supposes that the conversion, which the testator made with a view to disposition, is to take effect, though the disposition does not take effect. (10) Upon the whole, we contend, that, if the shares of the deceased legatees in the overplus are undisposed, parts of those shares being constituted by money arising from the sale of real estate, the heir is entitled to such part; that the intention of the testator, in the events that have happened, does not destroy his claim; and that this is a case to which the principles of the adjudications cited by the counsel for the next of kin, do not apply.

The Chancellor reversed the decree, and directed an account to be taken of the personal estate, and the money arising from the sale of the real estate, and that the share of the deceased legatees, in the overplus, should be divided between the next of kin and the heir; that is, so much of those shares as was constituted of the personal estate, to the next of kin, and so much as was made up of the produce of the real estate, to the heir. He said, that he fully approved the determination in Digby v. Legard. That he used to think, when it was necessary for any purposes of the testator's disposition, to convert the land into money, that the undisposed money would be personalty; but the cases fully proved the contrary. It would be too much to say, that, if all the legatees had died, the heir could, as he [*] certainly might, he said, prevent a sale; and yet to say that, because a sale was necessary, the heir should not take the undisposed part of the produce. The heir must stand in the place of the residuary legatees who died, as to the produce of the real estate. He said he approved the distinctions made in behalf of the heir, and decreed as before. †

† See the case of Robinson v. Taylor, post. vol. 2. p. 589. [and 1 Ves. jun. 44. 8. C. See also the first note to this case.]

(10) See note (10) in the preceding page.

CADLE against FOWLE.

Rolls, 26th May, 1780.

A decree, though made on motion, (under
7 Geo. 2.

c. 20.) cannot be discharged on motion. (1)

THE plaintiffs filed their bill, stating a mortgage by the defendant's father, to the testator of the plaintiff Cadle, and another, and praying a sale. The defendant answered, admitting the mortgage; and

(1) Upon this statute, it has been determined, that a reference under it must proceed upon admission of the principal and interest due; and that the Master cannot admit evidence, Huson v. Hewson, 4 Ves. 105. That no order can be made under it where the bill extends to any thing beyond the foreclosure, Bastard v. Clarke, 7 Ves. 489. That the party need not have his money ready as at law, and that the time for payments may be enlarged, under the usual terms, Walshell v. Delight, 9 Ves. 56. and 8. G. Cooper, Ch. 87. That an order cannot be obtained under the statute by a defendant who is in contempt, Hewitt v. M'Carthy, 15 Ves. 660. And that no relief under it shall be extended, if the application is not made before the mortgagee is entitled to take execution, Ample v. Lloyd, 3 Ves. & Beames, 15.

then

then applied to the Court, upon the act of 7 Geo. 2. c. 20. for the usual decree upon a bill of foreclosure. The plaintiffs now applied to discharge that decree, and for liberty to amend their bill, by stating a bond, which they insisted they were entitled to tack to the mortgage. — The Master of the Rolls was of opinion, that the order already made, being a decree, though made upon motion, could not be discharged upon motion. The words of the act are, “the Court shall make such order, or decree, as the Court might have made, if the suit had been brought to a hearing, and all parties shall be bound by such order or decree, to all intents and purposes, as if such order, or decree, had been made at, or subsequent to the hearing of such suit.”

APPENDIX.

1780.

Coke
against Power.

WYNNE against COOKES.

THOMAS WELCHMAN WYNNE, and MARY his Wife, Widow and Devisee of DAVID COOKES, deceased; Plaintiffs.

Trinity Term, 1780.

Baron Eyre, for Lord Chancellor.

THOMAS COOKES and GEORGE COOKES, Defendants.

SIR Thomas Cookes, seised in fee of a considerable freehold, and of a copyhold held of the manor of Tarbig, called Cabhouse, by will dated 19 February, 1696, devised the estates and part of the copyhold in Tarbig, to his nephew Thomas Winford [*] for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail-male; with remainder to John Winford for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail-male; with remainder to Henry Winford for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail-male; with remainder to John Cookes, and his heirs male for ever. Sir Thomas Cookes died in 1701, and upon his death Thomas Winford, afterwards Sir Thomas Cookes Winford, entered, procured the Tarbig estate to be enfranchised, and a conveyance thereof to be made to him and his heirs. He died in 1743, without issue, and by his will gave the Tarbig estate to his wife dame Elizabeth in fee, considering himself as absolute owner of that estate; and she entered and continued in possession till 1752. John and Henry Winford died without issue in the life time of their brother Sir Thomas Cookes Winford, and John Cookes, the last remainder-man in the will of Sir Thomas Cookes, also died before Sir Thomas Cookes Winford, leaving two sons John and Henry Cookes. John Cookes upon the death of Sir Thomas Cookes Winford, entered upon all the estates devised by the will of Sir Thomas Cookes, except the Tarbig estate, and by indenture dated the 15th of April, 1744, conveyed all the manors, &c. devised by the will of Sir Thomas Cookes, in general to Thomas Wyld and his heirs, to make him tenant of the freehold for the purpose of suffering a recovery, and a recovery was suffered accordingly. At the time of the execution of the indenture of bargain and sale, and of suffering the recovery, dame Elizabeth Cookes Winford was in the actual possession of the enfranchised estate at Tarbig, and claimed the same as her own estate, and John Cookes was never Enfranchisement of a copyhold estate, by a person having only a particular interest in for the benefit not only of himself, but of all the persons in remainder. (1) — Recovery suffered by one not in possession, has no operation.

[ *516 ]

(1) See the previous circumstances here stated in Cookes v. Hollis, 1 Ves. 254. and the Supplement 127, 128. If a tenant in tail enfranchises, it will bar the issue in tail. Parker v. Turner, 3 Vern. 398, 458. S. C. 2 Ch. Ca. 174. And also the remainderman. Dunn v. Green, 3 R. W. 110. Challoner v. Mitchell, 8 Ves. jun. 324. with the observations of Mr. Scriven upon it, from Mr. Serjeant Hill's MSS. Scriven on Copyholds, 410, 411. or before the registration of the same, and the same is the case in the case of a tenant in fee simple.

APPENDIX.

1780.

WYNN
against Cooke.

[ *517 ]

in possession, nor ever made any entry, or did any act to avoid the estate of dame Elizabeth. By the custom of the manor of Tarbig, copyholds may be intailed, and intails may be barred by recovery suffered, or surrender made in the court of the manor according to custom. John Cookes died in _____ without issue, by his will, he devised all his estates to William and John Russell, in trust, to pay his debts, and subject thereto to his own first and other sons in tail-male, with remainder to his daughters in tail-general, with remainder to his nephew Henry Cookes, son of his brother Henry for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail-male, with remainder to his nephew David Cookes, the second son of his brother Henry for life; with remainder to his first and other sons in tail-male, with remainder to Thomas Cookes, the third son of Henry, and his first and other sons in like manner, with remainders over. Henry, brother of John, the last testator, died in his life-time, leaving Henry, David, and Thomas, his [*] three sons successive devisees for life, in the will of John. Henry the eldest, upon the death of John, entered upon all the estates of Sir Thomas Cookes, except the Tarbig, and in 1749 filed a bill against the widow of Sir Thomas, dame Elizabeth Cookes Winford, and Hillier, her then husband, stating the will of Sir Thomas Cookes, the enfranchisement of the estate, the several subsequent events, and claiming the Tarbig estate, by virtue of the limitations in the will of Sir Thomas Cookes. The cause was heard the 3d of May, 1749 (2), when the Court declared that it appeared that Sir Thomas Cookes Winford took the copyhold estate in question, and enjoyed the same under the will of Sir Thomas Cookes, and that the enfranchisement taken of the premises, was for the benefit not only of himself, but of all persons intitled thereto, in remainder under the will of Sir Thomas Cookes, and it was therefore decreed that, on payment, by the plaintiff, in six months of 750*l.* the consideration for the enfranchisement, the premises should be conveyed to the use of the plaintiff, and the other uses in the will of Sir Thomas Cookes, then existing and capable of taking effect. (2) Before any conveyance in pursuance of this decree, Henry Cookes died without issue, without having done any act affecting the Tarbig estate. His brother David, therefore, upon his death, as heir-male of the body of the first-named John Cookes, claimed to be intitled to the estate as tenant in tail-male, and, by indentures of lease and release dated the 8th and 9th of June, 1752, and made between dame Elizabeth Cookes Winford, then a widow, by the name of Elizabeth Hellier, of the first part; Henry Roberts and Joseph Kingdom, of the second part; David Cookes, of the third part; and Thomas Banks, of the fourth part; Elizabeth Hellier, in consideration of 709*l.* and in pursuance of the above-mentioned decree, conveyed the Tarbig estate to David Cookes and his heirs, to the use of David and the heirs-male of his body, and after reciting that a term of 1000 years created by Sir Thomas Cookes, (who had ineffectually attempted to enfranchise the estate,) was then vested in Roberts and Kingdom, they conveyed the estate, for the residue of that term to Banks in trust for David Cookes, and further reciting that the above sum of 709*l.* was paid by Banks, and that David Cookes had occasion for 501*l.* more, David Cookes declared that the term should be a security for, and subject to redemption on payment of 1300*l.* and interest to Banks. By indentures of lease and release, the 14th of June, 1752, David Cookes conveyed the estate to make a tenant to the precept for suffering a recovery, and a (2) Before Lord Hardwicke C. It is reported 1 Vol. 584. The decree above stated is correct, according to the Register's Book, R. L. 1748. A. fol. 651. Wm. Rymer, 127, 128.

recovery

recovery. [*] was suffered accordingly. In 1755, David made his will, and devised the estate to Stephen Law, in trust for the plaintiff Mary for life, and after her death, in trust for his daughters. David died, without issue, leaving Thomas Cootes his brother and heir, who paid off Banks, and took an assignment of the mortgage. The bill was brought by the plaintiff claiming under the will of David Cootes, praying liberty to redeem the mortgage, and an account of the rents, profits, and recovery of the estates, to the uses in the will of David.

Baron Eyre was of opinion, that by the words "heir male," the first named John Cootes took an estate in tail-male, under the will of Sir Thomas Cootes; that John Cootes his son, not having been in possession of the estate in question, when the recovery was suffered, it had no operation on that estate; that David was therefore seized in tail male; that the recovery suffered by him barred the entail, and the estate was, therefore, well devised by his will, and decreed accordingly.

APPENDIX.

1780.

Wrote
against Cootes.

[*518]

J. H. FRASER, SON OF SIMON FRASER, and MARY his Wife, Plaintiff.

JAMES BAILLIE, and EVAN BAILLIE, the said SIMON FRASER, and MARY his Wife, and their Children, (except the Plaintiff) Defendants.

Trinity Term,
1780.
Baron Eyre,
for Lord
Chancellor.

(No entry.) (1)

SIMON Fraser the elder, intitled to two sums of money due to him on bond, assigned the same to James and Evan Baillie, in trust, to pay him the interest during his life, and upon his death to pay the interest

Where trustees are interposed, the Court will not authorise a woman's parting with her

[reversionary] life-interest in a sum of money, upon examination in analogy to that upon a private examination. (1)

(1) Mr. Brown's report of this case has been discredited by the Judge who decided it. This was probably for the reason attributed to Mr. Baron Eyre for his determination, and not for the decision itself; since it appears to fall within the principle of the cases, under which it is classed in the note below. Lord Reddole informed the Editor, that Mr. Brown copied the greater part of this report incorrectly, from a mere casual note of his Lordship, which ought never to have been published; and that Mr. Baron Eyre said in Court, on a subsequent occasion, "that he strongly believed he had never said what is attributed to him; but if he had, he was very sure he was wrong." No entry of this case appears in R. L.

Being at a loss to discover the principles upon which the various cases on this subject could be reconciled, the Editor has been favoured by Mr. Roper with his sentiments on the point, as abridged from his manuscript of an important treatise on "The Law of Property, arising from the relation between Husband and Wife," and which is intended to be soon published.

It is only necessary to premise, that in examining this point, we must, as Sir W. Grant says (10 Ves. 582.) "purposely abstain from such cases as relate either to the separate property which in equity the wife may have, or property over which she has reserved, or had given to her, by settlement, a power of appointment; or which the husband has an absolute or qualified right to reduce in possession." And the single question is, whether there is or is not any jurisdiction in equity, to annul or transferring a married woman's reversionary interest in personal property, by taking her examination in court, as anonymous, to a fine of law relating to real estate.

The Editor has obtained permission to publish Mr. Roper's sentiments, and that gentleman's valuable observations are as follow:—"First, it is a question, where

APPENDIX.

1780.

FRASER
against Baillie.

[ *519 ]

interest of part to his wife for her life, and after the death of the survivor, to pay and apply that part unto and amongst such child or children begotten, or to be begotten of them the said Simon Fraser and Mary his wife, in such shares and proportions, and at such times, as she the said Mary Fraser should, notwithstanding her coverture, by any writing under her-hand and seal, to be attested by two credible witnesses, direct or appoint; and, for want of such direction or appointment, then in trust, to pay and apply the trust-money and the interest thereof, to all and every the child or children of them the said Simon Fraser and Mary his wife then living, to be paid entirely to one such child, in case there should be no more than one, and to be [*] equally divided among them, share and share alike, in case there should be more such children than one; but in case there should be no such child or children living, then in trust for the executors, administrators, and assigns of the said Simon Fraser. Mary Fraser made an immediate where personal property is so given to the wife, either in remainder or contingency, as by possibility it may fall in and be reduced into possession during the marriage, and may therefore be released at law, as in the instance of a bequest to her of personal estate, or of the interest of it, absolutely or for life, upon the death of A., if the husband instead of releasing assign it for value, the assignment will bind her in equity; so that her assent, by way of confirmation and to waive a settlement, ought upon such principle to be received and recorded.

“ 2d. But that when such consent is offered in favour of the husband or his assignee without valuable consideration, the Court must decline to receive it, because the property is not assignable at law, and there is no consideration to induce a Court of equity to establish it.

“ The first part of this proposition warrants Lord Alvanley's decree in Hewitt v. Croucher, (12 Ves. 175.) and would have authorised Sir William Grant in Woodlands v. Croucher, (12 Ves. 174.) to have taken the wife's consent absolutely, and not de bene esse. But according to the second part of the proposition, the authority of Buller v. Duncombe (2 Vern. 762.) cannot be supported.

“ To pursue further the analogy between law and equity — As at law the husband can neither dispose of nor release such of his wife's personalty as cannot possibly fall into possession during coverture, so it is determined in equity, that where a woman stipulates in the event of surviving her husband that her property shall become her own, reserving no power of disposition over it during marriage, neither her husband, nor she during his life, can dispose of it by deed, will, consent, or charge. The principle is the same when the property is so given or left to her. Such are the cases of Fraser v. Baillie, Richards v. Chambers, and Seaman v. Inghill, (10 Ves. 580.) Lee v. Muggridge, (1 Ves. & Bea. 118.) O'Keefe v. Callthorpe, (stated 8 Ves. 177.) and Arison v. Leagden, (Court of Exch. Ann. 1800, stated 8 Ves. 173. and 10 Ves. 585.)

“ If the wife have a power to appoint the fund, in case of her death before her husband, having also the fund given to her if she survive him, neither the execution of the power, nor her assent to give up her latter interest, will deprive her of it (10 Ves. jun. 585.): — not the former, because it does not extend to the interest she takes on surviving her husband; not the latter, because during coverture she cannot consent to pass that, which never could be reduced into possession by the husband during the marriage.

“ The following contrary adjudications seem to be at present of no authority: — McCormick v. Buller, (1 Cox, Rep. 357. 8 Ves. 174.) Ellis v. Atkinson, (3 Bro. C. C. 567.) Guis v. Small, (1 Anstr. 257.)

“ But if the power of appointment be so given as to enable the wife, by executing it during the marriage, to make immediate disposition of the fund in which she takes a life-interest, and in default of appointment the property is limited to her absolutely; there by executing her power she may defeat her interest, depending upon the non-execution of it; as in Frederick v. Hartwell, (1 Cox, Rep. 193.) which differs from McCormick and Buller in this, among other particulars, that in the one the power might be executed during the marriage; in the other, it seems intended to have been postponed to the survivor of husband and wife.

“ In all cases where the interest of the wife is such as the Court will accept her consent to pass it, the property must be first ascertained, the amount must be clearly known. Edmonds v. Trenchard, (1 Anstr. 93.) Sparting v. Rockfort, (8 Ves. 174. 179. &c.)”

It should be observed that Lord Eldon's opinion against the authority of McCormick v. Buller is very evident in Sparting v. Rockfort, 8 Ves. 174. 178. &c.; and his Lordship's obliquing the principal case, Sid. 182. is not immaterial. — Editor.

appoint-appointment of 500*l.* part of this money, in favour of the plaintiff, one of the sons of her and her husband, and, by the same deed, she and her husband meant to part with the interest of 500*l.* during their lives. The bill was brought to compel the trustees to pay the 500*l.* to plaintiff, and, for that purpose, prayed that Mrs. Fraser might be examined by the Court, as to her consent to part with her interest for life in the 500*l.* in the nature of a fine at common law of real property, and that a commission might issue to take her examination. An objection was raised to the validity of the appointment, as a partial execution of the power, not an entire disposition of the whole trust fund. It was particularly observed, that the trust deed did not enable Mrs. Fraser, from time to time to appoint, which are the words commonly used, and that it declared no trust of any part which should remain unappointed in case any appointment should be made.

Baron Eyre objected, that it did not occur to him that, in any case where trustees had been interposed, the Court had authorized the departure with the property of the wife, by examining her in the nature of a fine at law. (2)

(2) But see the preceding note.

AWSE against MELHUIH. [6 July.]

(Reg. Lib. 1779. A. fol. 536. b.)

ROBERT Awse, the plaintiff's husband, by his will, gave to the plaintiff 50*l.* a year, and the use of his house at Horwood, with the household goods, plate, &c. for and during her life, over and above her jointure, in case he should die without issue male; and he gave to his sister Mary Melhuish 200*l.*; and several other legacies, and all his estates and effects, manors, messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, which he should have in possession or reversion, whether freehold or leasehold, he gave, devised, and bequeathed to Richard Stevens, his father in law, William Melhuish his brother in law, and Richard Clarke, his cousin, in trust, in the first place for payment of the plaintiff's jointure, and the legacies given by his will; and as to all his [*] manors, messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments therein-before devised to his said trustees, subject to his legacies, and the plaintiff's jointure, he willed, directed, and devised the same to be in trust for his sister Mary Melhuish for her life, and after her decease, in trust to his cousin Richard Clarke for his life, and after his decease in trust for his first and other sons in tail-male, Richard Clarke, or his son so inheriting, taking the name of Awse, instead of Clarke; and as to the rest and remainder of his goods, chattels (2), and hereditaments (2) not therein devised, he directed the same should be laid out in lands, and settled to the uses above directed, with respect to his freehold estates; and that till lands could be found, the interest should be paid to the persons enjoying his freehold estates; and in case the said Richard Clarke

APPENDIX.

1780:

FRASER

against

BAILLIE.

Baron Eyre,
for Lord
Chancellor.
Trinity Term,
1780.

Testator gives [freehold and leasehold estates] to his heir at law for life, remainder to R. C. for life, and to his first and other sons, remainder to R. S. and W. M. for their joint lives, and to the survivor of them, the survivor is only to take an estate for life [in the freehold, though he takes the whole interest in the leaseholds. (1)]

[ *520 ]

(1) See at the conclusion of the judgment, which agrees with the Registrar's book. As to the whole interest in leaseholds, or terms in gross, vesting without words of limitation, see Coff v. Heywood, 1 Rolle Rep. 247. 568. As to the distinction between them and freehold estates, or terms carved out of the inheritance, see Bell v. Mithelton, Suppl. to Vesey, senior, 227.

(2) There is no such word as "hereditaments," in R. L. The expressions there are "goods and chattels."

APPENDIX.

1780.

AWSE
against MELHUISE.

should die without issue, he gave, devised, and bequeathed all his estates and effects, manors, messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments whatsoever, in possession or reversion to the said Richard Stevens and William Melhuish, during their joint lives and to the survivor of them; he appointed Richard Stevens, William Melhuish, and Richard Clarke, executors of his will, and gave to each of them for their trouble 100*l*. Robert Awse died in 1764, without having had any issue, leaving the plaintiff his widow, and Mary Melhuish, his sister and heir at law. William Melhuish died, leaving Richard Stevens surviving; Richard Clarke also died, without having had any issue. Afterwards Richard Stevens died, leaving the plaintiff his heir at law, and having made his will, and devised his real and personal estate to the plaintiff, and made her sole executrix. The plaintiff brought her bill against Mary Melhuish, the sister and heir at law of the testator, and against the heir at law of William Melhuish, and the widow and personal representative of Richard Clarke, claiming as heir at law and residuary devisee and legatee, and executrix of her father Richard Stevens, to be intitled to the freehold estates of the testator, after the death of Mary Melhuish, and the personal estate to be laid out in the purchase of land; upon the same event, and therefore praying that the will might be established, and the trusts performed, and, particularly, praying an account of the personal estate, and of estates purchased therewith by Mr. and Mrs. Melhuish.

[ *521 ]

On behalf of the plaintiff, it was contended by Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Waller, and Mr. Scott, that by the devise of the will to Stevens, and Melhuish, and the survivor, the whole interest in the [*] freehold and leasehold estates, and in the estates to be purchased with the rest of the personal estate, passed to Stevens as surviving Melhuish, subject to the previous estates created by the will; that the words used were sufficient to carry the fee in the freehold, as well as the absolute interest in the leasehold to the survivor, and that the lands to be purchased with the personal estate, were to be settled to the same uses throughout, as were to be limited of the freehold estate, that the testator meant by the will, to dispose of all his property. He gave a life estate in the whole to his heir at law, and where he meant to give estates for life only to others, did so by express words; that the devise to the survivor of Stevens and Melhuish, being unaccompanied by words of limitation, it was evident the testator meant to give them the whole interest; that the words in which he had given the estates to Stevens and Melhuish, were the same as those in which he had devised the estates to the trustees, to whom he clearly meant to give the absolute interest to answer the purposes of the trust; that the words used in the devise in question were sufficient to convey all the interest the testator had in the property, as well as the property itself: for this purpose was cited a case of Jackson v. Hogan, in the House of Lords in 1776 (3), (7 Bro. Plt. Ca. 417.) where a devise of the residue of the testator's effects, both real and personal, was held to carry the absolute property. It was further contended that, if a small transposition of the words was made, they would be clearly sufficient to carry the fee simple, that if the devise had been to Stevens and Melhuish for their lives, and then had followed the words, I give, devise, and bequeath all my estates and effects, manors, &c. whether in possession or reversion to the survivor, there could have been no doubt that the absolute interest in the entire property would have passed to the survivor; that the devise as it stood was in fact the same. A second point was made on the part of the plaintiff, that if the estate in trust in the personal estate, to be laid out in lands, did not pass to the survivor of Stevens and Melhuish, then it was undisposed of, and a moiety belonged to the plaintiff as widow of the testator.

(3) 3 Bro. P. C. 388., octavo edition.

On behalf of the defendant, Mrs. Melhuish, it was contended by Mr. Madocks and Mr. Kenyon, that as there were no words added to the devise to the survivor of Stevens and Melhuish, the survivor took, in the freehold estates, an estate for life only, and that therefore was undisposed of and descended to Mrs. Melhuish as heir at law; that the heir at law was not to be disinherited, but [*] by express words, such as leave no doubt of the intention of the testator: That the words used in the devise in question, were mere words of description, and that as the estates were given first to the devisees for their joint lives, it was absolutely necessary to add the devise to the survivor to give him an estate for life.

On the part of Mrs. Clarke, it was submitted to the Court, whether she might not have an interest in the leasehold estates, as personal representative of her husband: yet it might be contended the words, "and if the said Richard Clarke shall die without issue," which preceded the devise to Stevens and Melhuish, gave him, by implication, an estate in tail general in the freehold estate, and consequently the absolute interest in the leasehold estate.

In answer to this claim, it was insisted, that by the words, "Without issue," must be intended without such issue as before mentioned, namely, issue male, and then no estate could arise to Mr. Clarke by implication. In support of this were mentioned, Blackborn and Edgley, 1 P. Wms. 600.; Bamfield and Popham, 1 P. Wms. 54.; and Jones v. Morgan, Fearn's Cont. Remrs. 334.

Baron Eyre. — Two questions have been made in this cause. It has been insisted, on behalf of the plaintiff, that she is intitled to the reversion in fee of the freehold estate, and to the absolute interest in the leasehold, they being devised to the survivor of Stevens and Melhuish, without any words of limitation; and that she is intitled, in like manner, to the fee of the estates to be purchased with the personal estate, and therefore she prays an account of the personal estate: the devise is to Stevens and Melhuish, and to the survivor: there is no doubt of the general rule of law, as to the effect of such limitation, but the intent of the testator may controul or enlarge the strict legal construction of words. The question will not be affected by the consideration, that the heir at law will be excluded if the plaintiff prevails. It is clear the testator intended to exclude the heir at law to a certain extent, and where a testator has manifested an intention of devising an estate to a certain length, there is an end of the claim of the heir at law, except upon the construction of the devise. The strict rules of construction must prevail, the legal effect of words must take place, unless there is a manifest intention to the contrary. By the clear legal construction of the words in question, if the devise was a mere gift of lands, the [*] devisee would take only for life. The question is, whether, upon this will, there is an apparent intent to enlarge the estate, and make it an estate in fee. It has been contended, for the plaintiff, that there is such an intent declared; that an estate for life in the whole is given to the heir, and; from thence, it is contended that the testator intended to exclude the heir from further benefit. It is a great deal too much to conclude, from the devise to the heir for life, that so much was intended. The principal objects of the testator's bounty, appear to have been his cousin Richard Clarke and his issue; there is a limitation in tail to the issue, and they are directed to take the name of Aruse, there is no such limitation or direction to the children of the heir at law, or to the survivor of Stevens and Melhuish. Clarke and his issue were the persons

APPENDIX.

1780

AWAY AGAINST MELHUISE.

[ *824 ]

whom the testator considered as perpetuating his name and family; if they failed he had no particular object of his bounty. But why should the devise to the heir exclude the strict legal construction of the words used in the devise to the survivor of Stevens and Melhuish? The heir at law takes not by designation of the testator, but because the property is undisposed of; the law did not necessarily carry it to Mrs. Melhuish; if she had died before the testator, it would have gone to others. It has been attempted to make use of the general words in the devise to the trustees without any limitation of estates, and from thence to argue that a fee must also have been intended to pass by the second devise in the same words: But in the second devise with those general words, there is an express limitation to Stevens and Melhuish for their joint lives; which goes a great way to shew that the intent was to give a life-estate only to the survivor; besides the Court does not raise a fee to the trustees by the naked words of the devise, but, the testator having given estates upon trusts, for the performance of which a fee is necessary, the Court must necessarily hold the devise to the trustees to be a fee; in the subsequent devise, the Court must look for other words to enlarge the devise. An argument has been drawn from the generality of the words used, "all his estate and effects, &c." and it has been insisted that the words are so general, so descriptive not only of the lands themselves but of the interest in them, that they must mean the whole interest in the lands, as well as the lands themselves. It is impossible to build so much on these words, because a life-estate is expressly limited upon these words; it is clear that the testator meant there no more than a description of the subject of the devise, not of the interest devised. Upon what [*] principle then can I determine that the survivor took a different interest from the joint-tenant? I see no reason why the testator should mean or wish to give more than a life-estate to the survivor; this is, indeed, mere conjecture; but I am desired, upon conjecture, to enlarge the legal construction of words, I will not narrow it. There is no manifest intent of the testators to enlarge the words beyond their strict legal meaning, or to confine them. The law must therefore determine the question. By the strict legal construction of the words, the survivor takes a life-estate only in the freehold. I must therefore determine that the plaintiff is entitled to the leasehold, subject to the life-interest of Mrs. Melhuish; but that she is not entitled to the freehold (4), and, consequently, is not entitled to the lands to be purchased with the personal estate; I must therefore dismiss the bill as to that.

(4) See Bolt v. Nicholson, Suppl. to Ves. sen. 227, &c. and Goff v. Hayward; 1 Roll. Rep. 247. 368. (there cited) as to the leaseholds.

1780.

DAVIES against TOPP.

SARAH DAVIES, and another, in behalf of themselves and other Creditors of JOHN TOPP, deceased, and MARTHA LLOYD, in behalf of herself and other Legatees of JOHN TOPP, - Plaintiffs.

RICHARD TOPP, (late LLOYD) Executor of the Will of JOHN TOPP, and Devisee for Life of his real Estates, SARAH LLOYD and JANE PRICK, Sisters and Co-heirs of JOHN TOPP, and ROBERT PEMBERTON, a Mortgagee, - Defendants.

[On appeal from the Rolls.]

[12] July, 1780.

(Reg. Lib. 1779. A. fol. 495. b.)

JOHN Topp, seised in fee of considerable real estates, subject to a mortgage to Pemberton, made his will 3d of May, 1777, and, thereby, as to his worldly estate, either real or personal, after payment of his debts and funeral expences, gave and disposed thereof in manner following: — He gave to his sister Sarah Lloyd, an annuity for her life, to be paid to her by the person or persons, who, for the time being, should be seised of his real estates under his will, and he also gave several pecuniary legacies, and he charged and made chargeable all his real and personal estate (except part of his personalty given as heir-looms) [*] with the payment of his debts and legacies aforesaid, and subject thereto, he devised all his manors of Whitton and Vennington, and all his real estates in the counties of Salop and Montgomery, (which were all the real estates he had at the time of making his will,) to his nephew Richard Lloyd for life, on his obtaining the king's licence to bear the arms and assume the surname of Topp: remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders: remainder to the first and other sons of Richard Lloyd in tail-male: remainders over in strict settlement: And he gave several articles of personal estate, to be enjoyed as heir-looms by the devisees of his real estate: and as to all the rest of his personal estate, subject to the payment of his debts, legacies, and funeral expences, he gave the same to his said nephew Richard Lloyd, and appointed him executor of his will.

Testator devised certain estates subject to a general charge for payment of debts: he afterwards purchased another estate which descended: this shall exonerate the devised estate if the personal be insufficient to pay the debts. (1)

[ *525 ]

(1) "Where a will, going beyond a mere charge, creates a particular fund for payment of debts, that fund shall be first applied in exoneration of descended estates, whether acquired after the date of the will, or not. But a mere charge upon a devised estate will not protect an estate descended from being first applied." See Miles v. Slater, 8 Ves. 295. and the authorities there referred to. In that case, pages 303, 304. Lord Eldon C. says, "It is singular that a will, creating a rule of distribution with reference to the present circumstances of the deviser, shall be taken to create a rule of distribution which commences afterwards, and which, nine times in ten, he does not contemplate." But upon Davis v. Topp, Donne v. Lewis (post. 2 vol. 257.) and many other cases, followed by the late case of Harmood v. Oglander (6 Ves. 199. and 8 Ves. 106.) "at this day the rule must be considered settled, that, whatever may be the ordinary application, if there be a real fund created for discharge of debts, that will be to be applied first, when the question arises between the heir and the devisee, either as to estates which the deviser had at the time, or which were acquired afterwards; and authority has gone this length now; that where the heir takes, not by the intention, but in the absence of intention the deviser is understood as having denoted, in a question between the heir and the devisee the estate devised shall first go to the debts, though the estate so devised for payment of debts may not be legal assets, and the descended estates may be legal assets; which makes it a strong operation of the Court, to throw the debts upon lands which, in some cases, may be equitable assets, and from lands which may be legal assets."

APPENDIX.

1780.

DAVIES
against TOTT.

After making the will the testator purchased a freehold estate at Vennington.

In April, 1778, he died without issue, leaving Sarah Lloyd and Jane Price, his sisters and heirs at law, upon whom the estate at Vennington; (purchased after the making of the will) descended.

The bill was brought for an account, and application of the personal estate, not specifically bequeathed, in payment of debts and legacies, in a course of administration; and in case the personal estate should not be sufficient, then to establish the will, and to have the deficiency raised by sale or mortgage of a competent part of the real estate.

The cause was heard at the Rolls on the 15th and 25th February, 1780, when the will was established, and the proper accounts directed, and the personal estate, not specifically bequeathed, was ordered to be applied in payment of the debts, legacies, and funeral expences, in a course of administration; but, in case such personal estate should not be sufficient for the payment of testator's debts, his Honor declared that the deficiency, as to what should be remaining due to defendant Robert Pemberton the mortgagee and the other specialty creditors, ought to be raised by sale or mortgage of the real estate descended to the heirs at law: and ordered and decreed that such deficiency should be raised by sale or mortgage of the said estate, or a sufficient part thereof, [*] and the money to arise by such sale or mortgage was to be applied in making good such deficiency; and in case the personal estate and money to arise by the sale of the real estate descended, should not be sufficient for the purpose aforesaid, it was declared that the rents and profits of the said estate were to be applied to make good such deficiency, and an account and application of such rents and profits was directed: And in case the defendant Pemberton, the mortgagee, or any of the specialty creditors should have exhausted any part of the personal estate, the simple contract creditors in the first place, and the legatees in the next place, were to stand in the place of such specialty creditors, and receive a satisfaction pro tanto, out of the real estate descended. But in case the fund aforesaid should not be sufficient for payment of the debts and legacies, under and according to the direction aforesaid, it was declared, that the deficiency ought to be made good out of the real estates devised by the will, charged with the payment of the testator's debts and legacies, and proper directions were given for that purpose.

The costs were apportioned between the personal estate and the real estates, and the costs out of the real estates were to be raised in the order and manner before directed, with respect to the deficiency of the debts.

The heirs at law appealed to the Lord Chancellor against so much of the decree as applied the real estate descended, in the first place, to make good the deficiency of the personal estate to pay the mortgagee and specialty creditors, and the consequent direction, and the direction as to the costs.

The appeal was heard before Lord Thurlow, in July, 1780.

The case relied upon by the devisee of the real estates which passed by the will, and which had been relied upon by the Master of the Rolls was Galton v. Hancock, 2 Atk. 424. 427. 430.

On the other side the principal case cited was Corbet v. Davies, or Corbet v. Kynaston, 5th December, 1743, or Powis v. Corbet, 3 Atk. 556.

Lord Chancellor.—It is impossible to distinguish this case from Galton v. Hancock. (2) The first fund for the payment of debts is the [*] personal estate; the second fund may be estates devised for payment of

(2) See the observations of the Lord Chancellor also on this case, in Donne v. Lewis, post. 2 vol. 262. 263.

1780.

DAVIES
against Torr.

debts; and the third fund estates descended: but estates particularly devised are never applied till all the other funds are exhausted. Where a person, seised of three or four estates, devises one estate for the particular purpose of paying his debts, that estate is applied: I therefore do not apprehend that the general rule, cited as sustaining Galton v. Hancock, "that estates descended must, always, be applied to exonerate estates devised," is law. Where an estate is particularly devised for payment of debts, yet the personal estate, as the primary fund, unless exempted by the testator, shall be first applied. But I do not recollect any case where debts have been directed to be paid out of real assets descended, in preference to estates so devised. The contrary has been decided, as in Corbet v. Kynaston, where two estates were in the possession of the testator, and one was devised, charged with a term for the payment of debts. I heard the defendants, the devisees, principally to obtain a distinction between Corbet v. Kynaston, and Galton v. Hancock. What is the effect of the full principle of this decree, and of Galton v. Hancock? Simply this: Where a testator gives the whole of his estate at the time of the devise, subject to a general charge (3), (not to a particular charge, for that would make a difference,) he means to give the devisee all that can be saved of his affairs, after payment of his debts. If he afterwards becomes possessed of an estate by devise or purchase, thus much is clear, by charging his estate with payment of his debts it could not be in his contemplation to charge an estate which he actually gave, in favour of an estate which he had not. In that case, the estate descended could not be stated as the object of his intention to exempt; whereas if a testator has two estates, and charges one, the inference is, that he means to exempt the other. I do not wonder that Galton v. Hancock should be, at first, looked upon as matter of great difficulty. The principle of Galton v. Hancock, as stated, is, that the testator did not mean to charge his estate with a view to future property. Yet he might so mean. It is unfit, however, where cases are precisely similar, that different judgments should be given: therefore, whatever might have been the reasoning upon Galton v. Hancock, when decided, it is exceedingly fit to collect the principle upon which it was decided, to govern other cases. The principle which seems to distinguish the case is this: When a general charge is made, applicable to the whole estate of the testator at the time, no intention appears that the [*] estate is so charged with a view to exonerate future property; but where a testator charges part of his estate, leaving

[ *528 ]

(3) Lord Eldon C. stated from his own notes Lord Thurlow's expressions in Donne v. Lewis (post. 2 vol. 264.) to be these: "The true question is, whether the testator meant only to behave honestly, which is all a general charge imports, or, whether beyond that honest conduct, in creating a general charge for the security of his creditors, to create also a particular fund for payment of his debts."

Lord Eldon then observed, Lord Thurlow said that was the principle of Powis v. Corbet (3 Atk. 556. 3 Ves. jun. 116.) in which a particular term was raised for the discharge of the debts; which was held sufficient to warrant the application of the lands comprised in it, before descended estates. See in Milnes v. Slater, 8 Ves. 503. Lord Eldon also, in Harmood v. Oglander, on the appeal, 8 Ves. 116 117., says, "Lord Thurlow's doctrine upon this point, from his words, which I once took down, was this: If there is any thing in the will that goes beyond a mere charge, and points out as particular a mode, as in the case of a term, or a direction for a mortgage or sale, that is not a mere charge, but an intention expressed as particularly in the one case as the other. Lord Thurlow said, he only made the distinction in deference to those who went before him; for it amounts merely to this, that if the testator only declares he means to be honest, that will not save the descended estate: if he points out the means, that will save it. Lord Alvanley, in the case of Manning v. Spooner, (3 Ves. 114.) does not express Lord Thurlow's opinion as I know it to be upon this point. He would have destroyed the distinction altogether if he could."

APPENDIX.

1780.

other part to descend, his inclination to burthen a part, in exoneration of the rest, is manifest. †

[Decree affirmed, and the deposit paid to the plaintiff.]

† Vide Donne v. Lewis, vol. 2. p. 257.

JONES against the Earl of SUFFOLK. [(1) 6th July, 1782.]

(Reg. Lib. 1781. A. fol. 593.)

Testator devises the residue to his children, but if any of his daughters shall marry, without the consent of her mother or guardians, her share to go to those unmarried. This is a condition subsequent, and a daughter who married without consent is entitled. (2)

[Another question arose upon the will of the grandmother, who bequeathed some leasehold premises, and the residue, in trust for the same party until her age of 21; or marriage with the consent of her executors, or the survivor, &c. in writing, previous to such marriage: but in case she should die before 21, and not having married with such consent, then over to the plaintiff. Although the daughter married under 21, without such consent; yet having afterwards attained 21, she was held entitled to these benefits also. (3)]

(1) The Reporter was quite mistaken in dating this decision on the 20th July, 1780, as mentioned in all the other editions of the work. An order was indeed made in the cause on that day at the Rolls, upon a petition by consent; but it was quite foreign to the subject, and the cause, in fact, did not come for a hearing until two years afterwards. This shews how blindly Mr. Brown had copied the report from Lord Redensdale's notes, under some vague information as to the time of the decision.

(2) The profession will find most of the cases on this subject collected and commented on, and a most able judgment given by Lord Eldon, referring to all the main authorities, in Clarke v. Parker, 19 Ves. 1. et seq. See also Lloyd v. Branton, per Sir Wm. Grant, M. R. 3 Meriv. 108, &c. And also Scott v. Tyler, post. 2 vol. 431. and 2 Dickens, 712. from Lord Thurlow's own notes.

(3) There was also another question under the will of Catherine Morgan, the grandmother of the defendant Mary Newman, which is wholly unnoticed in the report, but which is according to the above marginal note supplied by the Editor. Upon this, it should be observed, that although the clause as to the consent under this will was a condition precedent, and if it had stood alone would effectually have prevented the party deriving any benefit under it; yet it was otherwise from the effect of there being another clause coupled with it in the alternative, as to the party's attaining 21, which event having taken place, the Court was, doubtless, and with reason, glad to avail itself of. [In Hammings v. Muncleley, ante, 304. the party died under the age required.] The facts were these: — Catherine Morgan, the grandmother, by her will directed that a leasehold house and furniture, &c. should be held in trust for her said grand-daughter until her age of 21 years, or marriage with such consent as after mentioned, which should first happen; and that the rents thereof should be accumulated in the meantime, and paid to her at 21 or marriage with consent of her executors thereafter named, or the survivor, his executors, administrators, or assigns, in writing previous to such marriage; but in case the defendant Mary should die before 21, and not having married with such consent as aforesaid, then in trust for the plaintiff, his executors, &c.; and she gave the residue of her personal estate in trust for her said grand-daughter, in like manner and under the like conditions.

It appears from the Registrar's book that the grand-daughter married without the requisite consent under 21. That the bill was filed against her and her husband before she came of age; insisting upon a forfeiture of her interests under the first will, and upon a devolution of her rights under the second will. It appears, however, that she attained her age of 21 before the decree.

The Court declared, that the said defendant Mary, now the wife of the defendant F. A. Newman, is entitled to the share of the estate of the testator George Jones her father, devised to her by his will; and also to the benefit of the bequests made to her by the will of the testatrix Catherine Morgan as therein mentioned." R. L.

niage of his said wife, then he directed all his real, leasehold, and personal estate should go to, be paid, and applied to the equal use of all and every such his child or children as should be then living; and in case his wife should marry again, she should, from that time, have no further to do with any his child or children, or any of his effects, &c.; but the child or children should be under the care of guardians, to be chosen and appointed as soon as possible upon that occasion, and trustees should be appointed for his effects for the benefit of his children, till they attain the age of 21; and in case any of his children should die before they should attain the age of 21, then his or her share should go and equally be divided among the surviving ones; and in case any of his daughters should marry without the consent of her mother, and in default of her mother, her guardians, first had and obtained, then her share to be equally divided among the unmarried ones; and in case they should all die before their respective ages of 21, then his estates, &c. to be subject to the will of his wife, provided she be unmarried at the time of his decease; and appointed his wife, and William Stevens (her father) joint executors of his will, and guardians of his children.

Mary, one of the daughters, married without consent; and the question was, whether she had forfeited her interest under the will. (4)

[*] Lord Chancellor.—This is a case of difficulty. It is a condition subsequent to defeat an interest vested, and therefore to be construed with all strictness. The words are, “without consent of guardians,” in the plural number. The will has appointed two guardians; it has given a special authority to be exercised only by the wife, while both are alive; and in default of the wife only the authority is to be exercised by guardians. The case cited of Peyton v. Bury, 2 Wms. 626. goes a great way. The name of guardian, as the name of executor, survives, but the authority in question is collateral to the office of guardian. That case, while it stands, is of weight; but I should have much hesitation to decide upon it. Suppose a power was given to guardians to let an estate for 21 years, a special authority, and one should die, I am apprehensive the Court would not, with alacrity, determine that the surviving guardian had not a power to let. When it is said that conditions to defeat an estate are odious, I feel it; but it is a disagreeable argument to guide a decision. What one person may think odious, another may judge of differently: the decision must depend on the feelings of the judge; I should therefore be sorry to go upon the odiousness of the condition. The position of the will is nonsense. The clause appointing guardians is subsequent to the whole of the provisions in question; the provisions are subsequent to a clause directing the appointment of guardians, upon default of the wife. If one daughter had died before the marriage of the other, the clause could have no effect: if the unmarried daughter should now marry more imprudently, the claim could have no effect. This could not have been the intention of the testator. Arguments from supposition of what a testator would have done, if he had been aware of all circumstances, are not very good grounds for giving a construction; but they may be fairly used to assist a dubious floating construction. Upon the whole, the intention of the testator, throughout his will, is very imperfectly and inadequately expressed. It is clear we have not his whole intention. I am very doubtful whether the word guardians must not refer to other persons than the guardians appointed by the will. It seems absurd to suppose that he meant to trust, upon the death of his wife, unmarried, the person whom he did not mean to trust, in case of her marriage. In

APPENDIX.

1780.

JONES
against SUFFOLK.

[ *529 ]

(4) See note (2) in the preceding page.

conscience

APPENDIX.

1781.

CONGREVE
against CONGREVE.

[ *530 ]

conscience I believe, that the circumstance was not in his contemplation at the time he wrote the will.

[*] His Lordship at first directed an account to be taken, without any declaration of the rights of the parties, saying he would further consider the point; but, after some hesitation, declared his opinion that Mary was entitled, notwithstanding her marriage; and decreed accordingly. (5)

(5) See the declaration of the Court at the conclusion of note (3).

CONGREVE against CONGREVE. [6 Feb. & 7 May, 1781.]

(Reg. Lib. 1780. A. fol. 422. b.)

Devise to all the children of A. at [their respective] ages of 21: a child born after the death of testatrix shall take. (2)

THE case arose on the will of Ann Nicholls, who gave her real estate to trustees, upon trust to permit her nephew, T. Congreve, to receive the rents for his life, and after his death to sell the estate and divide the money amongst all and every the child and children of T. Congreve (1), at the age of 21; she also gave her personal estate to the same trustees, in trust, to divide the same amongst all the children of her said nephew (1) at 21: she directed her nephew to maintain the children out of the rents and profits, and gave the trustees power to apply any part of the interest of the personal estate, for the maintenance of the children. She also made a codicil to her will [but did not alter it as to the above bequests].

(1) "Equally share and share alike at their respective ages of 21 years." R. L.

(2) "A bequest to a parent for life, with remainder to his children, includes all children, both those born before and those born after the testator's death. The rule is completely settled; and, indeed, I believe, whenever a testator gives in that manner, he does mean to include all the children such parent may at any time have. That is not an artificial rule. It is the rule, which excludes any of the children which is so; and it has been called an artificial rule, — namely, the rule in Andrews v. Partington," (post. 3 vol. 401.) "and other cases, which excludes all who may be born after the eldest attains 21." — Per Sir Wm. Grant, M. R. in Leake v. Robinson, 2 Merivale, 582, 583. A. D. 1817. Mr. Roper, in his useful and comprehensive work on Legacies, (vol. 1. p. 71. et seq.) referring to the principal case and various others, lays down the rule thus: — "It appears to be now settled, that when legacies are given to a descript class of individuals, payable at a future period, as to the children of B. when the youngest shall attain 21, or, to be divided among them on the death of C. any child who can entitle himself under the description at the time of distributing the fund, may claim a part of it, viz. as well those children living at the period of distribution, though not born till after the testator's death, as those born before and living at the happening of that event."

See also Devisme v. Mello, postea, 537. Gilmore v. Severn, post. 582. and per Lord Eldon C. in Walker v. Shore, 15 Ves. 125, &c.

Lord Redesdale's notes supply another case, "Haughton v. Price, or Haughton v. Levins, 30th June, 1742. Gift to testator's grandson, Thomas Price, of 500*l.*, to be paid him if he lived to 21 years of age; and if he should die before then, to the other child or children of the testator's daughter Mary, wife of Thomas Price, equally arriving at such age. — A question arising touching the legacy of 500*l.* given by the testator's will to his grandson Thomas Price," (who was dead under 21,) "his Lordship did declare, that the plaintiffs Pendock Clerk Price and Maria Price, and such other children of the said Mary Price the mother, as were or should be born, would be entitled to their respective shares of the said 500*l.* upon their respectively attaining 21 years of age; and that the interest of the said 500*l.* in the meantime ought to be paid to the plaintiff John Haughton, the residuary legatee.

"Price v. Harrison and others, 1st and 11th February, 1768. M. R. Order for payment of legacy of 500*l.* into the Bank, and funds to be applied for that purpose; and what should be allotted for the 500*l.* legacy to be laid out in 3 per cent. annuities, and one moiety of dividends to be paid to Pendock Clerk Price, (he having attained 21,) but without prejudice, and subject to further order."

The

The question was, whether the plaintiff, a child born after the death of the testatrix, [who had attained his age of 21,] was entitled to a share of her estate: all the other persons were born before the making the will.

The Master of the Rolls stated this case, and delivered his judgment to the following effect:—

I shall just take notice of a case before Lord Hardwicke, where the general rules are laid down, that is Ellison v. Airey, 1 Ves. 111. (which he went through.)—In Hales v. Hales, before Lord King, (cited in the argument of Ellison v. Airey,) the will goes to children living at the death, because it speaks from that time; therefore from Ellison and Airey, the rule is to confine the gift to persons living at the death, unless the will speaks otherwise.

I will mention a case of Bartlett v. Hollister †, before Sir Thomas Clarke, the 25th of May 1757; the words were much the [*] same as in the present case. One child was born after the testator's death; and the question was, whether that child should take; and Sir Thomas Clarke thought he should. This is the case of a trust; there is nothing to confine it to children born in the testator's life-time, and the interest is a future one. Bartlett v. Hollister is directly in point. It was insisted, by the counsel, that the property, consisting of real and personal estate, the personal estate should be taken first, though last in the will: but the Court said not. In Goodwin v. Goodwin, 3 Atk. 370. there was no decision. (3) In that case, Wild's case, 6 Co. 16. b. was mentioned; which was a devise to A. for life, and after his decease, to his children; and it was held all his children should take, "for the intent appears that all shall not take immediately, but after the death of A."—In Stanley v. Baker, Moore, 220., Hitchcock, possessed of a lease for years, devised it to his two sons, and for default of issue of his sons, that the term should remain to his daughters. The testator died and afterwards the son died. There were two daughters born at the death of the testator, and one afterwards born. It was adjudged all should take, because he had used the general words his daughters. Here is no direction what is to become of the interest of the personal estate, but there is a direction to apply any part for maintenance. This is a strong addition to Bartlett v.

APPENDIX.

1781.

CONSERVE
against CONSERVE.

[ *531 ]

† Bartlett v. Hollister, or Bartlett v. Lynch, Rolls, 26th May 1757, William Adams, by will dated 25 April 1742, gave to Luke Hollister, and the defendants Lynch and Others, a freehold estate, upon trust for his daughter Hannah for life, remainder to the heirs of her body; and for default of such issue, then upon trust, to sell and equally divide and pay the money to and amongst all the children of his sisters, the defendant Elizabeth, wife of William Bartlett, and the defendant Mary May then the wife and afterwards the widow of John May, when they should attain their respective ages of 21 years. The testator died April 1743, O. S. leaving Hannah his daughter and only child and heir at law, who entered and died in 1746, unmarried, and without issue; Elizabeth the wife of William Bartlett, had at the testator's death, six children plaintiffs in the cause; and Mary May had, at the testator's death, seven children also plaintiffs; Mary May had, after the death of the testator, a child, Mary a defendant. The bill charged that Mary May was not in esse or ventre sa mere at the death of the testator. She submitted by her answer, that she was entitled to a share with the plaintiffs, as born in the life-time of Hannah Adams, the daughter of the testator, and before the trust for sale took place. His Honor declared, that such of the fourteen children of the testator's two sisters as had attained 21, were each entitled to one-fourteenth part of the money, as there were fourteen children of the testator's two sisters, at the death of Hannah the testator's daughter without issue; and he directed their shares to be paid accordingly, and the residue to be paid into the Bank, and such of the fourteen children as were under 21, were to be at liberty to apply when 21, for their separate shares.

(3) It appears, however, from the Report, 1 Ves. 226, 227. that Lord Hardwicke did determine there, that after-born children were included.

Hollister;

APPENDIX.

1781.

CONGREGATE
against CONGREGATE

[*532]

Hollister; the personal estate is immediately the property of the children, though not immediately given to them; if it were, a power to apply the interest would be [*]unnecessary. The children are to have the interest with the principal; except what is applied under the power.

Isaac v. Isaac, before Lord Camden, the 6th of December, 1768, was a bequest per verba de presenti, George Stevenson, having a niece, and being informed she had children, gave the residue to her children, to be paid into a bank or stock, and the interest to defray the expence of their learning; the principal to be paid to the children at 20; if no child, the interest to be paid to her or her husband for seven years, and then to be divided between the husband and wife. His Lordship was of opinion, that the testator's meaning was, if there was no child at his death, and she had none for seven years, then the money should be divided. In that way there might be children to take. The fact was, there were children. As to Roberts† v. Higman, I think it was right. There were no particular circumstances in the case. In the present case, I think the plaintiff entitled to a share with the other children. (4)

† Roberts v. Higman, 12 July 1779. — Testator devised all his goods and chattels to John Cole and John Higman, to be sold to pay his debts, and the overplus (if any) to be employed for the best use of their children begotten, by the testator's daughters Margery Cole and Elizabeth Higman, equally to be divided between them.

The daughters had children born before the will made, others after and before testator's death, and others after his death; and the question was, which should take. The Chancellor held, that the division was to take place at the testator's death, and, therefore, that all the children born in the life-time of the testator took, but not those born after his death. [“Sed vide as to that case, Ambler 348. in margin.” — Mr. Brown's note.]

(4) It is entered in R. L. that his Honor took time to consider the case; and it stood over from the 6th of February to the 7th of May for the purpose; when it was determined as above.

ELTON against SHEPPARD.

(Reg. Lib. 1780. A. fol. 556.)

Rolls, [31 May,
and] 18th June,
1781

A gift of personalty to trustees to pay the interest to A. [with a power to dispose of the fund by will as she pleased, and without any other words of limitation (1)], an absolute gift of the principal.

[*533]

MARY Trubshaw gave, by will, to trustees, 2000*l.* in trust to pay the [interest] to her daughter Mary Elton, wife of Abraham Elton, Esq. mother of the plaintiff, for her own sole and separate use, independent of her husband, and not subject to his debts or controul, her receipt alone to be a sufficient discharge for the same; and did authorise, empower, and appoint, her said daughter, to give and dispose of the said 2000*l.* as she should, by any will or writing under her hand, direct and appoint (1): And the testatrix gave the residue of her personal estate to the same trustees, in trust to pay the [interest thereof] to Mary Elton, during her life, her receipt alone to be a sufficient discharge; and after her death, in trust to pay the interest to the testatrix's [*] grand-daughter the plaintiff for life, and in case her said

(1) Lord Redesdale's notes refer on S. P. to Robinson v. Dugdale, 3 Ves. 181, Maskelyne v. Maskelyne, Ambler, 750. See also the late cases of Berford v. Strat, 16 Ves. 135. and Irwin v. Farrer, in the Exchequer, 19 Ves. 86. The last-mentioned decision seems a very strong one; particularly with reference to Reid v. Stoddart, 10 Ves. 370. and Bradley v. Westcott, 13 Ves. 445, 455, &c.

See also Philips v. Chamberlaine, 4 Ves. 51. and Robinson v. Dugdale, Chancery, Ch. 285, 284, where Sir W. Grant, M. R., says the decision of Sir T. Stoddart, in the principal case, is conformable to the subsequent decision of Philips v. Chamberlaine.

grand-

grand-daughter should die, leaving any child or children at her death, she authorised and empowered her said grand-daughter, to give, bequeath, and dispose of such residue, to such child or children, in such manner as she should think fit; but, if her grand-daughter should die without leaving any child, or children at her death, she gave the said residue to the children of her brother, William Sheppard, one of the trustees.

The 2000*l.* was set apart, and Mary the daughter died without having made any appointment. It was claimed by Mary the grand-daughter, as part of the personal estate of her mother, either as an absolute gift to her, or as undisposed of in the event which had happened, and therefore resulting for the benefit of the mother, as next of kin of the testatrix.

His Honor was of opinion that the first words in trust, to pay the interest to Mary Elton for her separate use, being unaccompanied by words limiting the duration of the trust, gave her the absolute interest, and that the subsequent words giving her the power of appointment, were merely an anxious expression of the intention of the testatrix, that she should have an uncontrollable power of disposing of the fund. (2)

(2) And declared "that under the will of the testatrix M. T., her daughter Mary Elton was absolutely entitled to the legacy of 2000*l.* thereby given in trust for her, in manner in the said will mentioned." R. L.

LISLE against LISLE.

(Reg. Lib. 1780. B. fol. 446. b.)

BY settlement, made previous to the marriage of Charles Lisle and Ann his wife, certain stocks and securities were agreed to be transferred, and were afterwards actually transferred to trustees, [amounting to 4200*l.* Bank 3 per cent. annuities] in trust, after the death of Charles Lisle and his wife, for all their children, in such manner as they, or the survivor should, by writing, appoint. Charles Lisle died, having made no appointment; after his death, Mrs. Lisle made her will, and thereby appointed the trust, stocks, and securities, among her children. Afterwards, upon the marriage of Susannah one of her daughters, she by deed-poll [in part execution of her power and authority] appointed [1600*l.*] part of the trust stock to that daughter, in full of (2) her share of the trust-funds, unless either of her sisters should die under age and unmarried, appearing, by this expression, to refer to the appointment [*] she had made by her will, though she took no notice of that appointment, and the appointment by the deed-poll gave a greater share to Susannah than she would have taken under the will. It was contended that the present appointment, being by writing, merely, without any mention of a power of revocation, and no power of revocation being contained in the will, it was irrevocable, and the subsequent appointment consequently void. On the other side it was insisted, and the Chancellor was of opinion that the first appointment being by will, was made by an in-

(1) See the declaration of the Court in the last note to this case.
(2) The part and share by her, the said A. L. intended for the said defendant Susannah, out of the before-mentioned trust stock, &c. unless her other daughters, or either of them, should thereafter die before her the said A. L. or under 21, or unmarried. R. L.

APPENDIX

1781.

Elton
against Sheppard

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 3d July,
1781.

[A partial] appointment by will under a power, is revocable by a subsequent appointment by deed, though no power of revocation is reserved by the will, [or the instrument which created the power.]

[The party left undisturbed some other shares, which she had appointed by the will. And the appointment as to these by the will was held good. (1)]

[ *534 ]

strument

APPENDIX. strument in its nature revocable, and that the subsequent appointment, was therefore good, and he decreed accordingly. (3) 1781.

LISLE against
LISLE.

(3) " His Lordship doth declare, that the appointment of 1600*l.* Bank 3 per cent. annuities (part of the 4200*l.* like annuities mentioned in the pleadings), by the deed poll, dated the 22d day of July, 1777, executed upon the marriage of the defendant T. M. and Susan his wife, is a good appointment by Anna Lisle widow, deceased, as to the said defendants: and it being a good appointment, they are excluded from any further part of the trust-monies in question in this cause: and that the rest of the said trust-money ought to go according to the appointment of the said Anna Lisle, widow, by her will, dated the 22d day of January, 1775." And his Lordship decreed accordingly. R. L.

BARNARD against LARGE.

(No Entry.)

Rolls, 5d July, 1781.

[S. C. Ambler, 774.]

The Court will not compel a trustee for preserving contingent remainders to join in a recovery, unless to continue the estate or under very particular circumstances. (1)

THE plaintiffs in this cause, were Thomas Collier Barnard and his eldest son; the defendants were Large, a trustee in the will of Thomas Barnard and J. Wall, remainder-man in fee, under that will; the bill stated that Francis Barnard, by his will, devised freehold, and copyhold estates to the plaintiff, Thomas Collier Barnard, for 99 years, if he should so long live, with remainder to the defendant Large and his heirs, during the life of Thomas Collier Barnard, in trust to preserve contingent remainders, with remainder to the first and other sons of Thomas Collier Barnard in tail-male; with remainder to J. Wall in fee; that Thomas Collier Barnard had issue only one son, the co-plaintiff, who was tenant in tail under the will, and had attained 21; that the plaintiffs were desirous of suffering a recovery, and limiting the estate so as to preserve the contingent remainders to the second and other sons of Thomas Collier Barnard, but the defendant Large having refused to concur in making a tenant to the præcipe, a recovery could not be suffered; and the bill therefore prayed that the trustee, the defendant Large, might be decreed to join in making a tenant to the præcipe for the purpose of suffering a recovery; the plaintiffs submitting to declare the uses of the recovery to the second and other sons of Thomas Collier Barnard, by way of contingent remainders, as limited by the will, and to a limitation of an estate to trustees for the purpose of supporting and preserving those contingent remainders.

[ *585 ]

[*] His Honor, having taken time to consider the case, now delivered his opinion; he observed that the objects of the will were the first taker, Thomas Collier Barnard, his first and other sons, and their issue male, and the remainder-man in fee, and that the case should rely upon the will. He then proceeded to the following effect: By the order of law, a recovery cannot be suffered by the tenant for 99 years, and the tenant in tail, without the concurrence of the trustee; the trustee re-

(1) Vide per Lord Hardwicke C. in E. Portsmouth v. Ld. Effingham, 1 Ves. 436. Garth v. Cotton, ibid. 524. 546, &c. Symance v. Tattam, 1 Atk. 613. Woodhouse v. Hopkins, 3 Atk. 22. and from the notes of Lord Eldon C. 16 Ves. 308. See also per Lord Eldon C. in Stansfield v. Hubergham, 10 Ves. 278. and Moody v. Walters, 26 Ves. 98, &c. &c. Lord Eldon C. in the latter case, p. 309, 310, after observing that the principal case was printed from a note of Lord Redesdale, (as above stated, p. 493.) says: "The result of it tends much to establish the principle laid down by Lord Hardwicke. Sir T. Swell, in his judgment, keeps up the distinction between decreeing trustees to join; and declaring, if they did, that the act would be a breach of trust; and cautiously declares, that he will not state in what cases the act will or will not be held a breach of trust." His Lordship then states a particular case of Lord Mansfield before Sir L. Kenyon at the Rolls, which was not before in print. Quib. v. Quib., 442. 180.

1781.

BARNARD against LANCER.

fuses to concur, and the bill is brought to compel him. — The sole question, therefore, is, whether this is a case in which the Court ought to compel the trustee to concur; for this purpose it is necessary to consider the nature of the trust: All the persons claiming under the will, take as volunteers, and are all objects of the testator's bounty, the last remainder-man, as well as the first taker. Trustees, to preserve contingent remainders, are here appointed for two purposes: first, to preserve the estate against the father's power to destroy it; and secondly, to prevent the injury of any improper influence of the father over the son, to induce him to join in destroying the entail created, in cases where he ought not to join; there is, therefore, necessarily a discretion in the trustees, a discretion which if they use improperly, the Court will punish them; and if they refuse to exercise their discretionary power upon a reasonable occasion, the Court will compel them to do it. In so doing, the Court takes upon itself the exercise of that discretion, which ought to be exercised by the trustees; but the Court has a discretion in what cases it will do this. There is a distinction between punishing trustees, for joining in the destruction of contingent remainders, and compelling them to join; the Court proceeds according to the nature of the discretion given to the trustees, treating it as an honorary trust; it will be proper therefore to see by what rules the discretion of the trustee is directed, in what cases he has been considered as warranted in joining, and in what not. The rules seem sufficiently established, the trustee, though properly appointed only to preserve contingent limitations, *is in effect a trustee, for all vested as well as contingent remainders, and has been so considered; but with respect to vested remainders, if they have been to remote relations upon settlements where the persons to whom they were limited were not the immediate objects of the parties, or where they stand in opposition to the first tenant in tail, desiring a reasonable benefit consistent with the intentions of the creators of the limitations, their pretensions have not been much considered: Here all take as [*] volunteers, and all are equally to be considered.* The first case which has occurred, is in 1693, 2 Vern. 303. This seems to have been a case of necessity, the estate was originally an equity of redemption merely, the mortgage could only be paid off by sale, it was therefore necessary to sell, or all would be lost. The next case is Pye v. Gorges, Prec. in Chan. 384. 1 Wms. 128. 2 Salk. 680. in which the joining of trustees to destroy contingent remainders was considered as a breach of trust. The next is the case of Tipping v. Pigot, 1 Eq. C. Abr. 385. in which the Court refused to relieve against the act of trustees, in favour of a person who was not within the consideration of the settlements. In the case of Else v. Osborne, 2 Vern. 754. 1 W. 387. Michaelmas, 1717, the Court approved the conduct of trustees, joining with the first son tenant in tail to destroy contingent remainders. And in the case of Frevin v. Charlton, Eq. Ca. Ab. 386. the trustees were directed to join, but this was in contemplation of a marriage, and to remedy a blunder in the settlement, by which the term for securing daughters' portions was limited, subsequent to the estates tail to the sons. The next case was Winnington v. Foley, 1 W. 536. in which the Court, for the purpose of a new settlement, and in contemplation of a marriage, decreed the trustees to join; but in Townsend v. Lawton, before Lord King, in 1726, 2 W. 379. Sel. Ca. in Ch. 71. (3 Wms. 279.) the Court refused to interfere. (2) The last case which has been mentioned, is Woodhouse v. Hoskins (3), 3 Atkyns 22. in this case, Lord Hardwicke refused to compel

[*536]

(2) See Lord Eldon's observations on that case, 16 Ves. 307.

(3) See it stated by Lord Eldon C. from a good MS. note. 16 Ves. 308, 309.

APPENDIX.

1781.

BARNARD against LARGE.

compel the trustee to join; not thinking it a case in which the trustee ought to be compelled; and he remarked that the case of Winnington v. Foley was to make a marriage settlement, and so to continue, in effect, the uses of the old settlement, and after the uses of the new settlement were served, the estate was limited to the old uses. From this view of the cases determined, the reason of them seems to be, that when the eldest son tenant in tail is of age, and about to marry, and thus continue instead of destroying the purposes of the settlement; and in some cases, where there has been particular distress, under particular circumstances which ought to have induced the trustees to act, there the Court has interfered; but where no such circumstances have occurred, the Court has refused to interfere. In the present case, I am called upon to disturb the testator's disposition: and for what reason? merely to disturb it. No other object is offered, why then disturb the testator's will? let the law take place, dismiss the bill with costs.

DEVISME against MELLO.

Between WILLIAM DEVISME and JAMES DEVISME, Esqrs. and ELIZABETH DEVISME, an Infant, by her next Friend, Plaintiffs.

ARNOLD MELLO, surviving Executor of STEPHEN DEVISME, deceased, JACOB BLAQUIERE, ANDREW DEVISME, and ELIZABETH DEVISME, Executrix of WILLIAM DEVISME, deceased, and Administratrix of SOPHIA DEVISME, deceased, Defendants.

(Reg. Lib. 1781. A. fol. 404.)

6th July, 1782.

S. D. gave 5000*l.* to purchase stock, the interest to M. for life; then to

W. for life; at his decease to testator's godson S. and at his death, to be divided among his brothers equally: S. was dead at the time of the will made, a son of W. born after testator's death, who would have been a brother of S. had he lived, shall take a share in the 5000*l.* (1) The testator also, by a codicil, gave 4000*l.* to L. for life, and in case he had no children to revert to W.'s children; a daughter of W., who was alive at the time of the codicil being made, but died before W., was held to have a vested interest, transmissible to her representative.

(1) See Congreve v. Congreve, antea, 530. and the notes, and Gilmere v. Smeern, post, 582. 1 Hall & Beatt. 459. Upon the principal case, and the principle of it, see (inter alia) Middleton v. Messenger, 5 Ves. 136. 140. Godfrey v. Davis, 6 Ves. 43. 49, &c. Sir W. Grant, M. R., says, ibid. p. 49.: "It is clearly established by Devisme v. Mello, and many other cases, that where the testator gives any legacy or benefit to any person, not as persona designata, but under a qualification and description at any particular time, the person answering that description at that time, is the person to claim; and if there are any persons answering the description, they are not to wait to see, whether any other persons shall come in case: but it is to be divided among those capable of taking when by the tenor of the will he intended the property to vest in possession. The case was much considered by Lord Thurlow; and seems to have settled the law upon the subject."

So also Sir L. Kenyon, M. R., referring to the principal case, &c. says, in Ayton v. Ayton, 1 Cox, 328.: "The rule of construction applicable to the present case is settled, and settled most conveniently for the parties, by the case of Ellison v. Atter, 1 Ves. 111. So many children as come in case before the time when the fund is distributable shall be comprehended, and no more; the vesting is not to be suspended till other children are born, to take away from the shares of the former." See also Walker v. Stone, 15 Ves. 122. 125. per Lord Eldon C. accordingly.

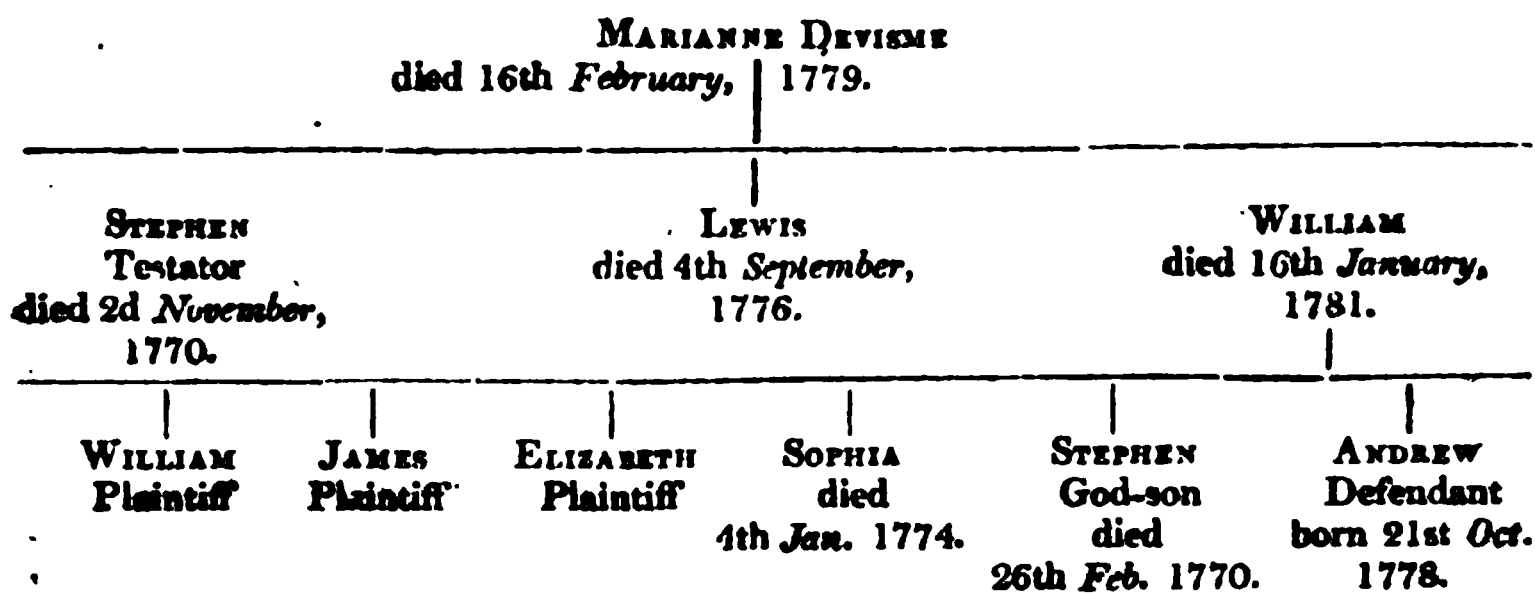

1782.

DEVISME
against MELLO.

of his will, and that he had thereby disposed of most part of his effects, and that he had since increased his fortune, and by the codicil he gave as follows, viz. "I give and bequeath a further sum of 5000*l.* sterling, to purchase stock, and the interest to be paid to my mother Marianne Devisme; at her death the interest to be paid to my brother William Devisme; and at his decease, to my god-son Stephen; at his decease, if before he is of age, to be divided among his brothers equally:" And another bequest is contained in the codicil as follows, "To my brother Lewis Devisme 4000*l.* to buy stock, to enjoy the income during life, and in case he does not marry and leave children, to revert to my brother William's children in equal parts:" And he gave the residue of his whole estate, real and personal, to his brother William Devisme, and appointed him sole residuary legatee of his codicil. — Stephen Devisme, the testator, died 2 November 1770. — Lewis Devisme renounced probate of the will and codicil, William Devisme and Arnold Mello proved. — Stephen Devisme, the god-son of the testator, died an infant of 4 years of age, 26th February 1770, in the life-time of his father William Devisme, and of the testator, and before the date of the codicil, having at the time of his death two brothers, the plaintiffs William and James, who were his only brothers at the time the testator made his codicil, and at the time of the testator's death. — The plaintiffs [*] William, and James, and Elizabeth, and Sophia Devisme, who died 4th January 1774, were the only children of William Devisme, testator's brother, living at the time the testator made his codicil, and at his decease; Lewis Devisme, brother of the testator, died 4th September 1776, unmarried and without issue; at his death, William had no children except the plaintiffs. — Marianne, the mother, died 16th February 1779. — William Devisme, the father of the plaintiffs, died 16th February 1781, leaving the plaintiffs and the defendant Andrew Devisme, who was born 21st October 1778, after the death of testator Stephen Devisme, and after the death of Lewis Devisme; the family pedigree therefore stood thus:—

[ *588 ]

The family had set apart the two sums of 5000*l.* and 4000*l.* and applied them in the purchase of stock, and the produce of the first being 5500*l.* 3 per cent. annuities, stood in the names of Mello and Blaquiere, and the second being 4400*l.* 3 per cent. annuities, in the name of Mello only.

The bill prayed, that the rights and interest of plaintiffs, in the 5500*l.* and 4400*l.* annuities, purchased with the 5000*l.* and 4000*l.* might be ascertained, that the shares of the plaintiffs William and James, who had attained 21, might be transferred and paid to them; and the share of the plaintiff Elizabeth secured for her benefit.

At the hearing of the cause, it was contended, for the plaintiffs, that they alone were entitled to the whole of both funds; that Andrew Devisme

APPENDIX.

1782.

DEVISNE
against MELLO.

[ *539 ]

Devisme being born after the death of Stephen the god-son, and of the testator, could not take any part of the 5000*l.* by the description of a brother of Stephen; and that being born after the death of Lewis Devisme, as well as after the death of the testator, he could take nothing in the 4000*l.* That Sophia, having died in the life-time of Lewis, could take nothing in the 4000*l.* and as Stephen the god-son died in the life-time of the [*] testator, no interest in that sum passed to him; nor was the share which he would have been entitled to, if living, to be considered as lapsed, and falling into the general residue.

On behalf of the defendant, Andrew Devisme, it was contended that he was entitled to a share of the 5000*l.*; having been born before the fund was distributable. It was insisted, that, in this case, the disposition of the 5000*l.* in case of the death of Stephen the god-son, though in words to the brothers of Stephen, yet was to be considered as a disposition in favour of sons of William Devisme, the brother of the testator; and that in that character, the testator meant a bounty to the plaintiffs William and James; and that, therefore, though Andrew was never, strictly speaking, a brother of Stephen, he might nevertheless take under that designation. That the word brothers, as well as the words children and sons, was general, and would extend to all brothers, unless it appeared the intent of the testator was to use it in a limited sense. That it had been the aim of courts of justice to limit such general words, for the sake of convenience; but their guide, in all cases, had been the intention of the testator, where that intention was consistent with the rules of law. Where a gift was immediately to take effect, in all its consequences, at the death of the testator, there the persons who answered such general description at the time of the testator's decease, were alone to take, because that must be the intention of the testator; but where a gift was not immediate, there it was not so evident that the testator meant to control the extended meaning of general words; and they might have their operation at a time subsequent to his death. If, therefore, the thing given was subject to circumstances which prevented an immediate distribution, as a prior interest, a power of appointment, or a contingency, general words used in the gift might have their full latitude till the gift actually took effect by division of the money, provided the intention of the testator did not appear to the contrary; and they might operate to delay the division, if the intention of the testator to continue this extended meaning to a more distant period, was declared, and that intention was consistent with the rules of law. In support of the first, that the word brothers of Stephen were to be construed as describing sons of William; it was urged that the words were used merely as words of relation to Stephen, whose name was the antecedent; but that it was obvious, from the terms of the bequest, that the objects of the testator's bounty in the whole bequest [*] were William, to whom the property was given for life, and his sons, that there was a clear intention to prefer Stephen, as the god-son of the testator, to the other sons of William; but, in case Stephen could not take, there was no intention of further preference of any son of William. That, from the state of William's family, the testator must have had in contemplation the probability of the birth of other sons; and that consequently Stephen might have other brothers besides those in being, and that it could not have been his intention that the death of Stephen, sooner or later, if he could not take the benefit, should have any operation on the extent of the provision intended for other sons of William. To shew the ground for the rest of the argument, several cases were cited.

[ *540 ]

In support of the assertion that general words, in a bequest, were to be construed as used in their most extended sense, unless the intention of the testator appeared to the contrary, or the rules of law and the necessity necessity of preventing a suspension of rights obliged the court to decide against the testator's intention, the cases of Bartlet v. Lynch, at the Rolls, 26 May 1757, (stated ante, p. 530 note), and Congreve v. Congreve, (ante p. 530,) Roberts v. Higman, (ante, p. 531. n.) Baldwin v. Kerver, (since reported by Mr. Cowper,) after-born children were let in to take, were cited from manuscript notes. From the printed books several cases were also mentioned, to shew that general words might have their full operation delayed until the time when the fund was to be distributed. Thus in Harding v. Glyn, 1 Atk. 469. where the testator gave his personal estate to his wife, desiring her, at her death, to dispose of the same among his nearest relations; and she made no appointment; it was determined that the property vested in such relations of the testator as were his next of kin at the death of his wife, when the distribution was to take place. So in Lord Teynham v. Webb, 2 Vesey, 198. the character of younger son was necessary to continue till the time of payment. Upon the same principle the case of the Duke of Marlborough v. Lord Godolphin, 2 Vesey, 61. was determined, where Lord Sunderland gave 30,000*l.* to his wife for her life, and after her death to be distributed among such of his children, and in such proportions as she should, by deed or will, appoint. She, by will, appointed, and two of the appointees died in her life-time. It was determined that appointment to them could not take effect. In the case of Coleman v. Seymour, 1 Vesey, 209. it was determined, [*] that a younger child, become an elder after the death of the testator, should take, upon a gift to younger children; but there the gift was immediate; and Lord Hardwicke observed, that the construction might have been different if the money had been given to the mother for her life. And in Horsley v. Chaloner, 2 Vesey, 83. the gift being immediately to be paid to the children at 21, the Master of the Rolls held a child born after the death of the testator, should not take; but in Graves v. Boyle, 1 Atk. 509. where a life-interest in the property was first given, it was determined that children born after the death of the testator, during the continuance of the life interest, should take under general words. In Maddison v. Andrew, 1 Vesey, 57. where the testator gave 300*l.* to the children of his sister Sarah, to be equally divided, share and share alike, at their ages of 21, or marriage, and failing the share of any, to the survivor; and failing her, shares of all to another sister, Grace; Sarah having only one child at the time of the will, and the testator having given it to children, with benefit of survivorship, and given it over to another family, upon an event which he must have intended to be the failure of all the children of Sarah, Lord Hardwicke thought this bequest, though immediate, must be construed to be for the benefit of all the children Sarah might have.

On behalf of the defendant Elizabeth Devisme, as administratrix of her daughter Sophia, it was contended, that Sophia took a transmissible interest in the 4000*l.* under the words "to revert to my brother William's children in equal parts." Sophia being living at the death of the testator, died before Lewis Devisme, the tenant for life; for though the bequest was subject to a contingency, that contingency did not affect the capacity of Sophia to take at the death of the testator, if the contingency had then happened; and therefore, according to King v. Withers, Cases temp. Talb. 117. and several other cases, her interest, though contingent, was transmissible to her representative.

Lord Chancellor was of opinion, that he was obliged to say the words in the bequest of 5000*l.* to brothers of Stephen, were not confined to those who were his brothers at the time of making the codicil: that the testator must have had in contemplation other sons coming into being; that the intention of the testator appeared to be to make an

APPENDIX.

1782.

DEVISME
against MELLO.

[ *541 ]

APPENDIX.

1782.

DEVISME
against MELLO.

[ *542 ] aggregate description of a part of the family of William, by the name of brothers of Stephen, as if he [*] had used the words male children of William, that he made use of the word brothers merely by relation to the antecedent, the name of Stephen used in the former part of the bequest, and that he could not otherwise have described the sons of William but by a circumlocution; he therefore declared that Andrew, being born before the time of distribution of the fund, was entitled to a share of the 5000*l.* He was also of opinion, that the representative of Sophia was entitled to a share of the 4000*l.* † (2)

[S. C. 1 Cox,
68.]

† Note, v. post. 582. Gilmore v. Seaton,—and Viner v. Francis, vol. 2. p. 658. In the case of Singleton v. Singleton (5), Gilbert and others, 24th February, 1784. Elizabeth Palmer, by will 11th June 1757, gave her real estates to trustees for 500 years, upon trust, for raising 200*l.* for better securing her debts and other purposes; with remainder to trustees for 1000 years, in trust, to repay the 200*l.* and raise annuities, and subject to the terms, she gave the estate to all and every the child and children of her brother Thomas Gilbert, and the heirs of the body and bodies of such child or children, as tenants in common, if more than one, in equal proportions; and in case of failure of issue of the bodies of such child or children, whose issue should so fail, to every the remaining child or children of the said Thomas Gilbert, and to the heirs of the body and bodies of all and every such child and children if more than one, to take as tenants in common; and if there should be a failure of issue of all such children, or if there should be but one such child, then to such remaining or only child; in default of such issue, to her brother the said Thomas Gilbert for life, with remainders over: And she directed the remainder of her personal estate to be placed at interest, and subject to annuities, and she gave it, to all and every the child and children of her brother Thomas Gilbert who should live to attain 21, such children, if more than one, to take equally; if only one, then such only child: and if there should be no such children, or none who should attain 21, then she desired her personal estate and the residue of the rents and profits of her real estate to be distributed amongst her next of kin. Thomas Gilbert had no children, Richard and Elizabeth, born before the death of the testatrix; and three children, Susannah, Thomas and Edward, born after the death. — The bill was brought by the plaintiff, the daughter of Susannah who died before 21, claiming the benefit of her mother's supposed share of the real estate of the testatrix, as claiming the share as heir of the body of her mother.

[S. C. 1 Cox,
327., which is a much better report.]

Lord Chancellor was of opinion, that there was no point of time in this case to which the words, all and every the child and children of Thomas Gilbert could be confined, except the death of the testatrix. and therefore determined that the plaintiff's mother Susannah, who was born after the death of the testatrix, could have no share.

Ayton v. Ayton (4), Rolls, 14th February 1787, George Lee, by will dated 10th October 1762, bequeathed to his wife Mary Lee, the residue of his real and personal estate for life; and after her death, he gave the same to the children of Mr. John Ayton and his wife Jane, to be equally divided amongst them the said Jane Ayton's children, and any children of any other marriage, by either party. — The testator died 15th December 1762, without issue. — Mary Lee, his widow, died 11th April 1763. — At the death of the testator and his widow, John Ayton, Susannah Ayton, and Mary Ayton, (since dead) were the only children of John and Jane Ayton then born; but they had afterwards three other children, Hannah, Jane, and Elizabeth, all born after the death of Mary Lee the wife.

His Honor (Sir Lloyd Kenyon) declared, that the interest in the residue of the testator's personal estate vested absolutely in the three children of John and Jane Ayton, who came into esse during the life of Mary Lee, and that those born after were not entitled to a share.

(2) " His Lordship doth declare, that Andrew Devisme, who was born before the death of William Devisme mentioned in the codicil to the said testator's will, at which time distribution was to be made of the sum of 5000*l.* mentioned in the said codicil, became entitled to a proportionate share thereof with the other children of the said W. Devisme. And his Lordship doth also declare, that the defendant Elizabeth Devisme, as administratrix of Sophia Devisme deceased, became entitled on the death of Lewis Devisme to a proportionate share of the sum of 4000*l.* also mentioned in the said codicil," &c. R. L.

(3) Sir W. Grant, M. R., referring to this case, and Ayton v. Ayton, supra, says the point was not so clear before the principal case. Vide in Godfrey v. Davis, 6 Ves. 43. 50.

(4) See the preceding note.

1792.

The Hon. HENRY NEVILLE, JOHN ROBINSON, and HENRY SHELLEY, Esqrs. - - - - - Plaintiffs.

[*343.]

JOHN WILKINSON, - - - - - Defendant.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 45. b.)

[19th December
1782.]

THE plaintiffs filed their bill, and the following case appeared on the defendant's answer.

Injunctions granted to restrain defendant from recovering a demand from one of the plaintiffs, he having represented to the agent of the other plaintiffs, (on a treaty of marriage with his daughter,) that there was no such demand existing. (1)

That in June, 1777, the plaintiff, Neville, who was the son and heir-apparent of Lord Abergavenny, became acquainted with the defendant, who was an attorney, and they had several transactions together, the principal object of which was the raising money to supply Mr. Neville's necessities.

In June, 1781, Mr. Neville having paid his addresses to marry the daughter of the plaintiff Robinson, the defendant was requested by Mr. Neville, to make up a state of his affairs to lay before Mr. Robinson, which the defendant did, to the amount of 26,000*l.*, including demands of the defendant on Mr. Neville, to a considerable amount; and meetings were had to settle this state of debts between Neville and the defendant, and Butcher, another person employed by Neville, and who had a considerable demand on Neville; and, in the course of their conversations, it appeared that the demands of Butcher were stated below their real amount, and that there were debts not included in the amount; but Neville represented to the defendant and Butcher, that he had assured Robinson, that his debts, in the whole, did not exceed 18,000*l.*, and that he was very sure, if Robinson knew that his debts were so enormous, he would hesitate in consenting to the marriage; although he was sure, after the marriage had taken place, that he would pay the full amount of Neville's debts; that he had obtained the consent of the lady and her friends, and of his friends; that he should be unhappy and ruined unless the marriage took effect; and that he saw no other mode of effecting it, but by persuading the defendant to forego making a claim of his whole debt, due to him from the plaintiff Neville, and by persuading Butcher to forego claiming a part of his demand. The defendant was prevailed upon by the intreaties of Neville, to conceal his debt from Mr. Robinson, and to omit the same in the amount of the debts of Neville, to be made out and delivered to Mr. Robinson (2); having received from Neville assurances that the debt due to the defendant should be paid or considerably [*] reduced out of the income which his father Lord Abergavenny, and Mr. Robinson had agreed to allow him; and that Robinson had agreed to give Neville 50,000*l.* with his daughter, and to make his annual income 5000*l.* a year.

[*544.]

(1) This decision has always been approved. See in Eastbrook v. Scott, 3 Ves. 461. Booth v. Booth, 1 Cox. 378. Dalbousie v. Dalbousie, 16 Ves. 105. See also Medman v. Redman, 1 Vern. 348. above cited, in which case it appears from H. L., through the report, that a creditor was co-plaintiff with the administrator of C. R. in the action brought, see 1 Cox. 375. See also Thompson v. Harrison, 1 Cox. 344, 345. Wentworth v. Little, 1 Vern. 475. Peyton v. Blundell, ibid. 340. Manly v. Sams, 1 Black. Rep. 383. Froughton v. Froughton, 1 Ves. 86. and more fully 3 Atk. 658. was upon the same principle — The father there, on his son's marriage, covenanted that the estate he settled was free from incumbrances; but made the son on the same day covenant to reimburse part or pay 300*l.* Lord Hardwicke directed the estate to be discharged accordingly. (2) And that in fact the account delivered in for Mr. Robinson's inspection made him appear to be a creditor only to the small amount stated in the bill, namely, 14*l.* 1*sh.* 1*d.* H. L.

APPENDIX.

1782.

NEVILLE
against
WILKINSON.

An account was delivered by the defendant, to Neville, of money received and paid by the defendant, in some annuity transactions which was examined by Mr. Atkinson, as a friend of Mr. Robinson, but not finally settled; and particularly the defendant told Atkinson, that he had a considerable demand on Neville, for business done in his profession, and for money expended in his business; he was then asked by Atkinson, if he had any other demands on Neville, and said he had not, in pursuance of his promise to Neville to conceal his demand from Robinson.

On the 4th of October, 1781, Mr. Neville was married to Miss Robinson; and the fact was, (though the answer denied any knowledge of it,) that, by indenture 29 September, 1781, previous to the marriage, it was declared, that a sum of 18,000*l.* paid into the hands of a banker, in the name of the plaintiffs Robinson and Shelley, and mentioned in the settlement on the marriage of Mr. Neville and Miss Robinson, should be applied to redeem the annuities, and pay the debts granted and contracted by Mr. Neville previous to his marriage, and that, if there should be a surplus, it should be paid to trustees in the settlement. After the marriage, the 18,000*l.* was applied in discharging demands on Mr. Neville, together with a further sum advanced by Mr. Atkinson for that purpose, and the defendant was employed to pay several of those demands consisting of tradesmen's bills [and otherwise to the amount altogether of 417*l.* 0*s.* 8*d.*] which was repaid by Mr. Atkinson, and the defendant on this occasion refusing to give a receipt in full of all demands, was asked by Atkinson, if he had any other demands, and he said he had not; [except for business done by him in his profession of attorney or solicitor, and for which he declared the plaintiff might pay him what he pleased when he was able. — R. L.]

After these transactions, the defendant claimed of Neville a debt to the amount of 4758*l.* 16*s.* 6*d.* exclusive of interest, and also exclusive of his demand for his fees and disbursements in business; and it appeared that he had a bond from Neville for 1000*l.* in part security for his demands; part of this demand was for money advanced subsequent to the marriage. The bill prayed a general account offering to pay what, if any thing, should appear justly due, that the bond might be delivered up, and an [*] injunction; and it appeared to found a claim to this relief, on suggestions that the demand of the defendant was not in its origin just, rather than upon the ground of fraud, in the concealment, by the defendant, of his demand on the plaintiff Neville.

Upon the answer, a motion was made by Mr. Attorney General, (Kenyon,) [Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Madocks, and Mr. Lloyd] for an injunction, and he founded his motion on the ground of fraud; he principally relied on a case of Turton and Benson, 1 P. Wms. 496.; and Redman v. Redman, 1 Vern. 348. (3)

Mr. Scott (on the other side) contended, that this case differing from any former case, he considered, and it was admitted, that the defendant's demands in the way of business, and for money advanced since the marriage, were indisputable; and that the only doubt was, as to the debt due to the defendant before the marriage, which it was alleged had been fraudulently concealed from Mr. Robinson, to induce him to consent to the marriage. With respect to this demand, he endeavoured to distinguish the case of the defendant from any case apparently similar which had been before the Court; insisting, that these cases had either been where the consideration of the original contract was bad, as marriage-brokerage bonds; or they had been where a parent had bargained for his child, upon an article in which he had been deceived; but, in this case.

(3) See also 1 Cox, 375.

1782.

NEVILLE
against
WILKINSON.

the original contract was good, as the fairness of the defendant's demand was not disputed, and it did not appear that Mr. Robinson had been deceived in an article, upon which he had bargained in behalf of his daughter, as it did not appear that Mr. Robinson had made the amount of the debts of Neville a positive condition in the treaty for the marriage.

In order to found the injury, it ought to appear from the answer. (4)

1st. That in point of fact, Mr. Robinson did make it a term in the agreement, that Mr. Neville's debts amounted only to 18,000*l*.

2d. That the defendant knew that he so did.

[*] 3d. That knowing this, the defendant had conveyed to Robinson a misrepresentation, under the influence of which Robinson had actually agreed. (4)

[ *546 ]

Lord Chancellor had at first considerable doubts; but, after looking into the cases with considerable attention, he delivered his opinion to the following effect:

He observed, that Mr. Scott had attempted to distinguish this case from any of the former cases apparently similar, upon this ground, that in all those cases the parent had stated an article in which he had been deceived, and had bargained upon that article; here the defendant confessed a confederacy to cheat Robinson; that Neville told him, that he had represented his debts to Robinson as not exceeding 18,000*l*., and that he was sure that, if Robinson knew the amount of his debts, he would hesitate consenting to the marriage; but non constat that Robinson had ever insisted that 18,000*l*. should be the extent of the debts of Neville. His Lordship said, he could not make the distinction; he would not lay it down as a rule, that fraud, in cases of this nature, must be upon an article expressly contracted for. If any man, upon a treaty for any contract, will make a false representation†, by means of which he puts the person bargaining under a mistake upon the terms of bargain, it is a fraud; it misleads the parties contracting on the subject of the contract. It has been said, here is no evidence of actual fraud on Robinson, but only an admission of a combination to defraud him. A court of justice would make itself ridiculous if it permitted such a distinction:—misrepresentation of circumstances is admitted, and there is positively a deception. His Lordship then adverted to the case of Gale v. Lindo, 1 Vern. 475., and observed, that there, upon a treaty for a marriage, the woman not having so great a portion as the man insisted upon, prevailed upon her brother to let her have 160*l*. to make up her portion, and gave him a bond for repayment of it:—the marriage was had; and the husband, who knew nothing of the bond, died without issue:—the wife survived, and after her death, and the death of the brother, the defendant, his executor, put the bond in suit against the plaintiff, her executor: the bond was there set aside in her favour: a bond given by herself, and sued against herself, that is, against her representative. A quere is put by the [*] reporter, if the condition of the bond had been, that in case the woman survived her husband, that she should pay it, whether she could have been relieved: His Lordship thought this would have made no difference: The principle, he observed, on which all those cases had been decided, was, that faith in such contracts was so essential to the happiness both of the parents and children, that whoever treats fraudulently on such an occasion, shall not only not gain, but even † See Pearson v. Morgan, post. vol. 2. p. 388.

[ *547 ]

(4) This part is a marginal note in Lord Redesdale's original MSS., from whence Mr. Brown took the report. — Lord R.'s notes.

AFFIRMED

1782

Navvick
against Hammond.

[1782*]

1787

[1787*]

[1788*]

[1788*]

[1788*]

[1788*]

[1788*]

[1788*]

lost by it. He then observed upon the cases in which it had been determined, that upon a criminal act, a person who was particeps criminis, could not be relieved in a court of justice; and particularly the case of Tomkins v. Barnett, 1 Salk. 22. and Skinner, 411. which was an action of indebitatus assumpsit, by a person who had paid money on an usurious contract, against the person who had received it. This, he observed, remains in the books, and is cited; but has been departed from in point of principle and application; and to shew this, he mentioned the case of Astley v. Reynolds, Strange, 915. which was an action against a pawnbroker for taking more than legal interest, and Moses v. Magfarlan, before Lord Mansfield, 2 Burrow, 1006. and Wilkinson v. Kitchen, Lord Raymond, 189. which was an action of indebitatus assumpsit for 70*l.* given by the plaintiff, who was committed on two indictments, for clipping, &c. to the defendant, a Newgate solicitor, to procure his discharge, and for the defendant's pains: Not being prosecuted, he brought his action for the whole 70*l.* and, upon the trial, the question was whether money given to a man to be expended in an ill use, might be recovered by the giver, who was particeps criminis; and it appearing that the money had been disposed of in bribes, a verdict was given for the plaintiff; and Sir B. Shower cited a case where a bribe was given to a custom-house officer, for exempting goods from payment of custom, which being discovered, and the goods seized, the party recovered his money in indebitatus assumpsit. This, however, appears to be against the assertion of Lord Hale, at the close of the case of Tomkins v. Barnett, Skinner, 412.† His Lordship's founding himself on the case he had mentioned, declared his opinion, that, in all cases where money was paid for an unlawful purpose, the party, though particeps criminis, might recover at law; and that the reason was, that if courts of justice mean to prevent the perpetration of crimes, it must be not by allowing a man who has got possession to remain in possession, but by putting the parties back to the state in which they were before. And he considered the rule as now clear; and mentioned a case of Bromley v. Smith, before Lord Mansfield, 1760, where a bribe was given to a creditor of a bankrupt, to induce him to sign a certificate: he also mentioned, upon the point before him, a case of Montefiore, in 1762, from Mr. Filmer's notes, in the hands of Mr. Attorney General (Kenyon) (5) where, in order to procure a marriage, a brother

† The following cases were also cited (6), Key v. Bradshaw, 2 Vern. 102. Lamb v. Hannah, 2 Vern. 499. Hall v. Potter. Shower's Parlt. Cases, 76. Low v. Low, 5 P. Wms. 391. Blanchet v. Foster, 2 Ves. 264. Webber v. Farmer, 2 Brown's Plt. Cases, 88. Morrison v. Arbuthnot, II. L. 1728, which was as follows: On a treaty of marriage between Lord Arbuthnot, then a minor, and the daughter of Morrison, it was agreed that Morrison should pay 50,000 marks as a portion for his daughter, and a settlement was agreed to be made by Lord Arbuthnot and his friends in consideration of that fortune. The night before the execution of the articles, Morrison prevailed on Lord Arbuthnot privately to sign a writing, purporting that the real agreement was for 10,000 marks only, and that Morrison had agreed to the contract for 50,000, upon the express granting of this private obligation, by which Lord Arbuthnot bound himself to release Morrison from 10,000 marks, part of the 50,000. When Lord Arbuthnot came of age, he brought his action to have this obligation reduced on two grounds. 1. That it was granted by him whilst a minor, without the consent of his guardians. 2. That it was contra fidem tabularum nuptialium, to elicit such a writing clandestine.

(5) Montefiore is the same, 1 Black. Rep. 363.

(6) The cases here referred to, were taken promiscuously from Lord Redesdale's notes. Some of them were cited, and some were not. Morrison v. Lord Arbuthnot, in particular, was not cited. — Lord Redesdale's MSS. notes. Morrison v. Lord Arbuthnot is reported 8 Bro. P. C. 247. octavo edition.

brother of the intended husband represented, that he was indebted to the intended husband, on a partnership account, and gave a note for 1730*l.* to be shewn to the parents of the wife, to induce them to enter into the contract; and the brother gave a bond of indemnity: no part of the money was settled on the marriage, and the note was their inducement to the marriage: There were afterwards many disputes between the brothers, and at length they referred their dispute to arbitration: The arbitrators thought that the note was given upon no consideration, and disallowed it in their account: The Court reversed the award, on that single ground, because where one brother had given to the other the note for 1730*l.* to enable him to make a contract of marriage, he could not revoke it; it amounted to a contract to perform what he had done. His Lordship was, upon these grounds, clear that Mr. Neville himself was entitled to relief: he had doubted before, on what had been said by Lord Macclesfield, that the father of a child, in such a case, had an interest to see that the property of the husband was such as it had been represented to be, but he now thought clearly with him. He was of opinion that [*] an injunction should be awarded to restrain the defendant from proceeding to recover any debt due before the marriage of Mr. Neville (except his bill for business, which the parties agreed to settle); and he declared his opinion that the defendant could not ever recover that debt against Mr. Neville.

APPENDIX.

1782.

NEVILLE
against WILKINSON.

[ *549 ]

simely, contrary to a solemn contract entered into in the presence of his friends. The Lords of Session sustained the reason of reduction, and held the obligation null. Against their decree, Morrison appealed to the House of Lords, where the decree was affirmed, with 80*l.* costs.

1783.

[ *550 ]

[*] TOWNSHEND against TOWNSHEND.

FRANCIS TOWNSHEND, . . . . . Plaintiff.

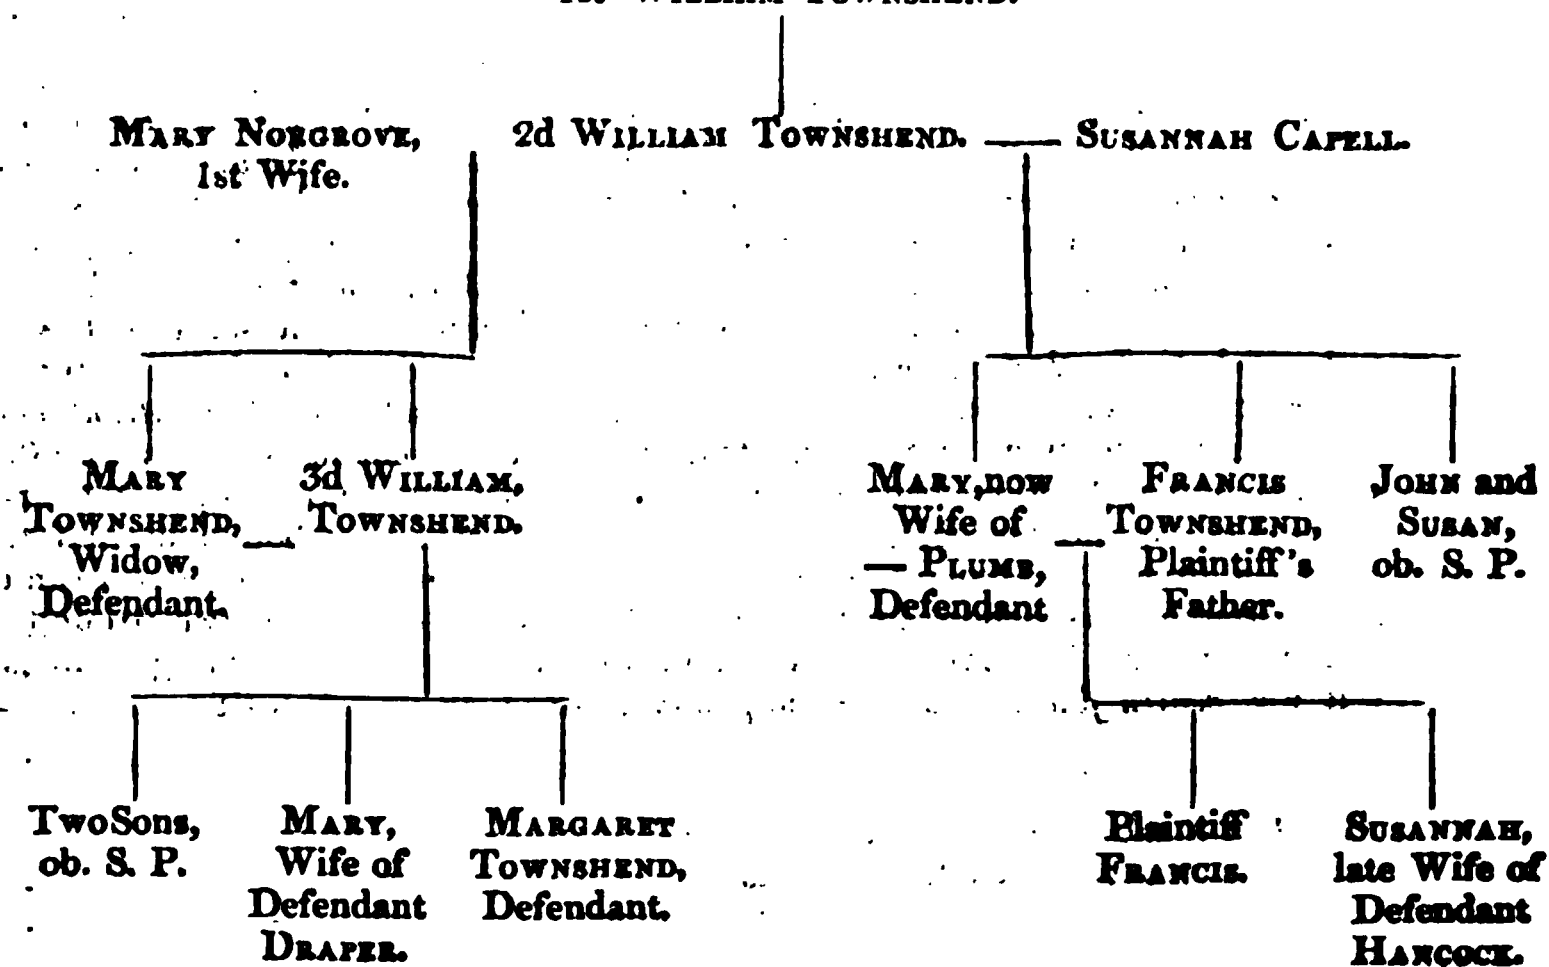

[S. C. 1 Cox,
28. (1)]

MARY TOWNSHEND Widow. — DRAPER and MARY his Wife, and MARGARET TOWNSHEND. — PLUMB and MARY his Wife, RICHARD HANCOCK, Administrator of SUSANNAH his late Wife. — THOMAS NOTT, personal representative of RANDOLPH STEVENS, (Assignee) Defendants.

May [23d and]
26th, 1783.

Lords Commissioners *Ash-
hurst and Ho-
tham.*

1st WILLIAM TOWNSHEND.

(1) See Note 2. in the following page.

APPENDIX.

[*] (Reg. Lib. 1782. B. fol. 358. b.) (2)

1783.

[*551]

A mortgage term being made the subject of a settlement after marriage with a second wife, but recited to be in pursuance of articles previous to the marriage; under the uses of which the plaintiff claimed; was afterwards conveyed by the settlor and his wife, (by fine and settlement) to uses, for the benefit of the children by the first marriage, who, and their representatives, have been in possession 30 years, plaintiff's bill dismissed, as the Court will presume that the settlement was known to be voluntary, or else, that the children by the second wife had a compensation for their claims.

The rule that a trust is not within the statute of limitations, applies only, between trustee and cestui que trust, not against a trust by implication as affected by an equity. (3)

[*552]

THE first William Townshend, being seised in fee of the lands in question, upon the marriage of the second William Townshend (his son) with Martha Norgrove his first wife, by indenture dated 27th June, 1701, between the 1st William Townshend and the 2d William Townshend, conveyed the land to Nehemiah Norgrove and another trustee, to hold the lands to them and their heirs to the use of the 1st William Townshend, his executors, administrators, and assigns, for and during the term of 500 years, subject to the proviso thereafter contained, with remainder to the use of 2d William Townshend for life, remainder to the use of the heirs of the body of the said Martha Norgrove by said 2d William Townshend, remainder to the use of the heirs and assigns of said 2d William Townshend, for ever, with a proviso that if the said 2d William Townshend, or the heirs of the body of Martha by the said 2d William Townshend should pay to said 1st William Townshend, or his assigns, the sum of 50*l.* yearly, during his life, and 500*l.* to the executors, administrators, or assigns of said 1st William Townshend, then the said term of 500 years to be void.

First William Townshend died, and by his will gave the 500*l.* to his daughter: And the said 2d William Townshend having paid off the arrears of the said annuity, and the said sum of 500*l.* to the executrix, the executrix by indenture of 29th January, 1708, assigned the term of 500 years to Ann Ashworth in trust, for said 2d William Townshend, his executors, administrators, and assigns.

Second William Townshend (after death of his first wife Martha Norgrove) married Susannah Capell, a daughter of Ann Ashworth, and, by indenture made after marriage, bearing date 31st January, 1708, between 2d William Townshend and the said Ann Ashworth of the first part, and William Rowland and Nathaniel Rowe of the second part, whereby, in consideration of marriage, and of a competent marriage portion paid by said Ann Ashworth to said 2d William Townshend, and in pursuance of an agreement made before such marriage, and for settling the residue of said term of 500 years for the uses thereafter mentioned, the said 2d William Townshend and Ann Ashworth (by his direction) assigned to said William Rowland and Nathaniel Rowe, the residue of the said term of 500 years, in trust for said 2d William Townshend for life, remainder for Susannah his wife for life, remainder in [*] trust for such child or children of them, as the said 2d William Townshend should by will appoint, and, in default of appointment, for the first son of said 2d William Townshend on the body of his said wife, and the heirs of his body; remainder to 2d, 3d, and other sons; remainder over. The 2d William Townshend had issue by Susannah Capell, Francis (plaintiff's father) who died in the life-time of said 2d William Townshend, and left plaintiff his only son.

The said 2d William Townshend had issue by Martha Norgrove his first wife, 3d William Townshend, who married Mary the defendant, and by indenture of lease and release dated 26th and 27th of November,

(2) This case is reported in the same words by Mr. Cox: so that most probably Mr. Brown copied it from Mr. Cox's notes, as he had copied the preceding cases in the Appendix from those of Lord Redesdale.

(3) See Llewellyn v. Mackworth (above cited), Barn. Ch. 445. and 15 Vin. Ab. 125. Smith v. Clay, post. 3 vol. p. 39. note. Ambler, 645. 2 Scho. & Lefroy, 631, 632. Harmood v. Oglander, 6 Ves. 199. and 8 Ves. 106. Hovenden v. Lord Annesley, 2 Scho. & Lefroy, 607. 629, 630, 631, 632, 633. &c. Cholmondeley v. Lord Clinton, 2 Merivale, 358, 359. Hawkins v. Luscombe, before Sir J. Leach, Vice Ch., 15th May, 1819, &c. Et vide Beames on Pleas in Equity, 166, 167. and the notes, and 1 Ball. & Beatt. 167.

1788.

TOWNSEND
against TOWNSEND.

1739, between 2d William Townshend and Susannah his then wife, of the first part; 3d William Townshend of the second part; and Greenbank a trustee of the third part; and by a fine with proclamations levied by 2d William Townshend and Susannah his wife, and 3d William Townshend; the said 2d William Townshend and Susannah his wife, in consideration of 400*l.* to the said 2d William Townshend, paid by the said 3d William Townshend, conveyed the said lands to Greenbank, his heirs and assigns, to the use of the said 3d William Townshend, his heirs and assigns for ever, with covenants in the release by 2d William Townshend, that the said premises were and should be free from incumbrances by him; and by deed-poll, dated the 23d of November, 1739, and indorsed upon the said indenture of the 31st of January, 1708, reciting in part the said indenture of lease and release and fine, and that the uses of the said indenture of the 31st January, 1708, were thereby defeated, and that Nathaniel Rowe was dead; the said William Rowland, by the direction of the said 2d William Townshend, and 3d William Townshend, assigned to Randolph Stevens, the said premises for the residue of the said term of 500 years, in trust to protect the uses limited of the said premises by the said indentures of lease and release.

The 3d William Townshend died in 1755, having, by his will dated in 1751, devised the said premises to the said defendant Mary Townshend, his wife for life, without any remainder over. He left Mary Draper and Margaret Townshend, his daughters and co-heirs, and the mother and two daughters afterwards joined in suffering a recovery of the premises, and had settled them to the use of the mother for life, with remainder as to one [*] moiety to one daughter, and the other moiety to the other daughter; and the mother had been in possession ever since.

[ *553 ]

The plaintiff went abroad immediately on his coming of age, and did not return till the year 1775; he claimed by his bill, to be entitled to the benefit of the term, under the indenture of 1708, and prayed that all deeds might be delivered unto him, and that Randolph Stevens might assign the residue of the term to him, and that he might be let into possession, and for an account of rents and profits.

It was contended by Mr. Mansfield, for the plaintiff, that the whole interest in the term vested, under the indenture of 1708, in plaintiff's father as tenant in tail of personal property; and that the indentures of 1739 were therefore void. Two objections were made to the plaintiff's claim. First, that the indenture of 1708 was made after marriage, and was therefore voluntary. 2dly, That the plaintiff was barred by length of time. As to the first objection, the indenture of 1708 recites that it was in pursuance of articles entered into before marriage. At this length of time, the Court will not presume it otherwise. As to the second objection, the whole transaction was a fraud; and therefore the statute of limitations is out of the question. The trustees conveyed the term, by the deed-poll of 1739, as a satisfied term. It is impossible to contend that the parties did not know it to be unsatisfied. Plaintiff's father was an infant, and therefore could not be satisfied as to his interest. A trust is not within the statute of limitations; but the trustees under the indentures of 1739, having notice, ought to be considered as trustees for the plaintiff.

Mr. Kenyon (for the defendants.)—It is rather a difficult presumption that the second wife joined in disinheriting her own issue in favour of the children of the first. The term was, in its creation, in effect, a mortgage, and the question is whether the mortgage is still a subsisting charge.—The indenture of 1708 was voluntary, being after marriage: the recital is not even that the articles were in writing; but if they were so, it is no evidence to affect my client.

Then,

APPENDIX.

1783:

TOWNSEND
against TOWNSEND.

[ *554 ]

Then, as to the statute of limitations: In 1749 the title accrued, to a person capable of making his claim: he does make it [*] in 1779. The Court will always presume a mortgage satisfied at that distance of time. It would be clear, in a court of law, and when once the statute of limitations begins to run, no disability of the party shall stop it. It is the common practice, that if the mortgagee gets into possession, and continues in it 20 years, the mortgagor is barred of his redemption; not because the statute has said so, but because it is a convenient and wholesome policy. So in this case, either ground of its being a voluntary settlement, or the length of time is sufficient.

Mr. Hollist. (on the same side.)—The rule that a trust is not within the statute of limitations does not hold in this case. That rule is only between the trustee and his cestui que trust. Elwellyn v. Mackworth, Barnard, 445.

Mr. Mansfield (in reply.)—As to the objection of its being a voluntary settlement, recitals in old deeds are always evidence, for the articles are usually destroyed on the execution of the settlement; but if the agreement was by parol, it is good to make a settlement. It cannot, indeed, be enforced against an unwilling party—but, if it be admitted, it is a good consideration for the settlement. As to the statute of limitations, both in the light of a fraud and a trust, it does not affect this case.

Lord Commissioner Ashurst.—The first point is that the defendants are purchasers for a valuable consideration, and the settlement of 1708 is voluntary. If this had been all, we should have thought with the plaintiff; but as to the case of the defendants, they claim under the deed of 1739, and have been in possession ever since. It is said, by the plaintiff, that the defendants took the term as a trust, with notice; but it is unnatural to infer a fraud in this case, for the mother must be presumed to defeat the provision for her own children. In this view, one would rather infer that the parties knew that the settlement was voluntary, or that some compensation was made to the children of the second marriage. Then as to trusts being an exception to the statute of limitations: The rule holds only as between trustees and cestui que trusts. It is true, that a trustee cannot set it up against his cestui que trust: but this is merely the case of a trustee by implication, and as such affected by an equity; but that equity must be pursued within some reasonable time. Both [*] courts of law and equity preserve an analogy to the statute of limitations.

The case of mortgagor and mortgagee, is a stronger case than this: Aggas v. Pickorell, 3 Atk. 225.: and therefore so doubtful an equity as this, most certainly be within the rule. We therefore dismiss the bill, but without costs.

HOLMES against HOLMES.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 756.)

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, July 17,
1783.Father, by will,
gives his son 500*l*. he afterwards takes him into partnership.

HOLMES the father, who was a jeweller, by his will dated in November, 1771, [amongst other bequests] gave his son 500*l*.; and

The stock being 3000*l*. this is not a satisfaction of the legacy. (1)

(1) Vide Jeacock v. Falkener, 296. and note (4). Grave v. E. of Salisbury, antea, 425. 427. And 1 Roper on Legacies, 59. et sequent.

2000*l.* [on trust to be invested for] four unmarried daughters; [in equal shares of 500*l.* each]; then gave his son the utensils of his trade (which were of trifling value) and gave the residue of his personal estate to his wife for life; and, after her death, he gave further legacies to his daughters: to some 500*l.*, and to others 1000*l.*; and, if any surplus, to be divided amongst all his children who should be then living, (there being then seven in all). In 1779, he took his son into partnership with him, and, by the deed of partnership, the stock was to be 3000*l.*, to be brought in equally, and they were to be equally entitled to the profits. The father brought in the whole capital, and it was understood, by the whole family, that he meant to give the son the half of the stock. The children who were of age, by their answer, admitted this; and there was parol evidence of declarations of the testator, at different times, that he meant to bring his son into partnership, and to give him half the stock, and even the whole; and that he told one witness, that he had brought his son in, and had given him 1500*l.* The question made in the cause was, whether this advancement was a satisfaction of the legacy of 500*l.*, and it was held not to be a satisfaction, not being ejusdem generis (1); and that it must have been the testator's intention that the plaintiff should have both. Lord Commissioner Hotham relied on an argument for the plaintiff, that if the legacy had been a moiety of the stock, and afterwards 500*l.* had been given, it could not have been a satisfaction. (2)

(1) See note (1) in the preceding page.

(2) " Their Lordships do declare that the [plaintiff's interest in the partnership] is not to be considered as an ademption of the legacy of 500*l.* given to him by the will of the said testator." R. L.

[*] Ex parte BECHER.

(Reg. Lib. 1782. A. fol. 639.)

THIS was the petition of Charlotte Becher, of the age of 17 years, to have a guardian of her person assigned by the Court: but it was not a petition under the statute.

It appeared, that the father had died in the East Indies, insolvent; that her mother was alive, and resided there; that no guardian had ever been appointed; that she had no estate, either real or personal; and that a very advantageous offer of marriage had been made to her, to consent to which was the object of praying for the appointment of a guardian. She lived with her uncle, by the mother's side, [Mr. Thomas Pattle,] (who was also the father's executor). But the Court said, that this, not being a petition according to the statute, [26 Geo. 2. c. 33.], and not for the purpose of carrying on any suit, or protecting any interest; there was no object which the Court could take notice of, to entitle the petitioner to what she prayed.

They therefore dismissed the present petition; but directed a new petition to be presented pursuant to the statute, which being done at the rising of the Court, an order was made accordingly. (2)

(1) The Marriage Act, 26 Geo. 2. c. 33.

(2) The order, as drawn up, was: " Their Lordships do approve of the said marriage, and do order that the said Thomas Pattle be appointed guardian of the said C. B. the infant." R. L.

APPENDIX.

17881

HOZMMS
against HOLMES.

[ *556 ]

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, October
29, 1783.

Petition that a guardian may be assigned (unless to carry on a suit, or protect an interest) must be pursuant to the statute. (1) not a petition at law, but in equity will be made at law, but in equity and so on

H redms

(1)

APPENDIX.

1783.

VAUGHAN against THOMAS.

(No Entry.)

*Lincoln's Inn
Hall, October
31, 1783.*

Taking an annuity worth 9 years' purchase at 5 years, is an unconscientious bargain, and the Court will give the taker no assistance in a bargain for a re-purchase. (1)

[ *557 ]

THE defendant, General Thomas, being in great want of money, came to an agreement with the plaintiff, who was a broker, for the sale of an annuity of 300*l.* for his (the defendant's) life, for the sum of 1500*l.* The defendant then represented himself to the plaintiff to be of the age of 55 years; and the plaintiff accordingly insured the defendant's life, as being of that age. The original transaction was on the first of December, 1775. In March, 1777, it was discovered that the defendant was of the age of 61 years, at the time of granting the annuity; but, as the defendant swore by his answer, he did not himself know it at the time. In consequence of this discovery, the plaintiff was forced to pay an additional premium of 7*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* for the insurance of the defendant's life. On the plaintiff's representing this mistake of the age to the defendant, it was [*] agreed that the plaintiff should grant to the defendant an additional annuity of 50*l.* as commencing from the first of December, 1775; which was accordingly done, by indorsement on the original grant. In that indorsement, the additional annuity was mentioned to be granted for the consideration of 250*l.*, but in fact, no money was paid on that occasion. In December, 1779, the defendant applied to the plaintiff to re-purchase the annuity, and thereupon an agreement was drawn up, in writing, and signed by the plaintiff and defendant, whereby the plaintiff agreed to give up the annuity on payment of 1500*l.* the original purchase-money, and all arrears then due, deducting thereout the sum of 200*l.*, which was understood to be the four years of the additional annuity of 50*l.*; the arrears then due amounted to 475*l.*, so that the principal sum then settled for the re-purchase was 1775*l.* After this agreement had been signed, the plaintiff said it was unintelligible, and struck out his name: two days afterwards they met again, and the plaintiff's attorney prepared an agreement, whereby the plaintiff relinquished the annuity, and all arrears then due, for the sum of 2000*l.* to be paid by instalments, but to carry interest in the mean time. This agreement being signed, the plaintiff brought this bill for the performance of it. It was referred by the Master of the Rolls, to inquire into the circumstances, and to find the value of the original and additional annuity, and the defendant's age.

It now came on, upon the Master's report; he reported the annuity worth 9 years' purchase when it was first granted. The plaintiff insisted that the whole transaction was fair, and that he was entitled to the assistance of this Court, to carry it into execution.

But the Court said, that if they assisted the plaintiff, they should give a sanction to a very unconscientious bargain; and that under this view of the case, the plaintiff was by no means entitled to the aid of this Court.

Bill dismissed. †

† Vide Heathcote v. Paignon, post. vol. 2. p. 167.

(1) See in Gwynne v. Heaton, antea, 5. 8, 9. &c. and Heathcote v. Paignon, post. 2 vol. 167.

1783.

[*558]

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 5th and other days in July, 1778, before Lord Thurlow: 12th and 22d November, 1783,
before the Lords Commissioners.

Leases for lives, obtained by agents (1) of a deceased person of weak intellects, upon inadequate considerations, set aside as fraudulent. (2)

[*] GARTSIDE against ISHERWOOD, and others.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. A. fol. 141.; entered Gartside v. Barlow.)

THE bill was filed by the plaintiff, as heir at law of John Moss, Esq. against the defendants, to set aside a variety of leases, granted by the deceased to the defendants, as obtained by fraud and imposition.

It stated that, by indentures of 28 and 29 of December, 1764, being the settlement previous to the marriage of John Moss, with Apollonia Bayley, the manor of Little Bolton, in the county of Lancaster, was settled upon the husband for life, without impeachment of waste, remainder to trustees for 99 years, to empower the wife to receive 300*l. per annum*, by way of jointure, remainder to such uses as Moss should appoint, remainder to Moss, in fee. That Moss died the 14th of December, 1679, aged about 36 years, leaving Apollonia his widow surviving him. That Moss being of weak understanding, employed the defendants Isherwood and Smedley, as agents or stewards under him, who, by fraud and imposition, obtained leases from him at an under-value, several of these were of lands, which had been before demised for terms of years, determinable upon lives, and which by lapse of time or otherwise, had become less valuable, and now were granted for longer terms, upon a greater number of lives, and were granted either to Isherwood alone, Smedley alone, or Smedley and Isherwood jointly, on higher terms during the life of Moss, (though below their real value,) then to sink to low rents: In particular, that Isherwood, being possessed of two leases, dated respectively the 31st of January, 1752, and 31st December, 1752, surrendered them, and obtained a lease dated the 20th of August, 1767, of the same, with additional premises, for 7 lives and 31 years after the determination of the last life, at the rent of 31*l. 10s. per annum*, and upon the 28th of March, 1769, on surrender of that lease, obtained a new one of the same, with additional premises, for 999 years, at 50*l. per annum*, during Moss's life, to drop to 10*l. 10s.* after his decease; it was in evidence, for the plaintiff, that these premises were worth 80*l. per ann.*: That Isherwood and Smedley had a joint lease of premises in Upper Bolton, for 999 years, at 67*l. per ann.*; it was in evidence that those premises were worth 80*l. per ann.*: That Smedley, being in possession of several leases for lives on the [*] sur- [ *559 ] render of them the 8th of August, 1767, obtained a new lease of the same with additional premises, for 12 lives and 21 years, at 58*l. per ann.* rent; and on the 27th of November, 1767, on surrender of that lease, obtained a lease for the same lives and 31 years, at 78*l.* rent during Moss's life, to fall to 8*l.*; the value, at this time was, in evidence, to be 63*l.*; and the 31st December, 1768, upon the surrender of that lease, he obtained a new lease of the same, with additional premises, for 999 years, at 80*l. 7s. 6d. per ann.* rent during Moss's life, and then to fall to 8*l. per ann.*; it was in evidence, that the value of these premises, at the time of granting the last lease, was 94*l. per ann.*: That upon the 18th of June, 1768, he obtained a lease of 3 water-corn-mills, and a colliery, for 999 years, at 84*l. per ann.* during Moss's life, to drop to 37*l. per ann.*; the

(1) See Beaumont v. Boulbee, 5 Ves. 485. 491. &c. and 7 Ves. 599. &c. Huguenin v. Basely, 14 Ves. 273. 607.

(2) See the cases in the preceding note, and the references to Gwynne v. Heaton, ante, 6. et seq. and Pickett v. Loggon, 14 Ves. 215. &c.

APPENDIX.

1783.

GARTSIDE
against ISHERWOOD.

value of these premises were in proof to be 57*l.* a year: That on the 20th of June, 1769, he obtained a lease for 999 years, in a tenement called Broughton's Tenement, at 10*l.* per ann. after the death of Broughton, during Moss's life, to drop at his decease to 5*l.* per ann.; it was proved that the premises were of the value of 11*l.* per ann.

The cause was heard on several days in July, 1778, when a great quantity of evidence was read.

Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Mansfield, and Mr. Kenyon (for the plaintiff) insisted, that these leases were evidently fraudulent, merely from the inequality of the consideration upon which they were granted; that the real value of the estates were much beyond the utmost reserved rent upon each lease: that Smedley and Isherwood were stewards or agents of Mr. Moss, and that Mr. Moss was a weak man, easy to be imposed upon; that it was the duty of the stewards to turn their sagacity to the advantage of their employers, and not to their own advantage, in opposition to his; and that, upon these grounds the plaintiff was clearly entitled to the relief sought by his bill.

Mr. Price, Mr. Madocks, Mr. Bolton, and Mr. Parker (for the defendants) contended, that the bargains were neither unfair nor unequal; and to prove the last, they produced a variety of calculations; they also contended, that Moss was not a weak man; that Smedley and Isherwood were not his agents; that he disliked the Gartside family, and wished to increase his income by granting [*] such leases: that the matter was public, and similar leases were granted to others; they besides objected to the length of time before the bill was brought; Mr. Moss having died in 1769, and the bill not having been filed till 1776. This delay the plaintiff excused by throwing it upon his attorney; by shewing that, upon the death of Moss, he had given immediate notice to the defendants of his intention to impeach the leases, and that he had actually brought an ejectment, and recovered under an old term; but had been restrained, by injunction, upon a bill filed by the defendants. After the arguments the 25th of July, 1778, Lord Chancellor broke the case as follows. — If the real value of the estates, at the time the bargains were made, the number of years' purchase at which lands then usually sold in that part of the country, and the value of the incumbrances affecting the estates, at the times the bargains were made, had been accurately stated, it would have been easy to have decided whether the interest obtained by the defendants, subject to those incumbrances, has been sufficiently paid for; but it is not tolerably manifested what were the value of the lands at the time when the several leases were made, or what was the number of years' purchase for which estates then usually sold in that country, or what was the value of the incumbrances affecting the estates. It is, therefore, impossible to state with any accuracy, the disproportion between the real value of the purchase, and of the thing given for the purchase. Upon the whole, however, there appears strong ground to presume fraud. The jurisdiction of the Court in cases of this nature, cannot be so defined as to stand on very accurate principles. The case of Filmer v. Gott, 7 Brown's Parlt. Ca. 70., mentioned by Mr. Attorney General, is a very strong one, and has been approved by a decision of the House of Lords. The only principle, upon which that case could be supported, was, that if a confidence is reposed, and that confidence is abused, a court of equity shall give relief. It used to be held, that a contract ought not to be set aside, merely for inequality in the bargain, or merely upon the ground of the weakness of the person from whom the contract has been obtained, 3 Wms. 130. But the Court has since gone farther: the only principle which I can at all fix, is, that whenever it appears that fraud has been practised, there the contract, however valid at law, shall not stand in this Court. Fraud may be collected from circumstances; one circumstance, from which fraud may be collected, is gross [*] inequality: this may be attended with the additional circumstance, that one of the parties confided in the other, or was pressed by necessities, which disposed him to give way to the other; but in all the cases, the basis must be gross inequality in the contract, otherwise the party selling cannot be said to have been in the power of the party buying; unless actual imposition is proved by gross inequality, other circumstances of fraud will pass for nothing; the basis must be gross inequality: and the turn of the scale must be considerable against the person who has the legal estate. There is no method of marking any line, but by making it necessary to prove gross inequality. There is an objection to the relief sought by this bill, arising from the delay in seeking the relief: this is no objection for the time whilst Moss lived; but he died in 1769; from 1769 to 1776, the plaintiff was dormant; he brought an ejectment, and the present defendants filed a bill for an injunction; the injunction guarded the possession, and the defendant in that suit put in no answer, till after the present bill was filed: if an answer had been put in, shewing this strong case of fraud, the injunction, I apprehend, must have been dissolved; though the ejectment was brought upon a satisfied term. From that time, the estates have been publicly letting, part upon building leases. It is necessary to consider the time the plaintiff has laid by, as an objection to his claim; but if he shews strong evidence of fraud, it will be hard to say that this length of time shall be sufficient to bar him of his remedy. As to the other grounds upon which this transaction is endeavoured to be impeached, it is clear Moss was a weak man, from the evidence on both sides. It is equally clear, that his weakness was not such as to be a ground for a commission of lunacy, or to impeach his acts at law: the witnesses for the plaintiff state him to have been stupid and foolish to the highest degree. The instances produced, though in themselves ridiculous, yet being produced by fair people as satisfying their minds, are sufficient to convince me of his weakness; one of the witnesses says, he was not so bad as he was generally thought to be; that he could write letters and transact ordinary business: this shews he was generally considered as a weak man. On the other side, it is attempted to prove that he was a man of strong understanding, attentive to his affairs; the instances are absurd: there can be no doubt, that his understanding was below that of the generality of men. As to his health, it is impossible to say; [*] the habit of his health gave many symptoms of a quick decay: but there is full evidence, that he was not thought in a good state of health. The contract is not to be considered as made in expectation of sudden death, but in expectation of a good bargain from indifferent health. As to the relation in which the parties stood, it is evident Isherwood had a yearly salary; a lease of lands worth 11*l.* a-year was granted to him at 6*s.* a-year, and this he himself defends as granted to him for services done: That Smedley was a person confided in by Moss, is clearly proved by all the defendant's witnesses, as far as confidence went; therefore, both the defendants stood bound to behave fairly and clearly towards him: and it seems to have been the policy of the law, not to permit any persons, so circumstanced, to take any such advantage. The defendants assert, that Moss was not imposed upon, but acted from the mere impulse of his own mind; they suppose him to have had an aversion to his heir, an heir, whom he might, if he pleased, have disinherited. Consider the state of body and mind of a man, who in 1767, aged about 30, and married only in 1764, to a young wife, deprived of having issue, and therefore desired to deprive his heir of an estate of which he was seized.

[ *560 ]

APPENDIX.

1783.

GARTSIDE
against ISHERWOOD.

[ *561 ]

[ *562 ]

APPENDIX.

1783.

GARTSIDE
against ISHERWOOD.

[ *563 ]

in fee. Upon the material subject, the value, the terms seem such as will hold equally to the principle, but the facts are not sufficiently stated for me clearly to make a decision. I propose, therefore, to send it to the Master, to enquire into the value of the lands, and the consideration given by the defendants. Upon reference, the Master will distinguish the improved value which has arisen from money expended, from that which has arisen from the improveable nature of the lands: for it is monstrous to suppose, as has been contended for by the defendants, that the improveable nature of the estate is not to be considered as an advantage, for which a price should have been paid. Though it is clear that Moss was imposed upon, I wish to have it appear how much he was imposed upon. It is alleged, that leases for three lives are common, in that country, but there is no proof that leases for 999 years are common, or that it is common to let a whole manor in such a way, with power to dig coal, and every sort of mineral except lead, I have no hesitation to pronounce, that the case is carried as far as preparation can go, before actual information is obtained. The relation between the parties is proved; the defendants were clearly persons intrusted: the weakness of Moss is evident; his state of health [*] was clearly such, that his life was not to be estimated at the ordinary value of a life of 34. There is also a strong ground from the evidence to believe that there was gross inequality in the bargain; but I send it to the Master, because the evidence has not shewn a distinct disproportion.

The counsel for the defendants objecting to the delay and expence, which, they alleged, would attend the going before a Master, desired that an issue might be directed, and proposed an issue to try whether the contracts were entered into upon fair and valuable considerations.

The Chancellor said, that if a jury found the contracts were entered into upon fair and valuable considerations, he certainly should not attempt to set them aside. But this issue appearing to be inconclusive, if found for the plaintiff, he ordered the cause to stand over till the 28th.

On the 28th July, Lord Chancellor said, in this case, every circumstance which, combined with a gross inadequacy of consideration, induces a court of equity to set aside deeds as fraudulently obtained is clearly made out; but, whether the considerations on which the leases were granted, were adequate or not, does not fully appear; on one side, it is insisted that they are grossly inadequate, and strong evidence of this is given; on the other side, the contrary is asserted; and they have offered an issue upon that fact. If the consideration was perfectly adequate, there would be no possibility of setting aside the contract; there are cases indeed, in which the example and concern for the public have been considered, as having weight; the abuse of confidence is also a circumstance; but the only evidence that this confidence has been abused, is a gross inequality in the contract, I therefore proposed to refer it to the Master to look into the instruments, and to enquire into the considerations, whether adequate or inadequate, and how far inadequate; but the defendants have offered an issue; In this they have gone beyond my idea, for if the consideration was not perfectly adequate, yet if it was not very inadequate, I saw no grounds to set aside the contract; the consideration being simply inadequate, is not alone sufficient; combined with many of the circumstances of this case it would not be sufficient; the degree of inadequacy necessary to invalidate a contract will be very [*] different according to the circumstances of each particular case. The agreement for the coals, has many additional circumstances which the other contracts have not: It gives an interest which over-rides the whole manor; there is a power to get every sort of mineral, except lead, without restriction; the lessor is perpetually bound to keep the water-courses in repair; if the coal-mines are unproductive, the 1783.

[ *564 ]

GARTSIDE
against ISHERWOOD.

the lessor gets nothing, if they are worked to the greatest advantage the rent can never exceed 25/. if they produce less, the rent is to be proportionally less. But the circumstances of the contracts, the character of the man, the situation in which the parties stood, are matters merely for the decision of a court of equity. Where a matter of law arises, there it is proper for me to send the parties to the courts of law; where a matter of fact is necessary to be considered, and there is doubt upon the evidence of the fact, there it is proper to send a neat matter of fact to the decision of a jury. It will, therefore, be improper to direct the issues in the manner mentioned by the defendants, whether the contracts were entered into upon fair and valuable considerations, for this will leave all the circumstances of the case to be decided upon by the jury, and will put it upon them to exercise the peculiar jurisdiction of a court of equity (3); the issues must therefore be, whether the considerations of the several deeds were fully adequate to the interests gained by those deeds. The inadequacy of the consideration must be the basis upon which the court is to grant the relief prayed by the bill; the thing to be inferred, from the inadequacy of the considerations, is fraud: inadequacy is evidence of fraud: for that purpose, it must be gross; but in some circumstances it must be greater than in others, and how far the considerations must be inadequate, to entitle the plaintiff to relief, must be for the consideration of this court: I therefore thought it more advisable to refer the matter to the Master: but as the defendants have prayed an issue, and have boldly offered to abide the event, I cannot refuse to grant it, and they must take it in the manner I have mentioned.

An order was accordingly made that the parties should proceed to trial at the next Lent assizes for Lancashire, upon five issues, whether the considerations given for the leases, mentioned in each issue, were adequate to the interests acquired, and in those issues, the defendants here were respectively to be plaintiffs, and the plaintiffs here defendants.

[*] These issues produced three records for trial at the assizes; in the first Smedley was plaintiff, for trial of three issues directed, between the plaintiff and him, on the value of his three leases; in the second, Isherwood and Smedley were joint plaintiffs, on the joint-lease; and, in the third, Isherwood was plaintiff. In the first and second of these the jury gave verdicts for the defendant at law, against the validity of the leases; and the third record was withdrawn.

The cause came on again the 29th August 1779, when, upon affidavit of the three records being made up, and the last being withdrawn, judgment was ordered to be taken pro confesso against the plaintiff at law on that issue. — Motions were afterwards made for new trials, but refused, on account of the length of time that had passed before the application.

There were afterwards several proceedings (4) had in the cause, in consequence of the deaths of parties; and it came on, upon the equity reserved, before the Lords Commissioners, 12th November 1783, when the Court ordered the leases against which the jury had found verdicts, and comprised in the record upon which judgment had been taken pro confesso, to be set aside, as obtained by fraud; and the leases surrendered at the time of taking the same, and other unimpeached leases to be restored to the defendants.

(3) See Striblehill v. Brett, 2 Vern. 445, 446. and 4 Bro. P. C. 144. octavo edition. 1 vol. 57. folio edition.

(4) Ide (inter alia) 2 Dick. 612.

[ *565 ]

APPENDIX.

1784.

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, February
20th, 1784.

Bequest to an hospital of 3400*l.* in the 3 per cents. the dividends to be divided among 4 widows; this is a pecuniary not a specific legacy. (2)

[*566]

Bishop of PETERBOROUGH against MORTLOCK.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. A. fol. 202.)

DR. Goddard, Master of Clare-Hall, Cambridge, by his will, gave several pecuniary legacies (1), and then "to A. 100*l.* to B. 100*l.* &c. &c., to Storey's Hospital 3400*l.* in the 3 per cents., the annual dividends of which to be every half-year divided betwixt four widows."

It appeared that, at the time of making his will, and at the time of his death, he had only 2200*l.* standing in his name in the 3 per cent. annuities, of which 150*l.* belonged to other persons, as he had declared by a writing in his own hand; but the [*] remaining 2050*l.* belonged to him in his own right. There being a deficiency of assets, the question was whether this legacy of 3400*l.* in the 3 per cents. was to be considered as a specific legacy, or as a pecuniary legacy, and consequently to abate.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Graham, for the plaintiff.

Mr. Attorney-General and Mr. Le Blanc, for the defendant.

The cases cited were,

Ashton v. Ashton, Farrest, 152. Purse v. Snaphin, 1 Atk. 414.

Sleech v. Thorington, 2 Ves. 560. Avelyn v. Ward, 1 Ves. 425.

Lord Chancellor. — In this case, I confess it does not appear to me that there is any question of difficulty. — On the face of the will, it is clearly a pecuniary legacy; — and if it is to be turned into a specific legacy, it must be upon other circumstances. — The form of the bequest is to give 3400*l.* in the 3 per cents. — The testator has been definite in applying the quota of maintenance to each widow. — On the face, therefore, of the will, it is purely pecuniary, and extends only to a direction to buy such a sum in such a stock. — But it is said, that although this may be so in the words, yet that circumstances may be given in evidence, as to the state of the funds in his possession at the time of making the will. — If he had at the time of making his will, more stock than that which he devised, it is said, it will be a specific legacy; but that this is not the only case in which the Court has been used to make this inference: — when I say this, I do not mean to be understood that the Court has laid it down as a positive rule of law: but merely as an interpretation of evidence. In the case of Ashton v. Ashton, the argument did not turn upon its being a specific legacy or not, (which seems taken for granted) but merely upon the consequences of its being specific; if that case had applied more to the present, I should have thought it necessary to have looked more into it. — In all cases where the legacy is considered as specific, the Court takes for granted that the testator meant that particular fund, although he may be mistaken in the description of it; now this intention ought to be made out by strong circumstances, which certainly do not exist in the present case. — I am therefore of opinion, that this is [*] a pecuniary legacy, and must, consequently, abate in proportion with the rest. (3)

[*567]

(1) To the niece of his wife 2000*l.* Bank stock, and to other persons. &c. &c. &c.

(2) Vide 1 Roper on Legacies, 17. et seq. See also Stimond v. Villanov, 4 vol. 345; and Blackshaw v. Rogers: there cited, 346.

(3) The Master was to consider what was the value of 3400*l.* Bank, at per cent. annuities, according to the market price the same bore on that day; and the Court ordered that what the Master should find to be the value thereof, should be considered as the amount of the legacy devised by the testator's will to the Hospital. — 11. E. 306.

ADAMS against WEARE.

Appeal from the ROLLS. [11th May.]

(Reg. Lib. 1783. A. fol. 271.)

Easter Term,
May 3d, 1784.

BILL, brought by the vendor against the vendee, for a specific performance of an agreement.

The contract was a memorandum, signed only by the defendant, to the following purport: That the vendee agreed to buy of the vendor the premises in question, provided he would convey them to him, and make a good title thereto. The vendor took a guinea of the vendee, by way of earnest.

The vendee, by his answer, suggested that he had agreed to buy the premises conditionally only, viz. for the purpose of working a mill which he intended to erect upon the lands, provided he could obtain the consent of the corporation of Bristol; and that, in consideration of these circumstances, he agreed to give a very large price, more than 60 years' purchase, for the lands; but that, upon application to the corporation, they refused their consent, by which he was prevented from erecting his mill: he therefore, refused to perform the contract, insisting that his agreement was conditional, in case he could obtain such consent; and, having failed therein, he was not bound to purchase the lands at such advanced price.

There was evidence, in the cause, of these circumstances, and that the purpose of building the mill, which depended on the consent of the corporation, was in the view of the vendee, but not that it was in the view of the vendor, and, so far from having agreed to such condition, the vendor had never mentioned it.

The late Master of the Rolls had decreed for the plaintiff.

Upon an appeal.

On the part of the plaintiff, it was argued that there was an express agreement in writing, and as to the hardness [*] of the bargain, there was no fraud or surprise: It was a well considered contract, and however hard the bargain might appear, the party contracting for the purchase did not at the time think so. The Court must consider the thing as done; and supposing the contract to have been executed at the time when the agreement was made, the Court would not set it aside. Mortimer v. Capper, ante, p. 156. Cass v. Ruddle, 2 Vern. 280. where the premises had been destroyed by an earthquake.

For the defendant, it was contended, that the bargain, as circumstances had turned out, was hard and unconscionable; that the proposals and conditions were not adhered to; and that the Court could not carry the agreement into execution; but if the plaintiff was to have any remedy, it was at law upon an action of covenant: that there are instances where the Court, on an agreement executed only on one side, had refused to decree a performance, Bromley v. Jefferies, 2 Vern. 415. So in a case where the articles appeared to be unreasonable, Young v. Clerk, Pre. Ch. 598. so where the lands turn out to be other than the purchaser supposed them to be, Hick v. Philips, Pre. Ch. 575. Where a bargain is good at the commencement, but turns out a hard one afterwards, the Court will not decree a performance. Stent v. Bailis, 2 Wms. 220. as in case of an house which is burnt down before

B. treats with A. for a piece of land, having an intention to build a mill, to which the consent of a corporation is necessary; but A. refuses to treat on condition: B. fails in obtaining consent: This failure in his speculation, is no defence against a bill for specific performance. (1)

[ *568 ]

(1) Vide Sugden on Vendors and Purchasers, chap. 5, p. 224. 5th edition.

APPENDIX. the conveyance, Pope v. Roots, 7 Bro. Plt. Ca. 184. and a case mentioned by Sir Joseph Jekyl. So where a bargain has become oppressive, it is in the discretion of the Court to relieve, Chesterfield v. Janasen, 1 Atk. 301. Barnardiston v. Lingood, 2 Atk. 135. Buxton v. Cowper, ib. 383. In this case the purpose has failed, and as the agreement was merely executory, it ought not to be executed.

1784.

ADAMS
against WEARE.

[ *569 ]

Lord Chancellor. — It is very material, in this case, to attend to facts. I am not very anxious to discuss the point, what bargains the Court will execute or not; but when the Court has laid it down, as an article of the equity which men shall obtain here, and which they cannot obtain at law, that instead of damages they shall have a specific performance; and that every agreement must be performed, unless something at the time of making the bargain, or something done since is to amount to a waiver of it, at the time of carrying it into execution; if you do not confine yourself within that limit, there are no bounds whatsoever: for rules ought to be fixed, and it would be calamitous that the matter should rest upon such loose expressions as hard and [*] unconscionable; which expressions, unless they are properly applied, mean little or nothing. This bargain, if impeached, must be so at the time of its commencement; for nothing has happened since to impeach it, unless that the party has failed in his speculation in respect to a bargain which he made with his eyes perfectly open. It is perfectly necessary to see what were the real terms of the bargain. On the 11th of March, overtures were made concerning the purchase of these lands by Weare. 800*l.* was demanded as the price for the estate, putting that value upon it in contemplation of building the mill, and other articles of no moment now; unless the erection of the mill, was the real ground upon which the price was carried to the extent it was. It was insisted, it cannot be carried into execution, because it is proved that the price was upwards of three-fourths more than the value; but, for what I know to the contrary, it may be the value. After the 11th of March, no answer was given to that letter; but Weare, in order to get a farther treaty, applied to a Mrs. A. as a relation of the family, to go with him, and take Adams aside, and ask him, in privacy, the lowest price he would take; which she did, and he made the same demand as before: and some days afterwards, Weare went again to Adams with Mrs. A. to treat with him. As to the objection, that this is the evidence of relations; I think it is fair and unimpeachable evidence. They went to Adams before dinner, and conversation was had in regard to the improvement by building a mill, which is beyond doubt; and the price was reduced to 740*l.* Mr. Weare agreed to give the price, and to build the mill, if he could get the consent of the corporation; and the single suggestion mentioned was the consent of the corporation. Mr. Adams said I will have no If; it shall not be conditional; the business shall be all yours to get that consent. Weare was an alderman of the corporation, and he had interest; but Adams had none. The price was settled upon an express acceptance of the estate; and Adams would have nothing to do with any conditional bargain, as to obtaining the consent of the corporation. After dinner the agreement was made out; and it is suggested that it was intended as a conditional bargain, though the evidence has proved the contrary, and the agreement is written without expressing any thing upon the application. Adams was the person to draw the agreement; and he observed, we must be upon honour, and no advantage to be taken of the condition. It is impossible, if that conversation had related to such a condition, he should not mention it in the [*] writing. He knew himself to be incapable of executing any such condition, and therefore the conversation related to the mere form of drawing out the writing. — Thus the matter rested till the 22d of March,

[ *570 ]

1784.

ADAMS
against WEARE.

*March, when Weare wrote to Adams, to inform him that he had wrote to Mrs. Day (tenant to the corporation), to whom the erection of the mill would have been injurious, and as her consent could not be obtained, the bargain was off. It struck me strange that he should confine himself to Mrs. Day and say nothing of the corporation; but the evidence says, that he was informed, by him, that he had made this bargain, and proposed purchasing lands on the other side of the river, with her consent; but that was not made one of the terms, because he thought himself sure of her consent. When I consider the evidence, and upon what consideration this consent was to be had, I am sure he made no doubt of obtaining it; but the surveyor said it would be of prejudice to Mrs. Day; when the consent was denied him. The question is, what he has done to obtain the consent of the corporation; could he or could he not have obtained Mrs. Day's consent, if he had offered her a premium for any imaginary damages that would have arisen to her by his building the mill? The burthen lay upon Weare to obtain that consent; it was his part to have done so: but there is no evidence of accommodation, on his side as to that point, for it only says he applied to Mrs. Day and she refused her consent, but nothing is mentioned as to a premium being offered by him. Suppose he had obtained her consent, and the corporation had been mentioned; when it was an express part of the case, that the owner should not have been answerable, there appears rather to be fraud on the part of the defendant, for he had no authority to think so. It has been said, stating the answer given, to that letter by Adams, that there is something in it, because he does not expressly deny that he could not obtain the consent. In reply, he only insists upon the agreement, but does not charge it in the manner it is done on the other side. It does not appear how this consent may be obtained; for if he can obtain it, the agreement may still be executed. It does not appear to me what the value of the premises would be, if applied to the purpose of working the mill. What the advantage of it might be, is not stated; therefore I think that, without entering into the particulars of the case, the Master of the Rolls has done right, for no case can be cited where parties have made a bargain with their eyes perfectly open and no surprize whatsoever, as in this case, in which the Court has refused [*] to decree a specific performance. Here is no mistake of the object, as in Hick v. Philipps; and as to the greatness of the price, Adams had a right to ask a large sum, and the other had agreed to give it, with a view to the intended purpose of erecting and working his mill; for he went upon the notion of that, that he was sure of Mrs. Day's consent, and, if so, of that of the corporation.*

[ *571 ]

Decree affirmed. (2).

(2) And the deposit paid to the plaintiff R. L.

OLIPHANT against HENDRIE.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. B. fol. 343.)

[18] May, 1784

*A. By will, gave the sum of [1400*l.] to a religious society in Scotland, to be laid out in the purchase of heritable securities in Scotland, and

Money to be laid out in the purchase of heritable security in Scotland, not within the statute of mortmain. (1)

(1) The general opinion, at the time of this case, was in favour of Lord Thurlow's decision of it; which Lord Thurlow confirmed; and the point seems not to have been again

APPENDIX.

1784.

1784.

OLIPHANT

agabaz

HENRIE

and the interest thereof to be applied toward the education of 12 poor children, [and towards increasing the allowance of the schoolmaster of the parish.]

It was contended to be a void bequest, within the statute of mortmain, analogous to land, as being a bond that would descend to the heir of the obligee.

But Lord Chancellor held it to be a good bequest, [and declared that it ought to be paid as one of the general legacies. R. L.]

It was again raised until the cause of Macintosh v. Townsend, determined in 1809. Lord Eldon C. there confirmed Lord Thurlow's determination of the principal case by a similar decision, which seems to have now rendered the point unquestionable again. See that case, 16 Ves. 330. 333. 337. Lord Eldon C. speaking there of the principal case, says, "This is a direct decision upon the point, and if I had more doubt upon it, that authority binds me to determine this to be a good bequest." P. 338.

It may be observed here that the courts of equity in England will entertain jurisdiction, [over parties resident here] and decree the establishment of a charity in Scotland; contrary to the Report of Lord Hardwicke's opinion in The Provost of Edinburgh v. Ambler, Ambler, 236. Cadell v. Grant, per Lord Eldon C. April, 1795; and Attorney General v. Levine, 1815. 19 Ves. 309.

Lord Thurlow.
Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 24th May,
1784.

BIRCH against CORBYN.

(No entry on this occasion.)

The question being whether the plaintiff has a lien upon stock, the Court will not order the Bank to permit a transfer.

[* 572]

THE plaintiff Birch had filed a bill, claiming an equitable lien on certain stock purchased with money remitted by Mr. Corbyn from Virginia, in respect of money laid out and paid by the plaintiff, for the use, and in the education and payment of the debts of three of Mr. Corbyn's sons, who had come over to England, and applied to the plaintiff for that purpose; which money the plaintiff charged by his bill was remitted for the purpose of satisfying his demands. The stock stood in the names of Corbyn and Athawes, in trust for Corbyn. The bank, hearing of this suit, refused to permit a transfer of the stock.

[*] It was now moved on the part of the defendant, that the bank might be ordered to permit a transfer, but Lord Chancellor said, this was in fact requiring a decree in the cause, by an interlocutory order; for the defendant undertakes to prove that the plaintiff has no lien on this stock; and this is to be made out by reading the answer, which could not be read by the defendant upon hearing the cause. It is impossible to make an order upon the stakeholder to quit the stakes, which is the main object in dispute in the cause. (1)

(1) The cause came on to be heard on the 10th of December following; when the bill was dismissed with costs. Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 51. b.

1784.

WELLER against SMEATON.

(Reg. Lib. 1785. B. fol. 253. b.)

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, 27th
May, 1784.

THE plaintiff, who was lessee of an antient mill on the river Ravenstone, filed his bill against the defendant, stating his own title, and charging that the defendant had erected certain flood-gates, and other works upon the said river, above the plaintiff's mill, for the purpose of conveying the water of the said river to Deptford and Greenwich; whereby the plaintiff's mill was obstructed, and that defendant had no right to erect such works, &c.: and praying that the plaintiff might be quieted, by the injunction of this Court, in the possession of his mill, and that the defendant might be decreed to pull down his several works, and be restrained by injunction from building any other works, &c.

To so much of the relief prayed as required the works to be pulled down, and the defendant to be restrained, &c. the defendant demurred, for that the plaintiff ought to have established his right at law, in the premises, before he required the aid of this Court.

Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Madocks, and Mr. Stanley, for the plaintiff.

The case of Bush v. Western, Pre. Ch. 580. proves that this kind of suit is properly brought in this Court, in the first instance, without being driven previously to law. It is analogous to the cases of diverting water-courses, which this Court has expressly made a head of equity. There are several cases in Viner, tit. Chancery, So The Mayor of York v. Pilkington, 1 Atk. 282. [*] How v. Tenants of Bromsgrove, 1 Vern. 22. Ewelme Hospital v. Andover, 1 Vern. 266. Besides, this demurrer being merely to the relief, a full discovery is now obtained; and it will put the parties to a new and unnecessary trouble and expence. It is not at all the same case as where a plaintiff applies for an injunction.

Mr. Scott, and Mr. King, for the defendants.

This Court will never permit a bill of this kind until the right is established at law, for this is a dispute between two individuals, respecting a right in which no third person is concerned, and therefore cannot be said to prevent any multiplicity of suits; Lord Teynham v. Herbert, 2 Atk. 483. City of London v. Perkins, 4 Bro. P. C. 157. Vin. tit. Chan. 425. pl. 35. Whitchurch v. Hide, 2 Atk. 391.

Lord Chancellor. — I take it to be a head of equity to interpose, by way of injunction, when a party is erecting new works upon an old possession; but when the works have been permitted to remain three years, that it is considered as such a laches, as to preclude the party from having relief here, without going first to law (2). In this case, it has been put upon this ground, that it is within the equity of this Court, to take, ex ab origine, a question whether or not a right is violated. It struck me immediately, from a general recollection of the cases, that the Court have exercised no such jurisdiction (3). There are two ways in

(1) See also The Birmingham Canal Company v. Lloyd, 18 Ves. 515. to the same point. Lord Eldon C. in that case (p. 516. 517.) said, that in Robinson v. Lord Byron, post. 588.; Lord Thurlow, who granted an injunction upon the party's not being guilty of delay, put him upon the terms of going to trial forthwith.

(2) See also in The Birmingham Canal Company v. Lloyd, 18 Ves. 515.

(3) Lord Eldon C. in Hanson v. Graham, 7 Ves. 307, 308. A. D. 1802. says, "The law as to injunctions has changed very much; and lately they have been granted much more liberally than formerly they were. Formerly, when legal rights were set up to the extent, in which they are set up in this case, the Court were very tender in granting injunctions. I remember when in a case of trespass, unless it grew to a nuisance, an injunction would have been refused; and even in the case of waste if " by [*573]

APPENDIX:

1784.

WELLER against SKEATON.

in which applications to this Court have been made in this kind of cases; First, in order to compel the party to try the right, which was one part of the case of Welby v. The Duke of Rutland, 7 Bro. P. C. 755. (4) in the House of Lords: Secondly, to prevent a multiplicity of suits, which was a point in the same case; most of the cases on the subject had been looked into upon that occasion, and it was found that in no instance except that of Bush v. Western, this Court had ever interposed in a mere question of right between A. and B. they having an immediate opportunity of trying the right at law, which would be definitive. (5) If, after trial, the party should begin again, and commit new trespasses, it is possible a case might be made to induce this Court to interpose by way of injunction, but merely when one party claims, and another denies a right, it is impossible for the Court to entertain the bill.

Demurrer allowed.

“by temporary acts, from time to time merely, the subject of an action, and not bringing along with it irreparable mischief, Lord Hardwicke thought it was granted only following the relief. Lord Thurlow had great difficulty as to trespass.”

(4) 2 Bro. P. C. 39. 8vo. edition.

(5) See Lord Eldon C.'s observations referred to by note (3), and Magg v. Magg, before Lord Thurlow, 2 Dick. 670.

[ *574 ]

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, May 28th,
1784.

[*] PERKYNS against BAYNTON.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. B. fol. 336. b. and 338. b.)

Subsequent interest on a mortgage to be calculated upon the principal and interest reported due; but upon bonds or legacies, on the principal only.

IT was agreed by the counsel on both sides, and by Mr. Dickins the register, that when subsequent interest was directed to be computed, it was the course of the Court, in case of a mortgage, to compute such interest on the principal and interest reported due; but in cases of bonds or legacies, to compute it on the principal only, and that this was established by Lord Macclesfield, in a case reported in Peere Williams (1 Wms. 453.) † This was the case of a sum of money charged by will on land, as a reward for care taken of testator's daughter, who was a lunatic, and Lord Chancellor, considered this as the common case of a legacy, and directed the interest on the principal sum only.

† See also 1 Wms. 480. — 653. — 1 Vesey, 496.

[S. C. 1 Cox,
104.]

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, June 8th, 1784.

NEALE against WADESON.

(No Entry.)

When a bill is referred for impertinence before the time for answering is out, the plaintiff cannot have an injunction as of course, but must move it on notice and affidavit.

AN order had been obtained by the plaintiff for an injunction for want of an answer, as a motion of course. Mr. Harvey now moved to set aside that order for irregularity, on the ground of the bill having been referred for impertinence before the time for answering was out; and contended that referring the bill for impertinence stayed, of course, all proceedings in the cause; and he cited a case of Harris v. Montgomery, Hil. 1783, for that purpose.

Lord Chancellor said, that the rule was not generally, that referring the bill for impertinence stayed all proceedings: but was only this, that upon a bill's being referred before the time for answering is out, the plaintiff should not, at the expiration of the time, move for an injunction, tion, as of course for want of an answer, but should be in the same situation as if the time for answering was not out; in which case he must move it upon notice and affidavit of circumstances. If this case, therefore, had rested on the single ground aforesaid, the plaintiff would not have obtained the injunction, without giving notice of motion; but it afterwards appeared, that the defendant's clerk in Court had taken upon himself to waive taking advantage of the irregularity, by [*] agreeing that the plaintiff should take an injunction as for want of an answer.

APPENDIX.

1784.

NEALE
against WADESON.

[ *575 ]

Ex parte WEST. (1)

In the Matter of SCAIFE, a Bankrupt.

THIS was the petition of the bankrupt. The only question arose upon the following clause in a will: "I leave to A. B. and C. sons of Arthur Scaife, 1000*l.* each, the interest to be added to the principal yearly, until they shall respectively attain the age of 21 years; and in case any of them shall die before that age, then to the survivors." A. died, and then B. both under 21 years of age. The question was whether that part of the share of A. which survived to B. upon the death of A. survived afterwards to C. upon the death of B. or whether B.'s original share only survived.

Mr. Madocks insisted, it was an established principle in this court, that a survived share shall not again survive, without express words, or manifest intention for that purpose; and cited Rudge v. Barker, Forrest, 124. and the opinions of Lord King and Lord Holt there mentioned, as fully establishing this doctrine.

Mr. Scott, on the other side, cited Pain v. Benson, 3 Atk. 78.

Lord Chancellor, — It is impossible for me to determine this survived part to survive again, without contradicting Lord Talbot's decision. The question is, whether the word share, in the case cited, does not mean all that the party took under the will, which would take in the survived part as well as the original share, and which I should think a very natural construction; but here are cases in point expressly determined otherwise. I own it struck me forcibly from the first, that the whole ought to survive; but I cannot find any difference between this and the cases cited; and I do not care to overturn a decision sitting in bankruptcies, when I can have no opportunity of re-considering my opinion. It is very necessary that the rules of construction, in wills, should be established; and I own I cannot make out [*] any distinction in this case. As to the case of Pain v. Benson, it seems to me that Lord Hardwicke disapproved of the general rule, which induced him to endeavour to find a distinction. I cannot agree with him in considering that case as an exception to the general rule, though perhaps I should in his opinion of the rule itself. However it will be too much for me to decide this, against the authorities, in a petition on a bankruptcy. If the parties choose to bring it before me in a more solemn way, upon bill and answer, I will give it more consideration.

The parties afterwards filed a bill, and the cause was set down before his Honor the Master of the Rolls, who decreed that the share did not survive a second time. (2)

(1) See the report of this case in totidem verbis, reported by Mr. Cox, 1 P. W. 275. note. An addition of the subsequent result of the case is stated in the 5th edition of P. W., and the Editor has inserted it in his next note.

(2) " In consequence of what fell from the Lord Chancellor a bill was filed, and the " cause

Lincoln's Inn
Hall; June
10th, 1784.[ Vide S. C.
1 Cox, P. W.
275, 276. 5th edition.]A survived share shall not survive again, without express words. (1)

[ *576 ]

APPENDIX.

1784.

SIR LLOYD KENYON

[ 1784 ]

June 14th, 1784.

Jewels of the wife, though given by husband's will to her for life, shall not be sold for payment of husband's debts charged on a real estate in aid of personality. (1)

"cause of West v. Oliphant, came on to be heard before Sir Lloyd Kenyon, at the Rolls, 2d June, 1785, when his Honor expressed his concurrence with the cited cases, and said that it would be too much to extend the words by conjecture beyond their natural import, and therefore declared that the moiety of the legacy, which survived to B. on the death of A. vested absolutely in B., and did not upon his death under the age of 21 survive to C." See note to the 5th Edition, Cox, P. W. 1 vol. 276.

BOYNTON against PARKHURST.

(Reg. Lib. 1783. A. fol. 531. b. 534. b. and 535.)

SIR Griffith Boynton having by will impowered his wife (whom he made executrix) to raise, by mortgage of a particular real estate, a sufficient sum of money for payment of his debts, in aid of his personal estate; and having devised to his wife the use of her jewels for her life. The cause coming on for further directions, a question arose, whether the wife was not entitled to the jewels absolutely, as her paraphernalia; although the personal estate was not sufficient to pay the debts, or whether they should be applied before the real estate charged with the debts, and on the authority of Tipping v. Tipping, 1 Wma. 729.

Lord Chancellor decreed the jewels to the wife, in prejudice of the charged estate.

(1) The claim to paraphernalia is not to be disappointed by the effect of the option of a creditor who has a double fund. Per Lord Eldon C. in Aldrich v. Cooper, 8 Ves. 397.

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, December
24th, 1784.

Ex parte COBHAM.

Joint creditors let in to prove against a separate estate (1),
by consent.

A SEPARATE commission having been taken out against Ferryman, who was one of three partners, the joint creditors now petitioned to be admitted to prove their debts under the separate commission. (1)

Lord

(1) Upon the fluctuation of the law on these points, and the present rule of procedure; see Cullen's Bankrupt Law, 463, 464, 465. Cooke's B. L. 245, &c. (5th edition) which cites (inter alia) Ex parte Hodgson, post. 2 vol. 5; Ex parte Page, 2 B. 112; Ex parte Flintam, ib. 120., and most of the material cases up to its publication. Lord Eldon C. however, in Dutton v. Morrison, 17 Ves. 207., &c. enters into an historical view of the point. His Lordship there says, "The opinion of Lord Hardwicke, was that a joint creditor could prove under a separate commission only for the purpose of assenting to, or dissenting from, the certificate; but not to receive dividends; and that they must file a bill for an account of the joint estate. — The subject took a different turn at different periods until the time of Lord Thurlow; who considered it with great anxiety; and, having consulted most of the judges, expressed his decided opinion, that the contrary course was the best, as being the most legal; and therefore held the joint creditors should be admitted to prove, and take dividends under a separate commission; that a commission of bankruptcy was an execution for all the creditors; that, if a joint creditor had brought an action against all the debtors he might have several executions against each; and therefore the bankruptcy preventing his action with effect, should be considered as a judgment for him as well as the others, that he had a right to receive the dividends, and it was upon the assignees of the separate estate to bring their bill to have the account settled. — The question afterwards came to be considered by Lord Loughborough who got back to the old rule, and abided by it firmly (Ex parte Elton, 3 Ves. 238; Ex parte Abell, 4 Ves. 837.; et vide Ex parte Taitt, 16 Ves. 193, 194; and the references in note (a)); but great difficulties occurred;" which, his Lordship, after stating, thus proceeded: — "The question then came before me; and upon consideration of all the authorities, I thought the best course for me to adopt (whether the best in principle I have often doubted) was, that the rule should continue to be applied as it had been Lord Chancellor said, he was aware that this point had never been decided, although it had been usual for the commissioners to refuse the proof of joint debts under separate commissions; but he did not see why the rule that applies to the case of separate creditors proving their debts under a joint commission, did not apply to this case. His only doubt was, to what extent this benefit should be allowed. It would be hard that the joint creditors should come upon the separate estate, to the prejudice of the separate creditors, and still have an exclusive power of coming upon the joint estate: but the separate assignees might, if they pleased, possess themselves of the bankrupt's proportion of the partnership effects; and then he thought the justice of the case would be, that both the joint and separate creditors should come in, pari passu, upon both funds. But as the present petition was consented to, he would make the order now upon consent, and leave the point, for the present, where he found it, to be decided hereafter, upon more consideration. †

APPENDIX.

1784.

Ex parte
COBHAM.

[*577]

† V. Ex parte Hodgson, vol. 2. p. 5. [Ex parte Page. Ex parte Flintum, ib. 119, 120. — But see the preceding note of the Editor.]

“ been for some years in a course of application; and therefore I have not disturbed the practice, as it has of late prevailed. The result is that now it has been understood for fifteen years, that under a separate commission of bankruptcy, the other partners remaining solvent, an account shall be directed of the joint estate in the absence even of the other partners; and upon the application of any one joint creditor, whether the others choose it, or not, the whole account being taken in the bankruptcy, the joint creditors shall be paid pari passu out of the joint estate; and the residue shall then be distributed only according to the respective interests of the partners; and, if the rule of law where a creditor takes execution, is the same, perhaps we are not far wrong.”

See a distinction where a copartner has become insolvent. Ex parte Janson, 3 Madd. Rep. 229.

Ex parte NICHOLLS.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. B fol. 123. b.)

IT having been referred to the Master to consider of a proper maintenance for the infant Nicholls, out of the real and personal estate of his father (who died intestate): A. B. came before the Master, and objected to the maintenance allowed by the Master's report, insisting that the infant was illegitimate, and that he was heir-at-law, and one of the next of kin of the infant's father: but he had no evidence, before the Master, in support of these facts: the Master therefore made his report of maintenance, and A. B. now excepted to this report upon the same grounds, which were now supported by affidavits; but Lord Chancellor said, that exceptions would not lie to a report of maintenance (1); and moreover, that it was impossible for him to take notice, in this form, of A. B.'s title, which must be first established elsewhere.

(1) It was ordered, “ that the exceptions be struck out of the paper,” and the deposit was to be paid to the infant. R. L.

Exceptions will not lie to a Master's report of maintenance (1); and a title set up against that of the infant cannot be taken notice of, but must be established elsewhere.

Lincoln's Inn
Hall, December
29d, 1784.

APPENDIX.

1784.

[ *578 ]

Same day.

A patent bearing date 12th August, but the caveat not discharged till the 27th, the patentee supposing it bore date the latter day, did not enroll till the 18 December, when the 4 months had expired: the date of his patent cannot be altered.

[S. C. 1 Cox, 224. Quod vide, and Mitford's T. 217.]

Lincoln's Inn Hall, Jan. 17th, 1785.

Bill filed to discover articles pawned to defendant; he pleads that he lent money without notice of plaintiff's claim; the plea should aver that he has no other articles than those specified; and although this was sworn in the answer, that is not sufficient. (1)

[ *579 ]

[*] Ex parte BECK.

A PETITION IN PATENTS.

A CAVEAT having been entered against putting the great seal to a patent, for an invention, which bore date 12th August 1784, the Lord Chancellor, upon hearing the petition, took some time to consider of it; and did not make his order for discharging the caveat until the 27th August. The patentee did not enroll his specification until the 18th December 1784, supposing the patent bore date the day the said order was made: but he was then told the four months, limited by the Act of Parliament for the enrollment of specifications, had elapsed.

The patentee now petitioned the Lord Chancellor to alter the patent, by making it bear date the 27th of August, instead of the 12th; but Lord Chancellor said, that although he was perfectly satisfied that the patentee was well entitled to his patent; and that his case was a very hard one; yet he could not make such an use of his power, as keeper of the great seal, as to alter a patent, in any degree, upon an application of this sort. That, perhaps, upon the petitioner's applying for a new patent, the officers might, under these circumstances, be induced to remit their fees; but that he could give no relief upon the present petition.

HOARE against PARKER.

(No Entry.)

THE bill stated, that James Stuart, by his will dated 1st December 1752, gave and bequeathed to Robert Long, Henry Rower, and Robert Greenaway, their heirs and administrators, all his estate, both real and personal, upon the trusts thereafter mentioned; and particularly, the said testator gave and bequeathed to his wife Mary Stuart, for and during her life, (in case she should so long live sole and unmarried, but not otherwise), the use and usage of such and so much of his plate, as she the [*] said Mary Stuart should think fit, choose, and be desirous to have the use of; and the said testator thereby directed his said trustees to cause an inventory, or schedule, to be made of the several particulars, whereof his said wife should make choice, and that under such inventory or schedule, they should take her acknowledgment in writing, signed by her own hand, of the receipt thereof, and of her having the same in her custody, to the end that they might be enabled, in case of her death or marriage, to recover the said plate: and the testator then proceeded to dispose of the rest of his real and personal estate, for the benefit of his son and his issue, in the manner therein mentioned, and appointed the said Robert Long, Henry Rower, and Robert Greenaway, executors: That after the death of the testator, his widow Mary Stuart made choice of some of the plate, and subscribed a receipt for the same: That Mary Stuart died on the 14th December

(1) The whole plea is set forth in Mr. Cox's report. It is much preferable to the above, which seems to have been incorrectly copied from part of it. Upon the necessity of full averments in a plea to rebut the case made by a bill, &c. see Mr. Beames' excellent work on Pleas in Equity, 23. et seq.

1785.

HOARE
against
PARKER.

1782, by which her interest in the said plate ceased; — but that the said Mary Stuart in her life-time, pawned the whole or the greatest part of the said plate to the defendant, for some considerable sum of money: That the plaintiffs (who were the assignees in trust, of the representative of the surviving trustee and executor under the will of the said testator), had commenced an action at law against the defendant, for the recovery of the said plate; but that they could not proceed therein for want of a discovery of what articles of plate were pawned to the said defendant; and the bill therefore prayed that the said defendant might set forth and discover a full and particular account of all and every the several pieces and parcels of plate late belonging to the said testator, so pawned or pledged, or pretended to be pawned or pledged by the said Mary Stuart, or by any person or persons by her order, or for her use, with him the said defendant, together with the several days and times, when the same was or were so respectively pawned or pledged; and the respective sum and sums of money, lent and advanced, or pretended to be lent or advanced on each particular article, with true copies of all entries in his books of accounts, papers, or memorandums, original or duplicates, of such pawns or pledges, or in any wise relating thereto, in order to enable the plaintiffs to proceed to trial in the said action, to recover back from the said defendant the said plate, so pawned or pledged, or pretended to be so pawned or pledged as aforesaid.

[*] To this bill, the defendant pleaded, that on the 6th day of April, and 31st day of August, 1781, &c. during all which time defendant carried on the business of a pawn-broker, the said Mary Stuart being possessed of certain pieces of plate, and claiming the same as, and alleging the same to be, her own absolute property, and the same so appearing to defendant, the defendant did bonâ fide advance and lend to the said Mary Stuart, or for her use, several sums of money, (to the amount therein mentioned,) all which sums of money were really and bonâ fide advanced and paid by defendant to the said Mary Stuart, on the said days accordingly, and the said Mary Stuart, or her agent at the same time deposited and pledged the said pieces and parcels of plate respectively, with defendant, as a security for the said sums of money respectively; defendant then averred that the said monies never were repaid, and that he did not at any or either of the respective days, when the pieces or parcels of plate which were pledged or pawned by the said Mary Stuart, with him as aforesaid, were pledged or pawned, or at any time before the death of the said Mary Stuart, know or had any notice or information, or suspicion of the will of said testator, &c. &c. Defendant then by answer denied notice, and said that the said Mary Stuart, or any other persons on her behalf, never pledged or pawned, with defendant, any plate whatsoever, except the pieces of plate mentioned in the plea; and that he had not, nor ever had had in his possession or power any other plate whatsoever in which the said Mary Stuart had any interest.

Mr. Hollist, in support of this plea, insisted, that the defendant being a purchaser for a valuable consideration, without notice, was not bound to assist the plaintiff by a discovery; and cited Snelling v. Squibbs, 2 Ch. Ca. 47.; Perrat v. Ballard, 2 Ch. Ca. 72.; Abney v. Williams, 1 Vern. 27.

Mr. Madocks and Mr. Stainsby (for the plaintiffs) insisted, that the rule of this Court, which says, that without purchaser's notice, and for valuable consideration, shall not be bound to discover, only goes to a discovery of their title, and not of the particular things enquired after, being in their possession, which last is the object of the present bill; and Mr. Stainsby mentioned the case of Hartop v. Hoare, 3 Atk. 44. to shew how courts of law considered cases of this kind; it was also insisted,

[ *580 ]

APPENDIX.

1785.

HOARE
against PARKER.

[ *581 ]

insisted, that this plea mentioning only [*] some specific articles of plate which were pawned, and not averring that no other articles of plate were so, (though that was done by the answer,) did not meet the point made by the bill; as it did not appear that the specific articles, mentioned in the plea, were the same as those enquired after by the bill.

Lord Chancellor said, that he could not see any room to make a distinction between the cases of a discovery being sought for of the title of the purchaser, and a discovery of the specific things in his possession; but the same rule must apply to both, namely, that a purchaser without notice, and for a valuable consideration, is not bound, in conscience, to assist the right owner in the legal recovery of the subject purchased under such circumstances. He therefore thought that no objection to the present plea. But the other objection, that it was not averred by the plea that no other articles (except those specified) had been pawned to the defendant, seemed to him to be a good objection; and it was not sufficient to aver that by an answer; which would be, in fact, making the answer supply the defects of the plea, instead of supporting it. The plea ought to have gone on to aver, that defendant had no articles in his possession, but those specified before; for otherwise, it is saying that the defendant, having lent money on certain articles, shall be a reason why he should make no discovery as to any others: upon this objection, therefore, the plea must be over-ruled. (2)

(2) The report in 1 Cox, Ca. Ch. 228. continues the case thus: — "The plea having been overruled upon this ground, defendant now put in a further answer, whereby he answered some few further facts; but instead of answering the several circumstances intended to be covered in his former plea, he insisted upon the same matter by his answer in bar to such discovery. Exceptions being taken to this answer, the Master allowed them, and reported the answer insufficient, to which report the defendant excepted, which exceptions came on to be argued in Lincoln's Inn-hall, before the Lord Chancellor on the 9th March, 1786.

" Scott and Holt for defendant.

" As to the merits of the case, the defendant having bond fide advanced money upon the pledge of the plate in question, without notice of want of title in the pawnor, shall not be obliged in a court of equity to furnish any assistance by way of discovery to a plaintiff to enable him to take away the pawn from the pawnee. It is analogous to the case of a bill for discovery of goods bought of a bankrupt subsequent to his act of bankruptcy. There the bankrupt has nothing more in him than a title arising from possession: for, from the time of the act of bankruptcy, the property is out of the bankrupt. So here, the pawnee had a complete title to possession.

" The Lord Chancellor asked whether there were any instances, after a plea overruled, of the same thing being allowed to be insisted upon by answer; and to show that it might be done, Scott cited Harris v. Ingledew, 3 Wms. 94. 95. Finch v. Finch, 2 Ves. 492.; but his Lordship said those were cases of bills of relief; but he knew no instance of the same being done in bills of discovery only. It was then prayed for the defendant that he might amend his plea, so as to bring the matter fairly upon the merits.

" But the Lord Chancellor said, he did not think it a sort of case to induce him to go at all out of the common way in favour of the defendant. It is not to be compared to the case of a bankruptcy; for there the Court would probably go as far as it could to relieve a party surprised by a dormant act of bankruptcy; but it is against good policy to give any encouragement to a pawnbroker taking such articles as plate, without any inquiry as to the title of the pawnor. The defendant must answer."

1785.

February 5th, 1785.

Upon a bill to redeem a mortgage and non-payment at the time appointed; it is a motion of course to dismiss the bill.

STUART against WORRALL.[Steward v. Worrall.] (Reg. Lib. 1784. B. fol. 259.)

BILL to redeem, decree for redemption; in default of payment, at the time to be appointed by the Master, the bill to be dismissed with costs.

Report of money due, and affidavit of attendance at the time and place appointed by the report, and of non-payment.

Motion (as of course) to dismiss the bill with costs. Ordered accordingly, and said by the register to be the usual way.

[*] GILMORE against SEVERN.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 240. b.)

[ *582 ]

Rolls, Feb. 1st, 1785.

TESTATOR gave to the children of his sister Jane Gilmore, wife of Thomas Gilmore, 350*l.* with interest for the same, to be paid them respectively, their equal shares and proportions as they should respectively attain 21; and in case any of them should die under 21, then their shares should go to the survivors and survivor.

At the death of the testator, Jane Gilmore had two children, the plaintiffs; afterwards she had another child: the plaintiffs were both infants; and the Court was of opinion, that the youngest child, being born during the infancy of the other two, though after the death of the testator, might be entitled to a share.

As none were entitled to a vested interest, the Court ordered the money to be paid into the Bank. (2)

(1) See Congreve v. Congreve, and Devisme v. Mello, antea, 530. 536.; and the notes. See also per M. R. in Ringrose v. Severn, 2 Cox, 385. who assented to the authority of the principal case, which he distinguished from the one before him.

(2) On the 15th May, 1797, this matter came on before the M. R. on the petition of the two elder children, who had attained 21; and his Honor was of opinion that Agnes, the child born after the death of the testator, was entitled to a share, as having been born before the eldest attained 21, and divided the fund accordingly in thirds. — From Mr. Cox's note, which the Editor has compared with the Reg. Book, and finds correct. R. L. 1796. A. fol. 397.

Testator gave 350*l.* to the children of his sister at 21 [with interest;] and if any died before, to the survivor and survivor. A child born after the testator's death, but during the infancy of the others, is entitled to a share. (1)

SOWDEN against SOWDEN.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. B. fol. 171. b.)

[S. C. 1 Cox,
165. and 3 Cox,
P. W. 228. note.]Rolls, Feb. 2d, 1785.

ROBERT Sowden, being about to marry Mary Row, by settlement previous to the marriage, bearing date September, 1779, in consideration

A. by marriage settlement, covenanted to pay money to trustees, to be laid out in the purchase of lands: A. did not pay the money, but purchased a freehold estate; decreed it to be subject to the trust. (1)

(1) See the observations made by Sir W. Grant M. R. on this case, and the various other cases cited in Lench v. Lench, 10 Ves. 516., as to which his Honor marked the distinction.

APPENDIX.

1785.

SOWDEN
against SOWDEN.

[ *583 ]

sideration of 1050*l.*, her marriage portion (2), covenanted to pay to the trustees 1500*l.* to be laid out [either together or in parcels, and with or without any further sum to be advanced by him] in the purchase of some freehold estate of inheritance in the county of Devon, upon trust, out of the rents and profits thereof, to pay to Mary Row an annuity of 15*l. per annum*, for her life, in case she survived her said intended husband; and, after the decease of both, to raise by sale 1500*l.* or 2000*l.* as the case might be, for the portion or portions of the child or children of the marriage, in such shares, &c. as the survivor should appoint. He also covenanted to pay to the trustees the further sum of 500*l.* to similar uses; and that, in case the lands purchased should not sell for 2000*l.*, the deficiency should be made up out of his personal estate. Robert Sowden did not pay the 1500*l.* or 500*l.* to the trustees, but, soon after his marriage, purchased a freehold estate called Pound, for the price of [*] 2150*l.*, and the estate was conveyed to him and his heirs; and he died without making any settlement of that estate, leaving Mary his widow, Thomas his son and heir at law, and Mary his daughter, who were the only children of the marriage. He died seised and possessed of other real and personal estate; the real estate descended on the eldest son, and the widow took out administration of the personal estate.

The daughter filed her bill against the son and widow, praying that the trusts of the settlement might be decreed to be performed, and that the estate called Pound, might be declared to be subject to the trusts of the settlement, or that the 2000*l.* covenanted to be paid by her father might be raised out of his personal estate, if sufficient, or the deficiency made good out of his real estate, and the distinction. For a late important case, where all the real estate of which a party was seised during his life was held liable to an obligation he had contracted to settle them, which he had not fulfilled, see Prebble v. Doghurst, 1 Swanston, 309.; and S. C. 1 Wilson, Ch. Ca. 161.

(2) The statement in Mr. Brown's Report is very incorrect and incomplete. The Editor has examined the Reg. Book, but thinks he cannot so satisfactorily report the case as by giving the extract furnished by Mr. Cox in his edition of P. W. vol. 3. p. 228. in the note to Lechmere v. E. Carlisle, above cited. It is as follows: — "Robert Sowden, by marriage-settlement, reciting that he had, in consideration of the marriage, actually paid to the trustees a sum of 1500*l.*, and had also agreed to pay to them a further sum of 500*l.* at least; upon the trusts after mentioned, he the said Robert Sowden covenanted with the trustees, that he would within six months pay the said further sum of 500*l.* at the least, which said sums of 1500*l.* and 500*l.* were to be applied in the manner thereafter mentioned; and it was thereby declared that the said sums of money were so paid, and to be paid upon trust, that the said trustees should as conveniently might be with the consent of the said Robert Sowden, lay out and invest the same either together or in parcels, and together with or without any further sum to be advanced by the said Robert Sowden in the purchase of freehold lands, &c. in the county of Devon; and that such lands, when purchased, should be conveyed to the trustees to the uses of the marriage, as therein mentioned. Notwithstanding the recital in the settlement, Robert Sowden did not pay the 1500*l.*, which, together with the 500*l.* remained unpaid at his death. Soon after the marriage, he purchased an estate in the county of Devon, for 2150*l.* which was conveyed to him in fee, but he never made any settlement of this estate, and died intestate. There was no evidence in the cause upon which the Court thought any reliance could be had; but it was argued, that this case might be distinguished from the others, inasmuch as in this case the husband covenanted to pay the money to the trustees, of which covenant he scarcely could mean a performance, when he made a purchase himself. His Honor declared, that if this case had been res integra, he should have thought the distinction worthy of great consideration; but he thought this case within the principle established by Lechmere v. Earl of Carlisle, that where a man covenants to do an act, and he does that, which may, pro tanto, be converted to a completion of his covenant, he shall be presumed to have done it with such intention: and declared the estate to be subject to the trusts of the settlement."

2000*l.* when raised, might be applied according to the trusts of the settlement. APPENDIX.

The cause was heard on the . . . day of December, 1784, and 3d of February, 1785, when the following cases were cited: Took v. Hastings, 2 Vern. 97.; Roundell v. Morris, 2 Vern. 482.; Wilcox v. Wilcox, 2 Vern. 558.; Bridges v. Bere, 2 Eq. Abr. 94.; Wilks v. Wilks, 5 Viner, 293.; Lechmere v. Lechmere, Ca. Temp. Talb. 80., 3 P. Wms. 211.; Coffin v. Dyke, or Dyke v. Leeds, 7th July, 1740.; Deacon v. Smith, 3 Atk. 323.; Attorney-General v. Whorwood, 1 Ves. 534.— There were also mentioned 5 Brown's Parlt. Ca. 552.; Edwards v. Freeman, 2 Wms. 436. 665.; Lewis v. Hill, 1 Ves. 274.

1785.

Sowden
against Sowden.

Some parol-evidence was offered to shew the intention of Robert Sowden in purchasing the estate was to perform his covenant, and it was read, but it was very slight.

His Honor was of opinion, the evidence ought not to be admitted. He thought Lechmere v. Lechmere decided the case. (3) He conceived the principle established to be that, "where a man is bound to do an act, and he does what may enable him to do the act, it shall be taken to have been done by him with the view of doing that which he was bound to do."

He therefore was of opinion, that the Pound estate was to be considered as purchased by Sowden, with a view to perform the covenants in the settlement, and therefore was bound in equity to the performance of them; and decreed accordingly.

(3) The Editor, thinking the profession may wish to have as full a Report of this important case as possible in one connected view, has extracted Mr. Cox's note of the judgment, as given in his first volume of his Cases in Chancery, p. 165., &c. It is as follows:—"M. R.—I feel myself in the same situation in which Lord Hardwicke expressed himself to be, not inclined to carry these cases further than they have been carried; but at the same time, I must not make nice and finical distinctions where the cases are in substance the same with those in which the points have been decided. As to all hardship in this case, I lay all consideration of it totally aside. I must decide this by the cases before decided, and not depart from the established rules of property. Now in this case, beyond all doubt it was incumbent on the husband to lay out the money on real estate; but the distinction which has been taken is, that the husband covenanted to pay the money to trustees to be laid out, and therefore his laying out money himself in the purchase of the estate, could not be meant as complying with that covenant; and I think the distinction taken by Mr. Hardinge a very important one, (and would deserve great consideration if it was res integra) between this case where the money is to be paid to trustees, and the others where the party covenants to make the purchase himself. But the main case on which I choose to rely is that of Lechmere v. Lechmere. In Forrester's Report of that case a very material circumstance is omitted, which is mentioned in P. Wms., namely, that the covenant was to purchase with the consent of the Earl of Carlisle, and Lord Morpeth, and that the purchases made by Lord Lechmere were without that consent. However, this case having decided, that if a man covenant to purchase land modo et formâ, and if he do purchase at all, whether modo et formâ, or otherwise, it shall be the same thing; this gets rid of the great part of the argument; and then I cannot distinguish the present case from Lechmere v. Lechmere. The principle is, that 'where a man covenants to do an act, and he does an act which may be converted to a completion of this covenant, it shall be supposed that he meant to complete it.' Here the land was in the particular county specified. The case of Lechmere v. Lechmere seems to be exactly in point; and upon that case, (the principles of which I coincide in,) I shall declare this estate to be subject to the trusts of the settlement."

APPENDIX.

1785.

[ *584 ]

[*] JAMES HIGHWAY, ELIZABETH BRADLEY, Widow, Relict and Executrix of the last Will and Testament of THOMAS BRADLEY, deceased; THOMAS BRADLEY, and ELIZABETH BRADLEY, Infants, by the said ELIZABETH, their Mother and next Friend, (the only Children of the said ELIZABETH BRADLEY, Widow, by the said THOMAS BRADLEY, deceased); JOHN WELCH, and MARY his Wife, THOMAS PHILPOTT, and JOHN CORBETT, Assignees of JAMES WATTS ROMNEY, under a Commission of Bankrupt - - - - - Plaintiffs.

WILLIAM JOHN BANNER, DANIEL WINWOOD, WILLIAM PHILIPS, and ANN his Wife, JAMES BALL, JOHN HIGHWAY, JAMES WATTS ROMNEY, and DOROTHY his Wife, Defendants.

Rolls, 25th
April, 1785.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. A. fol. 670.)

[Marriage articles to settle estates to the use of husband for life, remainder to the wife for her life, remainder to the use of the heirs of the body of the wife by the husband. — The Court refused to decree a strict settlement upon them, since the power of barring the entail was not in the husband alone. (1) As to the distinctions where a court of equity will or will not rectify settlements made in pursuance of articles, &c. by decreeing a strict settlement. (1)]
[Election (2) as to copyholds.]

[ *585 ]

FRANCIS Highway, in 1739, held certain estates of the manor of Chadgley, alias Chaddesley Corbett, by copy of court roll, sibi et suis, but not at the will of the lord; the words sibi et suis are considered as giving an inheritance. By the custom of the manor, the copyhold lands descend upon the eldest son of the tenant, according to the rule of the common law; but on failure of sons, the lands descend upon the eldest daughter alone, as customary heir.

Francis Highway, by articles of agreement dated the 24th of June, 1734, and made previous to his marriage with Dorothy Cave, between Francis Highway, of the one part, and Mary Cave, widow, and Dorothy Cave, her daughter, of the other part, in consideration of the intended marriage, and of 1000*l.* to be paid by Mary Cave as a portion with Dorothy, covenanted with Mary Cave, at any time after the marriage, at the request of Mary Cave, to surrender his copyhold lands to the use of himself for life, remainder to his intended wife Dorothy Cave for life, in lieu of dower; and from and after the deceases of Francis and Dorothy, to the use of the heirs of her body by him, if [*] he survived her; but if she survived him, to the heirs of his body on her body to [be] begotten, remainder to his own right heirs; and after taking notice, that, by the custom of the manor, Dorothy would be entitled to the land for life, for her free bench, if she survived him, unless he should do some act to prevent it: He further covenanted with Mary Cave, her executors, administrators, and assigns, that he had not done, and would not thereafter do any act to prevent Dorothy from holding or enjoying the premises, during her life, for her free bench, or to prevent the same descending to the heirs of his body by her, immediately after her death, or do any act to charge, mortgage, or incumber the said estate, or any part thereof; and likewise covenanted, that in case Dorothy should die before him, and before such surrender should be

(1) The distinction so well taken by the M. R. in this case, cannot be better exemplified by facts than it had been in Lord Hardwicke's time by the case of Howell v. Howell, 2 Ves. 358. of which, however, his Honor seems not to have been aware. Lord Hardwicke uses there almost the same language. Where the intent is apparent, the Court will decree a strict settlement. Roberts v. Kingsley, 1 Ves. 238. But contra where it is not evident. Partyn v. Roberts, Ambler, 315. Cordwell v. Mackrill, ibid. 515. See also Mr. Cox's note to West v. Erissey, 2 P. W. 356. Lord Eldon C. approved the principal case, 7 Ves. 390.

(2) See in Roberts v. Kingsley, 1 Ves. 238. and the notes at the end of this report.

1785.

HIGHWAY
against BANNER.

made as aforesaid, leaving issue, that he would, within three months after her death, surrender the said premises, free from incumbrances to the use of himself for life, and after his death to the use of the heirs of the body of Dorothy by him, with remainder to his right heirs.

Francis Highway and Dorothy Cave afterwards married, and had issue several sons and daughters; the eldest of which sons, Thomas, married without his father and mother's consent, whereby he disobliged them.

On the 8th of April, 1760, Francis Highway surrendered the estates to the uses mentioned in the marriage articles, and Francis was admitted accordingly; and, at the same court, he and Dorothy his wife surrendered the estates to the use of Francis and Dorothy for their joint lives, and the life of the survivor, and after their deaths to the use of Thomas, their eldest son, for life, and after his death to the first son of Thomas, who should live to attain 21, and the heirs of such first son for ever; and for want of such issue male of Thomas who should live to attain 21, to the use of such person or persons, and for such estate and estates, and in such manner as the said Francis Highway should by deed or will appoint.

Francis, by his will, dated 16th September, 1772, after taking notice of the above surrender, devised the whole of the copyhold estates (except a dwelling-house, with its appurtenances) to his son Thomas Highway, and his heirs, subject to the payment of [*] 1200*l.* for the benefit of some of his younger children, and other issue, to be paid at the end of six months after the decease of the survivor of Francis Highway and Dorothy his wife, in the manner and proportions mentioned in the will. Francis Highway died 21st December, 1772. On his death, his widow entered, and was admitted tenant, and enjoyed for her life, and Thomas Highway was admitted tenant, subject to the estate for life of his mother, and surrendered to the use of his will; and, by his will, devised the estates to the defendants Banner and Winwood, and their heirs, upon certain trusts. Thomas afterwards died without issue.

[ *586 ]

On the death of Thomas, John his brother, as having an equitable estate tail under the marriage articles of his father and mother Francis Highway and Dorothy his wife, or under the first mentioned surrender, claimed the estates, and afterwards sold his interest therein to Phillips, who married the widow of Thomas, and residuary devisee in his will; and John Highway was admitted tenant, and surrendered to Banner and Winwood, the trustees, upon the trusts in his brother Thomas Highway's will.

The bill was filed (among other things) to have the 1200*l.* raised. Several questions were made in the cause: 1st, Whether the surrender, in 1786, to the uses mentioned in the articles, was a due execution of the articles; and whether, by the subsequent surrender, Francis Highway gained an absolute power over the estate. 2dly, Whether if Francis Highway had not a power to dispose of the estate; Thomas, who was entitled to other property under his father's will, was not bound to make an election to abide by the will, or make a satisfaction for the 1200*l.* out of the other property devised to him; and whether he had not actually made his election, and barred the entail by the surrender to the use of his will; estates tail being barrable by surrender, according to the custom. And 3dly, If the estate tail was not barred by the surrender of Francis and Dorothy, or by the surrender of Thomas (which last surrender, being in the life-time of Dorothy, who was tenant for life, his Honor was of opinion would not operate to bar the entail); whether John, who also took benefits under his father's will, was not also bound to make an election.

[ *587 ]

[*] His Honor, being clearly of opinion in favour of the plaintiffs on the

APPENDIX.

1785.

HIGHWAY
against BANNER.

the first question, did not decide the other two; but intimated his opinion, that if John Highway took as a remainder-man, he was certainly bound to make an election; and distinguished the case from White v. White, before Lord Bathurst.

Upon the first point, his Honor said the principles on which the case had been argued, could not be controverted. The only doubt was whether they applied to the case before him. In West v. Erissey, [2. P. W. 849 (3)] the rule had been settled, and since adhered to in many cases, particularly Neale v. Neale, before Lord Bathurst, that articles for a settlement on a husband, and the heirs of his body, should be carried into execution as a strict settlement: and it had been considered as vain to make a settlement, which instantly might be defeated by a recovery. But the doctrine has never gone so far, where that party could not suffer a recovery alone. He said he did not know that the point had been decided (4); he must therefore decide as reason, and the principles of the cases decided led him. He observed, that it was anciently a common mode of settlement to the husband for life, to the wife for life, and to the heirs of the body of the wife by the husband. It was thought a sufficient precaution to preserve the entail, that it could not be destroyed unless both husband and wife concurred (5); and it was thought better that the power should be given to the two parents concurring, than that the property should be absolutely tied up. (5) With respect to the case before him, the limitation appeared to be anxiously worded: The concurrence of both parties was necessary to destroy the entail; whichever survived, it was out of the power of the survivor. He thought he had no authority to say that this was not what the parties meant: that he could not put on the articles the construction contended for by the defendants: it would be interposing perhaps his wishes, instead of the intentions of the parties; but if his wishes were to interfere, he should endeavour to support what had been done, which appeared to him to shew the wisdom of the mode of settlement: however, he was not to look to the impropriety of what had been done, but to the power which the parties had to do it; and he thought that point clear, which delivered him from the necessity of deciding on the question of election. On that point, however, he said he had no doubt. A question had been made, [*] whether the doctrine of election applied to copyholds; but that had been decided by the Court of Exchequer, in Standish v. Standish.†

[* 588 ]

On

† Frank v. Standish, Exchequer, 19th December, 1772. A testatrix being seised of freehold estates, and some copyhold lands, lying dispersedly, and having surrendered those copyhold estates to the use of her will; by her will devised all her real estates, as well freehold as copyhold, and gave Lady Standish, who was one of her co-heirs at law, 1000*l*. Before the making of her will, she exchanged some of those copyhold lands for others: which were surrendered to her, but she did not surrender those to the use of her will. The cause had been heard a few days before, when the question was made, whether Lady Standish should be put to her election; and the Court this day gave judgment unanimously, that this case was within the reasoning of Noys v. Mordaunt, 2 Vern. 581. and Lady Standish having elected to take the 1000*l*. legacy, decreed that she and the other co-heirs should surrender the copyhold to the uses of the will. (6)

(3) See Mr. Cox's note, ibid. 356.

(4) It had, however, been expressly decided by Lord Hardwicke C. accordingly. See Howel v. Howel, 2 Ves. 358.

(5) See Howel v. Howel, 2 Ves. 358, 359.

(6) "Frank v. Standish was cited in Graves v. Forman, and Golding v. Roberts, 9th February, 1784. There, the devise was of estates freehold, leasehold, and copyhold. The copyhold were not surrendered. Held, that the heir taking by devise must elect. See also Allen v. Poulton, 1 Ves. 121. Goodwyn v. Goodwyn, ibid. 228. Unett v. Wilkes, Ambl. 430." — Lord Redesdale's note.

See

On the first point, he declared his opinion that the articles were properly carried into execution by the first surrender in 1768 ; and that the second surrender let in the disposition made by Francis Highway's will ; and he decreed that the 1200*l.* should be raised out of the estate, according to the will, and gave the directions necessary for that purpose.

See also Cookes v. Hellier, 1 Ves. 234. Rumbold v. Rumbold, and Wilson v. Mount, 3 Ves. 65. 191. and the Supplement to Vesey, sen. 76, 77, 78., where it is noticed that an heir is not put to his election as to freehold estates, where the will is incompetent to affect them. Sheddon v. Goodrich, 8 Ves. 481. 496.

APPENDIX.

1785.

HIGHWAY
against BANNER.

May 7th, 1785.

[Vide S. C.
2 Cox, 4. on a subsequent stage of it.]

ROBINSON against Lord BYRON.

(Reg. Lib. 1784. B. fol. 143.)

MOTION for an injunction to restrain Lord Byron from preventing the water flowing to a mill which the plaintiffs used for a cotton-manufacture, or letting a greater quantity of water than usual flow upon the mill.

The motion was before appearance, upon affidavits which stated that, since the 4th of April, Lord Byron, who had large pieces of water in his park, supplied by the stream which flowed to the mill, had at one time stopped the water, and at another time let in the water in such quantities as to endanger the mill ; and the affidavits contained strong expressions of Lord Byron's, shewing that his object, in these proceedings, was to obtain money from the plaintiffs.

Lord Chancellor. — The Court will not restrain what has been enjoyed for 20 years past ; but if what has been so enjoyed is used in a different way, so as to do mischief, the Court may interpose. — His Lordship accordingly ordered an injunction to [*] restrain Lord Byron from (2) using dams, weirs, shuttles, floodgates, and other erections, otherwise than he had done before the 4th of April 1785.

Afterwards his Lordship altered the terms of the order, and added the words, “ so as to prevent the water flowing to the mill, in such regular quantities as it had ordinarily done before the 4th of April.”

When the answer came in, it was insisted before the Master of the Rolls, sitting for Lord Chancellor, that the affidavits could not be read ; but he was of a contrary opinion.† (3)

† V. [Strathmore v. Bowes,] post. vol. 2. 90. (2)

(1) In the case of the Birmingham Canal Company v. Lloyd, 18 Ves. 516, 517. Lord Eldon observed, that on this occasion Lord Thurlow put the plaintiff upon the terms of going to trial forthwith. See upon this, Weller v. Smeaton, antea, 572. and Lord Eldon C.'s observations, 7 Ves. 307, 308. there referred to, as to the alteration of the law since Lord Thurlow's time with regard to injunctions in cases of trespass. See also upon the principal case per Lord Eldon C. 6 Ves. 706. and the subsequent proceedings in the cause, 2 Cox, 4.

(2) “ Maintaining or using the shuttles, flood-gates, erections, or other devices, so as to prevent, &c. [as in the next paragraph] until answer and further order.” R. L.

(3) Although the affidavits were read by consent in Strathmore v. Bowes, post. 2 vol. 90. referred to by Mr. Brown, that consent was, doubtless, compelled by the opinion of the Court. See a better report of it by Mr. Cox, 3 P. W. 255. note. It is now quite settled, and has long been settled, that affidavits may be read against the answer in cases of waste. See Isaacs v. Humpage, post. 3 vol. 462. and 1 Ves. jun. 427. and Charlton v. Poulter, cited in each of those reports, but considerably mis-stated 1 Ves. 429. and 3 Bro. 463. It will be found in Reg. Lib. 1752. A. fol. 73. b., and 19 Ves. 148. note. Norway v. Rowe, 19 Ves. 144. to which that note is annexed, is one of the latest cases, and shews the proper boundaries allowed by the Court in such instances.

Injunction to restrain defendant from preventing water flowing in regular quantities to a mill. (1)

[ *589 ]

APPENDIX.

1785.

PITT against BENYON.

(No entry.)

May 7th, 1785.

Gift of a particular fund for life, then to residuary legatees as such; then the residue given to them as tenants in common: the particular fund is part of the residue [and vests accordingly in them as tenants in common.]

THE testator directed the interest of a sum of pagodas to be paid to A. B. during her life; and after her death he gave the pagodas to his residuary legatees after-named. He then gave the residue of his estate to Pitt and Benyon as tenants in common.

Pitt died, Benyon survived, and died, [the] plaintiff was representative of Pitt; [the] defendant [was the representative] of Benyon; A. B. died.

It was insisted for the defendant, that the interest of Pitt and Benyon in the pagodas was a joint-tenancy.

Lord Chancellor was of opinion, it was part of the residue; and that the residuary legatees were tenants in common of this, as well as of the other parts of the residue. †

† See Perkins v. Raynton, ante, p. 118.

[ *590 ]

[*] OLIVER against FREWEN.

Trinity Term,
June 7th, 1785.

[Olive v. Frewen.] (Reg. Lib. 1784. B. fol. 635. b.)

Some of the executors having unequal, and others no legacies, shall take the residue. (1)

THIS was a bill filed by the next of kin, against the defendants the executors and other parties, for an account of the residue, &c.

The question was, whether the executors, some of whom had unequal legacies, and others none, or the next of kin should take the residue. There was a clause in the will, directing that, in case any legatees should die in the life-time of the testator, their legacies should go to the executors. Lawson v. Lawson, 7 Bro. Parlt. Ca. 511, and other cases cited in the case of Bowker v. Hunter, ante p. 328. were recognized in the present case, but, after a short argument the Chancellor dismissed this bill (2); being of opinion that the plaintiff had no right to a share of the residue, but that the same belonged to the executors.

(1) See the notes in Martin v. Rebow, ante, 154. and Bowker v. Hunter, ante, 328. S. P.

(2) But directed the defendants to pay the plaintiffs their legacies, together with the sum of 50*l.* for the costs of the suit. R. L.

A

T A B L E

OF

P R I N C I P A L   M A T T E R S .

---

The matters marked with an asterisk occur in the Appendix.

---

A.

ACCOUNT.

MONEY belonging to wards of the court cannot be transferred to the Accountant General, to the credit of the cause, [with an acquittance to trustees,] until the account is taken before the Master (Bencraft v. Rich)
Page 56
 [Special directions as to sums omitted to be received (Mansel v. Bowles) 403. n.]

ADEMPTION.

Removal of goods (except in a case of necessity) will be an ademption of a gift of the goods by will (Green v. Symonds) 129 n.

[AGREEMENT.]

[Specific performance decreed (after a trial at law) of a parol undertaking by the assignment of a lease to indemnify the original lessee (the vendor) against the rent and covenants: a presumption arising from the nature of the transaction; the assignment being "subject to the rents and covenants on the part of the lessee," although the conditions under which the lease was sold by auction expressed no such engagement (Pember v. Mather) 52]

See BILL for SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

ALLOWANCE.

A special direction to the Master, in settling an allowance to an eldest son, to consider the birth of a posthumous child, refused, (Burnet v. Burnet) Page 179

See MAINTENANCE.

For BANKRUPT'S ALLOWANCE, see BANKRUPT.

ANNUITY.

An annuity given to testator's wife, for life, and then, after certain interests, to remain to the testator's eldest son, and the heirs male of his body, remainder to his (testator's) next eldest son, and his heirs male; the eldest and two other sons died, living the wife: — This is not personal estate vesting absolutely in the eldest son, nor does it vest in the fourth son, as an executory devise, but, the annuity being exhausted, sinks into the residuary estate of the testator, (Turner v. Turner) 316

An annuity charged upon the Post-office, until a sum should be paid to be laid out in land, is a mere personal annuity, and passes by grant or transfer (Holderness v. Carmarthen) 377

A gift, by will, of stock in long annuities, primâ facie, means so much a year (Stafford v. Horton) 482

But evidence shall be let in of the state of the testatrix's

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

testatrix's property, to shew she could only mean a gross sum to that amount (Fonnercau v. Poynts) Page 472

[See BARGAIN, p. 556.]

ANSWER.

Upon motion for time to answer, the defendant puts in a plea; it is a sufficient compliance with the order (Roberts v. Hartley) 56

An answer only denying combination, is not a compliance with an order for time to plead, answer, or demur, but not to demur alone (Lee v. Pascoe) 78

An answer shall not be amended after an indictment for perjury preferred or threatened, in order to avoid the indictment (Verney v. Macnamara) 419

*When sums are specifically charged in the bill to have been received by the defendant, he must answer specifically; and it is not enough to refer to a schedule (Hopburn v. Durand) 503

See ASSETS — EVIDENCE.

APPEAL.

An appeal shall not be for costs only (Wirdman v. Kent) 140

APPOINTMENT.

See POWER. — TERMS for YEARS.

[APPORTIONMENT.]

[Of costs between different estates and personal estate (Hone v. Medcraft) 265. n.]

[Of expences of renewals (Pickering v. Vowles) 197. 199. & n., and (Nightingale v. Lawson) 440]

[APPROPRIATION.]

[Contingent legacy for an infant at 21: an immediate appropriation directed (Green v. Pigot) 103]

ASSETS.

Testator directed that all his estates should be sold, and, after payment of certain sums, the remainder to be vested in his executors for the payment of debts: the money arising from the sale, held to be equitable assets (Newton v. Bennett) 135

Devise to executors to sell and apply the money to payment of debts; the assets are equitable (Silk v. Prime) 139. n†

An admission of assets, by the executor's answer, is waved if the plaintiff goes to an account before the Master (Wall v. Bushby) 484

See REVERSION.

B.

BANK OF ENGLAND.

*The question being whether the plaintiff has a lien upon stock; the Court will not order the Bank to permit a transfer (Birch v. Corbyn) Page 571

BANKRUPT.

A conveyance of all a man's goods as a security, (he being at the time solvent,) was thought, by the Lord Chancellor, no act of bankruptcy, and the jury having found the party a bankrupt, a new trial was awarded: but upon a second trial, a case reserved, and argument in B. R., it was held to be an act of bankruptcy (Hassel v. Simpson) 99

A., in order to renew a lease, borrowed half of the fine of a trader, and gave a note to repay it, unless, by will, she should give the estate to one of his children: She, by will, gave it to his daughter; the father became bankrupt: the assignees held to be entitled under 1 Ja. 1. c. 15. (Fryer v. Flood) 160

A farmer taking the soil off the waste to make bricks, and afterwards paying a consideration for it, is a trader within the bankrupt laws (Ex parte Harrison) 173

So of renting brick ground only, independent of the farm (Parker v. Wills) ibid. n†

Annuity creditors not allowed to prove their debts, but upon the consent of the other creditors at a special meeting (Ex parte Cator) 267

Nor unless the bonds were forfeited at law (Ex parte Burrow) 268

A. having made an insurance for the benefit of B.'s testator, pledged the policy with the broker for his own debt: This is not a fraudulent leaving of the policy in A.'s hands by B.'s testator (Falkener v. Case) 125

Pledge of a lease by a person who afterwards becomes bankrupt, carried into execution against the assignees (Russel v. Russel) 269. & n†

Evidence of a bankrupt who had his certificate and allowance admitted to decrease the fund (ibid.) 269

Where a party has clear separate demands on a bankrupt, he may sue for one, and come under the commission for the other; but not if they are only different securities for the same debt (Ex parte Crinsoz) 270

An assignee keeping money unnecessarily in his hands, and using it in his trade, shall pay interest for it (Trevcs v. Townshend) 384

Father, being seised of an estate for life, remainder to the son in fee; they join in a mortgage; the father becomes bankrupt, and the mortgagee files his bill of foreclosure, and the estate is ordered to be sold: the son cannot prove the value of his remainder as a debt under the commission (Kittcar v. Raynes) 384

Sums

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

Sums secured under a marriage settlement, are proveable under a commission of bankrupt, so far as they are certain (Ex parte Mitford)

Page 398

Debts upon the insurance of ships are only proveable against the separate estate of the partner who signs the policy; the insurance by a partnership being against the 6 Geo. 1. c. 18. (Ex parte Angerstein, and Ex parte Lee)

399, 400

The bankrupt's allowance shall, in the case of partners, be divided between them in the proportions in which their respective effects have contributed to the payment of the debts (Ex parte Bate)

452

* Joint creditors admitted to prove against the separate estate by consent (Cobham Ex parte)

576

Joint creditors admitted to prove their debts on the separate estate of one partner, there being no joint estate (Ex parte Hayden)

454

See PLEDGE.

BARGAIN.

Unreasonable bargains made with an heir, &c. although more than of age, and upon his own offer, set aside, on what circumstances and upon what terms (Gwynne v. Heaton)

1

Deeds entered into by parties knowing their rights are not to be set aside, though upon inadequate consideration (Stephens v. Bateman)

22

A fair settlement, beneficial to the family, was not set aside, although made with tenant in tail, immediately upon his coming into possession, and at the recommendation of the father, who took an interest under the settlement (Kinchant v. Kinchant)

369

* Taking an annuity worth 9 years' purchase at 5 years, is an unconscientious bargain, and the Court will give the taker no assistance in a bargain for a re-purchase (Vaughan v. Thomas)

556

* Leases for lives, obtained by agents of a deceased person of weak intellects, upon inadequate considerations, set aside (Gartside v. Isherwood)

558

BARON and FEME.

The wife's bond, given jointly with her husband, shall bind her separate property (Hulme v. Tenant)

16

What interests of the wife so vest in the husband as to vest in his assignees upon a bankruptcy (Saddington v. Kinsman)

41

* The Court will not authorise a married woman's parting with her [reversionary] life-interest in a sum of money upon examination; in analogy to an examination on a fine at law (Fraser v. Bailey)

518

* Jewels of the wife, though given by the husband's will to her for life, shall not be sold for payment of the husband's debts charged on a real estate in aid of personality (Boynston v. Parkhurst)

Page 378

BILL

Will not lie against several for a mere legal demand on account of the death or bankruptcy of some of the parties (Hoare v. Contentin)

27

Bill by a tutor for an annuity claiming it as a debt under a devise for payment of debts by bond, mortgage, or simple contract, the only evidence being letters referring to an annuity, but not stating its duration, dismissed (Jamison v. Skipwith)

34

Bill will not lie by one parish against another, to ascertain boundaries (St. Luke's Parish v. St. Leonard's)

40

Bill will not lie to compel an hospital to renew a lease upon payment of a fine of one year's rent (Somerville v. Chapman)

61

Will lie for a discovery of matter to constitute a defence to an action at law (Bishop of London v. Fylche)

96

Will not lie against several tenants of a manor for quit-rents, unless the premises are uncertain (Bouverie v. Prentice)

200

Can not be dismissed without costs on the plaintiff's motion, unless by consent at the bar (Fidcle v. Evans)

207

The process directed by the 5 Geo. 2. c. 25. in order to the bill being taken pro confesso, shall issue notwithstanding a subpoena has been served (Mawer v. Mawer)

388

BILL for specific Performance of Agreements.

A. sells an estate for an annuity. A. dies before any payment of the annuity; if the contract be fair, it shall be specifically performed (Mortimer v. Capper)

156

In such bill against the vendor, the vendee or his heir being in possession, (the agreement having been made by the tenant for life, with the reversioner,) and an account of the purchaser's personal estate becoming necessary, an early day shall be appointed for payment of the purchase money, and in failure, the bill quoad hoc to be dismissed (Lewther v. Andover)

396

Bill for specific performance of an agreement to purchase, dismissed, there being a concealment on the part of the vendor (Shirley v. Stratton)

440

* That the vendee bought on a speculation (if that was not consented to by the vendor) no defence to a bill for specific performance (Adams v. Weare)

567

BILL of Revivor.

Bill of revivor will lie for costs ordered to be paid into the bank (Hall v. Smith)

438

BILL

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

BILL Parties.

In a bill against the committee of a voluntary society who contract with a tradesman, it is not necessary to make the other members of the society parties (Cullen v. Queensberry)

Page 101

So of the commissioners of a navigation who have signed any of the orders (Horsley v. Bell)

Ibid. n.

In a bill by creditors against the executor, it is not necessary to make the residuary legatee a party (Lawson v. Barker)

303

Where there are three mortgagees, being joint tenants, one cannot bring a bill to foreclose without making the others parties (Lowe v. Morgan).

368

BOND.

A bond, being at the testator's house in Suffolk, does not pass by the words in his will, "I give all to Suffolk," the bond having no locality (Moore v. Moore)

127

Securities for money do not pass by goods in testator's study (Green v. Symonds)

129 n.

A bond given for silks taken up to be sold, decreed to be given up on the payment of the money actually raised by the sale of the silks (Barker v. Vansommer)

149

A bond given for a general purpose of raising money, and deposited by the obligee with another as a security, shall be liable to the obligee's debt: not so, if given for a special purpose (Cator v. Burke)

434

C.

CABINET.

By the bequest of a cabinet of curiosities, jewels worn as ornaments of the person do not pass, although they were usually shewn as part of it (Cavendish v. Cavendish)

467

CHARGE.

On a real estate for a charity (void by the Mortmain Act) shall sink in favour of the devisee) not go to heir at law or residuary legatee (Wright v. Row)

61

S. P. (Jackson v. Hurlock)

61. n.

Sed vide (Bland v. Wilkins)

Ibid.

When a tenant for life pays off a charge (although he take no assignment) he becomes a creditor for the amount of it; but where tenant in tail pays off a charge, he does it in exoneration of the estate, unless he shews his intention to be otherwise (Jones v. Morgan)

206

A charge of legacies under a viz., then a legacy out of the personal estate, then other legacies without any fund named, these last are not charged on the real estate (Hone v. Medcraft)

Page 261

Under a general charge for payment of debts, copyhold is liable as well as freehold (Coombs v. Gibson)

273

Of debts and legacies on land, the purchaser is not obliged to see to the application (Jebb v. Abbet)

186, n.

See MORTGAGE.

See DEVISE for PAYMENT of DEBTS.

CHARITY.

Trustees of a charity are ordered to be elected out of a certain parish; an information to remove them, as not having been so elected, must state that there were inhabitants fit to be elected (Attorney General v. Cooper)

439

See MORTMAIN.

CHATTELS.

Chattels given as heir-looms, to be enjoyed by the persons who shall be in possession of certain houses, a son being born who was tenant in tail, subject to his father's life estate, these chattels will vest in him absolutely, and he dying, in his father as his representative (Foley v. Burnell)

274

CODICIL.

There being several codicils to a will, some of which were bare repetitions of former ones, these were declared to be mere substitutions, and the legatee entitled only to take under the one (Campbell v. Radnor)

271

Where a legacy is given in a will and another in the codicil, to the same legatee, he shall take both (Ridges v. Morrison)

389

S. P. (Hooley v. Halton)

390. n.

A codicil referring to a will operates as a republication (Coppin v. Fernyhough)

265. n.

COMMISSION

Application for a commission to examine witnesses in India, to prove the testator's intention that his wife should take legacies given her by two codicils almost identical in their expressions, refused, except upon her oath, that she believed such to be the testator's intention (Coote v. Coote)

448

CONDITION.

Devise, if A. or B. shall marry into the families of C. or D. and have a son, then I give my estate to that son; if they shall not marry, then to E. A. and B. married, but not into the favoured families, the marriage is a condition precedent which they have their whole lives

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

lives to perform, and E. has no claim till after their deaths (Randall v. Payne) Page 55 [See also Jones v. Earl of Suffolk, p. 528.]

And see MARRIAGE.

CONSIDERATION.

Inadequate consideration a badge of fraud
(Gynne v. Heaton) 1
* S. P. (Gartside v. Isherwood) 558

[CONTINGENT LEGACY.]

[Contingent legacy given for an infant at 21 —
An immediate appropriation directed (Green v. Pigot) 103]

COPYHOLD.

Under a general charge of debts upon land, copyhold is liable as well as freehold (Coombe v. Gibson) 275
[Liability of copyholds unsurrendered ibid.]
* Enfranchisement of a copyhold, by one having a partial interest, is for the benefit of the remainder-men as well as his own (Wynn v. Cookes) 517
* The doctrine of election applies to a copyhold [534] (Frank v. Standish) 588. n.

COSTS.

On an assignment of dower, by commissioners, the doweress shall have no costs, unless other questions are raised in which the party is litigious (Lucas v. Calcraft) 134
There shall not be a re-hearing or appeal for costs only, unless on very special circumstances (Wardman v. Kent) 140 [Decree as to apportionment of costs between different estates and the personal estate (Hone v. Medcraft) 265. n.]
There may be a bill of revivor for costs ordered to be paid into the Bank (Hall v. Smith) 438
In a cause set down upon bill and answer, the Court may give full costs (Mansell v. Bowles) 403
When the material issue has been found for the party setting down the cause for further directions, he shall have the costs of the trial at law (Blackburne v. Gregson) 420

COVENANT.

[Specific performance decreed (after a trial at law) of a parol undertaking by the assignee of a lease to indemnify the original lessee (the vendor) against the rent and covenants: a presumption arising from the nature of the transaction, the assignment being "subject to the rents and covenants on the part of the lessee," although the conditions under which the lease was sold by auction expressed no such engagement (Pember v. Mathers) Page 52]

To settle a particular estate, the breach is matter of damage, and an issue shall be granted to try what the damage is (Wade v. Paget) 36]

* One covenants to pay money to trustees to be laid out in real estate; he does not pay it, but purchases an estate, it is subject to the uses (Sowden v. Sowden) 582

D.

DAMAGES

Received or assessed for a breach of covenant in not settling a certain estate; if the party would have been seised of the estate in fee, the damages are part of his personal estate; but if subject to contingencies they shall be laid out in land (Wade v. Paget) 563
[A court of equity will, in a proper case, grant an injunction where excessive damages have been recovered at law; and direct an issue, quantum damnificatus, to ascertain the real amount of the injury (Sloan v. Walter) 418]

DEBTS,

See CHARGE.

DEEDS,

Entered into by parties knowing their rights, though upon inadequate consideration, shall not be set aside (Stephens v. Bateman) 22
Deposited as a pledge will entitle the holder to have a mortgage (Russel v. Russel) 270
See also the cases Ibid. n.

DEMURRER

Upon an order to plead, answer, or demur, but not to demur alone, the defendant demurred, and answered only by denying combination, the demurrer was ordered to be taken off the file (Lee v. Pascoe) 78
Upon a quare impedit brought against the ordinary, he files a bill for a discovery whether there were not a bond of resignation given, in order to plead it to the action; the defendant demurred, 1st, that the discovery would subject him to penalties; 2d, that it was immaterial. To the first it was answered that the bonds were legal, to the 2d, that the plaintiff had a right to the discovery, and its materiality is to be debated elsewhere: and the demurrer was over-ruled (Bishop of London v. Fytche) 96
Allowed to a bill for a conveyance, the estates being legal, not equitable ones (Thong v. Bedford) 313
To a bill against the East India Company and their Secretary, to discover by what authority plaintiff was dispossessed of a lease for sup-

TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

- supplying Madras with tobacco, and for a commission to examine witnesses in India; stating that the plaintiff intended to bring an action, over-ruled (Moodelay v. East India Company and Morton) Page 469
- Bill to be quieted in the possession of a mill; and that defendants may pull down works above it and be restrained from erecting others: demurrer, because plaintiff had not established his right at law, allowed (Weller v. Smeaton) 572

DEPOSIT,

See DEEDS.

DEPOSITIONS

- Of a witness re-examined before a master, on the same matter to which he had been examined in chief, without order, suppressed (Sawyer v. Bowyer) 388

DEVISE

- To trustees (after deducting taxes, &c.) to pay the residue to A. for life, remainder to the use of the heirs male of A. these two estates do not unite so as to enable A. to suffer a recovery (Shapland v. Smith) 75
- Of leasehold ground-rents arising from an under building lease, passes the leasehold reversion (Kaye v. Laxon) 76
- Testator having freehold and leasehold tythes, (the latter perpetually renewable,) gave all his tythes; both kinds will pass (Turner v. Husler) 78
- Devise to a corporation in trust, the devise being void, the trust shall attach upon the estate the law raises (Sonley v. the Clock-Makers' Company) 81
- A.* conveyed estates to trustees to sell and pay debts, afterwards to raise a fund and pay the interest of it to B. till marriage, then to pay her the principal, and to divide the residue among the plaintiffs: by will he created a charge for another daughter, residue to plaintiffs: B. dying unmarried, the sum given to her resulted to the testator, and passed by the gift of the residue (Hewit v. Wright) 86
- To A. for life; remainder to her sons in tail; remainder to her daughters, as tenants in common: The question, whether the daughters took estates for life only, or of inheritance, agitated but not determined (Tweedale v. Conentry) 240
- Of leasehold estate held under a college; after the will made, the lease is renewed: The renewed lease does not pass (Hone v. Medcraft) 261
- To wife for life; remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders; remainder to A. for life; remainder to trustees; remainder to the heirs of her body; remainder over, with a declaration, that she should only have

- an estate for life: — These are legal estates (Thong v. Bedford) Page 313
- Testator devised in these terms, "all I am worth:" real, as well as personal estate, shall pass (Hustop v. Brooman) 437
- Words of desire or request, in order to amount to a devise, must have precise objects (Harland v. Trigg) 142
- Devise to testator's wife, "not doubling she will give what shall be left to my grand-children;" not sufficient to raise a trust (Wynne v. Hawkins) 179
- Testator devised all his estate to his wife; in case of death happening to her, he desired his executors to take care of the whole for his daughter: The wife shall take only an estate for life, with remainder in fee to the daughter (Nowlan v. Nelligan) 489
- To all the children of A. at 21, a child born after the death of the testatrix shall take (Congreve v. Congreve) 530

DEVISE executory.

- Devise to A. for ever, that is if he shall have a son or sons, who shall attain twenty-one, but if A. shall die, without son or sons to inherit, that the son of B. shall inherit: This is a fee in A. with an executory devise to the son of B. (Heath v. Heath) 147
- Devise of the residue of personalty to testator's wife for life; and, if she shall die without issue living at her death, to the testator's two brothers; or if one of them shall be dead, to the survivor: they both died, living the wife, who died not leaving issue, it vested in the surviving brother, and was transmissible to his representative (Barnes v. Allen) 181

DEVISE over, too remote.

- Devise to A. and the lawful heirs of his body, if he shall have any; if he shall die without, certain sums over: This is too remote (Attorney General v. Hird) 170
- To testator's wife and her heirs, but, in case of her decease without issue, to the eldest son of his brother — Too remote (Bigge v. Bensley) 157

DEVISE for Payment of Debts.

- Devise of an estate for payment of debts takes it out of the statute of fraudulent devises: — And being to pay out of rents and profits, no sale or mortgage can be made (Lingard v. Derby) 511
- See the note ibid.
- A mere charge, upon the real estate, to pay debts and legacies is not sufficient to exonerate the personal estate, unless there are words to shew it was the testator's intention that the personalty should not be applied (Samwell v. Wake) 144
- Devise of real and personal estate to pay debts and legacies, the personal estate shall not pay the

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

- the ancestor's mortgage or a legacy charged on land (Lawson v. Hudson) Page 58
- Neither shall such charge make a term for payment of debts liable to a mortgage which subsisted on an estate at the time when the testator purchased it, but the mortgaged estate shall bear its own burthen (Ancaster v. Mayer) 454
- Sir R. W. reciting himself to be seised, subject to incumbrances, of an estate which was mortgaged, devised another estate for a term of twenty-one years, in aid of his personal estate, to pay bond and book debts, and, by a subsequent clause, to pay all his debts, the personal estate and the term, shall exonerate the mortgaged estate (Tweedale v. Coventry) 240
- Devise to pay debts by bond, mortgage, or simple contract, shall not pay an annuity only promised by letters (Jameson and Skipwith) 34
- Under a general charge for payment of debts, copyhold estate is liable as well as freehold estate (Coombes v. Gibson) 273
- * An estate descended shall exonerate an estate charged with payment of debts (Davies v. Topp) 524

See CHARGE, LEGACY, MORTMAIN, VESTED INTERESTS.

DOWER.

- Costs shall not be given on an assignment of dower by commissioners (Lucas v. Calcraft) 134
- Devise of a rent-charge is not a bar of dower, unless so expressed, or the estate so small as to shew it must have been so intended (Pearson v. Pearson) 292
- But where the gift is inconsistent with dower, it shall be a satisfaction for it (Villa Real v. Lord Galway) 292. n.
- A wife shall not be endowed of an equity of redemption on a mortgage in fee (Dixon v. Saville) 326
- A thousand pounds a-year was given to the wife, by will, in lieu of dower, but if she marry again 100*l.* a-year in lieu of all other benefits; she marries and elects her dower, she shall not have the 100*l.* a-year (Boynston v. Boynston) 445

E.

ELECTION.

The wife being entitled to an estate under the marriage-settlement, the husband, by will, gave her an interest in another estate and all his personalty, in lieu of her claims; the will was not duly executed to pass real estate: she must elect between the personal estate and her dower; — but is entitled to delay her election until the account of the personal estate is taken (Newman v. Newman) Page 186

Where a certain sum is settled by marriage-articles upon the only child of the marriage; the father afterwards, by will, gives her all his real estates for life, with remainder to her children; and orders his personalty to be laid out in lands to the same uses; — also copyholds (of which he had only the equity of redemption) are unsurrendered; she must elect between the devises under the will, and the sum which she claims under the settlement (Macnamara v. Jones) 481

The testator devised estates, which he had surrendered in several parishes (describing them) to his wife for life, with remainders over. In one of the parishes named, he had a joint estate with his wife; in the others, he had no estates but in her right; the estates of the wife, not passing by the surrenders, do not by the will, and she shall not be put to any election (Read v. Crop) 492

The doctrine of election applies to copyholds (Frank v. Standish) [584] 588. n.

See DOWER, FORFEITURE, SATISFACTION.

EQUITY.

Where matter is originally of legal jurisdiction, the death or bankruptcy of parties (though it might lead to an account) will not support a bill filed before the events happen (Hoare v. Contencin) 27

Where an equitable estate, and a legal in the same premises, vest in the same person, the equitable interest will merge in the legal (Wade v. Paget) 363

Equitable securities (the legal estate being in a prior mortgagee) shall take their rank according to the priority of their dates (Becket v. Cordley) 353

ESTATE.

Devise to trustees (after payment of taxes, &c.) to pay the residue of rents and profits to C. S. for life, remainder to the use of the heirs-male of the body of C. S. — C. S. has only an estate for life, not an estate-tail (Shapland v. Smith) 75

See also the note ib. n. †

An equitable estate-tail may be barred by a recovery, as well as a legal estate-tail (Boteler v. Allington) 72

The testator devised to trustees to pay debts, then to stand seised to the use of A. for life, without impeachment of waste, after his decease to the use of the heirs male of his body, severally, successively, and in remainder. — This is an estate-tail in A. (Jones v. Morgan) 206

* Testator devised to his heir at law for life, remainder to R. C. for life, and to his first and other sons, remainder to R. S. and W. M. for their joint lives, and to the survivor of them

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

them — the survivor only takes an estate for life (Awee v. Melhuish) Page 519

See REAL and PERSONAL ESTATE.

ESTOVERS

Of one estate are not to be applied to the repairs, &c. of another estate (Lee v. Alston) 194

EVIDENCE

Of one witness, corroborated by circumstances, admissible against the facts sworn in the defendant's answer, and sufficient to found a decree (Pember v. Mathers) 52

A witness had been examined de bene esse, and lived eighteen months after the answers; the depositions had been published, the defendants consenting; his Honor refused to suppress the depositions, but Lord Chancellor inclined to think they ought not to be read (Maybank v. Brooks) 84

The evidence of a bankrupt having had his certificate and allowance, admitted to be read (Russel v. Russel) 269

EVIDENCE-parol.

Parol evidence to prove that the testator knew a legatee was dead, in order to shew his intention that the legacy should be transmissible, not admitted (Maybank v. Brooks) 84

Upon a grant of an annuity, a bill was filed to redeem, upon a suggestion that it was part of the original agreement, but omitted in the deed, from an apprehension that it would make the transaction usurious: parol-evidence was offered to prove it was part of the original agreement; but refused to be admitted; the bill not stating the omission to have been by fraud (Irnham v. Child) 92

Parol-evidence of an agent admitted to prove a party to a deed had notice of an incumbrance on the estate (Shelburne v. Inchiquin) 338

Evidence of the state of a testatrix's property let in to shew that by a gift of a sum in long annuities, she meant a gross sum, not an equivalent annuity (Fonnercau v. Poyntz) 472

EXCEPTIONS

To the answer to an amended bill, referred to the same Master to whom the exceptions to the original bill had been referred (Pratt v. Tessier) 39

See MAINTENANCE.

EXECUTORS, &c.

[Executrix barred from the residue by a specific legacy (Martin v. Rebow) 154]

Having legacies given to them, and there being no next of kin to take the undevised surplus, are trustees for the Crown (Middleton v. Spicer) Page 201

Having unequal legacies, shall take the undevised surplus equally, as if they had no legacies (Boulter v. Hunter) 328

* So where some have unequal, and others no legacies (Oliver v. Frewin) 590

EXONERATION

Of personal estate from payment of debts.

See DEVISE for PAYMENT of DEBTS.

F.

FINE

Shall not be set up as a bar, where a bill has been filed for relief (Pincke v. Thornycraft) 289

FINE for Renewal of Leases.

In a beneficial lease, the tenant for life renewing, the fine shall be apportioned between her and the remainder-man in proportion to their respective interests (Nightingale v. Lawson) 440

See the note 444

FORFEITURE.

P. T. granted two annuities to his son P. T. afterwards by will he gave him another annuity, upon condition that he should release all demands on his estate arising from accounts relative to a transaction between them: The release tendered included the former annuity; the refusal to execute this is no forfeiture of the second annuity; but a release being proposed by the Master going only to the account, a refusal to execute this was held a forfeiture of the annuity under the will (Taylor v. Popham) 168

FRAUD.

Lord I. dealt for an annuity with C. who treated for Lord I.'s son (which was unknown to Lord I.) This is not a fraud to vitiate the transaction (Irnham v. Child). See also the note 92

G.

GUARDIAN.

A petition to assign a guardian (unless to carry on a suit, or protect an interest) must be pursuant to the statute (Ex parte Becker) 556

HEIR

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

H.

HEIR and DEVISEE.

See MORTMAIN.

HEIR-LOOMS.

Plate, &c. left by will as heir-looms, to be enjoyed by the persons respectively in possession of the testator's houses; the absolute property will vest in the first tenant in tail who comes into esse, and, he dying an infant, in his father as his representative (Foley v. Burnell) Page 274

HUSBAND.

See BARON and FEME.—INFANT.

I.

IMPERTINENCE.

A reference of an answer to the Master for impertinence, refused to be discharged, although not moved for till after notice of motion for dismissal of the plaintiff's bill for want of prosecution (Kinworthy v. Allen) 400

[INDEMNITY.]

[Specific performance decreed (after a trial at law) of a parol undertaking by the assignee of a lease to indemnify the original lessee (the vendor) against the rent and covenants: a presumption arising from the nature of the transaction, the assignment being "subject to the rents and covenants on the part of the lessee," although the conditions under which the lease was sold by auction expressed no such engagement (Pember v. Mathers) 52]

INFANT.

The marriage settlement of a female infant held to be binding upon her, and no act done by her and her husband can avoid it: Mortgages made by them to parties having notice of the trusts, ordered to be assigned to the trustee, but the profits, during the lives of the husband and wife, to be applied to the payment of the mortgages, without prejudice to any remedy the wife might have against the husband's estate (Durnford v. Lane) 106

A female infant's marriage settlement, in order to bind her, must be fair and reasonable, not tend to deprive her of every thing: A covenant that whatever should come to the wife, or to the husband in her right, from the mother or otherwise, should be bound by the settlement, controuled to what came from the mother, not extended to property coming from other quarters (Williams v. Williams) 152

Vol. I.

An infant is bound by an order made by the court, by consent, although there was no reference to the master to enquire whether it would be for his benefit (Wall v. Bushby)

Page 484

*A title set up against an infant cannot be taken notice of on exceptions to a Master's report of maintenance, but must be established elsewhere (Nicholls ex parte) 577

INJUNCTION.

Where there has been a decree for payment of debts in a suit by trustees; although the parties have not proceeded under it, a creditor shall be restrained from proceeding at law (Brooks v. Reynolds) 183

Where a bond is given for the enjoyment of a collateral matter, [and excessive damages have been recovered at law] the Court will grant an injunction against an action at law for the penalty, and award an issue quantum damnificatus (Sloman v. Walter) 418

An injunction shall be awarded against the sale of a book piratically taken from another, but not against a fair abridgment (Bell v. Walker) 451

Where there is an action brought for money received, and the defendant files a bill, admitting to have received the money, it shall be brought into court, or the injunction shall be dissolved (Sherwood v. White) 452

*Injunction granted to restrain defendant from recovering a demand against one of the plaintiffs, he having represented to the agent of the other plaintiff (on a treaty of marriage with his daughter) that there was no such demand existing (Neville v. Wilkinson) 543

*Where a bill is referred for impertinence, before the time for answering is out, the plaintiff cannot have an injunction, of course, for want of an answer; but must move it on notice and affidavit (Neale v. Wadeson) 574

*To restrain defendant from preventing water flowing in regular quantities to a mill granted (Robinson v. Byron) 598

See MONEY, WASTE.

INTEREST.

A residue being devised to an infant, with a remainder over, in case she should die under age, which she did; the interest, between the death of the testator, and that of the infant, shall go to her representative (Chaworth v. Hooper) 82

A legacy to be paid at twenty-one with interest at 4 per cent. given to an infant; ordered to be invested in the funds, and if greater interest made, to be for the benefit of the legatee (Green v. Pigot) 103

Interest ordered to accumulate for the benefit

H h

ct

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

of legatee, and the principal to be paid to them at 21; the interest accruing between the time when the elder attained 21, and that when the younger attained the same age, divided between them (Hawkins v. Coombe)

Page 335

In a long unsettled partnership account, rendered intricate by neglect of the party, he or his representative shall have no interest on the balance when settled (Boddam v. Riley)

239

Where an executor or an administrator makes interest of the money of his testator or intestate, lying unnecessarily in his hands, by employing it in his trade or otherwise, he shall answer the interest (Newton v. Bennet)

359

S. P. (Perkins v. Baynton)

375

So of a receiver of tolls, having a salary (E. of Lonsdale v. Church)

362. n.

So of an assignee using the money of a bankrupt (Tyres v. Townshend)

348

Compound interest at 4 per cent. allowed the tenant for life, for the remainder-man's proportion of fines paid for the renewal of a beneficial lease (Nightingale v. Lawson)

440

* On mortgages, calculated upon the principal and interest reported due: but on bonds and legacies, on the principal only (Perkins v. Baynton)

574

INTERESTS VESTED.

See VESTED INTERESTS, LEGACY.

INTESTATE.

See EXECUTOR.

L.

LAND.

Money to be laid out in land will, by a slight expression of the person entitled to it, pass either as personal or real estate (Pulteney v. Dartington)

225

Damages for a breach of covenant to settle an estate, if there are contingent uses, shall be ordered to be laid out in land, but, if the party would be entitled to the land in fee, shall be paid as money, and if the party be dead, to his representative (Wade v. Paget)

363

See REAL AND PERSONAL ESTATE.

LEASE.

Leasehold estate held of a college devised, after the will the lease is renewed, the renewed lease does not pass (Hone v. Madcraft)

261

See the case of Coppin v. Fernhough Ibid. n. Where a lease for lives is renewed by the tenant for life, under a settlement, the renewal shall be to the uses of the settlement (Pickering v. Fowler)

Page 197

Upon renewal of a beneficial lease, by the tenant for life, the fine shall be apportioned between her and the remainder-man, according to their interests (Nightingale v. Lawson)

440

But held an annuitant out of leasehold is not bound to contribute (Marsel v. Asher)

446 n.

See DEEDS.

LEGACY.

A legacy was given to such lying-in hospital as the executor should name; the testator afterwards struck out the name of the executor, the Court will sustain the legacy, and appoint what lying-in hospital shall take it (White v. White)

13

[A contingent legacy given for an infant at 21. An immediate appropriation directed (Green v. Pigot)

103.]

On a legacy to repair parsonage houses, the selection of the objects is in the court (Attorney General v. Bishop of Chester)

444

Two legacies of equal sums being given to the same legatee, and in the same will, the legatee shall take one only (Garth v. Meyrick). See also the note

30

But where one of the legacies is in the will, and the other in the codicil, both shall pass, (Ridges v. Morrison) 339.

See also the case of Hooly v. Hutton in the note 390

Legacies were given to six grandchildren by their christian names, but the name of one was omitted, and that of another repeated; all shall take (Garth v. Meyrick)

50

Legacy to the testator's own relations, none shall take but persons within the statute of distribution (Green v. Howard)

51

Legacy to A. his executors, administrators, and assigns, shall not pass to the representative, A. being dead: and parol evidence to shew the testator knew of A.'s death, and meant the legacy to be transmissible, refused (Meybank v. Brooks)

84

Legacy to an infant, to be paid at 21, with interest at 4 per cent. ordered to be appropriated (Green v. Pigot)

103

Legacy to two, jointly and between them, they are not joint-tenants; and, one dying, the legacy does not survive (Perkins v. Baynton)

118

A specific legacy shall bar the wife, being executrix, from taking the undisposed surplus (Martin v. Robow)

154

When the executors have legacies, and there are no next of kin, the executors shall be trustees as to the undisposed surplus for the crown (Middleton v. Spicer)

201

Executors having unequal legacies, are not barred from taking the undisposed residue (Bowker v. Hunter)

227

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

- So where some of the executors have unequal, and others no legacies (Frewin v. Oliver)
Page 590
- Legacies were charged on a real estate, under a vis, then a legacy given out of the personal estate, afterwards other legacies without any fund named, the subsequent legacies are not charged upon the land (Hone v. Medcraft)
261
- Legacy of a cabinet of curiosities; ornaments of the person, though shewn as part of it, shall not pass (Cavendish v. Cavendish) 467
- A legacy of a sum of money in long annuities, prima facie, means an annuity to that amount (Stafford v. Horton) 489
- But evidence shall be let in of the testator's estate, to shew it could only mean a gross sum charged thereon (Fonmerreu v. Poyntz) 479
- To trustees to pay the produce to A. without limiting the duration of the interest is an absolute gift of the principal (Ellon v. Shepherd) 532
- I. D. gave 5000*l.* to purchase stock, the interest to M. for life, then to W. for life, at his decease to testator's godson S. and at his decease to be divided among his brothers equally: S. was dead at the time of the will made: A. son of W. who would have been a brother of S. had he lived, shall take a share in the 5000*l.* He also gave 4000*l.* to L. for life, and in case he had no children, to revert to W.'s children: A daughter of W. who was alive at the time of the codicil made, but died before W. had a vested interest, which was held transmissible to her representative (Deane v. Mello)
537
- Legacy to the children of the testator's sister at 21, if any died before, to the survivor and survivors: a child born after the testator's death, but during the infancy of the others, shall take a share (Gilmore v. Severn)
582
- Of a particular fund to A. for life, then to testator's residuary legatees: residue to B. and C. as tenants in common, the particular fund is part of the residue (Pitt v. Benson)
589

LEGACY, — Pecuniary or Specific.

- Of 5400*l.* to an hospital is pecuniary not specific (Bishop of Peterborough v. Mortlock) 565

LEGACY

Vested or not. — See VESTED INTERESTS.

LENGTH OF TIME,

See PRESUMPTION.

LIEN.

- A purchaser of a settled estate (without notice of a rent charge granted by tenant for life) transfers stock to the trustee under the settlement, in payment; the tenant for life grants an annuity to one who had no notice of the transaction: the purchaser of the estate is evicted by the grantee of the rent-charge; he has no lien on the stock transferred (Cator v. Pembroke)

Page 301

- A purchaser not having paid the money, laid down arguendo, but not determined, that the vendor has a lien upon the land (Blackburne v. Gregson)
420

The distrainer has no lien upon goods taken in distress for rent and replevied, but is left to his remedy on the replevin bond (Bradly v. Ball) 427

LIMITATION, Statute of.

- The rule that a trust is not within the statute of Limitations applies only between trustee and cestui que trust, not against a trust by implication, as affected by an equity (Townshend v. Townshend)
451

M.

MAINTENANCE.

The testator, by his will, provided a maintenance for his son out of the real estate, he then gives large legacies to his younger children with maintenances; the second son is entitled to both the maintenances (Clive v. Walsh)
146

- A special direction to the Master, in settling an allowance for maintenance to an eldest son, to consider the birth of a posthumous child, refused (Burnet v. Burnet)
179

The mother having married again, her second husband is not bound to maintain the children by the former marriage, but shall have an allowance out of their fortunes (Billingale v. Crutchet)
263

If the parent be of ability to maintain his children, [Lord Thurlow, on the practice as then settled,] held he should not have an allowance for that purpose out of the interest of a fortune coming aliunde, although it was ordered by the will to be applied to maintenance (Hughes v. Hughes)
387

[But it is otherwise now Ibid. n.]

- When the parent is reported not of ability, it was held also, that the sum allowed should be only from the time of the report not of the decree. S. C. Ib.

[But contra now Ibid. n.]

- Exceptions will not lie to a Master's report of maintenance; and a title being set up against the infant must be established elsewhere (Nicholls ex parte) 372

MARRIAGE ARTICLES.

By marriage articles, 30,000*l.* was to be raised
H h 2

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

to pay the debts of the lady's father, she having before joined him in raising 24,000*l.* of which the parties to the settlement had no notice) this sum shall be part of the 30,000*l.* (Shelburne v. Inchiquin) Page 358

MARRIAGE.—Condition of Marriage.

[See RANDALL v. PAYNE, p. 55.]

•Testator devises the residue to his children, but if any of the daughters shall marry without the consent of the mother or guardians, her share to go to those unmarried: this is a condition subsequent, and a daughter who married without consent is notwithstanding entitled (Jones v. E. of Suffolk) 528

[For another question of like nature, vide n. 16.]

MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT.

[The Court refused to decree a strict settlement where the articles were to the use of the husband for life, remainder to wife for life, remainder to the heirs of the body of the wife by the husband, since the power of barring the entail was not in the husband alone.] (Highway v. Banner) 584

MERGER.

Where a legal and equitable title to the same lands meet in the same person, the equitable merges in the legal (Wade v. Page) 363

MISREPRESENTATION.

Defendant having represented, that A., one of the plaintiffs, owed him nothing to the agent of B., the other plaintiff, whose daughter A. was about to marry, shall not recover against the other plaintiff who was indebted (Neville v. Wilkinson) 543

MONEY

To be laid out in land. See LAND.

MONEY to be paid into Court.

Upon motion that a defendant may pay money into Court, a specific sum must be sworn to be in his hands (Roberts v. Hartley) 56

Where there is a suit for money received, and the defendant files a bill for an injunction, admitting to have received the money, he shall pay it into Court, or the injunction shall be dissolved (Sherwood v. White) 452

See ACCOUNT.

MORTGAGE.

The third mortgagee buying in the first mortgage, even pendente lite, shall unite his securities and postpone the second (Robinson v. Davison) Page 63

Where the legal estate is in a mortgagee, the subsequent securities, being merely equitable, shall have priority according to their dates (Becket v. Cordley) 353

[One mortgagee cannot sustain a suit to foreclose for his proportion alone, without making the other persons interested parties to it (Lower v. Morgan) 368]

Where a man buys an equity of redemption, the purchased estate shall pay the debt, notwithstanding there be a term created for payment of debts (Ancaster v. Mayer) 454

•A decree of foreclosure, though pronounced on motion (under 7 Geo. 2. c. 20.) cannot be discharged on motion (Cadle v. Fowle) 515

[For other points, vide n. 18d.]

•Upon a bill to redeem, and non-payment at the time appointed, it is a motion of course to dismiss the bill (Stewart v. Worral) 581

See MORTMAIN.

MORTMAIN.

A legacy to the corporation of Queen Anne's bounty is void; as, by the rules of the corporation, it must be laid out in land (Widmore v. the Corporation of Queen Anne's bounty) 13 n.

A charge on the devised estate, void by the Statute of Mortmain, whether it shall sink for the benefit of the devisee, or go to the heir (Wright v. Row). See also the note 61

Devise to a corporation in trust, although it be void, the trust shall attach upon the estate the law raises (Sonley v. the Clock-makers' Company) 81

Money upon mortgage in England given to a charity in Ireland, the executrix by her will affirmed the legacy; this was held to be an admission of assets of the testator, and not within the statute of mortmain (Campbell v. Radnor) 271

Money left to repair parsonage-houses, is not within the statute of mortmain (Attorney General v. Bishop of Chester) 444

So to build a parsonage house where no land is to be purchased (Brodie v. D. of Chander) 444 n.

S. P. (Attorney General v. Bishop of Oxford) Ibid.

But money given to erect a new school house there being no land on which to erect it, is void (Attorney General v. Hutchinson) Ibid. n.

S. P. (Polham v. Anderson) 444

So real and personal estate to be sold, and part of the money to be laid out in the purchase of land to erect and endow an almshouse, is void (Attorney-General v. Tyndall) 444

•Money given by will to be laid out in the purchase of heritable securities in Scotland for the use of a charity not within the statute (Oliphant v. Hendrie) 571

NOTICE

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

N

NOTICE

To an agent, in order to affect the principal, must be to an agent empowered to treat, not barely to carry proposals from one party to another (Shelburne v. Inchiquin) Page 338

See PAROL-EVIDENCE.

O.

OFFICE.

A bond given for the purchase of an office, to which the Groom of the Stole had the power of recommendation, is within the mischief of marriage brocage: a perpetual injunction therefore granted (Hanington v. Du-Chatel)

124

P.

[PARAPHERNALIA.]

[See Boynston v. Parkhurst 576]

PATENT.

*The date of a patent cannot be altered, though it has not been enrolled in due time by mistake (Beck ex parte)

578

PARTIES.

[One mortgagee out of several interested cannot sustain a bill to foreclose for his proportion only, without making the others parties (Lowe v. Morgan 368)]

*Where the personal representative is a mere formal party, the Court will go on, and suffer him to be brought before the Master (Fletcher v. Ashburner)

497

PERSONAL ESTATE.

For the exemption of personal estate from payment of debts,

See DEVISE for PAYMENT of DEBTS.

PLEA.

The putting in of a plea is a sufficient compliance with an order for time to answer (Roberts v. Hartley)

56

But the plea appearing to be for delay, it was ordered to be argued the next day (S. C.) ibid.

And being a plea of a sentence of the Admiralty court, which was recited in the bill, and therefore bringing no new matter before the court, it was over-ruled (S. C.) ibid.

Plea that a writ of right had been tried and determined against the plaintiff, (who was defendant in the writ of right) a good plea to a bill for discovery of defendant's title (Leicester v. Perry)

Page 305

Plea of the statute of frauds, to a bill for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of an estate, averring, 1st, that there was no agreement in writing; 2d, that there was no part-performance of such agreement, is a double plea;—ordered therefore to stand for an answer, with liberty to except (Whitbread v. Brockhurst)

404

[Two inconsistent matters cannot be joined in one plea ibid. 415. n.]

[Various facts cannot be pleaded together, unless all conducive to a single point, as several deeds tending to establish the single point of title. So in the case of Papacy ibid.]

Plea to a bill of revivor, that it was for costs only; the costs having been ordered to be paid into the Bank, plea over-ruled (Hall v. Smith)

438

*Upon a bill to discover articles pawned to the defendant, he pleads that being a pawnbroker he lent money, without notice of plaintiff's claim: the plea should aver that he has no other articles than those specified, and though this was done by the answer, that is not sufficient (Hoare v. Parker)

578

PLEDGE.

A. having made an insurance, for the benefit of B.'s testator, left the policy in the hands of the broker, who was his creditor, as a pledge: A. became a bankrupt; this is not a fraudulent leaving of the policy in the hands of A. by B.'s testator, within 21 Jac. 1. c. 19. (Falkener v. Case)

125

Pledge of a lease, by a person who afterwards became a bankrupt, carried into execution against the assignees (Russel v. Russel)

269

See also the Note

ibid.

PORTION.

See POWER,

Whether vested or not,

See VESTED INTERESTS.

POWER.

Under a power to appoint among younger children, one who becomes an eldest, cannot take a share appointed to him nominatim (Broadmead v. Wood)

77

Will, under a power, not attested to pass real estate, is a good execution as to the personalty (Duff v. Dalzell)

147

A power was given, by marriage settlement, to the husband to raise 10,000*l.* for a single younger child when he should think proper,—the child (a female) being fourteen years old, he called upon the trustees to raise the portion immediately, and afterwards, the child

H h 3

being

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

Being dead, filed his bill to have it raised as her administrator. — Bill dismissed (Hinchinbroke v. Seymour) Page 395

A power to be executed by deed attested by three witnesses, is executed, in consideration of marriage, by deed attested by two witnesses only. — This defect in the execution of the power shall be supplied (Wade v. Paget) 363

A power in a marriage settlement was created to I. P. (the husband) to appoint the settled estate among the children, in such shares as he should think proper, not exceeding estates-tail. He appointed to two of the children, one acre for their lives and the life of the survivor, then to fall into the residue, which he appointed to his second son for life with remainders over. — This execution is elusory and bad (Pocklington v. Bayne) 450

*An appointment under a power, by will, is revocable by a subsequent appointment by deed, though no power of revocation is reserved in the will (Lisle v. Lisle) 533

PRESUMPTION.

*A mortgage term being made the subject of a settlement after marriage with a second wife, but recited to be in pursuance of articles previous to the marriage, (the settlor having children by the deceased wife,) under the uses of which the plaintiff claims, was afterwards conveyed by settlor and his wife (by fine and settlement) to uses for the benefit of the children by the first marriage, who, and their representatives, had been in possession 30 years: plaintiff's bill dismissed, as the Court will presume that the former settlement was known to be voluntary, or the children by the second wife to have had a compensation for their claims (Townshend v. Townshend) 55

PRIORITY

Of satisfaction among equitable securities, shall be according to the priorities of their dates (Becket v. Cordley) 353

PURCHASE.

Where money is to be laid out in purchases, a separate application must be made to the court upon each purchase (Harrington v. Flemming) 74

PURCHASER.

Where land is ordered generally to be sold, the purchaser is not bound to see to the application of the money (Smith v. Guyon) 186

See also the cases of Jebb v. Abbot and Beynon v. Gollings, in the note. ibid.

PURCHASER without Notice.

See LIEN.

R.

REAL and PERSONAL ESTATE.

*Where a real estate is ordered to be sold, and is blended with personal property, it becomes personalty, and shall go accordingly (Fletcher v. Ashburner) Page 497

*But where they are to be blended, only for particular purposes, (as to pay certain legacies, which lapse by the death of the legatees in the life of the testator) then so much as is real shall result to the heir, and so much as is personal to the personal representative (Ackroyd v. Smithson) 503

RECOVERY

Will bar equitable as well as legal remainders, but the estates must be completely legal or completely equitable; therefore where there was an equitable estate for life, with a legal estate-tail, the recovery did not operate (Boteler v. Allington) 72

S. P. (Shapland v. Smith) 75

See the case of Salvin v. Thornton. ibid. n. †

*A recovery suffered by a person not in possession, has no operation (Wynne v. Cooke) 515

REFERENCE.

Where the matter of a cause has gone to a reference, it cannot come on upon exceptions to the award, but upon further directions (Woodbridge v. Hilton) 398

REFERENCE to the Master.

To enquire whether the plaintiffs were natural children of the testator, refused, there having been sufficient in the bill to raise the question under a former reference (Grave v. Salisbury) 425

RELATIONS,

By a bequest to relations, those within the statute of distribution, alone, shall take (Green v. Howard) 31

[RENEWALS.]

[As to renewals, and the apportionment of the expences, see Pickering v. Vowles, 197. 199. and notes. Likewise Nightingale v. Lawson, 440.]

RENT-CHARGE.

A clear rent-charge whether free from land-tax 4 n. †

See LIEN.

REPUBLICATION

Of a WILL.

A codicil is a republication of a devise revoked by marriage and a settlement (Jackson v. Hurlock) 61 n.

RESULTING

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

RESULTING TRUST.

See TRUST.

REVERSION.

By a devise of ground-rents, the reversion passes
(Kaye v. Laxon) Page 76

The question whether a reversion (after several estates-tail) falling in after the death of the reversioner, be assets to pay his debts agitated but not determined (Tweedale v. Co- ventry) 240

REVOCATION.

Sale of the devised estate, by the testator is a revocation of the will (Arnald v. Arnald) 401 Marriage with, and a settlement on, the devisee, is a revocation of the devise (Jackson
v. Hurlock) 61 n.

S.

SALE.

After a sale before a Master, the biddings may be opened upon special circumstances, but ought not merely upon inadequacy of price (Prideaux v. Prideaux) 287

See REVOCATION.

SATISFACTION.

A sum of money, left subject to the life interest of the mother, shall go in satisfaction for a child's portion by settlement (Rickman v. Morgan) 63
So shall the residue of the personal estate given to the child by will (S. C.) ibid.

A legacy is a satisfaction of a portion, but not of the residue, or of a real estate devised (Watson v. Lord Sondes) 65 n.

Part of the wife's fortune being settled (after the decease of the husband and wife) upon the children, according to her appointment: — The husband left a larger provision to trustees, to the use of the wife for life, remainder to the children as she should appoint: — This is a satisfaction for the portions (Moulson v.
Moulson) 82

Bond on marriage, to secure 300*l.* the wife's fortune, to her within one month after the husband's decease: He by will gave her 500*l.*
payable in six months after his decease: —

This is not a satisfaction (Haynes v. Mico) 129 Legacies to the heir-at-law, not a satisfaction pro tanto for money to be raised by a trust-term, which descended, the owners having made no appointment (Cattle v. Morris) 133 n.

A. gave to Lady S. and to J. C. legacies, after a general failure of issue of her brother; the brother afterwards by his will, gave the lega-tees equal legacies: held to be a satisfaction, though Lady S.'s legacy (she being a femesole) in the brother's will, was to her separate use (Attorney-General v. Hird) 170

The testator gave a bond to trustees, conditioned that his executors should pay 5000*l.* to a natural son at twenty-one. — By will he gave 15,000*l.* to trustees, to pay to the son a maintenance until twenty-five, and then to pay the whole to him, with contingencies on marriage:
This is no satisfaction of the bond (Jeacock v.
Falkener) Page 295

By marriage-settlement 10,000*l.* were to be raised for younger children: — The settlor by will gave the younger children 2000*l.* each: This is a part satisfaction (Warren v. Warren) 305
The value of a beneficial lease granted to a natural son, held not to be a satisfaction of a legacy given by the putative father's will (Grave v. Salisbury) 425

*A father by his will gives his son 500*l.* he afterwards takes him into partnership: the stock being 3000*l.* this is not a satisfaction for the legacy (Holmes v. Holmes) 555

SEQUESTRATION

For not restoring papers, an order having been made, and served personally. — (In the Matter of Hassenclever) 434

SETTLEMENT

By the son, tenant in tail in possession (in consequence of an agreement, made during the life of the mother (who was tenant for life) and being beneficial to the family, not set aside, — though made at the instance of the father, who took an interest under it (Kinchant v. Kinchant) 369

See BARGAIN.

SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

See BILL.

SURVIVORSHIP.

*A survived share shall not survive again without express words (Ex parte West) 676

T.

TENANT-RIGHT ESTATE.

See LEASE.

TERMS or YEARS.

If a man purchase terms of years in the name of a trustee, and the inheritance in his own name, or vice versa, the terms are in gross, not attendant upon the inheritance (Scott v. Fen- houllat) 69

A term created by a marriage-settlement, to raise 1000*l.* to be paid to such of the relations of
A. as the survivor of A. and B. shall appoint, the inheritance afterwards comes to A. who devises the estates to B. the term continues to be

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

be a subsisting term, and goes to the heirs at-law of A. (Cattle v. Morris) Page 133 n.
A. by her will gave legacies to some of the heirs at law, they are not satisfactions pro tanto for their shares of the 1000*l.* (S. C.) ibid.
 Although the devisees were relations of A. the will did not operate as an appointment to them (S. C.) ibid.

TIMBER.

Where lands are exchanged, under acts of inclosure, tenant for life, impeachable of waste, cannot cut timber for the inclosure, but must raise money under the powers in the act (Lee v. Alston) 194

See WASTE.

TRUST.

Where the trustee is deficient, the trust shall attach on the estate the law raises (Sonley v. the Clock-makers' Company) 81

TRUST resulting.

A conveyance of land, to raise a sum of money, and pay the interest to A. until marriage, then to pay her the principal; A. never marries: — This is a resulting trust to the settlor, but in his hands is personalty, and passes by the bequest of the residue in his will (Hewit v. Wright) 86

*Real and personal estate ordered to be sold to pay debts and legacies, the residue to certain legatees, in proportion to their legacies: two of the residuary legatees died in the life of the testator: their shares are lapsed, and so far as they consist of real estate, shall result to the heir at law, and so far as they are personal to the next of kin (Ackroyd v. Smithson) 503

See REAL and PERSONAL ESTATE.

TRUSTEE

Concealing the breach of trust of his co-trustee, shall be equally liable with him for the money, to the cestui que trust (Boardman v. Mosman) 68

TRUSTEE for preserving Contingent Remainders.

*The Court will not compel a trustee for preserving contingent remainders to join in a recovery, unless to continue the estate, or under very particular circumstances (Barnard v. Large) 534

TYTHES.

By a devise of all the testator's tythes, he having freehold tythes, and also tythes by lease perpetually renewable without fine, the latter passed as well as the freehold tythes (Turner v. Husler) 78

V.

VESTED INTERESTS.

By marriage settlement 1500*l.* was provided for younger children in such shares as the parents should appoint, in default of appointment to all the children after the death of the wife; the parents afterwards made an appointment excluding one child, this deed vests the portions in the other children born or to be born (Mayhew v. Middleditch) 162

Personalty was given to trustees, to pay the dividends to A. (one of the testator's children), at twenty-eight, or marriage with consent; and in case any of the children should die before their shares became due, the share to go to the rest of the children, and their issue per Stirpes: A. married without consent, and died under twenty-eight, leaving a child; the portion did not vest, but the testator having five children, held that one-fifth vested in A.'s child, and it was decreed to her father as her representative (Hemmings v. Munkley) 303

Bequests of 3 per cent. annuities to the executors, to the use of A. and her daughter B. and the longer liver of them, then to the issue of B. (if he should have any such) if not, to the use of C. till he should come of age, C. died living B., the fund vested in C. and the trust is only the mode (Atkinson v. Paice) 91

Bequest of the residue of personalty to testator's wife for life; if she die without issue, to the testator's two brothers, or if one of them be dead, then to the survivor; both the brothers died, living the wife: This is an executory devise vested in both, and transmissible to the executor of the survivor (Barnes v. Allen) 181

Devise to A. (after death or marriage of the testator's wife), charged with 100*l.* to B. who died during the life of the wife, the legacy vested, and was transmissible (Godwin v. Munday) 191

The estate was devised to testator's wife for life, and if there should be no issue between them, then to A. charged with two sums to B. and C. afterwards B. being dead, the testator by codicil, ordered that legacy to be paid to C. and D.: C. died in the lifetime of the wife; the legacy was vested and transmissible (Killet v. Dawson) 119

See † Tunstal v. Bracken ibid. n.

The testator gave the use of 800*l.* to his wife for life, and, after her decease, disposed of part of the principal; he then gave to A. 100*l.* A. died, living the wife, this legacy to A. vested in him (Monkhouse v. Holme) 208

Testator gave 20*l.* each to the children of A. (after the death of annuitants) the legacies vested in all the children born, and also in one born after the death of the testator, but during the life of the surviving annuitant (Attorney-General v. Crispin) 386

Bequest of 1000*l.* to testator's sister; and in case of her demise, 800*l.* to A. and 200*l.* to B. the sister has a life estate only with vested remainders

A TABLE OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

mainders in A. and B. in the proportions
(Billings v. Sandom) Page 393 Bequest of all the testator's estate to his wife; in case of death happening to her, his executors to take care of the whole for his daughter, the wife has an estate for life with a vested remainder in the daughter (Nowlan v. Nelligan) 489 • S. D., by a codicil, gave 1000*l.* to L. for life, and in case he had no children to revert to W.'s children A daughter of W. who was alive at the time of the codicil made, but died before W., had a vested interest, which was held transmissible to her representatives (Devisme v. Mello) 537

See LEGACY.

W.

WASTE.

Upon motion for injunction to stay waste, a particular title must be shewn (Whitelegg v.
Whitelegg) 57
Devise of lands to be sold, and other lands to be purchased, in which A. should be tenant for life without impeachment of waste; the rents and profits of the estates to be sold, to be to the use of the persons who would be entitled to those of the estates to be purchased:
The tenant for life cannot cut down timber on the land to be sold (Plymouth v. Archer) 159
A. by will, made his wife tenant for life; by codicil he gave her permission to cut timber during widowhood at seasonable times: She shall be restrained from cutting ornamental or immature timber (Chamberlyne v. Dummer) 166

WIFE.

See BARON and FEME.

WILL.

A will being attested by the witnesses, where the testatrix could see them, through the windows of her carriage, and of the attorney's office, is a good attestation in her presence (Casson v. Dade) Page 99
A will, made under a power, not attested to pass real estate, is a good execution of the power, as to the personalty (Duff v. Dalzell) 147

See DEVISE, LEGACY, POWER, &c.

WITNESS

Not to be re-examined before a Master, as to matter to which he has been examined in chief, but by order (Sawyer v. Bowyer) 388 Examined before hearing, not to be examined on a commission without order (Vaughan v.
Lloyd) ib. n.

WRIT of Assistance.

After an order to the tenant in possession to deliver up the possession to a purchaser, service of a writ of execution of that order, attachment, and injunction personally served, and affidavit of the facts and of disobedience, a writ of assistance shall issue (Dove v. Dove) 375

WRIT of ne exeat regno

Shall not issue where there has been a payment of the debt in Carolina, in paper currency, which, at that time, was a legal payment, though an ordinance has been since made decrying it (Anon.)

END OF THE FIRST VOLUME.

